Twenty-eight months passed after Mr. McKean's retirement before his successor was settled,—the Rev. Samuel Gile, ordained Feb. 18, 1807. He came to a very different Milton from that of one hundred and twenty-nine years before. The seething activities of those years of war at home and abroad,—religious controversy, political agitation, the free breathing of the free air of this new continent, the independent life and self-governed movement of society in New England,—all had made their impress on this town. A liberal spirit had grown up, which could no longer be subdued. The death of Cromwell and the restoration of the monarchy in England, compelling the toleration of the Church of England in this colony, had paved the way for it. The Quaker agitation, culminating in 1658, had helped to it. Roger Williams' great brave call for freedom of conscience and the separation of State from Church, furthered it. The English Acts of Uniformity certainly could not repress it. The question of the witches; the revival under George Whitefield; the protest of Methodist and Presbyterian, with Baptist, Quaker, and Episcopalian, against being taxed "to support the ministry and repair the meeting-house," which they did not agree to; and, finally, of Murray, the preacher of the new gospel of Universalism, added to their own theological controversies and the Boston influence, which did not allow the inhabitants generally to be taxed to support the ministry, as they were in the country towns,—all did their share towards it. And certainly the war for independence and the upheavings of the French revolution could not fail of influence. Thus the very atmosphere of New England thought and life had changed. A town situated like Milton could not fail to show the change. Hence, although excellence of character and loyalty to conviction might insure to the new minister a hearty welcome to his post of duty here, and the cordial respect and goodwill of all classes of the people of the town,—yet that very excellence of character and loyalty to conviction might, when questions arose, and a "parting of the ways" was reached, make separation inevitable and decided. And so it proved here.

In 1809, within three years after Mr. Gile's settlement, the rigid and the liberal tendencies in the churches of Boston and vicinity came to an issue in the Second Church in Dorchester, where Mr. John Codman had been settled the year before, Mr. W. E. Channing preaching the sermon. Mr. Codman would not exchange with the ministers of the Boston Association, although, as I understand, he had been, if he was not at that very time, a member of it. He was Calvinist; they Unitarian. His disappointed people tried to move him, but in vain. They wrote to the ministers with whom he did exchange, requesting them not to come; but come they would. Twice they dismissed him, but he would not go. At last they put a guard on the pulpit-stairs to prevent his entrance; but for all that he preached. So the controversy waxed, to be settled at last by those opposed agreeing to sell their pews and leave the parish.

Eleven years later, in 1820, the controversy reappeared in the First Church in Dedham, but with a different issue. There Mr. Jamson was settled, against the remonstrance of two-thirds of the church, as a Unitarian. The protesting two-thirds of the church members seceded, claimed to be the true church of Dedham, and carried their case before the Supreme Court. There it was decided against them.

"It was laid down, that a church separating from a parish, for any cause, lost its existence; that never in Massachusetts had a church a legal existence apart from a parish. The law knew of parishes as corporations, and deacons as corporations, and ministers as corporations; but the church proper was no corporation or quasi-corporation, and could not, therefore, hold property apart from the parish, whatever its faith."

Not the seceding church members, but the parish, had the legal right to the title, property, records, and furniture of the First Church of Dedham.

This momentous decision, a decision opening its own opportunity of self-denial and martyrdom, bore fruit in the history of this first church of Milton.

The new minister proved to be Calvinistic rather than liberal, while the parish was preponderatingly liberal. Had Mr. Gile been left to himself, a rupture might have been avoided. Perhaps the wonder is that it did not come earlier. Not till twenty-one years after his settlement does the First Unitarian Society appear in the records of this parish (July 4, 1828). It was composed chiefly of members of the parish whom Mr. Gile's ministrations failed to satisfy. It met in the present high-school building, under the preaching of Rev. Charles Chauncy Sewall. It appears as making overtures to this parish for an equitable division of the ministerial lands belonging to the parish. As negotiations proved fruitless, and as danger appeared of the alienation and loss of the ministerial lands, the First Unitarian Society dissolved, and its members resumed their place in the parish, and asserted their rights in open parish meeting. The question of exchanges was the point on which discussion turned. At his settlement, Mr. Gile had agreed to exchange with ministers of the Boston Association. As division lines were more sharply drawn, it became increasingly difficult for him to do so; and yet the more urgently his people required it. Nearly eleven years the question was agitated, terminating then in arrangements for a separation between him and his people. A "mutual council"—i.e., a council composed of representatives of both parties—proving impracticable, an ex parte council, representing the majority of the parish, was convened to consider and pass on the matter. It met at Mrs. Atherton's tavern, Jan. 6, 1834, the house now occupied by Mr. D. G. Hicks, on the corner of Canton Avenue and Atherton Street. Horace Mann presented the case for the parish. Mr. Gile did not appear. The council, composed of Revs. Peter Whitney, of Quincy; John White, of West Dedham; Alvan Lamson, of Dedham; James Walker, of Charlestown; Lemuel Capen, of South Boston; and Samuel Barrett, of Boston, each of them accompanied by one deacon of his church, voted unanimously that Mr. Gile had lived in habitual violation of the understanding between him and his parish regarding ministerial exchanges, and recommended that his connection with the parish be dissolved. On Jan. 20, 1834, it was dissolved. He retired with his friends, and they formed the neighboring society, under the name of the "First Evangelical Church, Milton," in whose ministry he continued till his death, in 1836.

Thus the old order of things came to an end, and a new order began. The time had come when the one must become two,—the one trunk dividing into two branches. The division came as it comes in the growing tree, because it must. The tree must enter on a more varied and richer life. The two branches were in it from the first, though bound up in the one trunk. Which of them is the true First Milton Church? Both claim so to be: which is correct? Could numbers settle the question, they would settle it in this one's favor. Could Massachusetts law settle it, the decision would be the same, for it awards to this parish the title, records, property, and furniture of the ancient First Church of Milton. Could adherence to the theologic letter of the old covenant settle it, the verdict must go the other way.

Thus, four-and-forty years ago, this ancient church became distinctly Unitarian. So it has continued until this day.

One of its first acts, after the induction of a new minister,—Rev. B. Huntoon, installed Oct. 15, 1834,—was to adopt the New Testament "as the only Divinely authorized Creed for Christians, and an all-sufficient rule of faith and practice." Forty-eight persons signed their names to this acknowledgment, "beseeching Almighty God so to assist and direct" them "in discharging all the duties of this present life, that" they "may obtain life Eternal through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Of these forty-eight some are still present with us, though most have "fallen asleep."

The following is the list: Benjamin Huntoon, Susan Huntoon, John Ruggles, Betsy Ruggles, Betsy Ruggles, Jr., Esther Soper, Lemuel Babcock, Jr., Lucretia Babcock, Moses Gragg, Rebekah N. Gragg, Edward Capen, Mary Capen, Nathaniel Davenport, Nancy Davenport, Jeremiah Crehore, Joann Crehore, Catharine Dunbar, Mary B. Clarke, Matilda Vose, Walter Cornell, Mary Cornell, Amy Batty, Stephen Babcock, Rufus P. Sumner, Susan Sumner, Samuel Adams, Margaret L. Babcock, Charles R. Kennedy, Ephraim Hunt, Jr., Simon Ferry, Rhoda Ferry, John J. Low, Francis M. Clark, Eliza A. Clark, Lydia S. Ford, Mary A. Clark, J. S. Foord, James Tucker, Thomas Snow, Lewis Davenport, Lucretia Babcock, Lydia Davenport, Dana Tucker, Rebecca Tucker, Nathaniel T. Davenport, Sarah Davenport, Elmira Thayer, Elizabeth Simpson.

Soon arose agitation about a new meeting-house. The "new wine," perhaps, suggested "new bottles." But surely new bottles were not needed. Although it was voted to take down this building, better counsels prevailed, and contented themselves with turning it round and remodeling it, and setting off a portion of it for a Sunday-school room. A new clock was given by John J. Low, a chandelier and pulpit-lamp by Francis Low, and by Mrs. Low a damask curtain for the pulpit. Mr. Samuel H. Babcock gave a pulpit carpet, chair, and Bible, and Miss Louisa G. Davenport one hundred and fifty dollars. All of these donors, except Miss Davenport, were citizens of other towns. On Dec. 9, 1835, the building was dedicated anew to God, with "solemn and interesting" services, the music led by Deacon Martin. In 1851 it received a new change; in 1868, a new organ; and, finally, in 1871, another change, which made it as we see it to-day. Long may it stand, an emblem of the enduring, a symbol from the past, a silent voice speaking the name of the All-Holy!

Quietly, meanwhile, it has done its work, under the peculiar conditions of a widely-scattered and very shifting membership. Five ministers it has had since the new epoch in its history began,—Huntoon, Angier, Morison, Washburn, and the present pastor, Rev. Frederick Frothingham.

The First Evangelical Society of Milton was organized in 1834, it being an offshoot, so to speak, of the old First Church, organized in 1678.

By the records we find that Rev. Samuel Gile was ordained as pastor of the First Parish on Feb. 18, 1807, and continued his ministrations with that society for twenty-seven years, when, on account of a difference of opinion on doctrinal points, Mr. Gile's connection with the First Parish was dissolved Jan. 6, 1834, those of the parish agreeing with him in sentiment, or who were drawn to him by strong personal attachments, severing their relations with the First Parish and forming a new society, now known as the "First Evangelical Society."

Mr. Gile continued his pastorate over the society thus formed until his decease, which occurred very suddenly on Sunday, the 16th day of October, 1836. At noon of that day, soon after reaching home, having officiated at the morning service apparently in the best of health, a trumpet from heaven sounded summoning him from the scenes where he was greatly beloved, not only by his own people, but by all the inhabitants.

Rev. Samuel W. Cozzens, who was called to succeed the Rev. Mr. Gile, was installed May 24, 1837. He was a man of commanding ability, of great literary attainments, and continued as pastor of the society for the space of ten years, when at his own request he received a dismissal, soon after removing from the town. Mr. Cozzens died at Medfield, Aug. 7, 1875, being brought thence for interment in Milton.

For some three years after the retirement of Mr. Cozzens the church was without any settled pastor, different clergymen officiating, when, in 1850, a call was given to Rev. Albert K. Teele, who accepting the invitation thus extended, was installed during the latter portion of that year, continuing his ministrations over the society for twenty-five years, to the great acceptance of the parish, being released finally December, 1875, at his own desire, the society sorrowfully accepting and acceding to his request that the relations existing for a quarter of a century between him and them as pastor and people should terminate; kindlier relations than which on the part of both pastor and people never probably existed.

Rev. Dr. Teele, although having resigned his charge, still continues a resident of the town, honored and beloved by all her citizens, and ever taking an active part in all good works.

After an interim of six years, various candidates having been heard, the choice of the society fell upon Rev. Calvin G. Hill, the present pastor, who, installed some two years since as Dr. Teele's successor, is an earnest worker in the Lord's vineyard.

The Second Evangelical Society of Milton was organized Nov. 9, 1843, in that portion of the town then known as the "Railway Village," now called East Milton. Its house of worship was erected June 18, 1846. For some eight years or more after its organization the society did not have a regularly settled pastor, preachers hired for a shorter or longer term ministering to the spiritual wants of the people, when the parish giving a call to the Rev. Edwin Leonard, he was ordained over the society March 25, 1852, continuing with them some eight years; he then withdrew, in other fields to labor, leaving the society without a pastor, and although some twenty-three years have since elapsed, and many are the preachers that have held forth to this congregation, no call has been given to any to permanently settle over the Second Evangelical Society.

The Lower Mills Baptist Church of Dorchester and Milton was organized Oct. 13, 1882. Previous to its organization services had been held for nearly two years by an organization known as the Lower Mills Baptist Mission. Twenty-five members united in forming the new church. On Nov. 22, 1882, a council was convened from neighboring Baptist churches to recognize the church and ordain its pastor. Rev. George W. Bosworth, D.D., Secretary of Massachusetts Baptist State Convention, gave the address of recognition, Rev. O. P. Gifford, of Boston, preached the sermon, and Rev. A. T. Dunn, of Boston, gave the right hand of fellowship. The pastor, Rev. Nathan Hunt, has had charge of the church from his ordination until the present date. During that time the membership has more than doubled, and the church has received many other signs of temporal and spiritual prosperity. A hall is still used as a place of worship, but efforts will probably be made at no distant day to secure a more suitable place.

CHAPTER LXV.

MILTON—(Continued).

The Crehore Estate—The Sumners—The Wadsworths—The Vose Place—The Robert Tucker Place—The Oldest House in Milton—The Tucker House—The Billings House—The Blue Hills—The Foye House—The Hutchinson House—The Robbins House—The Governor Belcher Place—Milton Cemetery—Detailed History—Different Purchasers—Ancient Inscriptions—Tombs.

Ancient Homes and Estates.¹—I can make out but five families who now live on land taken by their ancestors at the first settlement of this place. The widow of John Crehore holds a part of the original Crehore estate. The heirs of Simon and Rhoda (Kingsbury Sumner) Perry live on land owned by their ancestors, the Sumners. Mr. Rufus P. Sumner cultivates, as his homestead, land which has been in his family from the earliest period of our history. The grandfather of the Hon. Charles Sumner was born and lived on some part of the Brush Hill Sumner estate.

The Wadsworths, Jason, Thomas, Thatcher, and Josiah, live on land which has never been out of the hands of their ancestors since it was first cultivated.

The heirs of the late Col. Josiah H. Vose still occupy the place which has been owned by their family since 1654. And heirs of the late Mrs. Mary Boies Clark not only live on land owned by their ancestor, Robert Tucker, the first of the name in Milton, but it is probable that they live in the very house that he built a short time before his death. In his will, made in 1682, he speaks of his "new house," and as that, as Mr. Robbins thinks, is the house now standing next beyond the Robbins house, on Brush Hill, it must have been built as early as 1680, and is undoubtedly the oldest house in Milton. Next to it in age, and of a date not much more recent, is the Billings house. Both these houses are of a primitive order of architecture, and evidently belong to a period when building materials were plenty and labor was scarce. The Billings house continued in that family for many generations. The house was widely known as a public-house before the beginning of the present century, and was a favorite place of resort, especially at the cherry and strawberry seasons, for parties from Boston and the neighboring towns. The Blue Hills were more visited in those days than now, when the summit of Mount Washington is hardly a day's journey from Boston.

The other ancient houses in Milton belong to a later period, and to a much higher style of architecture. The Foye house, long occupied by Mr. Samuel Littlefield; the Hutchinson house, better known to the present generation as the Russell house; the Inman, or Robbins house, on Brush Hill; and the Governor Belcher place (his house was burned in 1776) were not only in themselves among the finest in this neighborhood, but they have also associations of historical interest.

Governor Hutchinson's house, as Mrs. Robbins informs me, was confiscated after he fled from the country. It was purchased by Samuel Broom, and passing from his hands, became the residence of James Warren, whose wife, Mercy Warren, was the author of a valuable history of the Revolutionary war. Thomas Lee, of Cambridge, owned it for a little while, and sold it to Patrick Jeffrey, who had married Madam Haley, a sister of the noted John Wilkes, of England. Jeffrey's wife left him, and he died at his home in Milton, in 1812. The estate was afterwards purchased by Mr. Barney Smith, and is now owned by his grandchildren, the heirs of his daughter, the late Mrs. Lydia Russell, mother of the late Jonathan Russell.

Milton Cemetery.—As no movement seems to have been made to secure a common burial-place in Milton until ten years after the incorporation of the town, it follows that those who resided within the limits of "Unquity" (a contraction of Unquityquisset, the old Indian name of Milton) before and after incorporation, must have buried their dead in Dorchester, or by common consent have appropriated one or more places for this purpose within their own limits.

At this time there doubtless were settlements at different points along the principal roads, and several hundred inhabitants. Twelve years after incorporation, the records give one hundred and twenty-five tax-payers, from which may be inferred a population of from four to eight hundred or more. It is hardly probable that their only place of burial was the distant cemetery in Dorchester. The supposition is that the inhabitants had used the field of Reedman (afterwards Redman) for this purpose, and thus were led to fix upon this place as the common burial-ground.

The first notice found in the records respecting the "Burying Ground" is as follows:

¹ Contributed by Rev. John H. Morison, D.D.

"The 24 Feby. 1672. Robert Reedman was allowed to be payd out of the town Rate tene shillings to pay for forty rods of Land for the Burying Place appraised and staked out by Anthony Gulliver, William Blake, Robert Babcock. Robert Reedman being present and consenting thereto—and was agreed betwixt the Towne and Robert Reedman that the town should fence out this forty rods of land, with a sufficient stone wall, within two years, from Robert Reedman's land."—Town Records, vol. i. page 1.

The above-mentioned lot was about six rods in width on the road, and extended back about seven rods to the rear, or southerly side of the range of tombs now in the central part of the ground, the most westerly tomb in the range being in the southwesterly angle of the lot. These tombs are the oldest in the ground, and are supposed to have been built about the year 1719, the town having voted at the March meeting of that year, "That Capten John Billing shall have liberty to build a tomb in our Burying Place at the Direction of the Selectmen."

The ministerial tomb was probably built in 1729, it having been voted at the March meeting of that year, "That Mr. Oxenbrig Thacher should have liberty to build a Tomb in our burying Place for the Rever^d Mr. Peter Thacher his Father deceased, and that Lieut. Henry Vose and Mr. Benjamin Fenno should order the place for said Tomb where there may be convenient room."

This tomb was not built on the Reedman lot. At, or previous to, this time a small addition was made on the easterly side, where the side avenue and ministerial tomb now are, by taking some ten or twelve rods from the adjoining land, at that time owned by Samuel Henshaw; but of this there is no record.

As early as 1699 attempts were made to enlarge the burying-place, and in that year a committee was chosen "to treat with any person that shall appeire to be the tru owener of the burying place fild as it is commonly called, for the obtaining an addition of land necessary to enlarge our burying place, or to treat of a price for the whole tracte, and to make their return to the Town at the next town meeting."

The "burying place fild" is supposed to be all that part of the Amory lot purchased of C. Breck and T. Hollis, Jr., which lies northerly of an old line of wall where the land begins to slope off to the swamp or low ground. Nothing appears to have grown out of this attempt to enlarge the ground, unless perhaps the small addition, where the ministerial tomb now stands, may have been made at this time.

Attempts to enlarge the ground were made again in 1734, 1738, 1749, and 1751, but without success, the owners of the adjoining land (Samuel Henshaw and William Foye) declining to sell.

In 1760, Madam Elizabeth Foye, and others, conveyed to the town by a deed of gift half an acre and six rods of land to enlarge the burying-ground. The only notice of this grant to be found upon the records or files of the town is as follows:

At a town-meeting, held July 7, 1760, "Voted to choose a committee to take security of Mrs. Elizabeth Foye of a piece of land adjoining our Burying Place. Samuel Miller Esq. Benjamin Wadsworth and Mr. Josiah How was chose a committee for the above said purpose; Voted that the said committee return ye hearty Thanks of this Town to Mrs. Elizabeth Foye for a grant of a piece of land to enlarge our Burying Place."

The original deed is lost. The following is a copy of it, taken from the "Suffolk Records," lib. 97, fol. 132:

"Know all men by these presents, that we Elizabeth Foye, widow, Elizabeth Foye, spinster, and Mary Cooper, widow, all of Milton in the County of Suffolk, from a Regard to the Inhabitants of the said Town of Milton, and in consideration of the sum of one shilling paid us do Give, Grant, Bargain and Convey unto the said inhabitants half an Acre and six Rods as staket by Mr. How of Land in Milton aforesaid, heretofore the Estate of Wm. Foye Esq. deceased, the same lying between the now Burying Ground in said Milton, and Land lately sold to Mr. Josiah Howe of said Milton.

"To have and to hold the said half an Acre and six rods as staket by Mr How, of Land unto the said Inhabitants for a burying Ground forever.

"In witness whereof we hereto set our hands and seals this first day of September, in the thirty-fourth year of his Majestys Reign, Annoque Domini 1760.

"Signed, Sealed and Delivered ELIZth FOYE (and a Seal).
in presence of ELIZABETH FOYE JUN^r (and a Seal).
Benjamin Fessenden MARY COOPER (and a Seal).
Mary Babbidge

"The six rods between the 6 & 7 line as also between the 11 & 12 line was done before signing.

"SUFFOLK ss. September the first A.D. 1760 Elizabeth Foye, Elizabeth Foye and Mary Cooper personally appeared and acknowledged the above Instrument to be their deed.

"SAM^l. MILLER, Jus. Peace.

"Feb^y. 4, 1762. Received and accordingly Entered and Examined. PR^r EZEK^l GOLDTHWAIT, Reg."

The Foye lot is situated on the westerly and southerly sides of the Reedman lot, being bounded westerly by the easterly side of the central avenue of the present ground (old cemetery), and extending back some six or seven rods in the rear of the Reedman lot.

At the time of the above enlargement the ground had become filled with graves, and the supposition is that a few burials had already been made upon the Foye lot.

The next enlargement was made Sept. 15, 1794, by the purchase of three-quarters of an acre of land, at the rate of twenty-four pounds per acre, viz. : half an acre and twenty-two and a half rods from the heirs of Deacon Howe, and seventeen and a half rods from Col. Joseph Vose.

The Howe lot is directly in the rear of the Foye lot, extending back nine rods to the present southerly bounds of the old cemetery, and includes also a strip of land ten feet wide on the westerly side of the burying-ground, "to be reserved for a lane,"—which lane is now the central avenue.

The Vose lot is a strip of land about a rod wide on the easterly side of the Foye and Howe lots, which was reserved for and is now occupied by tombs.

April 21, 1837, Francis Amory, Esq., "in consideration of one dollar and divers other good causes," conveyed to the town of Milton, for the purpose of enlarging the "Graveyard" of said town, a lot of land adjoining the same, containing by estimation one acre and one quarter. This embraces that tract lying between the central avenue and the wall recently removed.

Dec. 11, 1854, the town purchased of Charles Breck and Thomas Hollis, Jr., eighteen acres and one hundred and sixteen rods of land, for the sum of eighteen hundred and four dollars. This tract lies in the rear and on the westerly side of the old cemetery, embracing all of the "Burying place fild," and extending through the swamp and over the opposite hill. This new lot, being long and narrow, and reaching an inconvenient distance from the main entrance, required an additional avenue to the highway.

April 21, 1858, Joseph McKean Churchill, Esq., "in consideration of the sum of One Hundred and twenty-five dollars, and from love and affection for my native town and the inhabitants thereof, in order to furnish a convenient access to the New Cemetery lately purchased and laid out by said town," conveyed to the town a lot of land on the easterly side of Gun-Hill road, containing one acre, and opening the southern part of the cemetery to Gun-Hill road.

For the purpose of straightening the wall on the easterly side of the cemetery, and bringing the wall of the new cemetery in line with that of the old cemetery, C. M. S. Churchill, Esq., "from regard to his native town and in consideration of one dollar," conveyed to the town the necessary amount of land, by deed Feb. 10, 1870.

At the March meeting, 1874, the trustees were authorized to purchase twelve acres of land lying on the easterly side of the cemetery, and extending from Center Street to the rear line of the grounds.

The purchase was made at once; the new grounds were inclosed and connected by avenues and paths with the old, and made ready for use.

The whole amount of land now embraced in the cemetery is as follows :

By survey of Thomas Crehore,	1794,	1 acre, 2 quarters, 18 rods.
Amory, grant,	1837,	1 acre, 1 quarter.
Town purchase,	1854,	18 acres, 2 quarters, 36 rods.
J. M. Churchill, grant,	1858,	1 acre.
C. M. S. Churchill, grant,	1870,	8 rods.
Town purchase,	1874,	12 acres.

Total, 34 acres, 2 quarters, 20 rods.

First Purchase.—Within the old, original grounds is situated the Crehore lot, in which are tablets bearing ancient inscriptions, as follows :

In memory of M^{rs} Ann Crehore, wife of M^r William Crehore, who died M^{ch} 25th, 1797, Æ. 70.

In memory of M^r Jsaiah Crehore, who died Nov. 3^d, 1770, aged 77 years.

M^{rs} Lydia Crehore, wife of M^r William Crehore, died Decm^r 6th, 1785, in the 26th year of her age.

Here lies the remains of Capt. John Crehore, who departed this life Feb. 2^d, Anno Dom. 1775, aged 64 years.

Here lies the body of Timothy Crehore, who died Aug. 15th, 1739, in y^e 73^d year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Ruth Crehore, she died June 27th, 1750, in y^e 82^d year of her age.

Here lies the remains of Deaⁿ Timothy Crehore, who departed this life Dec. 26, Anno Dom. 1755, in y^e 67th year of his age.

Here lies y^e body of Hannah Crehore, daughter of Deacon Timothy Crehore & M^{rs} Mary his wife, died Jan. 11th, 1735, in y^e 21st year of her age.

Interred in this vicinity are the descendants of Teague Crehore, who settled in Milton about the year 1645.

The following is a record of ancient inscriptions on all tablets in Milton Cemetery from 1687 to and including 1800 :

Erected in memory of M^r Seth Adams, who departed this life Oct y^e 12th, 1782, aged 41 years.

Stop, my friend, and think on me,
I once was in this world like thee,
Now I lie mouldering in the dust,
In hopes to rise amongst the just.

Here lies buried the body of Seth Adams, Bat^r Art^s, son of M^r Edward and M^{rs} Rachel Adams. He died June the 26th, 1736, in the 23^d year of his age.

Here lies buried the body of M^{rs} Rachel Adams, wife to M^r Edward Adams. She died Nov. the 14th, 1727, in the 42^d year of her age.

Here rests our Friend M^r John Adams, who departed this life June y^e 11th, 1790, aged 81 years.

As corn maturely ripe is gathered home,
So his remains are brought into the tomb,
To sleep in silence till that glorious day,
When Christ his light shall roll the stone away.

Here lies buried the body of Mr Edward Adams, who died Sep^r the 22nd, 1743, in the 61st year of his age.

In memory of Sarah Adams, dau^r of Mr John Adams & Sarah his wife, who died Jan. 28th, 1766, aged 13 years & 10 mos.

In memory of Seth Adams, son of Mr Lemuel Adams and Mrs Hannah Adams, who died Jan. 20th, 1796, aged 11 years.

In memory of Lemuel Adams, son of Mr Lemuel Adams & Mrs Hannah Adams, who died Jan. 25th, 1796, aged 13 years.

In memory of Mrs Sarah Adams, late Consort of Mr John Adams, who died Nov. 16th, 1774, aged 63 years.

Death is a debt to nature due,
As she has paid it so must you.
In life then strive to get prepared
To fly with her to meet the Lord.

Here lyes y^e body of Eliphalet Adams, son of Mr John & Mrs Sarah Adams. He died Feb. 5th, 1747, in y^e 5th year of his age.

John, son of Mr John and Mrs Sarah Adams, aged 20 months & 10 d^s, Dec^r August y^e 28th, 1735.

In memory of 2 Children of Mr Nathaniel & Mrs Lucy Arnold, viz.:

Nathan, died Jan. 1st, 1792, in y^e 6th year of his age;
Betsy P., died May 3^d, in y^e 3^d year of her age.

Here lie two children of Mr Nathan and Mrs Lucy Arnold:
John, died Dec. 31, 1795, aged 8 years 9 months;
Betsy, died Dec. 15, 1794, aged 6 months.

Here lies buried the body of Mr John Badcock, Jun^r, died April 10th, 1767, aged 24 years.

In memory of Mr Nathan Badcock, who died Jan. 29th, 1777, in the 60th year of his age.

Here lies the remains of Mrs Susanna Badcock, the late amiable Consort of Mr Nathan Badcock, who died Aug. 7th, 1774, aged 55 years.

In faith she died, in dust she lies,
But faith foresees that dust shall rise,
When Jesus calls, while hope assumes
And breaks her joy among the tombs.

Here lyes buried y^e body of Mr William Badcock, who departed this life M^{ch} 18th, 1772, aged 54 years & 4 days.

Beneath this stone death's prisoner lies,
The stone shall move, Death's prisoner rise,
When Jesus with almighty word
Calls his dead saints to meet their God.

Sacred to the memory of Mrs Bathsheba Badcock, dau^r of Mr William & Mrs Hannah Badcock, who died April 28th, 1792, æt. 31 years.

When this vain life of care and trouble's o'er,
We die to live, and live to die no more.

Here lies y^e body of Nathaniel Badcock, Jun^r, aged 34 years; died January y^e 22^d, 1718-9.

Here lies buried the body of Mr George Badcock, dec^d M^{ch} 5th, 1734, in y^e 46 year of his age.

In memory of Mrs Mary Bates, widow of Mr William Bates, of Weymouth, who died Dec. 30th, 1799, aged 87 years.

The sweet remembrance of the just
Shall flourish when they sleep in dust.

Vive Mori.

Erected in memory of Mr Samuel Bent, who died Dec. 14th, 1797, aged 26 years.

Early I left my earthly home of clay,
Which rests in silence till that great day,

When Christ shall call his children to the skies,
Then hope in glory with the saints to rise.
B. Adams, Sculptor.

In memory of Martha Bent, who died Dec. 4, 1766, in the 66th year of her age.

Here lies y^e body of Rachel Bent, wife to Joseph Bent; died July y^e 5th, 1775, in y^e 52^d year of her age.

Here lies y^e body of Joseph Bent, aged 52 years; died M^{ch} 31st, 1728.

In memory of Mr Eben Bent, who died Sep. 10th, 1796, aged 59 years.

This bed, thy dust shall keep in peace.

In memory of Mrs Melanda Bent, widow of Capt. Lemuel Bent, who died Oct. 20th, 1796, aged 67 years, 5 months.

In memory of Nathaniel Bicknell, son of Mr Nathaniel Bicknell and Mrs Elizabeth his wife. He died July y^e 27, 1775, in y^e 20th year of his age.

In youth, in time of health, my young friends, prepare for death.

Here lies buried the body of Mr Ebenezer Billings, who died Sep. 16, 1766, aged 47 years.

In patience and meekness few did him excell,
Faithful in Milton, where he did dwell;
Reason we have, and fully trust,
That his soul is among the just.

Here lies buried y^e body of Mr Joseph Billings, who departed this life July y^e 18th, 1765, in y^e 84 year of his age.

Mrs Maria Billings, wife of Mr Ebenezer Billings, who died December 19, 1785, in y^e 40th year of her age.

Marian Billings, daug. of Mr Moses & Mrs Marian Billings, died M^{ch} 19th, 1732, aged 7 months.

In memory of Mrs Ruhannah Billings, wife of Mr Joseph Billings. She died Feb. 2^d, 1740, aged 54 years.

Here lies her rest in peaceful dust,
Till God in glory raised the just.

In memory of Mr Amariah Blake, who died May y^e 19th, 1792, in y^e 60th year of his age.

Dear partner of my mortal cares,
I bid you all adieu,
I hope to meet above the Skyes
You and your children too.

In memory of Mrs Susanna Blake, Consort of Mr Enos Blake, who died Aug. 16th, 1776, in the 29th year of her age.

Here lyes buried y^e body of Mr William Blake, who died Oct. y^e 15th, 1736, in y^e 41st year of his age.

In memory of Mrs Bathsheba Blake, the wife of Mr Ziba Blake, who died Oct. 6th, 1778, aged 51 years.

I once did stand as thou dost now,
To view the dead as thou dost me,
But soon you'll lie as low as I,
While others stand and gaze at thee.

In memory of two children, only sons of Mr Enos and Mrs Rachel Blake viz:

Lemuel, died Oct. 2nd, 1792, in the 14 year of his age;
Stephen, died Oct. 7th, 1792, in the 7th year of his age.

Thus are those flowers wither'd in their bloom,
By death's cold hand brought early to the tomb;
But mark the goodness of the pow'rs above,
It can't withhold them from redeeming love.
They're safely landed on the peaceful shore
Where sin, disease & death are known no more.

Ziba Blake, son of M^r Ziba and M^{rs} Susanna Blake, died Aug. 24th, 1793, aged 13 mos. & 16 days.

Tho' young, yet not too young to die,
Prepare for death immediately.
Make sure of Christ while life remains,
And death will be eternal gain.

Here lies buried the body of M^{rs} Elizabeth Bodwick, who departed Nov. 22^d, 1758, in the 60th year of her age.

Here lies buried y^e body of M^r William Bodwick, Dec^d Oct. y^e 15th, 1752, in y^e 55 year of his age.

Here lies buried the body of M^r Alex^r Boies, who departed this life the 29th of Oct. 1773, aged 36 years.

In memory of M^r James Boies, who died the 11th day of July, 1798, aged 96.

This stone fixed here to hold in remembrance the place where the remains of M^r James Nelson Boies are deposited, who died on the 2^d day of July, 1782, anno ætatis 21st.

Here lies buried y^e body of M^{rs} Elizabeth Boys, wife to M^r Jeams Boys, daughter of M^r Jeremiah Smith, who departed this life Nov. y^e 20th, 1763, aged 32 years.

In memory of M^r Josiah Brown. He died December y^e 31st, 1775, in y^e 35 year of his age.

Here's interred Clarissa, daughter of M^r John & Polly Bussy; died April 19th, 1796, æt. 19 months.

Elizabeth Clap died Dec^r y^e 20th, 1701, aged 37 years.

Here lies buried y^e body of Deacⁿ Nehemiah Clap, who deceased July y^e 18th, 1743, in y^e 54 year of his age.

Here lies buried y^e body of Ensign Ebenezer Clap, died July 30th, 1712, in y^e 69 year of his age.

George Clark, son of M^r George and M^{rs} Lydia Clark, Dorchester, died M^{ch} 21st, 1770, aged 1 year.

Seth Clark, son of M^r George & M^{rs} Lydia Clark, Dorchester, died Jan. 13th, 1771, aged 5 weeks.

In memory of M^{rs} Lydia Clark, wife of M^r George Clark, of Dorchester. She died M^{ch} y^e 1st, 1776, aged 31 years.

In the book of life divine,
My God inscribe my name,
There let it fill some humble place,
Beneath the slaughtered Lamb.

Here lies the body of M^r Thomas Cradock and Prusilla his wife and their daughter Ann, the wife of M^r Thomas Edwards, who departed this life November 2^d, 1752, aged 24 years.

Farewell forever then to all that's gay!
You will forget to sing and I to pray,
No more with cheerful songs in cooling bowers,
Shall we consume the pleasurable hours.
All joys are banished, all delights are fled,
Ne'er to return, for A^{}'s dead.

Here lies buried y^e body of M^r Benjamin Crane, who departed this life June y^e 24th, 1771, in the 79 year of his age.

In memory of Rebecca Belcher Crane, daug. of M^r Jeremiah & M^{rs} Rebecca Crane, who died Oct. 3^d, 1792, in the 8th year of her age.

Here lies two children, sons of M^r Jeremiah & M^{rs} Rebecca Crane:

Charles, died Sept. the 23^d, 1792, in the 6th year of his age;
Jeremiah, died Oct. 14, 1792, in the 2 year of his age.

Here lies the body of M^{rs} Abigail Crane, the wife of M^r Benjamin Crane. She died June 4th, 1755, in y^e 57th year of her age.

In memory of M^{rs} Abigail Crane, wife of M^r Henry Crane, who died Sept. 2^d, 1795, aged 58 years.

Could grateful love recall the fleeting breath,
Or fond affection soothe the relentless death,
Then had this stone ne'er claimed a social tear,
Nor read to thoughtless man a lesson here.

In memory of M^r Willam Crane, who died Nov. 10, 1785, in y^e 41st year of his age.

Isac Crane, son of M^r Isac & M^{rs} Pontas Crane, died Oct. 3^d, 1727. Ætat 3 years.

Also Enos Crane died Sep. 8th, 1865, age 20 months.

Here lies y^e body of Mary Crehore, daugh^r of Capt. John & M^{rs} Mehitable Crehore, died Oct. 22nd, 1748, in y^e 21st year of her age.

Ambrose Davenport, son of M^r Adam & M^{rs} Mary Davenport, died Sept. 14th, 1787, aged 3 years and 3 months.

Life is uncertain, death is sure,
Sin's the wound and Christ the cure.

In memory of M^{rs} Elizabeth wife of M^r Lemuel Davis, who died M^{ch} 28th, 1795, in y^e 42^d year of her age.

In memory of two children of M^r Lemuel and M^{rs} Elizabeth Davis, viz.:

Sally Tucker, died Dec. 18, 1794, aged 5 months;
Charlotte died M^{ch} 22^d, 1795, aged 3 years.

Here lies buried the body of M^r John Dickerman, who died 14th of August, 1729, in y^e 64th year of his age.

Here lies y^e body of Mary Fenno, dau^r to Benjⁿ & Mary Fenno, aged 22 years and 27 days. Dec^d April y^e 16th, 1725.

Erected in memory of M^r Enoch Fenno, who died Sept 19, 1796, aged 41 years.

Adieu, bright soul, a short farewell!
Till we shall meet in realms above,
In pleasant groves where pleasures dwell
And trees of life bear fruits of love.

Here lies interred the remains of M^r Joseph Fenno, who departed this life Jan. y^e 19th, 1767, aged 32 years.

In the cold mansions of the silent tomb,
How still the solitude, how deep the gloom,
Here sleeps the dust unconscious, close confined,
But far, far distant dwells the immortal mind.

Here lies y^e body of M^r Robert Field, who died Jan. y^e 22^d, 1759, in y^e 74 year of his age.

Here lies buried y^e body of Robert Field, died September 2^d, 1719, in y^e 67 year of his age.

Here lies y^e body of M^r Ebenezer Field, who died Dec^r y^e 15th, 1748, in y^e 32^d year of his age.

Here lies y^e body of Mary Field, wife of Robert Field, died April y^e 2^d, 1799, in y^e 60 year of her age.

Here lies buried y^e body of Anna Field, y^e wife of M^r Robert Field, she departed this life y^e 13 of November, 1728, in y^e 44th year of her age.

Mehetabel Field, y^e daughter of Robert & Anna Field, aged 3 days, died 21st of Sep. 1719.

Here lies buried the body of M^{rs} Hannah Fuller, wife of M^r Benjamin Fuller, aged 30 years, died Dec^r y^e 15th, 1746.

Here lies interred the remains of M^{rs} Abigail Glover, the Consort of M^r Elijah Glover, and daughter of M^r Samuel & M^{rs} Mary Kinsley. She died Feb. 8th, 1760, aged 84 years.

Here lies buried the body of M^r Samuel Glover, who died Aug. 2^d, 1761, in the 60th year of his age.

Here lies buried the body of M^r Elijah Glover, son of M^r

Thomas & Elizabeth Glover of Dorchester, who departed this life July y^e 1st, 1770, in y^e 45th year of his age.

Stop here, my friend, and cast an eye,
As you are now, so once was I,
As I am now so must you be,
Prepare for death and follow me.

Sacred to the memory of Dea. Cornelius Gulliver, who died Jan. 15th, 1808, aged 65 years.

M^{rs} Ann Gulliver, wife of Dea. Cornelius Gulliver, who died Feb. 6th, 1806, aged 53 years.

Also M^r Elisha Gulliver, son of Dea. Cornelius and M^{rs} Ann Gulliver, who died Oct. 31, 1799, aged 23 years.

"Jesus said, I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

Here lies the body of M^{rs} Hannah Gulliver, widow of M^r Nathaniel Gulliver, she died June 1st, 1760, aged 80 years and 4 months.

Here lies the body of M^r Stephen Gulliver, who departed this life the ninth day of May, 1771, in the 40th year of his age.

A soul prepared meets no delays,
The summons comes, y^e man obeys,
Swift was his flight, and short the road,
He closed his eyes and saw his God.
The flesh rests here, till Jesus come
And calls the body to his home.

Here lyes y^e body of Mary Gulliver, wife to Jonathan Gulliver, aged 34 years, & 8 months & 5 days, died February y^e 16, 1703.

Here lyes y^e body of M^r Nathaniel Gulliver, who died March 25th, 1743, in y^e 65th year of his age.

Here lies buried y^e body of Anthony Gulliver, aged 87 years, died Nov. y^e 28th, 1706.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Hannah Gulliver, widow of M^r Nathaniel Gulliver, she died June 1st, 1760, aged 80 years & 4 months.

Erected in memory of Sarah Gulliver, wife of Jn^o Gulliver, who died Oct. y^e 1st, 1799, aged 64.

Here lies buried y^e body of M^r Caleb Hearsey, died Feb. 29, 1755, in the 57 year of his age.

Here lies the body of John Hearsey, who died Dec. 1st, 1725, in the 66th year of his age.

Here lies the body of M^{rs} Hannah Hearsey, wife to M^r Caleb Hearsey, died April 4th, 1742, in the 40th year of her age.

Dan^l Hensher, son of Samuel & Waitstill Hensher, died Oct. y^e 25th, 1719, in y^e 8 year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of M^r Daniel Hanshaw, who died August y^e 25th, 1732, in y^e 90th year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Waitstill Hanshaw, wife of M^r Samuel Hanshaw, she died May y^e 17th, 1737, in y^e 53 year of her age.

Here lyes y^e body of Mary Hensher, wife to Daniel Hensher, died November y^e 19th, 1719, in y^e 83 year of her age.

Abigail Holman, wife to Thomas Holman, aged 57 years, died March y^e 1st, 1703.

Here lies y^e body of Patience Holman, aged 42 years, Dec^r June 29, 1713.

Memento Mori

Fugit Hora

Here lies y^e body of M^r Thomas Holman, aged 63 years, died August y^e 4th, 1704.

Fenno Houghton, son of M^r Elijah & M^{rs} Mary Houghton, died Jan. 20, 1773, aged 1 year.

Here lyes buried the body of M^{rs} Ruth Houghton, the wife of M^r Joseph Houghton, who departed this life May y^e 23^d, 1792, in the 50th year of her age.

Here lies interred the mortal parts of Deacon Nathaniel Houghton, who died M^{ch} y^e 13th, 1732, aged 76 years.

Cease tears, y^e body of a friend
Ye to y^e grave do only lend,
A common lot, here Christ has been,
Triumphant over death & sin.
He has awoke, so shall the just,
And gather up their crumbs of dust.
Comfort, O friend, the gospel cries,
Seed that is quickened always dies.

Here lyes buried y^e body of M^{rs} Ann Houghton, wife of M^r Joseph Houghton and daughter of M^r John & M^{rs} Ann Williams, who died July 14th, 1773, in y^e 22^d year of her age.

Here lies buried the body of M^{rs} Deborah Houghton, y^e wife of Dea. Nathaniel Houghton, who departed this life Feb. the 27th, 1772, in y^e 70 year of her age.

In memory of M^{rs} Sarah, the wife of M^r Isac Howe, but lately the wife of M^r Lazarus Baker, she died Sep. y^e 11th, 1755, in y^e 61st year of her age.

Erected in memory of M^{rs} Sarah Howe, Relict of Dea. Josiah Howe, who died Nov. 18, 1797, A^E 81.

Tired with the troubles & the cares
A long train of four-score years,
The prisoner smiled to be released,
She felt her fetters loosed and mounted to her rest.

Here lies the body of M^r Isac How, who died Sept. y^e 7th, 1769, in y^e 55 year of his age. An instance of sudden death in the midst of useful life.

Dangers stand thick through all the ground,
To push us to the Tomb,
And fierce diseases march around,
To hurry mortals home.
But I'll repine at death no more,
I'll cheerfully resign
To the cold dungeon of the grave
These dying limbs of mine,
Since God and my Redeemer lives,
Who often from the skies
Looks down and watches all my dust,
Till he shall bid it rise.

Erected to the memory of Deacon Josiah How, who departed this life Oct. 3^d, 1792, in the 74th year of his age.

Here stands his urn,
He'll ne'er return,
He's gone to Christ above.
His body's dead,
His spirit's fled,
His song's redeeming love.

Isac How, y^e son of M^r Josiah & M^{rs} Sarah How. He died June 18th, 1752, in y^e 3^d year of his age.

Josiah How, y^e son of M^r Josiah & M^{rs} Sarah How. He died June 19th, 1752, in y^e 6th year of his age.

John How, son of M^r Josiah & M^{rs} Sarah How, died Jan^y 22^d 1755, in y^e 3^d year of his age.

In memory of Samuel Maynard Humphrey, son of M^r Nathaniel & M^{rs} Martha Humphrey, who died Sept. 4th, 1791, aged 20 months.

In memory of M^{rs} Rhoda Jones, the wife of M^r Joseph Jones, who died Oct. 4th, 1702, aged 55 years.

Here lyeth y^e body of Elizabeth Jones, daughter to M^r Timothy & M^{rs} Elizabeth Jones, died Dec^r 4th, 1740, in y^e 21st year of her age.

Here lyes y^e body of M^r David Jones, aged 45 years, died May y^e 3^d, 1741.

In the memory of M^r John Keith, who died June 8th, 1796, aged 21 years.

He whom the Lord doth free,
The noblest freedom gains,
Freedom from vice & misery,
And sins of closing chains.

Here lies the body of M^{rs} Abigail Kneeland, wife of M^r John Kneeland, died May 17, 1770, aged 33 years.

The sweet remembrance of the just
Shall flourish when they sleep in dust.

Here lies buried the body of M^r John Kinsley, who died Sept. y^e 13th, 1748, in y^e 69th year of his age.

Here lyeth the body of Capt. Samuel Kinsley, who departed this life Oct. y^e 2nd, 1755, aged 58 years.

In memory of M^{rs} Simeon Lamb of Charlestown, who died of the small-pox Sept. the 25th, in the year 1792, and the 21st year of her age.

Here lyes the body of M^{rs} Hannah Lankester, Relict of M^r William Lankester, who died April 9th, 1742, aged 79 years.

Erected in memory of Miss Mary Mac Carnney, who died Jan. 4th, 1791, aged 20 years.

Sleep in darkness till that glorious day,
When Christ my light shall roll the stone away.

In memory of Mary Milton, aged 23 years, died Feb. 8th, 1703.

In memory of M^r John Newton, who died Feb. 16, 1774, in the 87th year of his age.

Here lies the body of Jerusha Park, who died Sept. 23^d, 1767, age 17 days. Also the body of Sarah Park, who died Sept. 17th, 1767, aged 11 days; children of M^r Edward & M^{rs} Jerusha Park.

In memory of M^{rs} Ester Pierce, wife of M^r Charles Pierce, who died May 10th, 1787, in y^e 23 year of her age.

Why mourn you thus, my relict friend & kin?
Lament you, when I lose, not when I win.

Here lies buried y^e body of Chloe Pierce, daughter of M^r William and M^{rs} Unice Pierce, who died June 30th, 1774, aged 8 weeks.

In memory of William Pierce, son of William & M^{rs} Lydia Pierce, who died Dec^r 2^d, 1770, aged 3 years & 3 months.

In memory of three daughters of M^r William & M^{rs} Unice Pierce, viz.

Miss Deliverance Pierce, who died Sept. 5th, 1792, Aet 38 years.

Miss Martha Pierce, who died Feb. 10th, 1791, Aet 24 years, and Miss Unice Pierce, who died Oct. 10th, 1788, Aet 17 years.

Lovers and Friends, Oh God!
By thy resistless frown,
The gloomy vale have trod,
And to the grave gone down.

In memory of Deliverance Pierce, wife of Capt. William Pierce, who died April 28th, 1748, in y^e 49th year of her age.

Here lies buried y^e body of M^r William Pierce, who died April 17th, 1731, in y^e 72^d year of his age.

In memory of M^r William Pierce, who died Feb. 1st, 1793, aged 65 years.

Why do ye mourn departed friends,
Or shake at death's alarms,
'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends
To call them to his arms.

Here lies buried y^e body of M^{rs} Elizabeth Pierce, wife of M^r William Pierce, who died June 6th, 1735, in y^e 67th year of her age.

Here lies buried the body of M^{rs} Hannah Pitcher, y^e wife of M^r John Pitcher, who departed this life Sept. y^e 2^d, 1772, aged 77 years.

Here lies buried the body of Thomas Rawlins, aged about 70 years. Departed this life July y^e 7th, 1693.

Here lyes buried the body of Abigail Rawlins, aged 72 years, departed this life March y^e 20th, 1711-12.

In memory of Miss Esther Rawson, dau^{ht} of David Rawson Esq. & Mrs. Mary his wife, who died of y^e small pox Oct. 27th, 1792, aged 31 years & 6 months.

Death a debt to nature due,
Which I have paid and so must you.

In memory of Miss Sally Rea, the dau^{ht} of M^r Jeremiah Rea and M^{rs} Bridget his wife, who died Nov. 11th, 1792, in the 24th year of her age.

Stop, my friend, and think of me,
I once was in the world like thee,
Now I lie mouldering in the dust,
In hope to rise among the just.

In memory of M^{rs} Mary Ruggles, the wife of M^r John Ruggles, who died Nov. 23^d, 1773, aged 30 years.

A meek and quiet spirit she possessed,
And proved the religion she professed.

Here lyes the body of M^r Thomas Shepard, Dec^d Sept. y^e 29th, 1719, in y^e 87th year of his age.

Here lyes the body of M^r Ralph Shepard, Dec^d Jan^y y^e 26th, 1721, in y^e 36th year of his age.

Sacred to the memory of Benjamin Smith, paper maker, son of M^r Richard Smith of North Britain in the Shire of Aberdeen. He died May 6th, 1792, in the 37 year of his age.

Could grateful love recall the fleeting breath,
Or fond affection soothe the relentless death,
Then had this stone ne'er claimed a social tear,
Nor read to thoughtless man a lesson here.

Here lies the body of John Stimpson, aged 56 years, Dec^d Aug. y^e 11th, 1732.

In memory of Katherine Soper, wife of Samuel Soper, who died Feb. 17th, 1776, in y^e 22^d year of her age.

In memory of Katherine Soper, daughter of Samuel and Katherine Soper, who died Jan^y 16th, 1769, in y^e 5th year of her age.

In memory of M^{rs} Elizabeth Sumner, wife of Col. Seth Sumner, who died May 9th, 1784, in the 48th year of her age.

Life is uncertain, death is sure,
Sin's the wound, Christ the cure.

Erected in memory of M^r Abijah Sumner, who died Feb. 2^d, 1797, in the 84th year of his age.

In memory of M^{rs} Harriet Sumner, wife of M^r Benjamin Sumner, who died 14th Aug. 1800, aged 28 years.

No more, my friend, dont mourn for me,
I'm gone into eternity,
Make sure of Christ while life remain,
And death will be eternal gain.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Sarah Sumner, wife of M^r Josiah Sumner, she died Dec. y^e 11th, 1741, in y^e 25th year of her age.

Here lyes y^e body of Ruth Sumner, daug. of M^r Ebenezer & M^{rs} Susanna Sumner, died May 24th, 1754, in y^e 21st year of her age.

Erected in memory of M^r David Sumner, who died Nov. 11th, 1789, in the 72 year of his age. Also his 2^d wife Mary Sumner, who died Dec. 25, 1821, in the 89th year of her age.

In memory of M^r Jazaniah Sumner, who died May 6th, 1778, aged 66. Also his wife M^{rs} Judith Sumner, who died Nov. 5th, 1799, aged 68.

So sleep the saints and cease to groan,
When sin and death have done their worst,
Christ has a glory like his own,
Which waits to clothe their waking dust.

Here lies buried the body of M^r Benjamin Sumner, who departed this life May y^e 28th, 1771, in y^e 88 year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of Deacon George Sumner, aged 81 years, died y^e 11th day of December, 1715.

Here lyes y^e body of Joseph Sumner, son of M^r Benjamin & M^{rs} Elizabeth Sumner, he died May y^e 22^d, 1731, in y^e 21st year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Elizabeth Sumner, wife of M^r Benj. Sumner. She died Oct. 3^d, 1735, in y^e 50th year of her age.

Here lyes buried y^e body of M^r George Sumner, he died Dec. 18th, 1732, in y^e 67th year of his age.

Here lyes buried y^e body of Mary Sumner, y^e widow of Deacon George Sumner, aged 47 years. Dec^d y^e 1st of April, 1719.

Here lyes buried y^e body of Deacon Roger Sumner, aged 66 years, Dec^d May y^e 26, 1698.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Susanna Sumner, wife of M^r Ebenezer Sumner, she died y^e 7th of July A.D. 1760, in y^e 47th year of her age.

In memory of M^{rs} Susan Sumner, wife of M^r Jabez Sumner, who died in Child-bed May 1st, 1793, in the 40th year of her age; the child died at its birth.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Susanna Sumner, y^e daughter of M^r George Sumner, Jun. dec^d. She departed this life May 11, 1752, in y^e 21st year of her age.

Here lies buried the body of M^r George Sumner, died Aug. 26, 1730, in y^e 27 year of his age.

In memory of M^r Nathaniel Swift, who died May y^e 13th, 1767, in y^e 47 year of his age.

Here lies interred the remains of M^{rs} Ann Swift, the virtuous consort of Samuel Swift, Esq. She exchanged this life for a better May 19, 1762, in the 82 year of her age.

Reader, remember thou art born to die,
Hark from the grave to youth this is my cry,
Withdraw, prepare, think, Act Accordingly.

Luke xvi. 31.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Elizabeth Swift, wife to M^r Thomas Swift, she died Dec. 12, 1756, aged 32 years.

Here lyes y^e body of Sarah Swift, wife to Deacon Thomas Swift, aged 75 years, Dec^d Feb. y^e 4th, 1717-8.

Here lyes the body of Betsey Swift, dau^r of M^r John & M^{rs} Elizabeth Swift, died M^{ch} 25, 1774, aged 10 months & 29 days.

In memory of M^{rs} Rebekah Swift, the virtuous wife of M^r Nathaniel Swift, who died 6th Sept. 1793, .Æt 70.

The sweet remembrance of the just
Shall flourish when they sleep in dust.

Here lies interred the remains of Samuel Swift, Esq. who departed this life Oct. 13th, 1747, aged 64 years.

Who never did a slander forge,
His neighbor's fame to wound,
Nor harken to a false report,
By malice whispered round.
Who to his plighted vows & trust
Had ever firmly stood,
And tho' he promised to his loss,
He made his promise good.

Sacred to the memory of M^{rs} Judith Swift, wife of M^r Ebenezer Swift, who died April 22^d, 1784, aged 55 years.

I once did^t stand as thou dost now,
To view the dead as thou dost me,
But soon you'll lie as low as I,
While others stand and gaze at thee.

Here lyes the body of Lydia Swift, dau^r to M^r Ebenezer & M^{rs} Judith Swift, who died July 10th, 1758, aged 4 years & 5 months.

Here lies buried y^e body of Deacon Thomas Swift, aged 82 years & 8 months. Died Jan^y y^e 31st, 1717-8.

Here lyes buried y^e body of M^r Thomas Thacher, son of M^r Peter Thacher, aged 28 years, who died Dec^r 19th, 1721.

Mrs Theodora Thacher, y^e daughter of Rev. Mr. John Oxenbridge, Pastor of y^e first Church of Boston, and wife of M^r Peter Thacher, aged 38 years, 3 months & 23 days, was Translated from Earth to Heaven Nov^r y^e 18th, 1697.

This Stone Sacred to y^e memory of M^{rs} Sarah Thacher, Consort of y^e late Oxenbridge Thacher, Jr. Esq^r. who died ye 3d of July, 1764, .Æt 39. Demands from thee, oh reader, y^e tribute of a tear to her memory, and a thought on thine own dissolution.

In memory of M^r Lewis Thomas, who died on his way from Boston to his parents M^r Hushai & M^{rs} Lucy Thomas in Middleborough, with the yellow fever, August 25th, 1798, in his 28th year.

Though the great God who reigns on high
Hath doomed the race of man to die,
Yet saints thereby are cleansed from sin,
And in glory rise again.

Here lyes buried y^e body of M^r Samuel Trescott, who died July 30th, 1730, in y^e 84 year of his age.

Here lyes buried y^e body of M^{rs} Margaret Trescott, widow of M^r Samuel Trescott, she died March 19th, 1741, in y^e 90th year of her age.

Luther, son of Samuel & Hannah Topliff, stillborn Nov. 16th, 1734.

In memory of Mary Paine Tufts, daughter of M^r William & M^{rs} Peggy Tufts, who died Sept. 2^d, 1791, in the 2^d year of her age.

Sleep, sleep, sweet babe, and take thy rest,
God called thee home, he thought it best,
Wipe off your tears, your eyes let dry,
We learn from this we all must die.

Here lye buried the remains of Susanna Tucker, the wife of M^r Jazaniah Tucker. She departed this life Oct. 2^d, 1776, in the 65th year of her age.

Here lies interred the body of M^{rs} James Tucker, who departed this life Dec^r y^e 22^d, 1750, in y^e 71st year of her age.

Here lyes buried the body of Deacon Nathan Tucker, who departed this life Nov. 8th, 1776, aged 58 years.

In memory of M^{rs} Mary Tucker, the widow of M^r Joseph Tucker, who died Oct. 7th, 1792, in the 59 year of her age.

In memory of M^{rs} Elizabeth, wife of M^r Samuel Tucker, who died M^{ch} 10th, 1791, in y^e 66th year of her age.

In memory of Mary W. Tucker, daughter of M^r David & M^{rs} Mary Tucker, died Nov. 22^d, 1792, aged 12 years.

Thrice blessed are the pious dead,
Who in the Lord shall die,
Their weary flesh as on a bed
Safe in the grave shall lie.

In memory of M^r Joseph Tucker, who died May 22^d, 1789, in the 64 year of his age.

To God I now resign my breath,
And safely walk the vale of death,
With Christ I've lived, with Him I'll die,
And pass to immortality.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Waitstill Tucker, the widow of Deaⁿ Manasseh Tucker. She died March y^e 19th, 1748, in y^e 87 year of her age.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Sarah Tucker, the widow of M^r James Tucker, she died Sept. y^e 16th, 1756, in y^e 74 year of her age.

Here lies the body of Deacon Manasseh Tucker, who died April 8th, 1743, in y^e 89 year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of James Tucker, of Milton, aged 77 years. Dec^d M^{ar}ch y^e 13th, 1717.

In memory of Sarah Tucker, daughter of M^r Samuel & M^{rs} Elizabeth Tucker, who died Feb. 10th, 1766, in y^e 24 year of her age.

Here lies buried the body of M^r Manasseh Tucker, Jr., the son of Deacon Manasseh Tucker, who died March 10th, 1730, in the 42^d year of his age.

Ebenezer, son of M^r Ebenezer Tucker & Elizabeth his wife. He died Sept. 26th, 1775, aged 10 years and 4 months.

Here lies buried the body of Deacon William Tucker, who departed this life Dec. y^e 9th, A.D. 1771, in y^e 64th year of his age.

The sweet remembrance of the just
Shall flourish when he lies in dust.

His works of piety and love,
Remain before the Lord,—
Honor on earth & joys above
Shall be his sure reward.

In memory of M^{rs} Mary Tucker, once y^e amiable consort of Capt. Jeremiah Tucker, who departed this life Sep. y^e 21st, 1766, in y^e 40th year of her age.

In memory of M^r Samuel Tucker, who died May 26th, 1776, in y^e 57 year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Rachel Tucker, wife of M^r William Tucker. She died Jan^y 25th, 1744, in y^e 34th year of her age.

Here lies buried the remains of Capt. Samuel Tucker, who departed this life Dec^r 25, 1758, in the 72^d year of his age.

Here lies y^e body of Esther Tucker, dau^r to M^r Jazaniah & M^{rs} Susanna Tucker. She died July y^e 19th, 1755, in y^e 13th year of her age.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Jean Tucker, widow of M^r Ebenezer Tucker. She died Feb. 17th, 1743, in y^e 57 year of her age.

Here lyes y^e body of M^r James Tucker, son of M^r James & M^{rs} Sarah Tucker; he died Dec^r the 7th, 1732, in y^e 23^d year of his age.

In memory of M^r Thomas Vose, who died March 27, 1775, in the 36th year of his age.

A soul prepared needs no delays,
The summons comes, the soul obeys;

Swift in his flight and short the road,
He closed his eyes and saw his God.
The flesh rests here till Jesus come,
And claim the treasure from the tomb.

In memory of Moses Vose, who died Sep. 6th, 1793, aged 21 years, 3 mon. 2 days. Also Elijah Vose, died Sep. 17th, 1774, aged 1 year 12 days. Sons of Moses & M^{rs} Hannah Vose.

In memory of M^{rs} Abigail Vose, Comfort of M^r Edward Vose, Decea^d, who died Sept. 8th, 1778, in the 64th year of her age.

Here lyes buried the body of Lydia Sumner Vose, daughter of M^r Benjamin & M^{rs} Esther Vose, who died May 6th, 1779, aged 1 month.

Here lyes y^e body of Samuel Vose, aged 21 years and about 9 months, Dec^d Dec. 13th, 1717.

William Vose, son of M^r Nathaniel & M^{rs} Ruth Vose, died Oct. y^e 8th, 1773, aged 1 year & 14 days.

The sweet delights we here enjoy
And fondly call our own,
Are but short favors borrowed now
To be repaid anon.
'Tis God that lifts our comforts high
Or sinks them in the grave,
He gives, and blessed be his name,
He takes but what he gave.

In memory of M^{rs} Mary Vose, wife of Deaⁿ W^m Vose, who died Oct. 25, 1792, in the 38th year of her age.

And their children, viz.:

Edward Roger, died July 5th, 1783, Æt. 4 years.

Ebenezer, died July 25th, 1783, Æt. 9 months.

Philena, died Oct. 20th, 1792, Æt. 11 days.

Here lyes y^e body of Thomas Vose, son of M^r Josiah & M^{rs} Rubamah Vose, died May 26, 1778, aged two months.

To the memory of M^{rs} Lucy Vose, the second wife of M^r Ebenezer Vose. She died May 30th, 1797, aged 58 years.

Religion against decay can arm,
And ever lend mortality a charm.

Here lyes buried the body of Esther Vose, daughter to Benjamin & M^{rs} Esther Vose, who died Jan. 28, 1771, age 1 year & 2 months.

Happy the babe who privedged by fate
To shorter labor and a lighter weight,
Receives but yesterday the gift of breath,
Ordered to-morrow to return to death.

In memory of M^r William Vose, who died May 13th, 1776, in the 44th year of his age.

Charles Vose, son of M^r Benjamin and M^{rs} Esther Vose, died August 3^d, 1793, aged 6 years.

Here lies the body of M^r Elijah Vose, who departed this life Nov. 5th, 1766, in the 58th year of his age.

Great God, I own Thy orders just,
And nature must decay,
I yield my body to the dust,
To dwell with fellow clay.
Hoping to see Thy lovely face,
With strong immortal eyes—
To feast upon Thy wondrous grace
With pleasure and surprise.

Here lies buried the body of M^r Edward Vose, who departed this life May y^e 31, 1770, in y^e 50th year of his age.

In memory of M^r Ebenezer Vose, who died Oct. 2^d, 1788, aged 55.

The sweet remembrance of the just
Shall flourish when they sleep in dust.

Here lies buried Mrs Eunice Vose, wife of Mr Ebenezer Vose, who died June 20, 1707, in y^e 31st year of her age.

A meek and quiet spirit she possessed,
And practiced the religion she professed.

In memory of Miss Polly Howe Vose, who died Dec. 7th, 1797, aged 21 years.

Though early made a sacrifice to death,
With cheerful hope she could resign her breath;
Her sickly form she now has left behind,
And freed from all that could disturb her mind.

In this grave lies buried Esther Vose, the late virtuous & amiable consort of Mr Nathan Vose. She departed this life Feb. 23th, 1775, in the 23 year of her age.

A soul prepared needs no delay,
The summons comes, the saints obey;
Short was her life, but well improved,
She closed her eyes and saw her God.
Her flesh rests here till Jesus come,
And claim the treasure from the tomb.

Here lyes buried the body of Lieu^t. Henry Vose, who died M^{ch} 26th, 1752, in y^e 87th year of his age.

Here lies buried y^e body of Capt. Thomas Vose, he departed this life y^e 9th day of March, 1760, aged 62 years, 11 months & 8 days.

Stand still, reader, and spend a tear
Over the dust that slumbers here;
And, while you're musing here on me,
Think on the glass that runs for thee.

Fanna Vose, daughter of Mr Daniel & Mrs Rachel Vose, died Sep. 9th, 1775, aged 3 months and 6 days.

John Vose, Jun., son of Mr Joseph & Mrs Ruhamah Vose, died Sept. y^e 11th, 1775, aged 10 months & 6 days.

Here lies y^e body of Mr Lemuel Vose, who died Oct. 1st, 1764, in y^e 34th year of his age.

Here lies the body of Peter Vose, son of Capt. Thomas & Mrs Patience Vose, died Feb. 9th, 1764, aged 18 years, 5 months & 26 days.

In memory of Mrs Patience Vose, Relict of Mr Thomas Vose, of Milton, and daughter of Joseph & Ruhamah Billings. She died April y^e 3^d, 1800, aged 85 years.

Here sleeps a Christian, full of faith and love,
She lived in cheerful hope, resigned her breath
To join her kindred spirits blest above—
Reader, be such your life and such your death.

Here lies y^e body of Mr Jonathan Vose, who died February, 1760, in y^e 50th year of his age.

Here lies interred the remains of Mrs Abigail Vose, widow of Lieu^t. Robert Vose, who departed this life Decem^r y^e 28th, 1769, in y^e 72^d year of her age.

The graves of all his saints he blessed,
And softens every bed,
Where should the dying members rest
But with the dying Head.

Here lies buried y^e body of Lieu^t Robert Vose, who departed this life April 20th, 1760, in y^e 67th year of his age.

Here lyes the body of Mr Edward Vose, Dec^d Jan. y^e 29th, 1716, in y^e 80 year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of Abigail Vose, wife to Edward Vose, aged 65 years. Dec^d May y^e 18th, 1712.

Here lies buried the body of Mrs Waitstill Vose, widow of Capt. Thomas Vose, died Jan^y y^e 8th, 1727, aged 84 years.

Joseph, son to Elijah & Sarah Vose, died Sep. y^e 29, 1735, in y^e 4th year of his age.

Rufus Vose, son of Mr John & Mrs Mary Vose, died Sep. y^e 18th, 1750, aged 18 mon. & 20 days.

Here lies buried the body of Nathaniel Vose, Jun^{ior}, who departed this life December 18th, 1756, in y^e 52 year of his age.

Here lies y^e body of Zebiah Uoce, dafter of W^m Uoce, aged 17 years, died March y^e 26th, 1718.

Here lies y^e body of William Uoce, aged 44 years, died Dec. 7th, 1717.

Here lyes buried the body of Rubin Vose, son of Mr Nathaniel & Mrs Rachel Vose, died May y^e 9th, 1760, in y^e 21st year of his age.

Here lyes buried the body of Mrs Elizabeth Vose, wife to Lieu^t Henry Vose, who died Oct. y^e 18th, 1732, in y^e 66th year of her age.

In memory of Mrs Marian Vose, who departed this life Oct. 25th, 1785, in y^e 57th year of her age.

In memory of Rachel Vose, dau^r of Mr Nath^l & Mrs Rachel Vose. She died Sept. y^e 1st, 1775, aged 32 years.

The sweet remembrance of the just
Shall flourish when they sleep in dust.

Here lyes buried the body of Mr John Vose, son of Mr Nathaniel & Mrs Rachel Vose, who departed this life Oct. 27th, 1752, in y^e 27 year of his age.

Here lyes buried the body of Mr Thomas Vose, son of Capt. Thomas Vose, deceased Aug. 16th, 1722, in y^e 55 year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of Eli Vose, son to Mr Thomas & Mrs Patience Vose, he died Feb. y^e 8th, 1749, aged 3 years.

Mary Vose, daug^r to Mr Jonathan & Mrs Mary Vose, died Nov. 10th, 1744, in y^e 4th year of her age.

In memory of Mr Zephaniah Walker, who died July 8th, 1775, aged 21 years.

Come hither, mortal, cast an eye,
Then go thy way, prepare to die.
Here read thy doom, for die thou must,
One day, like me, be turned to dust.

Here lyes the body of Mrs Elizabeth Wadsworth, the widow of Deaⁿ John Wadsworth. She departed this life May 6th, 1766, in the 89th year of her age.

In memory of Rev. Mr John Wadsworth of Milton. Educated at Harvard College. Ordained at Canterbury Sept. 17th, 1728. Died at Milton June 15th, 1766, aged 63 years.

Here lies buried, waiting for the coming of the Lord, the body of Mr John Wadsworth, only son of Mr John & Mrs Abigail Wadsworth, who was suddenly removed (not without hope) from his lamenting friends into the invisible state, May 27, 1752, in the 21st year of his age.

Young man, your bones shall flourish as an herb.

Reader, art thou also ready? At such an hour as you think not, the Son of Man cometh.

Here lyes y^e body of Deacon Ebenezer Wadsworth, aged 56 years & 5 mos. Dec^d Aug^t y^e 1st, 1717.

[The Oldest Stone in the Cemetery.]

Here lyes y^e body of Christopher Wadsworth, aged about 24 years, died y^e 4th of December, 1687.

Here lies the body of Esther Wadsworth, wife of Benjamin Wadsworth. She departed this life July 2^d, 1777, in the 61st year of her age.

She constantly manifested entire trust in God, through the merits of Jesus Christ, and the most animating and agreeable apprehensions of the eternal world.

A lovely faith can smoothe the face of death,
Bid youth and beauty sacrifice their breath;

Can tread the gloomy valley without fear,
And part with all below without a tear.

Here lies buried the body of Deacon Benjamin Wadsworth, who departed this life Oct. 17th, 1771, in y^e 64 year of his age, having served in y^e office of deacon in y^e Church at Milton 28 years; he lived respected and died lamented.

How rich y^e store^s of grace lay hid behind
The veil of modesty, no human mind
Can search, no friend declare, no fame reveal—
Nor has this mournful pillar power to tell.
Yet there's a hastening hour, it comes, it comes
To rouse y^e sleeping dead, to burst y^e tombs
And set y^e saints in view. All eyes behold,
While y^e vast records of y^e skies unrolled
Rehearse his deeds y^t spread his worth abroad,
Y^e Judge approves & Heaven & earth applaud.

Here lyes y^e body of Elizabeth Wadsworth, y^e daughter of Deacon Benjamin Wadsworth & M^{rs} Esther his wife. She died Feb. y^e 14th, 1750, in y^e 14th year of her age.

Here lies buried the body of Deacon John Wadsworth, son to Capt. Samuel Wadsworth, who died Jan^y 31st, 1733, in y^e 60 year of his age.

In memory of Abigail Wadsworth, dau^r to y^e Rev. M^r Jon & M^{rs} Abigail Wadsworth of Milton. She died Jan. y^e 1st, 1758, aged 23 years.

When this you see, remember me.

Sarah, daughter to Recompence and Sarah Wadsworth, aged 12 years, 8^{ms} & 28 days. Dec^d April y^e 17th, 1728.

Here lies inter'd y^e remains of Lieut. Samuel Wadsworth, who departed this life Nov. Anno Dom. 1754, in y^e 69 year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of M^{rs} Mary Wadsworth, Relict of Deacon Ebenezer Wadsworth, Dec^d M^{ch} y^e 8th, 1736, in y^e 77th year of her age.

In memory of M^{rs} Sarah Weston, wife of M^r Abel Weston, who died Jan. 15, 1797, in the 20th year of her age.

Swift as the sun revolves the day,
We hasten to the dead:
Slaves to the wind we puff away,
And to the ground we tread.
'Tis air that lends us life when first
The vital bellows heave,—
Our flesh we borrow of the dust,
And when a mother's care has nursed
The babe to manly size, we must
With usury pay the grave.

Erected in memory of M^r John Willson, who deceased April 17th, 1790, aged 19 years.

Here lyes y^e body of M^r Peter White, who died Jan. y^e 22^d, 1738, in y^e 77 year of his age.

Here lyes y^e body of Mary Wyat,¹ wife to Edward Wyat, aged 92 years, Dec^d Feb. y^e 6, 1705.

Sally Young, daughter of M^r John & M^{rs} Miletiah Young, who died Jan. 4th, 1791, aged 5 years, 9 months and 7 days.

Tombs in Milton Cemetery, 1883.—There are sixty-four tombs in the cemetery. The proprietors of the tombs are given, and the names of those deposited therein appear as far as it has been possible to ascertain. The enumeration of the tombs commences at the northeast corner of the old cemetery.

RAWSON TOMB.—Here lies buried the body of M^{rs} Theodora Gulliver, the wife of Capt. Jonathan Gulliver, aged 54 years, died Dec^r, 7th, 1732.

Here lies entombed the body of Captain Jonathan Gulliver, who departed this life July the 3^d, 1737, in the 78th year of his age.

MINISTERIAL TOMB.—Here ly the remains of M^{rs} Susanna Thacher (second wife of the Rev. Peter Thacher), who died Sept. 4th, 1724, \AA t. 59 years. Rev. Peter, first Pastor of the Church in Milton, who died Dec^r 17th, 1727, in the 77th year of his age, and the 47th of his Pastorate.

M^{rs} Elizabeth Taylor, wife of the Rev. John Taylor, who died April 17th, 1735, \AA t. 27 years.

Rev. John Taylor, who died Jan. 26th, 1750, in the 46th year of his age.

Edward Sherburn Taylor, aged 14 days, 1750.

Samuel Gile, Jr., died Oct. 5, 1827, aged 18 years.

Samuel Gile, D.D., died Oct. 16, 1836, aged 56 years.

Mary H. Gile, wife of Samuel Gile, D.D., died June 25, 1862, aged 83 years.

JOSEPH BABCOCK TOMB (S. H. BABCOCK, 1831).—Here lies entombed John Babcock, son of Joseph Babcock, who died September 25th, 1792, aged 6 years.

M^{rs} Hannah Babcock, wife of Joseph Babcock, who died Feb. 23, 1794, aged 46 years.

Mrs. Grace Babcock, wife of Joseph Babcock, died Sept. 11, 1810, aged 60 years.

Joseph Babcock, Esq., died May 28, 1813, aged 67 years.

Stephen Babcock, died Aug. 15, 1845, aged 67.

DANIEL VOSE'S TOMB.—Here lies entombed M^{rs} Patience Holbrook, wife of Dr. Amos Holbrook and daughter of Daniel Vose, Esq., & M^{rs} Rachel his wife, who died M^{ch} 18th, 1789, \AA t. 25.

M^r Jeremiah Smith, died April 16th, 1790, \AA t. 86.

M^{rs} Rachel Smith, wife of M^r Jeremiah Smith, died May 8th, 1791, \AA t. 85.

Daniel Vose, Esq., died Dec. 7, 1807, \AA t. 67 years.

Rachel, wife of Daniel Vose and daughter of Jeremiah & Rachel Smith, died Jan. 25, 1821, aged 84.

Daniel Vose, son of Daniel and Rachel Vose, died May 29, 1837, aged 58 years.

Henry Gardner, born in the Old Province House, Boston, Aug. 2, 1779; died June 19, 1858:—his wife, Clarissa, daughter of Dr. Amos Holbrook, born in Milton, Aug. 23, 1784; died in Dorchester Feb. 10, 1860.

Their Children: Clarissa H., born Feb. 10, 1811; died July 11, 1836.

Matilda S., born Aug. 16, 1822; died Aug. 28, 1841.

H. C., wife of Henry J. Gardner, born Sept. 6, 1818; died Sept. 2, 1869.

Their Children: Elizabeth W. Gardner, born Nov. 11, 1851; died March 21, 1857.

Henry G. Gardner, born Sept. 3, 1854; died March 31, 1873.

Frederick W. Gardner, born Jan. 9, 1846; died Jan. 30, 1879.

Clifford Gardner, born Feb. 5, 1857; died Aug. 20, 1879.

DAVID SUMNER'S TOMB.—Mrs. Althea Cain, wife of Mr. David Cain, died May 26, 1806, \AA t. 79.

Mr. David Cain, died Oct. 21, 1811, \AA t. 72.

¹ The following, from the Dorchester Town Records, refers to Mrs. Wyat:

"The Old widow wiate Bing 94 years of age and on that had Layd So many women that she was instrimintall for the brinin into the world on thousand on hundred and on Children."

Mary D. Hobart, daug. of Moses L. Hobart & Betsey Hobart, died Aug. 24, 1808, aged 1 year.

TOMB OF E. G. TUCKER AND J. A. CREHORE.—George Tucker, born at Milton, March 8, 1750; died (by accident) Jan. 19, 1805. His wife, Sarah [Glover], born at Milton, July 1, 1758; died May 22, 1833.

Mary A. Atherton, first wife of Ebenezer G. Tucker, born at Stoughton, Nov. 19, 1805; died at Milton, Dec. 22, 1832.

Anna T. Alexander (née Atherton), second wife of Ebenezer G. Tucker, born at Stoughton, April 5, 1804; died at Stoughton, Oct. 1, 1875.

Henry, son of E. G. & A. T. Tucker, born at Milton, July 27, 1835; died at East Boston, Jan. 3, 1861.

Edwin, born at Milton, Sept. 27, 1837; died at Milton, Sept. 14, 1841.

TOMB OF THOMAS CREHORE.

TOMB OF CHARLES ADAMS.

TOMB OF THOMAS HOLLIS.

TOMB OF ABNER H. BOWMAN.

TOMB OF N. & S. DAVENPORT & J. CREHORE.—Mr. Phineas Davenport, died Jan. 31, 1840, aged 67 years and 10 months.

Mrs. Hannah Davenport, died Aug. 19, 1843, aged 62 years 6 months.

Miss Sarah Davenport, died March 7, 1838, aged 35 years 6 months.

Mr. Francis Davenport, died Feb. 4, 1857, aged 52 years 11 months.

TOMB OF SWIFT HEIRS.—Mr. Ebenezer Swift, died Jan. 17, 1805, aged 80 years. John Swift, died Jan. 14, 1819. John Swift, died Sept. 26, 1838.

TOMB OF DANIEL BRIGGS.—Entombed here, Mrs Jane Briggs, wife of Mr Daniel Briggs, died Jan. 25, 1791, Æt. 26.

Miss Sophia Briggs, daug. of Mr D. & Mrs Jane Briggs, died July 28, 1796, Æt. 9 years.

Martin, son of Mr Daniel & Mrs Jane Briggs, was drowned Jan. 20, 1803, Æt. 12.

Mrs. Alice Briggs, wife of Mr. Daniel Briggs, died Jan. 6, 1806, aged 40 years.

Capt. Thomas Briggs, brother of Mr. Daniel Briggs, died April 20, 1810, Æt. 52.

Mr. Daniel, son of Mr. Daniel Briggs, died Oct. 13, 1814, aged 25.

Mrs. Elizabeth, wife of Mr. Daniel Briggs, died Dec. 2, 1823, aged 49.

Mrs. Nabby, wife of Mr. William Briggs, and sister of Mr. Daniel Briggs, died Nov. 14, 1815, aged 59.

Mr. Benjamin C. Briggs, son of Daniel Briggs, died at Port-au-Prince, July 24, 1825, aged 25.

Mr. Daniel Briggs, died at Milton, Aug. 11, 1825, aged 71 years.

Sophia S. B. Briggs, died May 10, 1832, aged 26.

Mrs. Susanna Briggs, wife of Capt. Thomas Briggs, died Nov. 14, 1848, aged 73.

At Nevada City, California, July 19, 1851, Mr. Martin Briggs, aged 47, son of Mr. Daniel Briggs.

Mary S. Fisk, died Nov. 8, 1853, aged 56 years.

Capt. Nathaniel Thomas, died at Milton, Feb. 28, 1856, aged 79.

Jane Thomas, died Feb. 5, 1863, aged 77 years 8 months.

TOMB OF DAVENPORT & BILLINGS.—Entombed here, Mrs Mary Davenport, wife of Mr Adam Davenport, died Dec. 31, 1793, Æt. 43.

Ambrose Davenport, son of Mr Adam & Mrs Mary Davenport, died Feb. 28, 1795, Æt. 6.

Elizabeth, Lydia & Jeremiah, children of Joseph & Rebecca Billings, aged 16, 9 & 3 years, died April, 1796.

Hannah W. Davenport, wife of Eben. Davenport, died Sept. 3, 1804, aged 27 years.

Mr. Henry Vose, Obt. March 26, 1808, Æt. 56 years.

Mr. Joseph Billings, died Jan. 2, 1809, Æt. 54 years.

Elizabeth L. Billings, died Jan. 1, 1810, aged 7 years, daughter of Mr. Joseph Billings.

Charles Joseph Billings, died Feb. 28, 1811, aged 20.

Mr. Ebenezer Davenport, died Nov. 24, 1817, aged 47 years.

Mr. Anthony W. Baxter, died Sept. 15, 1822, aged 50 years.

Mrs. Hannah Vose, wife of Henry Vose, died Jan. 26, 1825, aged 73 years.

Mrs. Rebecca Billings, widow of Joseph Billings, died Oct. 22, 1835, aged 78 years.

Mrs. Hannah S. Billings, daughter of Rebecca & Joseph Billings, died Oct. 19, 1862, aged 78 years.

Mr. Ebenezer Billings, died March 11, 1837, aged 41 years.

Mrs. Mary D. Billings, widow of Ebenezer Billings, died May 11, 1864, aged 70 years.

Children of Eben. & Mary D. Billings.—Mary Rebecca Billings, died April 27, 1848, aged 20 years.

Samuel James Billings, died Aug. 9, 1864, aged 41 years.

Hammatt Billings, died Nov. 14, 1874, aged 56 years.

Joseph E. Billings, died Aug. 15, 1880, aged 59 years.

Mr. Adam Davenport, died Aug. 13, 1825, aged 81 years.

Mrs. Mary Davenport, died Dec. 17, 1837, aged 65. She was much beloved by all.

THAYER TOMB.—Abbott L. Thayer, died July 26, 1843, aged 8 years.

Nancy R. Thayer, died Nov. 21, 1854, aged 64 years.

Gideon F. Thayer, died March 27, 1864, aged 70 years.

Uncle Lord, died Feb. 17, 1869, aged 82 years.

Elizabeth Briggs, died July 22, 1874, aged 53.

WILLIAM CREHORE TOMB.—Ruth Lyon, died Oct. 6, 1811, aged 30 years.

William B. Crehore, died May 13, 1813, aged 50 years.

Widow Chloe Crehore, died Aug. 29, 1814, aged 81 years.

John Shephard Crehore, died Jan. 1833, aged 66 years.

His wife, Hannah, died May, 1851, aged 86 years.

Rebecca, wife of William B. Crehore, died Nov. 1854, aged 89 years.

Charles C. Crehore, died Feb. 12, 1879, aged 85 years.

TOMB OF JACOB GILL.

COATS TOMB.

TOMB OF NATHAN VOSE.—Mr. Edward Vose, died Aug. 7, 1811, aged 26 years.

PIERCE TOMB.—Capt. Rufus Pierce, died April 7, 1812, aged 60.

Capt. Samuel Pierce, died Sep. 24, 1822, aged 50.

Mrs. Elizabeth, widow of Capt. Rufus Pierce, died Aug. 17, 1829, aged 72 years.

William Briggs, born Nov. 15, 1760; died July 17, 1831.

Jeremiah T. Fenno, died Jan. 26, 1845, aged 62.

Elizabeth, widow of William Briggs, died Dec. 27, 1864, aged 88 years.

Margaret, widow of Jeremiah T. Fenno, died Aug. 14, 1857, aged 74 years.

HOBART TOMB.

TOMB OF DR. AMOS HOLBROOK.—Amos Holbrook, born Jan. 23, 1754; died June 17, 1842.

Jerusha Holbrook, his wife, born March 12, 1764; died Nov. 11, 1838.

William E. Vincent, born March 2, 1793; died April 12, 1858.

TOMB OF JESSE SUMNER.

COPELAND TOMB.

FULLER TOMB.

JAMES TUCKER TOMB.—Susanna S. Talbot, died Aug. 17, 1825, aged 17 years.

Elijah Tucker, died Dec. 1, 1831, aged 67.

Betsy Tucker, died Sep. 3, 1835, aged 71.

Mrs. Rebecca Tucker, died Jan. 7, 1844, aged 40.

Miss Sarah Tucker, died Nov. 29, 1849, aged 93.

Mr. James Tucker, died Jan. 14, 1851, aged 84.

Mary Tucker, died Feb. 11, 1867, aged 68 years 9 months.

P. O. THACHER TOMB.—George M. Thacher, born March 5, 1809; died June 2, 1858.

George W. Thacher, 6th Reg. M. V. M., born June 16, 1837; died at Fort Delaware, Del., Sep. 13, 1864.

Samuel G. Williams, born Jan. 25, 1795; died April 19, 1878.

Peter Oxenbridge Thacher, A.D. 1826.

On the 22d of February, A.D. 1827, were deposited here the remains of the Rev. Peter Thacher, D.D., Pastor of the Church in Brattle Square, Boston, who died Dec. 6, 1802, aged 51. And of Elizabeth, his wife, who died Jan. 26, 1816, aged 71 years.

JAMES BLAKE TOMB.—Deposited here the remains of Ann Grey Blake, died Oct. 2, 1813, aged 11 months.

Mary Blake, died Oct. 10, 1813, aged 2 years 7 months.

Susan Weld Blake, died Oct. 14, 1817, aged 19 months.

James Blake, born March 13, 1780; died July 3, 1851, aged 71 years, 3 months, 20 days.

Mrs. Elizabeth Blake, born May 22, 1778; died Dec. 16, 1855, aged 77 years, 7 months, 27 days.

TOMB OWNED BY THE TOWN OF MILTON.

MARK HOLLINGSWORTH TOMB.—Charles Mark Hollingsworth, died Aug. 29, 1809, aged 4 years.

Charles Mark Hollingsworth, died June 11, 1824, aged 14 years.

McLean Hollingsworth, died Sep. 15, 1825, aged 2 years.

Leander Nelson Hollingsworth, died Feb. 6, 1827, aged 18 years.

Mark Hollingsworth, of Brandywine Hundred, Delaware, died Feb. 27, 1853, aged 78 years.

Waitstill Hollingsworth, died March 31, 1858, aged 78 years.

Maria Harvey Cornell, died Aug. 21, 1865, aged 48 years.

George Hollingsworth, died March 20, 1882, aged 68 years.

TOMB OF ADAMS AND BENT (NATHANIEL T. BENT).—Deposited here the remains of Josiah Bent, died April 26, 1836, aged 66 years.

Rev. Josiah Bent, died at Amherst, Mass., Nov. 19, 1839, aged 42 years.

Samuel Adams Bent, died Feb. 1854, aged 24 years.

Susanna Bent, died Oct. 16, 1857, aged 81 years.

Josiah Bent, Jr., died Nov. 9, 1862, aged 37 years.

Emma Nelson Bent, died in New York, Jan. 15, 1862, aged 7 years 3 months.

READ AND GULLIVER TOMB.—Lemuel Gulliver, obt. Jan. 4, 1840, aged 80.

Elizabeth Vose Gulliver, obt. April 19, 1839, aged 9 months.

Mrs. Elizabeth, consort of Mr. Lemuel Gulliver, obt. July 11, 1842, aged 71.

Lemuel S. Gulliver, obt. Jan. 6, 1849, aged 5 years 4 months.

Abby V. Gulliver, obt. Sept. 13, 1853, aged 13 years 4 months.

Mrs. Emeline G. Gulliver, obt. Feb. 18, 1870, aged 58.

Sarah E. Gulliver, obt. Nov. 17, 1870, aged 35.

READ.

Asa Bullard, M.D., obt. May 1, 1826, aged 61.

Abigail Bullard, obt. Jan. 19, 1832, aged 68.

Caroline Bullard, obt. Nov. 16, 1839, aged 39.

Edward Bullard, obt. Nov. 7, 1807, aged 9.

Clarissa Read, born Sept. 5, 1785, died June 27, 1848.

CHURCHILL TOMB.—

"In my Father's house are many mansions."

"In Christ shall all be made alive."

Asaph Churchill, died Jan. 20, 1841, aged 76 years.

Mary Churchill, wife of Asaph Churchill, died Jan. 21, 1859, aged 75 years, 5 months, 23 days.

Juliette Churchill, died May 30, 1862, aged 49 years 6 months.

Mary Churchill, died Feb. 14, 1828, aged 16 years.

Charles M. S. Churchill, died Oct. 7, 1822, aged 3 years.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

TOMB OF J. CAMPBELL.

TOMB OF BABCOCK, FIELDS & ADAMS.

BALDWIN TOMB.

ELIJAH VOSE TOMB.

TOMB OF JOHN MCLEAN.—Hugh McLean, died December, 1799, aged 75 years.

Agnes McLean, died March, 1821, aged 82 years.

John McLean, died Oct. 16, 1823, aged 62 years.

Sarah Amory, wife of Francis Amory, died Oct. 8, 1828, aged 49 years.

Ann Lee, widow of John McLean and wife of William Lee, died Sept. 11, 1834, aged 60 years.

Francis Amory, died July 6, 1845, aged 79.

F. Amory, A.D. 1842.

TOMB OF DANIEL L. GIBBENS.

TOMB OF ELIJAH D. WILD.—Alpheus and W. Withington, 1815.

NATHANIEL TUCKER TOMB.—L. Tucker, 1815.

J. ROWE TOMB.

SUMNER TOMB.

MORTON TOMB.

WHITNEY TOMB.

ROBBINS TOMB.—Rev. Nathaniel Robbins, died May 19, 1795, aged 69 years.

Mrs Elizabeth Robbins, died May 2, 1793, aged 61 years.

Miss Lydia Robbins, died Aug. 31, 1786, aged 27 years.

Mr Nathaniel J. Robbins, died May 7, 1799, aged 33 years.

Miss Sarah Hutchinson, died Dec. 5, 1788, aged 66 years.

Edward H. Robbins, died Dec. 29, 1829, aged 72 years.

EMMONS TOMB.

T. HUNT TOMB.

WENTWORTH TOMB.

BAXTER TOMB.

MYERS TOMB.

J. V. MARSHALL TOMB.

HENDRY TOMB.

O. T. ROGERS TOMB.

WILLIAM GLOVER TOMB.

MOSES WEBSTER TOMB.

G. W. HALL TOMB.

HUTCHINSON TOMB.

Also three tombs located in the central part of the old cemetery, first purchase,—

FENNO TOMB.—East.

MILLER TOMB.—Middle.

BILLINGS TOMB.—West.

These tombs are the oldest in the grounds, and are supposed to have been built about the year 1719.

At the March meeting, 1719, the town voted, "That Capten John Billing shal have liberty to build a Tomb in our Buring Place at the direction of the Selectmen."

CHAPTER LXVI.

MILTON—(Continued.)

BY H. B. MARTIN.

Civil and Military—Representatives—Town Clerks—Town Treasurers—War of the Rebellion—List of Soldiers, etc.

Representatives to General Court.—The following is a list of those persons chosen by the inhabitants of the town of Milton to represent said town in the Great and General Court from the year 1682 down to the present time.

The first record of the election of a representative to the General Court is in these words:

"A Town-meeting 16, 12 mon., 1682, the Inhabitants being orderly assembled, &c.—The freemen chose Ralph Houghton a deputie for the General Court."

The next item found upon the records relating to a representative to the General Court is as follows:

"March 6, 1693. It was voted that Thomas Vose should be cleared of his Province Rates, for his serving as Representative at the General Court." At the said meeting "It was voted that Thomas Swift should be abated four pounds out of his Province Rates, for his serving as Representative at the General Court." Same date, "It was voted that William Blake and his sons Nathaniel and Edward, should be abated their Province and town rates, till he be paid eight pounds, fifteen shillings for his serving as Representative at the General Court, in the time between the revolution and this present government."

In the following order were chosen,—

April 30, 1694. E. Clap.	May 17, 1708. Geo. Sumner.
May 10, 1697. Wm. Blake.	" 9, 1709. " "
" 13, 1698. Thos. Vose.	" 19, 1710. E. Tucker.
" 1700. " "	" 16, 1711. " "
" 11, 1702. " "	" 14, 1712. " "
Feb. 22, 1703. Geo. Sumner.	" 18, 1713. " "
April 21, 1703. Thos. Vose.	" 19, 1714. " "
May 8, 1704. " "	" 9, 1715. " "
" 14, 1705. " "	" 14, 1716. " "
" 20, 1706. " "	" 20, 1717. J. Wadsworth.

May 19, 1718. E. Tucker.	Sept. 22, 1774. Capt. D. Rawson.
" 18, 1719. " "	" "
" 9, 1720. " "	Jan. 23, 1775. Capt. D. Rawson. ²
June 13, 1720. " "	" "
May 22, 1721. " "	May 22, 1775. Capt. Daniel Vose. ²
Aug. 7, 1721. " "	" "
May 21, 1722. " "	July 12, 1775. Capt. Daniel Vose. ³
" 20, 1723. " "	" "
" 18, 1724. " "	May 21, 1776. Eben. Tucker and Joseph Clap.
" 17, 1725. J. Wadsworth.	" "
" 15, 1727. Jon. Gulliver.	May 22, 1777. Eben. Tucker.
Nov. 13, 1727. Eph. Tucker.	June 29, 1778. Daniel Vose.
May 13, 1728. " "	May 17, 1779. Seth Sumner.
" 14, 1729. " "	June 28, 1779. E. H. Robbins. ⁴
" 12, 1730. O. Thatcher.	" "
Jan. 26, 1731. Eph. Tucker.	Aug. 9, 1779. A. Blake ⁵ and Allen Crocker. ⁵
May 18, 1731. " "	" "
" 22, 1732. J. Wadsworth.	Aug. 9, 1779. S. Henshaw. ⁴
" 16, 1733. " "	May 22, 1780. " "
" 13, 1734. Jon. Gulliver.	Oct. 10, 1780. " "
" 19, 1735. " "	May 10, 1781. E. H. Robbins.
" 17, 1736. " "	" 17, 1782. " "
" 15, 1737. " "	" 13, 1783. Seth Sumner.
" 16, 1738. N. Clap.	" 13, 1784. E. H. Robbins.
" 15, 1739. " "	" 12, 1785. " "
" 19, 1740. B. Sumner.	" 17, 1786. ¹
" 18, 1741. " "	May 14, 1787. Hon. James Warren.
" 17, 1742. " "	" "
" 16, 1743. Saml. Miller.	May 15, 1788. Joseph Blake.
" 14, 1744. Saml. Swift.	" 11, 1789. " "
" 20, 1745. Saml. Miller.	" 10, 1790. Seth Sumner.
" 19, 1746. " "	" 9, 1791. " "
" 18, 1747. Saml. Swift.	" 7, 1792. E. H. Robbins.
" 16, 1748. Saml. Miller.	" 6, 1793. " "
" 15, 1749. " "	" 6, 1794. " "
" 21, 1750. ¹	" 6, 1795. " "
" 22, 1751. ¹	" 3, 1796. " "
" 13, 1752. " "	" 2, 1797. " "
" 16, 1753. Joseph Bent.	" 1, 1798. " "
" 15, 1754. Saml. Miller.	" 6, 1799. " "
" 14, 1755. " "	" 5, 1800. " "
" 19, 1756. " "	" 4, 1801. " "
" 18, 1757. J. Tucker.	" 3, 1802. " "
" 24, 1758. " "	" 14, 1803. David Tucker.
" 16, 1759. A. Belcher.	" 7, 1804. " "
" 14, 1760. " "	" 6, 1805. " "
" 20, 1761. " "	" 5, 1806. " "
" 17, 1762. " "	" 4, 1807. " "
" 16, 1763. " "	" 2, 1808. " "
" 16, 1764. " "	" 1, 1809. " "
" 15, 1765. Steph. Miller.	May 7, 1810. Wm. Pierce and Asaph Churchill.
" 21, 1766. J. Tucker.	" "
" 20, 1767. " "	May 6, 1811. Wm. Pierce.
" 16, 1768. " "	" 17, 1811. Jacob Gill.
" 17, 1769. B. Wadsworth.	May 4, 1812. A. Churchill and William Pierce.
" 23, 1770. " "	" "
" 21, 1771. " "	May 3, 1813. Jacob Gill.
" 13, 1772. Josiah Howe.	" 2, 1814. S. K. Glover.
" 13, 1773. " "	" 1, 1815. J. Houghton.
" 16, 1774. Steph'n Miller.	" 6, 1816. " "

¹ Voted not to choose a representative.

² To Provincial Congress.

³ To General Court, held at Watertown.

⁴ To State Convention.

⁵ To Concord.

May 5, 1817. J. Ruggles, Jr.	Nov. 14, 1836. E. J. Baker
" 4, 1818. " " "	and Nathaniel Thomas.
" 3, 1819. " " "	Nov. 13, 1837. N. Thomas
" 1, 1820. ¹	and James M. Robbins.
Oct. 16, 1820. B. Smith ⁶ and J. Atherton. ⁶	Nov. 12, 1838. E. G. Tucker
May 7, 1821. ¹	and Nathaniel Thomas.
" 6, 1822. B. Smith.	Nov. 11, 1839. E. G. Tucker.
May 5, 1823. Barney Smith and William Pierce.	" 9, 1840. " " "
May 3, 1824. Barney Smith and William Pierce.	" 8, 1841. Charles Breck.
May 2, 1825. ¹	" 14, 1842. " " "
" 1, 1826. F. Davenport.	Nov. 13, 1843. Thomas T. Wadsworth.
" 7, 1827. " " "	Nov. 13, 1844. ⁷
" 5, 1828. " " "	" 10, 1845. S. Emerson.
May 4, 1829. John Ruggles and John Swift.	" 10, 1846. ⁷
May 3, 1830. John Ruggles.	" 8, 1847. Jason Reed.
" 11, 1831. " " "	" 13, 1848. G. W. Greene.
Nov. 14, 1831. James Campbell and Thomas Hunt.	" 12, 1849. Jason Reed.
Nov. 12, 1832. John Ruggles and Josiah Bent.	" 11, 1850. " " "
Nov. 11, 1833. ⁷	" 24, 1851. A. J. Mosher.
Nov. 10, 1834. J. S. Foord and Jason Houghton.	" 8, 1852. No choice.
Nov. 9, 1835. Moses Gragg and Jason Houghton.	March 7, 1853. J. M. Churchill. ⁸
	Nov. 14, 1853. Jason Reed.
	" 13, 1854. J. W. Martin.
	" 6, 1855. S. Babcock.
	" 4, 1856. Amos Poole.

Eleventh Norfolk District.

Nov. 4, 1857. Joseph M. Churchill.	Nov. 6, 1866. George Vose.
1858. None from Milton.	1867. None from Milton.
1859. " " "	1868. " " "
Nov. 6, 1860. J. M. Robbins.	Nov. 2, 1869. John Sias.
" 5, 1861. Samuel Cook.	" 8, 1870. D. W. Tucker.
1862. None from Milton.	" 7, 1871. " "
1863. " " "	1872. None from Milton.
Nov. 8, 1864. G. W. Greene.	1873. " " "
" 7, 1865. George Vose.	Nov. 3, 1874. E. L. Pierce.
	" 2, 1875. " "

Fourth Norfolk District.

1876. None from Milton.	1880. None from Milton.
1877. " " "	1881. " " "
Nov. 5, 1878. H. E. Ware.	Nov. 7, 1882. H. B. Martin.
" 4, 1879. " "	" 6, 1883. J. W. Bradlee.

Town Clerks.—The first record of the election of a town clerk in Milton is in these words:

"At a Towne Meeting the 10th of March, 1670–71, Thomas houlman was chosen to be the townes Clarke, to have the Towne book, and Record such Vots as the townes due from time to time legally pass."

The next record relating to the choice of a town clerk is as follows: "Dec. 8, 1673, Robert Tucker was chosen Towne Recorder," etc. By the records we find that he held the office until 1677, when John Kinsley was chosen, who held the office one year, when Thomas Holman was chosen, and held the office from 1678 to 1682, when Ralph Houghton was chosen, and held the office for one year.

1683, Thomas Holman was again chosen, and served until 1686, when John Kinsley was elected, who held the office until 1689, when Thomas Vose, Sr., was chosen, and held the office for two years; he was followed by Ebenezer Clap, who also served two years, and surrendered up the office as town recorder on March 6, 1693, to Capt. Thomas Vose, who was upon that date chosen as town clerk.

Capt. Vose was elected each successive year to the position of town clerk until 1708, when Ephraim Tucker was chosen annually to the office for a period of twenty-two years; then came John Daniell, who served from 1730 to 1734. March 4, 1734, Nehemiah Clap was elected, and held the office until Aug. 1, 1743, when Ephraim Tucker was again elected, and held the office until his successor, Benjamin Wadsworth, was chosen, May 20, 1745. Mr. Wadsworth held the position for seventeen years, when he turned it over to Stephen Clap, March 14, 1763, who, in turn, vacated it in 1765, when Elijah Wadsworth was chosen; he held the office three years, or until March 14, 1768, when Amariah Blake was chosen, serving until 1779; then Samuel Henshaw served one year, when Amariah Blake was again chosen, serving until March 13, 1786, when John Ruggles was elected, and held the office twenty-one consecutive years, or until March 9, 1807; then James Foord was chosen to the position each year for seven years, finally relinquishing the office March 14, 1814, upon being elected register of deeds for the county of Norfolk.

Upon the retirement of Mr. Foord, March 14, 1814, John Ruggles, Jr., was elected, and, what was somewhat remarkable, held the office the exact period (counting in years) in which the same office was held by his father, namely, twenty-one years, or until March 9, 1835.

Upon that date Nathan C. Martin was elected, holding the office four years.

March 11, 1839, Jason F. Kennedy was chosen, he also serving for four years, or until March 13, 1843, when Jason Reed was elected, serving the town faithfully in that capacity for thirty consecutive years, or until his decease on July 13, 1873.

Henry B. Martin was appointed town clerk, pro tempore, in 1873, owing to the illness of Mr. Reed (he not being able to attend to the duties of the office), and acted in that capacity until the annual election of town officers, March, 1874, when he was chosen as town clerk, holding the office by virtue of the several successive annual elections up to the present time, January, 1884.

⁶ Delegates to revise the Constitution.

⁷ Voted not to send a representative.

⁸ Delegate to Constitutional Convention.

Town Treasurers.—It was long after the incorporation of those towns that were settled at an early period in the history of the "Province of the Massachusetts Bay" before the inhabitants made any selection of a person to keep guard over the public moneys.

A "watch-dog of the treasury" was then unknown,—in fact, for many years after the settlement of the town the "treasury" was a mythological nonentity.

People in those days—"in the good old colony times"—were not burdened with riches; they did not lay awake nights contriving schemes and inventing modes to defraud the community, as some of their descendants have since done; it is true, that occasionally some enterprising merchant would "rise with the lark" for the purpose of putting a little sand in his sugar, or a little water in his rum, but even those were not then common occurrences.

As a matter of fact, what few treasures our revered ancestors had were laid up "where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, or thieves break through and steal."

Such being the case, although it may seem "passing strange" to the men of to-day, nevertheless, although the town of Milton was settled in 1640 and incorporated in 1662, the first item on record relating to the choice of a town treasurer is under date of 1733,—ninety-three years after the first settlement of the town,—and is as follows:

"March 12, 1733. Mr. George Badcock was chose Town Treasurer."

Under date of December 20th, the same year, is found this record: "It was put to Vote to the Town whether they would reconsider the vote of the choice of Mr. George Badcock to be Town Treasurer, he being infirm and unable to serve in that Office—and it past in the affirmative."

"It was voted that the Selectmen succeed Mr. Badcock, that was chosen Town Treasurer, and to do the work his Office obliged him to do."

We have no reason to doubt but that the above vote and the instructions of the town to the selectmen therein embodied, were carried out to the letter, and to the full satisfaction of the towns-people; and when we take into consideration that at that period the Board of Selectmen consisted of five members, and that the whole amount raised for defraying all town charges during the year (exclusive of the ministerial tax) was but 160 pounds 11 shillings and 4 pence, it would not seem that the duties of the Board as disbursing officers were very arduous or wearisome; and so we may suppose thought the staid citizens of "ye olden time," for by the records we judge that that duty devolved upon the board (as it had in all previous years) until some six years later, when the town, by a vote passed on March 10, 1739–40, chose Nehemiah Clap, the then town clerk, to act also as town treasurer; Mr. Clap continuing to hold the position as town treasurer until his death, July 18, 1743, when Ephraim Tucker was elected to serve for the balance of the year. March 12, 1744, Benjamin Wadsworth was chosen town treasurer, serving that and the succeeding year; but at the annual March meeting of 1746, and again in 1747, we find this record: "Voted, to have no Treasurer." March 14, 1748, Benjamin Wadsworth was again chosen, and held the office for twenty-one consecutive years, or until March 13, 1769, when Josiah Howe was elected, serving until March 13, 1775. Then Amariah Blake held the position one year, when William Tucker was chosen, serving six years. March 11, 1782, Josiah Howe was again selected for the office, this time serving for three years, or until March 14, 1785, when John Ruggles was chosen, holding the office for many years, and upon his retirement being succeeded by his son, John Ruggles, Jr. They together retained and served the town in that capacity until 1821, a period of thirty-six years. March 12th of that year Jedediah Atherton was chosen to succeed Mr. Ruggles, holding the office three years, when Jesse Vose was elected, March 8, 1824, serving eleven years, or until March 9, 1835, when Isaac Gulliver was chosen, serving four years. March 11, 1839, Charles Breck was elected, holding the office for nineteen years, or until March 1, 1858, when Jason Reed was chosen, Mr. Reed holding the office until his decease, in 1873.

Consequent upon the illness of Mr. Reed, in 1873, Charles Breck was by the selectmen appointed town treasurer, pro tempore, serving in that position until March, 1874, when he was again elected, and re-elected each subsequent year to date (1884).

CHAPTER LXVII.

MILTON—(Continued).

War of the Rebellion.—Appended are the names of those soldiers who enlisted for the term of three years, and who formed part of Milton's quota, in the war of the Rebellion.

The list is complete only as far as that the soldiers whose names are herewith given were accredited to Milton as part of her quota. Many names there are that should find place upon the Milton records, names of her honored and illustrious sons, who, living in other places at the outbreak of the war, enlisted and were accredited to the quotas of those towns or cities where they at that time resided.

As an illustration I will here cite two cases which came within my knowledge.

At the commencement of hostilities the best drill-officer in the city of Boston was Louis N. Tucker; the best drill-officer in the city of San Francisco was James Sewall Reed, both Milton boys, with that ardor and love of country which has ever characterized the citizens of their native town. They enlisted, and with great zeal entered into the arduous duties thenceforth devolving upon them, duties which but few men outside of the regular army were competent or able to perform. Night and day they were employed drilling the raw recruits, who, in immense numbers, were swarming to do battle for their country; and thus, mainly through the exertions and the important preparatory work by them performed, were sent to the front some of the most efficient troops that did battle for the Union.

After months of laborious work thus performed they, too, started for the front, one to return with honorable scars received in defense of the old flag, the other dying upon the field of battle while gallantly fighting for his native land.

The subjoined list is given in alphabetical order, without designation of rank :

Allen, William S., Co. C, 33d Regt.
 Angell, Moses E., Co. A, 14th Regt.
 Bacon, Albert J., Co. D, 35th Regt.
 Badger, Algernon S., Co. I, 26th Regt.
 Baker, Edward K., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Bull, Lyman, Bat. D, Art.
 Barrington, John, Co. B, 18th Regt.
 Baxter, George O., Co. E, 1st Regt.
 Boale, William, Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Bent, George F., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Blackman, Elbridge, Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Bradley, J. Walter, Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Broad, Horace S., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Bronsdon, Amos H., Co. A, 13th Regt.
 Bronsdon, Charles, Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Burditt, Charles E., Co. E, 1st Regt.
 Burditt, George W., Co. E, 1st Regt.
 Burleigh, N. G., band, 18th Regt.
 Chamberlain, James, Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Chamberlain, Patrick, Co. D, 22d Regt.
 Chandler, Jonathan H., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Clark, George E., band, 20th Regt.
 Clark, Philip C., Co. A, 18th Regt.
 Collins, Edward, Lieut. U.S.A.
 Cook, Charles W., Co. E, 35th Regt.
 Corey, Stephen, Co. C, 27th Regt.
 Crossman, John G., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Collins, John H., band, 7th Regt.
 Dalton, George W., Co. E, 1st Regt.
 Davis, Walter S., Co. F, 22d Regt.

Dow, James E., Co. C, 1st Regt.
 Dyer, Andrew J., Co. C, 18th Regt.
 Everett, N. Stanley, Co. A, 13th Regt.
 Fessenden, William H., Co. L, 1st Regt.
 Fisher, Herman, Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Fisher, William I., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Forbes, William H., Co. E, 1st Cav.
 Gilbert, Wallace H., Co. F, 22d Regt.
 Graham, Charles H., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Gunnison, Edwin L., Co. A, 29th Regt.
 Grant, Everett A., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Hall, George W., Jr., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Hastings, Frank B., Co. D, 13th Regt.
 Hebard, Henry J. A., Co. A, 13th Regt.
 Hicks, David F., Co. B, 13th Regt.
 Holmes, Abraham, Jr., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Hopkins, Edward F., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Hoyt, T. D. V., Co. M, 1st Cav.
 Hunt, Charles C., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Hunt, Isaiah, Co. I, 35th Regt.
 Huntington, Edward L., U.S.A.
 Ingraham, Sewell S., Co. I, 24th Regt.
 Jones, John P., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Kirby, Patrick T., Co. I, 7th Regt.
 Kittredge, Henry G. W., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Lacy, John, Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Leavitt, Albion E., Co. I, 26th Regt.
 Littlefield, Charles G., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Lord, George F., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Lord, James F., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Lord, William H., Co. L, 1st Regt.
 Loring, Abraham M., Co. H, 39th Regt.
 Lycett, James, Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Madden, Thomas, Co. H, 18th Regt.
 Mahoney, John, Co. E, 1st Regt.
 Martin, Albert T. B., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Martin, John W., Co. D, 24th Regt.
 McWhirk, Alexander, Co. D, 24th Regt.
 Merrill, Thomas, Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Moses, George F., Co. B, 39th Regt.
 Moulton, George H., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Moulton, Luther, Jr., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Moulton, Charles H., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Munroe, William, Co. F, 22d Regt.
 Murray, James, not stated.
 Murray, John, Co. E, 35th Regt.
 Myers, Nathaniel T., Co. M, 1st Cav.
 Myers, Samuel G., Co. D, 1st Cav.
 Nightingale, James H., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Nightingale, William H., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Noble, Joseph A., Co. K, 1st Cav.
 Nye, Hiram T., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Page, Chester S., Co. H, 39th Regt.
 Pearce, George W., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Pearce, Thomas L., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Parsons, Joseph A., Co. I, 26th Regt.
 Pickering, George H., not stated.
 Perkins, Stephen G., 2d Regt.
 Ransom, George H., 9th Bat.
 Raymond, George T., Co. I, 13th Regt.
 Robertson, James B., Co. H, 18th Regt.
 Rockwood, William O. V., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Rooney, Patrick H., Co. I, 26th Regt.
 Rowe, John F., Co. L, 1st Cav.
 Russell, George S., Co. H, 39th Regt.
 Scaff, John, Co. E, 7th Regt.

Seibert, John, Co. I, 26th Regt.
 Shannon, Edward, Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Sias, John (2d), Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Simmons, John D., Co. C, 33d Regt.
 Simpson, John E., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Skinner, Otis A., Co. I, 13th Regt.
 Spear, John M., Jr., Co. D, 24th Regt.
 Spiller, James F., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Sweeney, Terrence, Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Thayer, Frederick A., Co. E, 7th Regt.
 Thayer, Charles H., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Thayer, Samuel G., Co. E, 35th Regt.
 Vose, George E., Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Whittier, Napoleon B., Co. E, 1st Regt.
 Wigley, James, Co. I, 38th Regt.
 Williams, Claudius, Co. I, 38th Regt.

The following were the enlistments for the nine months' service:

Alden, Samuel W., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Baker, Jonathan, Co. I, 42d Regt.
 Badger, William F., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Bartlett, Benjamin J., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Boden, William F., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Bolster, Charles, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Breck, Charles E. C., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Brigham, William F., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Bronsdon, William B., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Caswell, Henry P., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Churchill, Joseph M., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Conklin, Edward D., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Cunningham, John J., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Cunningham, Patrick, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Cunningham, Peter, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Cunningham, William, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Davenport, Nathaniel T., Jr., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Delunnoy, Desire, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Dennison, Jeremiah, Co. B, 43d Regt.
 Dunican, Patrick, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Emerson, John H., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Halliday, George W., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Higgins, John, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Hollis, Abijah, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Jewett, Jonas W., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Jones, Benjamin F., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Jones, Elbridge, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Leavitt, William S., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Littlefield, Henry W., Co. D, 45th Regt.
 Lord, Joseph B., Co. I, 44th Regt.
 Mathes, Daniel, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Merrill, William, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Moffatt, Elijah W., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Morrissey, John, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Morrissey, Thomas, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Morse, Alfred L., Co. E, 44th Regt.
 Murphy, James, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Niles, Jerome S., Co. C, 45th Regt.
 Nolan, Christopher, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Norton, Edward, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Ochs, Joseph, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Pierce, George, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Shaw, Joseph A., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Skinner, George E., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Snow, Elbridge, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Snow, James H., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Thompson, James A., Co. B, 45th Regt.

Rooney, Bartholomew, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Vialle, James L., Co. G, 42d Regt.
 Ware, William, Co. C, 44th Regt.
 Wellington, Henry F., Co. B, 45th Regt.
 White, Edward P., Co. E, 44th Regt.
 White, James E., Co. G, 44th Regt.
 Williams, Thomas, Co. B, 45th Regt.
 Williams, John M., Co. B, 45th Regt.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

MILTON—(Continued).

Town Hall—The Blue Hill National Bank—The Milton News—Post-Office.

Town Hall.—The present town hall, one of the finest structures of its kind in the commonwealth, was dedicated on the evening of Feb. 18, 1879. The building is a substantial structure of brick and stone, contains a spacious hall, capable of seating five hundred people in the body of the hall and two hundred in the gallery, and has also convenient offices for the various town officials, the whole fitted up with every modern convenience. The style of architecture is Gothic, and is artistic and pleasing to the eye.

The announcement of the opening of the building drew thither a large number of visitors from all the country round about, and the scene was an animated one all the afternoon. The exercises of the dedication in the evening, in spite of the very forbidding weather, were attended by an assemblage of the town's people that crowded the hall. The exercises were opened by the Cadet Band of Boston, which gave the spirited "Light Cavalry" overture, by Suppe. Col. Henry S. Russell presided, and, after brief remarks of congratulation on the success which had attended the enterprise of building the hall, called upon the Rev. A. K. Teele to offer prayer. The report of the building committee was read by its chairman, Mr. W. H. Forbes. It reviewed the history of the enterprise, and gave full particulars in regard to the cost of the various parts of the work and other details. The vote authorizing the appropriation of thirty-five thousand dollars for the work was passed by the town March 4, 1878, and the committee, consisting of William H. Forbes, George Vose, Edward L. Pierce, Samuel Babcock, Samuel Gannett, J. H. Wolcott, Albert K. Teele, Charles L. Copeland, and Horace E. Ware, was appointed to carry out the work. Mr. Copeland resigned, and his place was filled by James M. Robbins. Mr. Nathaniel J. Bradlee, of Boston, was employed as consulting architect, and the plans of Messrs. H. W. Hartwell and George T. Tilden were accepted. The contracts were awarded as follows: Mason-work, W. C. Poland & Sons, of Boston; carpenters', Creesy & Noyes, of Boston; roofing, J. Farquhar's Sons, of Boston; copper-work, L. Cushing & Son, of Waltham. The two last-named contracts were afterwards included in that with Creesy & Noyes, as well as all glazing and painting, except the decoration of the two halls and the front entrance, which was done by W. J. McPherson, of Boston. The work on the cellar was begun June 3d, and the corner-stone was laid about the 10th of July. The work was carried on without interruption until its completion. The cost was as follows: Masons' contract, $13,077.82; carpenters', $14,924.56; painting, $550; architects, $1500; total for building proper, $30,052.38; grading, gas-fixtures, furnaces, and sundries, $1458.58; total cost of the work, $34,959.09.

At the conclusion of the report, Mr. Babcock, chairman of the selectmen, received the keys from the committee, making brief remarks, after which followed an extended historical address by the Hon. Edward L. Pierce, which was listened to with great interest.

Town-meetings were held until 1836 in the parish meeting-house, now belonging to the First Congregational (Unitarian) society. In that and the succeeding year they were held in the stone meeting-house at the Railway Village. In 1838 the town occupied its first town house, then just completed, which cost, with land included, the modest sum of $2684.32, and was paid for out of the surplus revenue which the United States had divided among the States, this commonwealth dividing its share among the towns.

The Blue Hill National Bank of Milton, incorporated in 1832, under the title of the "Dorchester and Milton Bank," with a capital of $100,000, was first located in the ancient town of Dorchester.

In the year 1850 a gang of burglars, under the notorious Jack Wade, raided the institution, securing funds to the amount of some thirty thousand dollars; as a large portion of the money thus taken was in bills of the bank, it was thought advisable to alter the name by which the bank was known; accordingly, in the year 1851, by statutory provisions the name was changed to "Blue Hill Bank," and some thirteen years later, in conformity to a law passed by Congress "for the establishment of a National Banking System," the name of the bank was again changed, December, 1864, to "Blue Hill National Bank."

Congress by special act, 1881, authorizing the removal of the bank to the town of Milton, it removed

March, 1882, to its present commodious quarters in the Associates' Building, Milton.

Since its incorporation the bank has had the following officers: Presidents, Moses Whitney, 1832 to 1848; Hananiah Temple, 1848 to 1854; Asaph Churchill, 1854 to 1876; Eleazer J. Bispham, 1876 to date (1884). Cashiers, Hananiah Temple, 1832 to 1836; Joseph L. Hammond, 1836 to 1848; Eleazer J. Bispham, 1848 to 1876; Sarel J. Willis, 1876 to date (1884). The capital at the present time is $200,000.

The present board of directors are E. J. Bispham, Laban Pratt, Henry S. Russell, Samuel Gannett, A. L. Hollingsworth, Joseph E. Hall, and Horace E. Ware.

The Milton News.—The first newspaper published in Milton, bearing date April 29, 1882, was a venture undertaken by Mr. Frederick P. Fairfield, of Boston, it being issued weekly, and bearing the title of The Milton News. After having published the above sheet some six months, Mr. Fairfield sold out his right, title, and interest to Mr. W. A. Woodward, the present proprietor.

Post-Office.—The date of the first establishment of a post-office in Milton was January, 1803. The first postmaster appointed was Samuel H. Glover: date of appointment Jan. 1, 1803. He was succeeded by Moses Whitney, who was appointed Dec. 9, 1805. Gen. Whitney held the office until 1817, when he resigned in favor of his friend, Nathan C. Martin, who was appointed Nov. 4, 1817, holding the office for nearly twenty-two years. Mr. Martin being about to remove from the town, resigned his trust in 1839, when Edmund J. Baker was appointed, April 1st of that year (1839), and held the position until Jan. 19, 1844, when George Thompson was appointed. The appointment was held by him until May 29, 1849, when Nathan C. Martin again received the appointment, occupying the position until his death, Aug. 26, 1864, making the whole term of his incumbency some thirty-seven years. Upon Oct. 20, 1864, Louis N. Tucker received an appointment, but declined to serve, when Henry Pope was appointed, Jan. 12, 1865, holding the office until his death, when his wife, Abigail F. Pope, was appointed, March 3, 1880, continuing in office until her decease, in 1883. July 16, 1883, Henry A. Pope was commissioned, holding the position at the present writing (1884).

Conclusion.—We can no more fittingly close our history of this grand old town than by quoting the following from an address delivered at the dedication of its town hall by one of her most eminent citizens, the Hon. Edward L. Pierce:

"We have in the pleasant places where our lines have fallen blessings which came to us without effort or sacrifice of ourselves or our fathers. There are no four square miles in our country—perhaps, without exaggeration, we might add on the globe—more endowed with all that is attractive in scenery than those which are covered by our municipal jurisdiction. Here are no morasses, no pestilential districts, no blasted heaths, no wastes where all is parched, scraggy, and repulsive, no dead level wearisome to eye or feet; but the whole space filled with a pure and health-bringing air, which rises from the sea and descends from the hills, spread out in varied landscapes, diversified with elevations and intervals, with forests and fields watered by unfailing brooks, and even the hills fed by perpetual springs. Here on our fair heritage are combined the Blue Hills to the south, from which came, according to Roger Williams, the Indian name of our beloved commonwealth, Massachusetts; the Neponset River, flowing along our northern border, and the ocean view to the east. You who have journeyed in other lands, along the Charente, the Loire, or the Arno, what fairer prospect have you seen than the eye sweeps as you stand on Milton Hill, looking on the river, as with changing tide it spreads out a broad lake, or withdraws to its narrow bed; on eminences crowned with villas; on villages nestling in valleys or covering elevations; on church-spires testifying to Christian worship; on the islands and beacon-lights in the harbor of New England's metropolis; on ships departing and returning on their errands of commerce and civilization?

"Looking southward on the same highway, the old Plymouth road, the eye glides along a scene hardly less picturesque which embraces the interval and the hills beyond. Standing on Brush Hill, with no intervening obstruction between you and the Blue Hills, there lies spread out before you nature in one of her royal moods, a study worthy of some gifted artist. Passing on to the south, and ascending the hills themselves, which in a less modest nomenclature than ours would be classified as mountains, and there, on the summit, lies before you a magnificent panorama of cities, villages, mountains, valleys, rivers, lakes, the ocean, where one may contemplate with reverence the works of the Creator, the intelligence of man, the life and growth of society, and the events of history which have transpired in successive generations within the bounds of the horizon.

"Nor is the natural beauty of this township confined to such favored sites as these, but it is distributed among our farms and along our roads. I have seen the artist sitting by our longest brook, which rises in the Blue Hills, and, flowing through the Hobart woods, falls into the Neponset, sketching the overhanging branches, the old trunks, and the flowering meadows by its side, and placing on canvas beauties of which we live altogether too unconscious. Coming at the close of day from the railway station to my home, with the twin churches before me and the Blue Hills in the background, looking westward I have often paused to gaze on sunsets as finely colored as any I have ever seen on Italian skies. We have, indeed, villas and lawns which art has constructed and spread out, but, better still, we have retained the primitive forest, where woodcock, partridge, quail, and rabbit still linger; we have highways not too broad and lined with graceful elms; we have still, and long may we retain, that freshness of nature which makes the charm of Milton as a home and place of rest. If some lover of nature gifted with imagination like Wordsworth, who glorified with sentiment the Lake district of England and peopled it with ideal forms, shall ever be born or come to live among us, he will find all about him food for his contemplative spirit and poetic genius.

"It has been customary at dedications like this to review the history of the town from its settlement. But I decline a task which at our second centennial anniversary was so well performed by our townsman, Mr. Robbins. The chronicles of its churches have been written by two of its pastors and present citizens, the Rev. Dr. Morison and the Rev. Frederick Frothingham, both of whom are with us this evening.

"Our town has been conspicuous for the good sense and solid character of its citizens, and in some epochs for names which mankind will remember. When our fathers contended for existence against Philip of Pokanoket, her Capt. Wadsworth fell bravely with his gallant and devoted band in the swamps of Sudbury, and in a graveyard of that town is a monument with the inscription, 'Captain Samuel Wadsworth of Milton, his Lieut. Sharp of Brookline, and twenty-six other soldiers fighting for the defence of their country were slain by the Indian enemy and lie buried in this place.' The Voses and Sumners served their country with honor in the army of the Revolution and in the war with England of 1812, and theirs and other names of our citizens are among the recorded heroisms of our civil war. In an early period this town gave a president to Harvard College in the person of Benjamin Wadsworth. Some of its citizens have been identified with the civil and judicial history of the State. The town has witnessed within its limits some historic scenes, the preaching of John Eliot and George Whitefield, and the passage of the Suffolk Resolves in the house of Capt. Daniel Vose, drawn by Joseph Warren, and regarded as the earliest organized demonstration for independence in the colonies.

"There has been a continuity in the life of this town rare in municipal history. Growing in population by natural increase rather than by accessions from other places, there has been a steady flow of influence and character from one generation to another. Eight of the original trustees, to whom, in 1664, a tract of land was conveyed for 'a meeting-house and other ministerial purposes,' have always since had and still have descendants in the town bearing their names, and in some instances living upon and holding, without break in the chain of title, their ancestral acres,—the Voses, Wadsworths, Tuckers, Sumners, Gullivers, Babcocks, Swifts, and Cranes. It has a remarkable record for longevity, including in successive generations an unusual number of inhabitants who have lived to fourscore years, and even passed in health and vigor far beyond that limit. The long service of many of its clergymen signifies its conservative and steady-going character. Five active pastors, those of Peter Thacher, John Taylor, Nathaniel Robbins, Samuel Gile, and John H. Morison, span a period of one hundred and sixty-seven years, of which those of Thacher and Robbins were each nearly half a century in duration. Three lives, always identified with the town, connect us with the early part of the eighteenth century. Nathaniel Robbins, the third minister of the Milton Church, lived from 1726 to 1795. His son, Edward H. Robbins, an early Lieutenant-Governor of the State, lived from 1758 to 1829; and we have with us this evening, next in the line, worthy alike of sire and grandsire, the Hon. James M. Robbins, who, at the age of eighty-two, is in the full enjoyment of his powers and active for the public good.

"The tone of municipal life has been at all times sensibly affected by the superior intelligence of leading citizens. Fortunate the people who have this advantage! thrice fortunate the people who value and profit by it! The town has probably counted among its citizens, at different periods, more graduates of Harvard College than any one of similar population in the State, and their trained intellects and large views have been felt at all periods in its social life and public action. We greet this evening, as one of our most welcome guests, a representative of the ancient university, Mr. James B. Thayer, Royall Professor of the Dane Law School,—no longer of us as a citizen, but always of us as a friend,—whose scholarly tastes, neighborly offices, and beneficent activity in civic duties remain in fresh remembrance.

Edward L. Peirce

"There is another feature in the character of the town which deserves mention. A kindly spirit of association prevails among our people, with no sharp divisions into sects, occupations, and family groups. Wealth here is not supercilious and exclusive, but hospitable, open-handed, and sympathetic. There is little of poverty and dependence, but a general condition of comfort. There are no wide estates tilled by tenants, but, more than in most communities, each man is the owner of the house he lives in. As the result, there prevails a sense of self-respect and of respect for others.

"In political controversies the vote of the town has been steadily for freedom, for the support of the government, and the honest administration of State affairs. In commemoration of the ratification of Jay's treaty, by which Washington upheld against clamor the peace of the country, an arch was erected over the bridge at the lower mills, at the instance of Capt. John Lillie, an officer of the army of the Revolution, then a citizen of the place, which bore this inscription, 'We unite in defence of our country and its laws,' a resolution to which the town and, may I be permitted to add, his descendants have ever since been loyal."

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

EDWARD L. PIERCE.

Edward Lillie Pierce, son of Col. Jesse and Eliza S. Pierce, was born in Stoughton, Mass., March 29, 1829. He received early instruction from his father, and was prepared for college in the academy at Bridgewater and in a classical school at Easton. He was graduated at Brown University in 1850, standing in some departments at the head of his class, and carrying off an unusual number of literary prizes. His interest while still a youth in public and literary questions is shown in his articles published in 1848-50 in the Democratic Review on "The Independence of the Judiciary," "The Executive Veto," and "Sir Thomas More," and in his essay on "the relation of education to wealth and industrial prosperity," which was published in the "Transactions of the Norfolk Agricultural Society" in 1852. From college he went to the Law School at Cambridge, where he was graduated in 1852. Here he displayed the same devoted application to his studies that had marked his course in college, and received the first prize offered to his class for an essay on "The Consideration of a Contract." In 1853, he wrote an able and learned article for the Boston Post on "Secret Suffrage," a question at that time of marked interest in the politics of Massachusetts, which was reprinted and widely distributed in England by the "Ballot Society," and referred to as authority in Parliament.

At the beginning of his professional life Mr. Pierce passed nearly a year at Cincinnati, Ohio, in the law office of Salmon P. Chase, then a senator and since chief justice of the United States, with whom from that time he maintained relations of friendship and confidence. In 1857, he published his book on "American Railroad Law," which at once took a conspicuous place in legal literature, and was regarded by many lawyers and judges having special knowledge and experience in this branch of the law as the best treatise on the subject. In 1881 he published a new treatise on "The Law of Railroads," availing himself of the multitude of new cases though following largely his original method. This is now deemed the standard authority on the subject. He also prepared for the railroad commissioners in 1874 an elaborate index of the "Special Railroad Laws of Massachusetts." He has been one of the lecturers at the Boston Law School since its foundation, a period of ten years.

In 1857, Mr. Pierce took an active part in opposing the narrow and proscriptive policy towards citizens of foreign birth which was at that time strongly urged in Massachusetts; and a valuable letter from him, filled with statistics and advocating the most liberal treatment of foreigners, was printed in the newspapers and afterwards extensively distributed in pamphlet form.

Mr. Pierce continued in the practice of his profession until the breaking out of the Rebellion. In 1860 he represented his district in the National Republican Convention at Chicago, and supported the nomination of Mr. Lincoln. In February, 1861, when the Massachusetts Legislature was considering the subject of modifying the "Personal Liberty Laws," he appeared before a committee of the Legislature and made a vigorous and very able argument against the proposed changes, which was printed, and is known to have made a strong impression upon the committee, and was warmly commended by Governor Andrew and Mr. Sumner.

In the very first week of the civil war, Mr. Pierce enlisted in Company L of the Third Regiment of the Massachusetts Militia, went to Old Point Comfort, and took part before the week was out in the destruction of the Norfolk navy-yard. He performed his duties as a private soldier in all respects until July, when he was detailed to collect the negroes at Hampton and set them to work on the intrenchments of that town. This was the beginning of the employment of negroes on our military works. Mr. Pierce's views on putting them into service as laborers and soldiers were in advance of those of the government, as may be seen in his article on "The Contrabands at Fortress Monroe," published in the Atlantic Monthly of November, 1861, which at the time attracted much attention, being written nearly two years before Col. Shaw led the first negro regiment out of Boston. In December of the same year, Mr. Chase, Secretary of the Treasury, despatched Mr. Pierce to Port Royal to examine into the condition of the negroes upon the Sea Islands. It was a delicate service, for the government had as yet taken no position as to the status of the slaves of rebels. In February, 1862, Mr. Pierce returned to Washington and made a very able and exhaustive report in which he assumed the freedom of these negroes and the duty of the government to protect them. This report was published in the New York Tribune, and thence extensively copied both in England and America. One of the English papers, making a full abstract, entitled it "Mr. Pierce's Ten Thousand Clients." The work which he had recommended was placed in his charge by the government with full authority, and in March, 1862, taking with him teachers and superintendents, nearly sixty in number, he again sailed for Port Royal, and entered upon this most difficult and important work. He occupied the Sea Islands having nearly two hundred plantations and ten thousand negroes, planted fifteen thousand acres in cotton, corn and potatoes, had the negroes instructed in their duties and relations, started the schools, and became as it were the founder of a new State and a new civilization among the blacks. Largely owing to his suggestions, Freedmen's Aid Societies were formed, through whose instrumentality a vast amount of good was accomplished.

In June, 1862, Mr. Pierce made his second report to the government, setting forth what had been done. These reports, afterwards reprinted in the Rebellion Record, were widely noticed and praised, both by American and European journals. They were commended at that time by the Westminster Review, Earl Russell in the House of Lords, the Revue des Deux Mondes, and Gasparin, and later in the histories of the Rebellion by Wilson and the Count of Paris. In the spring of 1863 he was again employed at the South on similar duty. The care of the negroes having been transferred to the War Department, he was asked to continue in charge under its authority, but declined. In 1883, he gave to the white and colored people of St. Helena Island, S. C., the scene of his former labors, a library of eight hundred volumes of modern editions of standard works of history, biography, travels, popular science, general literature, the best novels, and valuable books of reference.

Mr. Pierce was on duty at Morris Island in August, 1863, when, without any previous request or knowledge on his part, he was notified of his appointment as collector of internal revenue for the Third Massachusetts District, which office he held from October, 1863, to May, 1866, discharging its duties with the same fidelity and diligence which had heretofore marked his career. A vacancy occurring at this time in the office of district attorney for the district comprising Norfolk and Plymouth Counties, Governor Bullock at once appointed him to the position. He was elected by the people to the same office in 1866, and re-elected in 1868. In October, 1869, he resigned this office and accepted the position of secretary of the Board of State Charities, which he held until his resignation, in 1874. In his reports, as secretary of the board, besides the routine work of the office, he treated with fullness certain topics of permanent interest connected with crime and pauperism. Among them were those of "Executive Pardons," "Habitual and Juvenile Offenders," and "Out-Door Relief." In his concluding report he reviewed foreign institutions and methods, giving the results of his observations in his visit to Europe in 1873. These papers are now consulted as authority on the matters which they discuss, and furnish the most thorough and exhaustive treatment of these important subjects which has been made in this country.

In 1875 and 1876, Mr. Pierce was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature, and served on the Judiciary Committee, being its chairman the second year. Besides giving his attention to the ordinary business which falls to this committee, he originated and carried through a most important measure limiting and regulating municipal indebtedness, which is generally regarded as one of the most salutary laws which has been enacted by the Legislature for many years.

Mr. Pierce's best known literary work is the "Memoir of Charles Sumner," the first two volumes of which were published in 1877. The author was specially qualified for this duty intrusted to him as one of the literary executors of the distinguished statesman, having been during the whole of Mr. Sumner's public life his close and intimate friend. This work of love was executed with rare discretion, excellent taste, and sound judgment. Seldom have the functions of a biographer been performed so thoroughly and conscientiously. The narrative is perspicuous, full without diffuseness, lucid and animated, and free from rhetorical pretension. It is entitled to rank among the few great biographies.

In 1880, Mr. Pierce delivered the oration before the Alumni of Brown University, the subject being "The Public and Social Duties of the College Graduate." In this admirable address he discussed in a vigorous and scholarly spirit the relations of educated men to the community and the country, and enforced with power and earnestness the claim which the world has to their best work and endeavor. Two years later he received from Brown University the degree of LL.D. He has ever kept up an interest in his Alma Mater, and has been for two years the president of the association of its graduates in Boston and vicinity.

From his youth Mr. Pierce has been a frequent contributor to newspapers and periodicals. Among his papers and addresses not already mentioned are the following: "Report to Governor Andrew on the Condition of Massachusetts' Soldiers at Fortress Monroe;" address delivered at the Town House in Milton, Oct. 31, 1868, on "The Two Systems of Government proposed for the Rebel States;" speech in February, 1874, before a committee of the Massachusetts Legislature in favor of rescinding the resolutions passed the preceding year censuring Senator Sumner for his course in the Senate with regard to the battle flags; "Speech on Municipal Indebtedness," delivered before the Massachusetts House of Representatives, April 9, 1875; "Address at Milton on Memorial Day," May 30, 1870; speech at Faneuil Hall, June 27, 1876, on the nomination of Mr. Hayes as President; lecture before the Long Island Historical Society at Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 18, 1877, on "The Private Life and Literary Friendships of Charles Sumner;" article entitled "A Senator's (Charles Sumner's) Fidelity Vindicated," in the North American Review, July-August, 1878; "Address before the Suffolk Bar on George S. Hilard," January, 1879; speech at the public dinner given to Carl Schurz in Boston, in March, 1881. He was the author of the resolutions of the Republican State Conventions of 1867, 1869, and 1872, and has been chairman of the committee on resolutions at different times. He again represented his district in the Republican National Convention at Cincinnati in 1876, where he served on the committee on resolutions, and made an earnest speech against a proposition to exclude Chinese immigrants from the equality recognized by the Declaration of Independence. He was also a member of the Republican National Convention meeting at Chicago in 1884. He was appointed by President Hayes in December, 1878, assistant treasurer of the United States, but declined the appointment. As soon as he was old enough to be a voter he began to address popular meetings and write for the newspapers in favor of what was then known as the Free Soil party, and has continued from that time until the present (1884) to take part as a speaker and writer in political discussions.

In Milton, where for many years he has resided,

Mr. Pierce has always taken an active part in public affairs. He was the originator of the public library, of which he has been a trustee since its organization. He gave, in 1879, the address at the dedication of the new town house, and in 1882 delivered the address at the dedication of the new town house in Stoughton, his native town.

Mr. Pierce has several times visited Europe, where he has made extensive journeys, and has had the advantage of personal intercourse with scholars and public men, to whose acquaintance his writings and services were an introduction. His life has been a busy one, and although yet in his prime, with apparently many years of usefulness and honor before him, he has nearly realized in himself the ideal conception of the duty of the scholar to humanity, so finely portrayed in his address at Brown University in 1880. Sincere and loyal to his personal and political associates, he has ever been true to his convictions of truth and duty. A graceful, earnest, and convincing orator, a clear, forcible, and polished writer, of marvelous industry and exhaustive power of research, few men of his age have accomplished so much work of varied character and importance. Much of his time from early manhood has been devoted to the interests of humanity, as illustrated in his long service in the political movement against slavery, in his work for freedmen, and in his connection with efforts for the improvement of prison administration and kindred reforms.

LIEUT. HUNTINGTON FROTHINGHAM WOLCOTT.

The name of Huntington Frothingham Wolcott, although he died before he had reached the age of twenty years, will be long remembered by many. He came of a family which had rendered public and conspicuous service to the country for two centuries, and almost as a boy he heard and heeded the call which summoned him to bear his part in preserving the nation his ancestors had helped to found.

Henry Wolcott, who emigrated from England and was the ancestor of the family in this country, was the son of John Wolcott, of Tolland, in Somersetshire, England, and was baptized in the adjoining parish of Lydiard St. Lawrence, Dec. 6, 1578. He married, Jan. 19, 1606, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Saunders, of Lydiard St. Lawrence. He held a good estate in lands, as the title-deeds still in existence show, and was already passed middle life when, "to avoid the persecution of those times against dissenters," he emigrated to New England, sailing, with his wife and three oldest sons, from Plymouth, England, on the 20th of March, 1630, in the ship "Mary and John," of four hundred tons burden, Capt. Squeb, master, in a company numbering one hundred and forty souls. They "came by the good hand of the Lord through the deeps comfortably, having preaching or expounding of the word of God every day, for ten weeks together," and arrived at Nantasket May 30, 1630. One of their number, Capt. Roger Clap, thus describes their landing: "When we came to Nantasket, Capt. Squeb, who was captain of that great ship of four hundred tons, would not bring us into Charles River, as he was bound to do, but put us ashore and our goods on Nantasket Point, and left us to shift for ourselves, in a forlorn place in this wilderness. But, as it pleased God, we got a boat of some old planters, and laded her with goods; and some able men, well armed, went in her unto Charlestown, where we found some wigwams and one house, and in the house there was a man which had a boiled bass, but no bread that we see. But we did eat of his bass, and then went up Charles River until the river grew narrow and shallow; and there we landed our goods, with much labor and toil, the bank being steep; and, night coming on, we were informed that there were hard by us three hundred Indians. . . . In the morning some of the Indians came and stood at a distance off, looking at us, but came not near us. But, when they had been a while in view, some of them came and held out a great bass toward us, so we sent a man with a biscuit, and changed the cake for the bass. Afterwards they supplied us with bass, exchanging a bass for a biscuit-cake, and were very friendly unto us. . . . In our beginning many were in great straits for want of provisions for themselves and their little ones. Oh! the hunger that many suffered, and saw no hope in an eye of reason to be supplied, only by clams, and mussels, and fish. We did quickly build boats, and some went a-fishing. But bread was with many a very scarce thing, and flesh of all kinds as scarce."

Such was the landing of this company of "very Godly and religious people" upon the bleak and barren coast of Massachusetts two hundred and fifty years ago. The name of Henry Wolcott appears in the first list of freemen made in Boston, Oct. 19, 1630. He received a grant of land in Dorchester, a part of his estate being within the present limits of the town of Milton, but in 1635, in the face of incredible hardship and suffering, he moved to Windsor, Conn., with a considerable number of the Dorchester settlers. In 1637 he was elected a member of the committee, twelve in number, which constituted the Lower House of the first General Assembly held in Connecticut. In 1643 he was elected a member of the House of Magistrates, as the present Senate was then styled, and to this office he was annually re-elected during life. In the year 1640 he appears to have visited England, where, by the decease of his elder brother without issue, he had inherited the family estate, and it was probably in the same year that he brought to this country his two daughters and his son Simon, whom he had left as children in England until the family should become settled in their new home. He died May 30, 1655.

Simon Wolcott was admitted a freeman in 1654, at the age of thirty years, and Oct. 17, 1661, he married Martha Pitkin, sister of William Pitkin, attorney-general and treasurer of the colony. In 1671 he sold his estate in Windsor, and moved to Simsbury, where he had received from the General Court a grant of land, and where, in 1674, he was chosen a townsman or selectman, and was appointed to command the train-band, a position of danger and responsibility, as this was a frontier settlement, and King Philip's war was then raging. In 1675 the town was destroyed by the Indians, and Simon Wolcott returned to Windsor, having lost all his property in this unhappy enterprise. He died Sept. 11, 1687, his death being hastened, according to his son's account, "by gloomy anticipations of the oppression and suffering which awaited the colonists under the coming administration of Sir Edmund Andros."

His youngest son, Roger, was born Jan. 4, 1679, and married, Dec. 3, 1702, Sarah Drake, of Windsor. He says in his autobiography, "I never was a scholar in any school a day in my life;" but he so well improved his slender opportunities for education that his mind was early well stored with varied learning. He was chosen selectman in 1707, and two years after was elected a representative in the General Assembly. In 1710 he "was put on the Bench of Justices," and in 1714 he was chosen into the Council. He was appointed judge of the County Court in 1721, and judge of the Superior Court in 1732, of which court he afterwards became the chief justice. He was chosen Deputy Governor in 1741. In 1745 he received a commission as major-general, and was second in command under Sir William Pepperell in the famous Louisburg expedition. From 1750 until 1754 he held the office of Governor of the colony. He wrote and published a volume of "Poetical Meditations," more remarkable for their tone of piety and patriotism than for their rhythmic melody or smooth versification. He died in the eighty-ninth year of his age.

His son, Oliver Wolcott, was born Nov. 20, 1726. He was graduated at Yale College in 1747, and married, Jan. 21, 1755, Lorraine, daughter of Capt. Daniel Collins, of Guilford. He settled in Litchfield, and was chosen representative of the town in the General Assembly. From 1774 to 1786 he was an assistant or councillor. He was chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas for the county, and was for many years judge of the Court of Probate for the district of Litchfield. He served in the militia in every grade of office from that of captain to that of major-general. He was chosen a member of the Continental Congress, and in July, 1775, was appointed by that body one of the Commissioners of Indian Affairs, a trust of great importance, its object being to induce the Indian nations to remain neutral during the war. In 1776 he signed his name to the Declaration of Independence, and from then until 1783 he was constantly engaged, either in Congress or in the field, in furthering the national cause. From 1786 to 1796 he was annually elected Lieutenant-Governor, and in the latter year he was chosen Governor, which office he held at the time of his death, which came upon his seventy-first birthday, Dec. 1, 1797. His Alma Mater, Yale College, conferred upon him the honorary degree of LL.D. Such is a brief and imperfect record of the public services rendered to his country during a time of danger and doubt by Oliver Wolcott.

The youngest son of Oliver Wolcott was Frederick Wolcott, who was born Nov. 2, 1767. He was graduated at Yale College in 1786, with the first honors of his class, and at commencement delivered the salutatory oration in Latin. He married, Oct. 12, 1800, Betsey, daughter of Col. Joshua Huntington, of Norwich. She came of a family renowned in the annals of the State. Her grandfather, Gen. Jabez Huntington (Yale College, 1741) consecrated his wealth to the cause of independence, and was appointed major-general of the entire State force. Three of her uncles attained the rank of general in the service of their country, and the name of Huntington was for generations honorably known in the military and civil history of the State and nation. Frederick Wolcott was appointed clerk of the Court of Common Pleas in 1793, and in 1798 clerk of the Superior Court of Litchfield County. He was a representative in the General Assembly, and in 1808 he was chosen a Presidential elector. From 1810 to 1823 he was a member of the State Senate. In 1796 he was appointed judge of probate, and this office he held until his death, a period of over forty years. He was twice offered a nomination for the office of Governor by the party in power, but these nominations he declined, partly on account of his health and partly because through life he was little covetous of high office or of popular applause. A man of magnificent physique, of high literary attainments, of sterling integrity, respected and beloved by all, his memory is still cherished in the town where he passed his useful and honorable life. He died May 28, 1837, at the age of seventy years.

Oliver Wolcott, Jr., an older brother of Frederick Wolcott, succeeded Alexander Hamilton as Secretary of the Treasury in the cabinet of Washington, whose intimate friend he was, and, after leaving, in 1800, the cabinet of John Adams, he was for ten years Governor of Connecticut, as had been his father and grandfather before him. He was one of the leading Federalists when that party embraced the foremost intellects of the day, and added new lustre to the name he bore.

J. Huntington Wolcott, the oldest son of Frederick Wolcott, was born in Litchfield, Aug. 29, 1804. He was early compelled to seek his livelihood, and coming to Boston with no capital save his own manhood and a name not unknown in the history of his country, he entered the employ of the distinguished mercantile house of A. & A. Lawrence & Co., in which firm, while still a young man, he became a partner. This firm bore a leading part in the development of the great manufacturing and commercial enterprises of New England, and, until its dissolution, its reputation was unsurpassed for probity, sagacity, and energy. To these interests Mr. Wolcott gave much of the active work of his life, and the added population and wealth which they have brought to New England are due in great measure to the men who had the foresight to perceive that the prosperity and power of Massachusetts, as compared with her sister States, can be maintained only by her higher skill in diversified industry. During the war of the Rebellion, Mr. Wolcott was treasurer of the Boston Sanitary Commission, and has always exhibited an example of public-spirited and liberal citizenship. He married, Nov. 12, 1844, Cornelia, daughter of Samuel Frothingham, of Boston, whose ancestors, living for generations in Charlestown, belonged to the old Puritan stock of New England. She died in little more than five years after her marriage, and Mr. Wolcott married as his second wife her sister, Harriet Frothingham.

In 1851, Mr. Wolcott bought an estate in Milton, and thus, after the lapse of two hundred and twenty years, became a citizen of the town in which his great-great-grandfather had first settled, after landing from the voyage of seventy days in the year 1630.

From such ancestors was Huntington Frothingham Wolcott descended, and to them, perhaps, he owed in part the impulse which led him to give his young life freely to his country. Born in Boston, Feb. 4, 1846, he passed seven months of each year of his boyhood in Milton, and his strong love of nature and of country life made this the home to which his affections always turned. As he passed from childhood into youth the unusual beauty and strength of his character were manifest to all who knew him. Of a physique of rare vigor and grace, of a pure and refined spirit, of a charm and dignity of manner which impressed themselves upon all,—a leader in all athletic sports, a good rider and boxer,—of a manly and generous nature, he was admired and beloved by all who knew him, whether they were his associates and companions at school, or the poor whose sufferings he was ever ready to alleviate.

The opening of the war of the Rebellion found him a boy of only fifteen years; but as the conflict went on with varying fortune to the national cause, his nature was stirred to its lowest depths by the national call to arms, and he was eager to throw himself into the struggle which maintained the unity of the nation and abolished the disgrace of slavery. He was for two or three years commander of the battalion of his school, whose efficiency in drill and evolution received the high praise of Governor Andrew, and of the military officers who were from time to time invited to review it. He studied carefully and thoroughly many works on military drill and tactics, and made himself an expert swordsman and a practised shot with the rifle and revolver. His earnest wish to bear his part in the conflict for national existence grew in intensity, and before he had reached the age of nineteen years he received from Governor John A. Andrew a commission as second lieutenant in the Second Regiment of Massachusetts Cavalry, and was appointed aide to Maj.-Gen. Alfred Gibbs. He passed some weeks in the military camp at Readville, thus becoming familiar with the routine of camp duty and discipline. In March, 1865, he joined the staff to which he had been assigned, which was a part of the command of Gen. Sheridan, and he thus took part in the toilsome and brilliant campaign which resulted in cutting off Lee's retreat from Richmond, and compelled his surrender to Gen. Grant's force. These were weeks of arduous marching and constant fighting. Lieut. Wolcott took his place side by side with veterans in the war, and his energy, coolness, and gallantry under fire elicited the special notice of his commanding officer at the battles of Dinwiddie Court-House, Five Forks, Clover Hill, "April 9th," and "on various other occasions." The surrender of Lee at Appomattox brought to an end this great civil war, and the grand review of the victorious army at Washington celebrated the nation's restored unity and the death of secession as a possible doctrine in American politics. In this review Lieut. Wolcott took part with the command to which he was attached; and some who saw him on that memorable occasion wrote after his death, which was so soon to follow, "It was impossible not to notice particularly young Lieut. Huntington Wolcott with his manly bearing and inspired face." "He seemed the impersonation of one's ideal of noble youth." The painter, William M. Hunt, who has reflected honor upon American art, and who knew him well, wrote after his death, "He combined the character of the lovely boy and noble and devoted patriot and soldier in a more striking manner than any one I have ever known."

But on the very eve of that day of national rejoicing his system succumbed to the insidious hold of camp fever, contracted during his few brief weeks of arduous and exhausting service, and although tenderly transported to his boyhood's home in Milton, which he loved so well, he died June 9, 1865, in the prime of his manhood, at the age of nineteen years and four months. A few weeks before he went to the front he had said, "I should be glad to die for my country," and this joy was given him, to lead a pure and unsullied life, and to die in the service of the nation to which he owed an inherited loyalty so fervid and strong. His memory will not soon fade from the recollection of those who knew him, and is perpetuated upon the memorial tablet in the town hall of Milton, and in the title of the Grand Army post of the town which has chosen his name to designate its organization.

NATHAN C. MARTIN.

A history of the town of Milton would be incomplete that did not contain the name of Nathan Cook Martin. Owing to circumstances beyond control we are unable to present our readers with a portrait, which we doubly regret, as in his younger days he was noted as being the handsomest man in Norfolk County.

He was a noble specimen of manhood, portly and of regular features, very prepossessing in appearance, and in manner most courtly and genial.

He was the son of Henry and Mary (Sessions) Martin, and was born in Woodstock, Conn., Oct. 25, 1790.

His early education was such only as was afforded by the common schools of his native town, which at that period were kept only during the winter months. His opportunities, therefore, for instruction were small, but such as they were he improved, so that by close application and study, and with scarcely any instruction, except what he himself was able to glean from books, he became a successful teacher, not only of the grammar school but in the teaching of music, and also of penmanship, his success was marked; schools for the instruction in those branches being taught by him not only in Milton, but in many of the surrounding towns.

At the early age of seventeen he was employed to teach one of the public schools in his native town. In a very brief period his reputation as a teacher became so marked that in the following year a committee from the town of Holland, Mass., waited upon him with a request to him to take charge of a school in that town. Leaving the paternal dwelling in 1808, he took up his residence in Holland, where he taught some two years with good success.

Coming to Dorchester in 1810, to visit a townsman of his native place who was teaching there, he was offered a position as teacher of a school at the Lower Mills Village (so called), which, upon accepting, he immediately entered with energy upon the work before him, teaching some seven years in the town with such success that upon his resignation the school committee gave him the highest praise possible by the statement that "for excellence in their studies, and for good deportment, his school outranked any other school in the town."

In the year 1817, having resigned his position as teacher, he opened a store in Milton for the sale of general merchandise, which business he so ably conducted that his friend, Mr. Benjamin Bussey (at that period the richest man in Massachusetts), invited him to accept of a partnership with him in conducting a business enterprise in the city of Boston; but the offer, though a very advantageous one (one which, if accepted, was reasonably sure to bring him a competency), was declined. He seemed to have had no desire for riches, but rather, caring naught for wealth, offered daily invocations to the Lord "more of his grace than goods to lend."

His passion for study commencing in early life was continued through middle age, and with such diligence that probably no man in the town—albeit there were many that were college bred—had a more intimate knowledge of the English classics.

The number of important official positions held by him, fairly thrust upon him by his fellow-townsmen, was somewhat remarkable, in all of which he served with credit to himself, and with satisfaction to the public.

He was postmaster of Milton for thirty-seven years, judge of the District Court, major of the First Regiment Massachusetts Militia, deacon of the Third Religious Society of Dorchester (of whose choir he was leader for nearly thirty years), town clerk of Milton, and a member of the school committee.

In the early days of the temperance movement he enrolled himself as an ardent worker in the cause, and was for many years prominent in his efforts for the suppression of the evils resulting from the traffic in intoxicating liquors, delivering addresses in many places, etc. His sound sense made him a believer in moral as opposed to legal suasion, and as he believed so he taught.

He left not riches, founded no professorship, endowed no institute of learning, but his whole life was spent in the service of his fellow-men. He died Aug. 26, 1864, leaving a name which will ever be honorably inscribed in the annals of the town.

CHAPTER LXIX.

BROOKLINE.

BY BRADFORD KINGMAN.

Topography of the Town.—Brookline is the most unique and picturesque town in the vicinity of the metropolis of New England. It lies in the extreme northeast corner of Norfolk County, in latitude $42^{\circ} 19' 32''$ north, and longitude $71^{\circ} 00' 7''$ west of Greenwich, and was bounded on the northeast by Charles River, on Cambridge and Boston, about one and one-half miles. In 1855 the northerly part of the town bordering on the river was ceded to Boston, so that the northerly bounds as now situated are the south side of Brighton Avenue and the east side of St. Mary's Street. On the east it bounds the Back Bay territory of Boston, about one-half mile, and southeast by Boston (formerly Roxbury) about two and a quarter miles, and on West Roxbury about two and three-quarter miles; on the southwest it is bounded by West Roxbury, about three-quarters of a mile, and on Newton about one mile; on the northwest it is bounded by Newton about three-quarters of a mile, and on Brighton nearly two miles. It runs northeast and southwest about four and three-tenths miles, and southeast and northwest about one and two-thirds miles. Previous to the setting off the northerly portion of the town the territory comprised four thousand six hundred and ninety-five acres; since that time it contains four thousand three hundred acres, or about seven square miles, and has forty miles of roads.

Hills.—Brookline is not what might be termed an elevated township, but like most towns near the seashore the land gradually rises from the water to the interior till it reaches the highest point, which is Lyman's, or Cabot's, Hill, which is three hundred and thirty-six feet above high-water mark.

That portion of the town included in Corey, Aspinwall, Fisher, and Gardner Hills, and the territory south and west from a line formed by Boylston Street, from Hammond Street to the junction of Boylston and Heath Streets, and Chestnut Hill Avenue, thence across to corner of Dudley and Warren Streets, near Robert C. Winthrop's entrance or gateway, and from this point to Boston line, near Rockwood Street, excepting the vicinity of Hammond Street, and between Hammond Street and Newton line, and the South Street district, embraces about one-third of the area of the whole town, and is over one hundred and ninety feet above high-water mark.

Among the highest elevations in the town are Lyman's Hill, so called, situated between Boylston and Heath Streets, on the south of Boylston and north of Heath Streets. On the east, at a short distance, is the residence of Hon. Theodore Lyman, M.C., and formerly the home of his late father, Gen. Theodore Lyman,—a magnificent residence, with a lawn and location bearing a strong resemblance to many of the country-seats of distinguished men in England.

On the southerly side of the hill, known as the White estate, is the residence and grounds of Walter C. Cabot, which are quite extensive.

Next in order is Hyde's Hill, on the southerly side of Newton and nearly opposite Clyde Street. This hill is occupied as a farm by William J. Hyde, and is three hundred and nine feet above high-water mark.

The third highest hill is on the westerly side of South Street, nearly opposite Grove Street, near the standpipe of the Brookline Water-Works, which is three hundred and six feet in height.

From this last-named point, running northwest and southeast westerly of Newton Street, is a long range of highland called Walnut Hill, or Denny's Hill, with an average height of two hundred and eighty-three feet.

Another high elevation is that south of Goddard Avenue and north of Newton Street, two hundred and seventy-eight feet high, sometimes called Avon

Hill, but which has lately been known by the name of Goddard Heights. This land has been owned in the Goddard family for a long time, hence the name. Abijah W. Goddard is the present proprietor.

We next come to Corey's Hill, a beautiful elevation of several acres in extent, all of which are cultivated to the summit. In 1869 an avenue was built over this hill to Brighton, that the many visitors might have an easier ascent to the top. A fine macadamized road-bed was thoroughly built, with paved gutters, and a plank walk laid for pedestrians. Previous to this time it was only a rough path. This land has been owned in the Corey and Griggs families for a long time, till of late new owners have appreciated the location and erected residences on the same. Some have resorted thither upon the advice of their physicians, and with satisfactory results to their health; for, curious as it may appear, the air is warmer in the winter season by four to six degrees on the hill than in the valley below, while the cool, refreshing breezes of summer are soft, cheering, and refreshing. This hill, from its peculiar position and prominence, is destined to become more and more sought after as a place of residence by those who appreciate widely-extended views.

On some fine afternoon in summer-time let the reader start from the easterly end of Summit Avenue on Beacon Street and by slow degrees make the ascent. As he nears the summit the prospect widens, till he sees a beautiful panorama spread out before him in nature's loveliness at his very feet. Let us notice a few only of the many fine objects to be seen from the highest point on the hill. Looking to the southwest we see the famous Chestnut Hill Reservoirs, two picturesque sheets of water, with the unequaled drives around the same, the granite-arched entrance to the inclosure, and the fine borders of granite, and grass, so charming to the eye. Farther to the left may be seen some of the other hills of the town, also famous for their location and the views to be had from the same, as Aspinwall's, in near proximity to where we stand, while farther away are Fisher's, Lyman's, Chestnut Hills, and Goddard Heights at the extreme south part of the town, and as we turn our eye still farther are the villages of Dedham, Hyde Park, and Roxbury Highlands, with their towering church spires distinctly seen. Passing these and still farther away, our eyes catch glimpses of the Blue Hills of Milton, from which Massachusetts derived her name, and again to the north of these are Dorchester Heights, rendered famous in the Revolution, and then the full bay is spread out before you, with the white sails of large and smaller craft floating back and forth on the blue waters, while steamers are lively bearing hundreds on excursions of pleasure to near and remote places, while now and then the majestic floating-palaces bound for foreign countries may be seen. Directly to the east may be seen the gilded dome of the State-House, with Beacon Street dividing the waters of the Back Bay, and the elegant residences crowded on both sides of the same, also broad Commonwealth Avenue, which, together with the many fine residences, public buildings, and churches in the new section of the capital city, makes a fine picture.

To the left of the city we cannot fail to notice that ever-to-be-seen granite monument, standing on the ground rendered memorable by the battle of Bunker's Hill. A little stretch of the vision to the north of this colossal structure are the cities of Malden and Somerville, and the towns of Everett, Arlington, and many others. Casting our eye to the left of the above-named places, we see the tall chimneys of East Cambridge, showing enterprise in the manufacturing business.

To the north of where we now stand is the seat of learning named in honor of John Harvard, with the numerous buildings belonging to the same, while farther on to the westward may be seen the tower and cemetery of Mount Auburn, and the tall chimney of the United States Arsenal at Watertown, from whence, if it be near sunset, we may hear the gun and see the smoke of the powder. To the north of this eminence, in the distant view may be seen the snow-capped White Mountains of New Hampshire rising majestically, also the towering "Monadnock" is distinctly visible, while to the west in solitary grandeur is the lofty "Wachusett." From this elevation over forty church spires may be counted. And while we have named some of the many distant views, we will mention a few of those near at hand. With the exception of the rocky conglomerate ledge at Roxbury, there are but few of the rough, ragged rocks or barren cliffs in this vicinity, but large, regular rolling swells of land, all crowned with verdure to their summits, while their slopes are covered with fruit-trees. The valleys between these hills are fertile, adorned with grass and grain of every kind, and flowers of every hue; gentle rills wind through the meadows, marking their courses by a fresher green and a belt of luxuriant growth,—these all blend in perfect harmony, and present a prospect fraught with all that is rich in agriculture and pleasing in rural scenery. With this charming prospect is spread before you the presence of hundreds of handsome dwellings, many of them of the "Queen Anne" and Italian Villa style of architecture, and are embowered in groves of fruit and ornamental trees. The business portion of the town or village is a short distance to the southeast on the one hand, nestling at the foot of the mount, while on the east and north is the beautifully winding and circuitous Charles River, up which Winthrop and his party made explorations, also the rural settlements at Longwood. The rear slope of this hill contains a natural growth of woods, while the surrounding prospect is beautified by evergreen foliage of many a shade, orchards laden with fruit, vintages bearing the ripening clusters, and if it chance to be late in autumn, all is lighted by the rich tints of the maple, birch, beech, and elm. Another and remarkable feature of the view is its uninterrupted distinctness in the lines of avenues and streets, all of which are clearly defined, while to the ocean the picture expands with equal breadth and beauty. Within a few years, on one of the large buttonwood-trees, which were the last of the many trees remaining on the summit of this hill, was a tin signal used by the United States Coast Survey as a point from which they made their calculations. This drive over Summit Avenue was the favorite drive of Professor Agassiz. On his first visit to this place early in the afternoon, he was so charmed with the view that he remained till dark to take in the inexhaustible richness of the prospect; for four succeeding days he took the same drive, and ever afterwards it was his most frequent place of visitation.

President Eliot is often seen on horseback communing with nature alone on this grand height, and is said to have pronounced this one of the most delightful spots in the country.

One of our own townsmen, who has had an ample opportunity of observation, a gentleman of taste and culture, says, "In all my travels in Europe never have I seen so much loveliness as presents itself to the eye from the summit of Corey Hill.

Another has written: "To depict the beauties of this place, or to make manifest to others the inward emotions and ecstasies which well up in the bosom of every appreciative beholder, would be an attempt to portray that which is indescribable."

The air of the hill-tops is pure,
The water is sparkling and clear;
No home bath the city, I'm sure,
Like ours in the spring of the year.

The next prominent elevation is that well known as the Aspinwall Hill, of little less height than some of the other eminences in the town, but none the less beautiful. This land is on the southerly side of Washington Street, and extends from Cypress Street on the east to Beacon Street on the west, and to the railroad on the south, and embraces something like ninety acres of land, originally forming the Benjamin White farm.

In 1788, Dr. William Aspinwall purchased about forty acres of the highest portion of the hill, and in 1803 erected the mansion-house on the same, now occupied by a grandson of the doctor, of the same name. The view from this mansion commands a fine landscape picture for miles around, and although not as high as some others, the scenery is delightful. Recent enterprise is developing portions of this hill, by building superior streets and laying out the lands for residences, which we notice are now coming into market through the Aspinwall Land Company, an association organized for the purpose of placing some of the best land, for the erection of fine buildings, to be found in the town. The surface of this hill is well covered with wood, consisting of the sturdy oak, chestnut, and walnut.

Fisher's Hill, sometimes called Henshaw Hill, is two hundred and forty feet high, and is near the corner of Brighton and Boylston Streets, has a fine broad top, from which the view of the surrounding country is exceedingly elegant, and on account of the elevation and near proximity to the town, the Brookline Water-Works have erected a reservoir for the supplying water to her citizens. The ease with which the ascent may be made by carriage to the summit of this hill makes it a place of resort for pleasure-driving.

Among the lesser heights of the town may be mentioned "Bradley's" Hill, formerly called "Walley's" Hill, from Thomas Walley, who resided near the corner of Cypress and Walnut Streets. Capt. Bradley purchased this property about 1820, and erected upon the same several small tenement-houses, or bought and removed thither old houses, till the settlement became notorious. Our readers will not forget the "Sham Meeting-House" which he erected on the highest part of the hill, in which Capt. Bradley would imitate church worship from an old pulpit which he had, and from which he would hold forth on the Sabbath to a base crowd, and generally winding up the service by treating "all around." This church, so called, was an old barn, with a spire erected on the same, so that a stranger would at once suppose it to be a church, while it was only a carpenter-shop. In this kind of oddity Mr. Bradley delighted. Just previous to his death a Mr. Hart purchased the premises and removed the buildings to other localities, and the land now belongs to the "Goddard Heirs." This is a delightful spot of land, and will no doubt eventually be used for elegant residences. It lies just south of the railroad and Aspinwall Hill.

A short distance to the southwest of the last-named locality is another high spot of land called "Fairmount," situated on the south side of Dudley Street, and on the southerly side of the old Boston reservoir. The prospect from this hill, like all the hills in Brookline, is fine, but quite limited in comparison with many of the higher hills. The north side of this is covered with residences, and there are more fine locations here to be found.

To the north of the village of Brookline, and near to the village of "Allston," is an elevation known as "Babeock Hill," on which is a mansion-house, which has formerly been occupied as a private residence, where at one time Holmes Hinckley, Esq., of the "Boston Locomotive-Works," had his home, and later occupied by Shadrach Robinson and the Hon. Alanson W. Beard, late collector of the port of Boston, but is now a hotel, known as the "Hawthorne House."

Rivers and Ponds.—The town of Brookline is well watered by numerous small streams, some of which are not of sufficient size to be dignified by the distinctive name of a river. The principal stream is the well-known "Charles River," which formed the north boundary of the town previous to the change of the line between Boston and Brookline in 1855. This river, which has been called "Massachusetts,"—the Indian's name of which was "Quinobequin,"—rises in Hopkinton and Milford, and flows through the towns of Bellingham, Franklin, Medway, Medfield, Sherburne, Natick, Dover, Dedham, Needham, Newton, Weston, Waltham, Watertown, Brighton, Brookline, Cambridge, and Charlestown, to Boston Harbor. The tide extends up about four miles from Boston to Watertown. It is an exceedingly circuitous river, encircling in its course the larger part of the city of Newton, the centre of its channel forming the boundary line on the north, west, and south of that city. The falling off from its natural direction at Dedham, and leaving one-third of the water to continue a route seemingly concordant with its general course, is a very extraordinary circumstance in its nature, and such as seldom occurs in the history of rivers. By this phenomenon the towns of Brookline, Boston, Brighton, Newton, Roxbury, Dorchester, and a strip from the towns of Dedham and Watertown, form an island, or rather are circumscribed by the waters of Charles River, Mother Brook, Neponset River, and Boston Harbor. In one portion of this river it is so singularly circuitous that in passing from Dover to Sherburne over its bed in a straight line to its estuary or outlet is fourteen miles, while, taken by the serpentine course of its water, it measures thirty-eight and a half miles.

The next in order for size and importance is the well-known "Muddy River," having its source as an outlet for "Jamaica Pond" and "Ward's Pond," in Roxbury, and the ground around Chestnut Street, running in a northerly and northeasterly direction into the "Back Bay," sometimes called "Charles River Bay," the centre of the stream forming the boundary line between Roxbury (Boston) and Brookline. The early settlement of the locality called "Muddy River" was named from the fact that this river was naturally muddy, owing to its peculiar location. At one time in the history of the early inhabitants there were two landings on this stream, known as "Cotton Landing" and "Aspinwall's Dock," where bricks and wood were landed. In order to a proper understanding as to how these docks were of use, the reader must bear in mind that the course of navigation was unimpeded up this channel as far as the bridge near the old railroad station.

Another small stream commences in the vicinity of Chestnut Hill Reservoir, and following the line of the New York and New England Railroad in an easterly direction, it empties into Muddy River near the works of the Brookline Gas Company. A small creek has its rise near W. B. Cowan's farm and the vicinity of Warren Street, running in a northerly direction, and between the old reservoir belonging to the city of Boston, and Fairmount, and so on to the last-named stream, near Cypress Street Station.

The next stream has its origin in the easterly border of Brighton District, and follows in an easterly direction through the farms of the late James Bartlett and Deacon Thomas Griggs, but a short distance north of Washington and School Streets, and through the land of Aspinwall, where it enters Muddy River, just south of "Aspinwall Avenue."

There is also a small creek starting in the low ground near Beacon Street, in the late Marshal Stearn's (now William Stearn's) land, and running northerly to "Swallow Pond," so called, at the corner of Freeman and Essex Streets, and from thence on to Charles River, into which it empties a short distance west of "Cottage Farm Station."

Another stream rises in the low ground around Hammond Street, and running southerly of "Holyhood Cemetery," and uniting with the waters leading from "Hammond's Pond" at the southwest corner or outlet of the pond, and running southerly through the meadows to the west corner of Brookline, where there was a sufficient accumulation of water at Newton Street, in early days, to drive a water-wheel in the saw-mill of Erosamon Drew, on the dividing line between Newton and Brookline; thence passing on through what is well known as "Bald Pate Meadows," through the south part of Newton by Palmer's, through "Brook Farm" to Charles River, near "Cow Island." This stream was known as "Pond Brook," or "Palmer Brook."

A small stream known as "Smelt Brook," having its source in the northeasterly corner of Brighton District, and then running northerly across Brighton Avenue and the Albany Railroad, it empties into Charles River. This forms the boundary line between Brookline and Brighton at the extreme northwest corner.

Ponds.—There are but three sheets of water in the town, viz.: the original "Boston Reservoir," on Boylston Street, the "Brookline Reservoir," on the summit of "Fisher's Hill," and one pond known as "Swallow Pond," sometimes called "Hall's Pond," where it is said they have never been able to find any bottom.

Trees and Shrubs.—William Wood's description in the earliest settlement of New England well describes this section:

"Trees both in hills and plaines, in plenty be,
The long liv'd Oake, and mournful Cypris tree,
Skie-towering Pines, and Chesnuts coated rough,
The lasting Cedar, with the Walnut tough;
The rosin-dropping Firr for masts in use;
The boatman seeke for oares, light, neat grown, Sprowse,
The brittle Ash, the ever-trembling Aspes,
The broad-spread Elme, whose concave harbors waspes;
The water-spongie Alder, good for nought,
Small Elderne by th' Indian Fletchers sought,
The knotty Maple, pallid Birtech, Hawthornes,
The Hornbound tree that to be cloven scornes,
Which, from the tender Vine oft takes its spouse,
Who twinds embracing armes about his boughes.
Within this Indian Orchard fruits be some,
The ruddie Cherrie and the jettie Plumbe,
Snake murdering Hazell, with sweet Saxaphrage,
Whose Spurnes in beere allays hot fevers rage,
The diars [dyers] Shumach, with more trees there be,
That are both good to use and rare to see."

Boundaries.—In 1632 considerable accessions were made to the town of New Town (now Cambridge) by the arrival of Rev. Mr. Hooker and his company, numbering forty-seven in all, who removed from Mount Wollaston by order of court. They removed to New Town with the impression that New Town would be the metropolis of the colony. In May, 1634, scarcely three years from their beginning, they complained of straitness for want of land, especially meadow, and requested leave to look for enlargement and removal, which was granted. Messengers were sent in different directions to explore, and, from the flattering accounts about Connecticut, on the 4th day of September they asked leave to remove to Connecticut. The question of their removal occupied the attention of the court for several days; the principal reasons for their removal were want of accommodations for their cattle. "So as they were not able to maintain their ministers, nor could they receive any more of their friends to help them."

After hearing the argument the court put it to vote upon the question of their removal to Connecticut, and of the deputies fifteen were in favor of their departure and ten against it. The Governor and two assistants were in favor of granting their request, and the deputy and all the other assistants opposed to their removal. Upon this state of things there grew up great differences of opinion between the Governor, the deputies, and the assistants. And in consequence of the disagreement the whole court agreed to keep a day of humiliation to seek the Lord, which was done, Rev. Mr. Cotton preaching the sermon from the text Haggai ii. 4: "Upon the strength of the magistracy, ministry, and the people," after which things went on smoothly, and the congregation at New Town (now Cambridge) came and accepted of the enlargement of land that had previously been tendered to them by Boston and Watertown.

The enlargements of land granted by Boston and Watertown to quiet the people in New Town (now Cambridge) were what is now Brookline, Brighton, and Newton, excepting that portion which had previously been assigned to individuals.

These grants, or donations, of land to New Town were made upon condition that Mr. Hooker's company should not remove, as appears by the following, which is a true copy of the record,—Sept. 25, 1634:

"Also it is ordered, that the ground aboute Muddy Ryver, belonging to Boston, & vsed by the inhabitants thereof, shall hereafter belonge to Newe-Towne, the wood & Timber thereof groweing & to be groweing to be reserved to the inhabitants of Boston, provided, & it is the meaneing of the Court, that if Mr. Hooker & the congregaon nowe settled here shall remove hence, that then the aforesaid meadowe ground shall returne to Waterton, & the ground att Muddy Ryver to Boston."

After the enlargement of New Town was settled (in April, 1635), Ensign William Jennison was chosen to set out the bounds between New Town and Roxbury, whose report is as follows:

"The line between Roxbury and New Town is laid to run southwest from Muddy River near that place called 'Nowell's Bridge' a tree marked on four sides, and from the mouth of the River to that place; the south side is for Roxbury, and the north for Newtown.

"WILLIAM JENNISON."

This line was intended to carry out the gift of Boston to New Town, by which the whole of Muddy River, more or less, became a part of New Town, and so remained nearly two years. In the early part of the summer of 1636, Mr. Hooker, Mr. Stone, and about one hundred men, women, and children, composing the whole of Mr. Hooker's congregation, left New Town, and traveled one hundred miles through a trackless wilderness to Connecticut. They arrived safely at Hartford, and laid the foundation of that city.

When Rev. Mr. Hooker and his congregation removed to Hartford, the proviso that had been placed in the grant of land to them—viz., that the lands should revert to Boston if they remove from thence—took effect immediately, and a committee was appointed to settle the boundaries between New Town and Muddy River, who made the following report in April, 1636:

"We whose names are underwritten, being appointed by the Court to set out the bounds of the New Town upon Charles River, do agree that the bounds of the town shall run from the marked tree, by Charles River, on the Northwest side of the Roxbury bounds, one and a half miles North east, and from thence three miles northwest, and so from thence five miles Southwest; and on the Southwest side of Charles River, from the Southeast of Roxbury bounds, to run four miles on a Southwest line, reserving the proprieties to several persons, granted by special order of the Court.

"WILLIAM SPENCER.

"NICHOLAS DANFORTH.

"WILLIAM JENNISON."

The above description was undoubtedly intended to restore the territory of Muddy River to Boston, or as much of it as the committee judged expedient.

At the General Court, held March 2, 1638,

"It is ordered that New Town shall henceforward be called Cambridge."

After the changing of the name of the town the report of the above-mentioned committee—Spencer, Danforth, and Jennison—was not satisfactory, and the towns of Boston, Muddy River, and Cambridge appointed committees Dec. 20, 1639, to settle the boundary lines.

Here follows the doings of the said committee:

"We whose names are underwritten being appointed by the towns to which we belong, to settle the bounds between Boston (Muddy River) and Cambridge, have agreed that the partition shall run from Charles River, up along the channel of Smelt Brook to a marked tree upon the brink of said Brook, near the first and lowest reedy meadow; and from that tree, in a straight line, to the great red oak, formerly marked by agreement, at the foot of the great hill, on the northernmost end thereof; and from the said great red oak to Dedham Line, by the Trees marked by agreement of both parties this 2. S. 1640 (August 2, 1640).

"THOMAS OLIVER,

"WILLIAM COLLEBRON,

"For Boston.

"RICHARD CHAMPNEY,

"JOHN BRIDGE,

"GREGORY STONE,

"JOSEPH ISAAC,

"THOMAS MARETT,

"For Cambridge."

The boundaries of the town of Brookline have, for the most part, remained as originally laid out by the different committees from the adjoining towns, and as agreed upon in 1639 and 1640. The principal changes that have been made were on the easterly and northerly borders of the town, adjoining Roxbury, Boston; these have been varied several times. The first of any account was made in 1824, when a committee was chosen to establish the boundary line between Boston and Brookline. This committee consisted of the mayor and aldermen of Boston, and the selectmen of Brookline, who proceeded to view the premises, and agreed upon the bounds. Upon the 22d day of February, 1825, the Legislature ratified said agreement.

The next change made was by the Legislature in 1844, the act having been signed Feb. 24, 1844.

On account of the annexation of Brighton to Boston, it became desirable that Boston should be joined to her own territory in Brighton. For this purpose Brookline relinquished a portion of her land on the northerly borders of the town, adjoining Charles River, as appears by the following act of the Legislature:

"AN ACT to annex a portion of the Town of Brookline to the City of Boston.

"Be it enacted, &c., as follows:

"SECTION 1. That part of the town of Brookline contained within the line described as follows: beginning at a point in the centre of the channel of Charles River on the boundary line between the town of Brookline and the city of Cambridge, where the westerly line of St. Mary's Street, in the town of Brookline, extended in a northerly direction, would intersect the said boundary line; thence running southwardly by the westerly line of said St. Mary's Street extended to the southerly line of Brighton Avenue; thence continuing in the same direction by the westerly line of St. Mary's Street, to the northerly line of Ivy Street; thence turning a little and running south-easterly by the south-westerly line of St. Mary's Street, and by the continuation of the same to the present boundary line between Boston and Brookline in the centre of the channel of Muddy River; thence easterly following said boundary line to the present boundary line in the centre of the channel of Charles River; thence by the centre of said channel of Charles River to the point of beginning,—with all the inhabitants and estates therein, is hereby set off from the town of Brookline and annexed to the city of Boston, and shall constitute a part of the sixth ward thereof, until a new division of wards shall be made; and such territory so annexed shall form part of the county of Suffolk: provided, that the said territory and the inhabitants thereon, set off as aforesaid, shall be holden to pay all such taxes as are already assessed or ordered to be assessed by said town of Brookline for the present year, in the same manner as if this act had not been passed; and provided, further, that all paupers who have gained a settlement in said town of Brookline, by a settlement gained or derived within said territory, shall be relieved or supported by said city of Boston, in the same manner as if they had a legal settlement in said city of Boston.

"SECTION 2. The said inhabitants hereby set off to the city of Boston shall continue to be a part of Brookline for the purpose of electing state officers and members of the executive council, senators and representatives to the general court, representatives to Congress, and electors of president and vice-president of the United States, until the next decennial census shall be taken, or until another apportionment shall be made; and it shall be the duty of the board aldermen of said city of Boston to make a true list of the persons residing on the territory hereby annexed to said city, qualified to vote at such elections, and post up the same in said territory, and correct the same as required by law, and deliver the same to the selectmen of said town of Brookline seven days at least before any such election; and the same shall be taken and used by the selectmen of Brookline for such election, in the same manner as if it had been prepared by themselves.

"SECTION 3. This act shall not be construed to divest or deprive the town of Brookline of any legal rights of drainage which it now possesses.

"SECTION 4. This act shall not take effect until accepted by the city council of Boston.

"Approved, June 18, 1870."

Again, in 1872, the Legislature was called upon to change the course of Muddy River for the purpose of public improvement, and for sanitary uses, etc. This act was approved April 27, 1872.

Geology of the Town.—The geological formation of Brookline is not devoid of interest. Its principal features are of the amygdaloid or conglomerate rock, so common in Eastern Massachusetts. "Brochant" describes this rock, so common in this vicinity, as a kind of 'wacke,' a substance intermediate between basalt and clay, resembling indurated clay. A range of hills and ledge of this conglomerate species of rock extends from Chestnut Hill on the west to Cohasset, and towns on the South Shore.

The rocky portions of Brookline are of the gray-wacke formation, and of moderate elevation.

Graywacke is sometimes beautifully amygdaloidal, —that is, it contains numerous rounded or almond-shaped nodules of some other mineral. Such is the formation in Brookline. These rocks are commonly called "plum-pudding stone."

In the westerly portion of the town, near where the ancient saw-mill formerly stood on Newton Street, and also on Hammond Street, are some beautiful specimens of "diorite," or greenstone. It is found in rounded masses and in small quantity. In that section of the town near the New Jerusalem Church on High Street, are occasionally found some clear, fine specimens of transparent quartz rock.

In the extreme westerly portion of the town there is some slate rock, but not enough to make any note of, while just over the line is a large amount of that kind of rock, near Newton Centre.

The graywacke stone, common in this town, furnishes a coarse stone only fitted for a common wall; but sometimes its stratification is so regular, and its grain so fine, that it is much used for underpinning stepstones, etc. Fine specimens of this variety are quarried in Brighton near the line of Brookline, and in the ledge at Parker Hill.

In the vicinity of Boston the graywacke occupies a basin, of which the Blue Hills form a southern boundary, the porphyry hills of Lynn and Malden, a northern, and the greenstone ranges of Weston and Waltham a western, boundary. The argillaceous slate connected with the graywacke is all found along the northern and southern sides of this basin, while the central portion of this basin, including Brookline and Roxbury, are occupied by conglomerates and graywacke.

Although this rock is prominent in the limits of Boston Highlands, this rock in no place rises to anything like mountain ridges, and for the most part it occupies extensive plains or gently undulating ground. Diluvium also is so abundant over every part of it that it is only occasionally, and at distant intervals, to be seen. Among these, the most noticeable in Brookline, and perhaps the best and most marked, is in the vicinity of the First Parish Church, where there are some fine samples, which are plainly to be seen. The next best is the ledge beyond the dwelling-house of Timothy Corey, near to the line of Brighton, and so on through the southerly part of Brighton and Newton to Chestnut Hill.

On account of the low level, and the transported fragments spread over this rock in many places, it is difficult to ascertain its exact limits. But it is quite evident that it underlies nearly, if not all, of the surface of the town of Brookline and the immediate vicinity to the depth of seventy-five to one hundred feet at least. The bed-rock of this conglomerate mass may be seen in the gravel-bank at Babcock Hill, on Harvard Street, owned by John Gibbs and others. There may be seen one of the clearest proofs of the glacial drift in the striated surface of these rocks, showing it to have been the original surface of the rock previous to the deposits of the drift period. The material of which this hill is composed is not very different from the other hills in the town, but is a confused mass of pebbles, clay, and bowlders, with some sand.

It is pretty well decided by those competent to judge, that at some time in ages past the whole of this section of country was covered with ice to the depth of from one to two thousand feet, hiding all trace of the earth's surface, and that this field of ice crept over the same in a northwest and southeasterly direction. This mass of ice covered the highest hills, and in its course took everything with it that could possibly be moved, bearing in its folds large bowlders and various débris, polishing and grooving the tops of rocky hills in its onward course to the sea. As this mass of ice melted, the accumulation of stone and rubbish of every description that adhered to the same was deposited wherever it chanced to be, and oftentimes in large masses. The hills of Brookline and Boston also are the results of these deposits. If we penetrate to the centre of Corey, Aspinwall, or the other hills near by, we should find a mass of clay, pebbles, and bowlders mixed in the most confused manner, the matter remaining to this day just where it was left ages ago. Around these hills, and near the central core of till, we find beds of sand, clay, and coarse gravel. The lowlands in the vicinity of the marshes, and elevated somewhat, are mostly sand and gravel, from the washing and waste of the bowlder clay. The black peat, or soils of the low ground near the brooks and rivers, are of a more recent formation, and are composed of vegetable matter.

Description of the Land.—The soil of Brookline and vicinity has from the early settlement of the country been of excellent quality for agricultural and horticultural purposes, as may be seen from the following letter, written in 1629, one year previous to the settlement of Boston, by Rev. Mr. Higginson to his friends in London :

"I have been careful to report nothing but what I have seen with my own eyes. The land at Charles River is as fat, black earth as can be seen anywhere. Though all the country be, as it were, a thick wood for the general, yet in divers places there is much ground cleared by the Indians. It is thought here is good clay to make bricks, and Tyles, and earthen pots, as need be. At this instant we are sitting a brick kiln on work.

"The fertility of the soil is to be admired at, as appeareth in the abundance of grass that groweth everywhere, both very thick, very long, and very high, in divers places.

"But it groweth very wildely, with a great stalk; and a broad and ranker blade; because it never had been eaten by cattle, nor mowed by a scythe, and seldom trampled on by foot. It is scarce to be believed how our kine and goats, horses and hoggs, do thrive and prosper here and like well of this country. Our turnips, parsnips, and carrots, are here both bigger and sweeter than is ordinary to be found in England. Here are stores of pumpions, coweumbers, and other things of that nature. Also divers excellent pot herbs, strawberries, pennyroyal, wintersaverie, sorrell, brookelime, liverwort, and watercreesses; also leekes and onions are ordinarie, and divers physical herbs. Here are plenty of single damask roses, very sweet; also, mulberries, plumbs, raspberries, currants, chessnuts, filberds, walnuts, smalnuts, hurtleberries, and hawes of white-thorne, near as good as cherries in England. They grow in plenty here."

The soil in this vicinity is mostly composed of the graywacke, of a deep brown color, and is among the best in the State, as it contains more calcareous matter than the slate variety, decomposes more readily, and furnishes the best soil found over this formation of rock.

We judge that all the land in this vicinity was fertile and well wooded upon the arrival of the English settlers, as we find the following statement as early as 1633, that there was "good ground, large timber, and a store of marsh-land and meadow." Here also was "arable ground and meadow."

While the land in most parts of the town is well adapted for the purpose above named, there is also a portion of country in the extreme southwest border of the town which has not been of much use, and any one visiting the city and riding for pleasure would be surprised to find within a circle of six miles from the State-House a place of such uncultivated territory.

To the west of Newton Street there is an extensive tract of land which is comparatively an unknown region. Once heavily timbered, the original forest was cut away, and no heavy timber has since been allowed to grow there, yet it is an unreclaimed wild, covered with birches, alders, red maples, and many trees of larger growth. Bears lingered there long after they were exterminated elsewhere, and foxes, muskrats, minks, owls, and other wild game have until recently, and do perhaps still, tempt adventurous sportsmen to tramp through these rocky and swampy fastnesses.

The land lying hereabouts on both sides of the street, both in Brookline and in Newton, to the extent of several hundred acres, was in the year 1650 conveyed by Nicholas Hogdon, of Boston and Brookline, to Thomas Hammond and Vincent Druce. John Druce, his son, received it by will from his father.

Erosamon Drew, whose name is spelled in six different ways in old documents, came from Ireland in his youth. He married Bethiah, Vincent Druce's daughter. The elder Druce, who seems to have been a wealthy man for those times, left his son-in-law considerable property.

A most curious and elaborate old deed, dated in 1683, conveys a tract of sixty-four acres of woodland for fifty-five pounds to Erosamon Drew, from "Vincent Drusse and Elizabeth his wife," in which an imperfectly scrawled V for his name, and E for hers, are their only attempts at penmanship.

John Druce was a soldier in Capt. Prentice's company, a troop of horse, in King Philip's war, and in July, 1675, was mortally wounded in the battle near Swanzezy. He was brought home, and died in his own house; he was but thirty-four years of age. His son John, who was but a child then, was probably the father of the doctor who settled in Wrentham.

An examination of the new map of the town will show a slight curving bit of roadway near Newton line, diverging from the street on the left, and joining it again at Newton line.

The passer-by upon the street would scarcely notice the grassy entrance to this curve, and perhaps fail to observe, unless attention was called to it, an old roof, to be seen almost on a level with the street, below the brow of the hill. Yet this curved bit of road was the original street or old road dipping down into the valley, for what good reason nobody now living knows, unless it was because down here was "Erosamond Drew's saw-mill," and there must be a way to get to it.

A brook, which is the natural outlet of Hammond's Pond, flows through the swampy lot opposite and under the road. It is nearly concealed by the rank bushes and young trees of this swamp, which was once an open meadow, and was flowed at certain seasons of the year, by which means water-power enough was gained to run the saw-mill.

Below the level of the road, down the declivity of the hill, and standing endwise to the now deserted and grassy old roadway, is a low house¹ (the roof of which was above mentioned) falling into ruins, though still inhabited. It is not less than two hundred years old, and perhaps more. This was Erosamon Drew's house, and over the brook close to it stood his saw-mill, and here all the sawing of boards for miles around was accomplished. The owner of the saw-mill was evidently a thrifty and good citizen, as he held various offices of trust in the town, being one of the selectmen, assessor, a member of the grand jury, and one of the committee on building the first church.

There were three sons of Erosamon and Bethiah Drew, who died young, or at least unmarried.

Ann, the only child of this parentage who lived to marry, was born in 1683. In 1710 she became the wife of Samuel White, Esq., and was the Madam Ann White of whom an account was given.

Ann White, the only daughter of this marriage, became the wife of Henry Sewall, son of the chief justice of that name.

One of her sons married into the Sparhawk family, of Cambridge. There are also descendants of one of the daughters still living bearing the name of Wolcott and Ridgway. From one of the sons comes a branch of the Goddard family, so that there are still lineal descendants of Erosamon Drew in existence.

An old deed of Isaac Hammond in 1693 conveys land bordering on the saw-mill lot to Erosamon Drew. By another deed in April, 1731, Drew conveyed ten acres of his land to his son-in-law, Samuel White,

¹ Since destroyed by fire.

"by reason and in consideration of the Love, goodwill and affection which he hath and doth bear toward him," which was certainly a very substantial proof of his satisfaction with his daughter's marriage.

This deed was witnessed by James Allen, the first minister of this town, and "hugh scot;" but Erosamon Drew's signature, alas, was only "his mark,"—a round scrawl, for he could not write his name.

The deed was acknowledged before "Samuel Sewall, J. Pacis," and rounds off in sonorous Latin, "Anno Regnis Regis Georgius Magna Brittanica quarto," etc.

In August of the same year by another deed he gave his house and all his movable property to his son-in-law, wife, and two children for his being "helpful to him in his old age." In fact, from 1711 to this late date he seems to have been at short intervals bequeathing all his worldly goods to this beloved son-in-law. The gravestones of all the Drews are still to be seen in Newton Cemetery. The last of the Drews was gone before the middle of the last century, and large portions had been sold off the Druce and Hammond property and that part of Samuel White's land which he inherited from his wife's father.

In the Revolutionary times this great tract which still lies wild, was in the hands of Tories, who, it is said, secured some of King George's cannon and hid them in the thick woods, intending, when the right time came, to use them for the royal cause. But that time never came, and the Tories were forced to escape to the British provinces, where they stayed till their property was confiscated. It was sold and divided among many owners, and so remains. The old saw-mill came into the hands of one of the Jackson's, and afterwards of Edward Hall, who formerly was a blacksmith on Washington Street.

For many years Erosamon Drew's old house was called "the huckleberry tavern," because the tenant then occupying it was skillful in making a kind of wine from the abundant huckleberries of the surrounding pastures, and on election days and other festive occasions the scattering residents of the adjacent parts of Brookline and Newton often resorted thither for the mild stimulants of society and huckleberry wine. The old saw-mill was taken down about thirty years since, and time, with the slow fingers of decay, is taking down the old house. It was a curious old place, the roof behind sloping almost to the ground.¹ A part of the old flume and some of the stone underpinning of the saw-mill are still to be seen.

The extensive meadows through which the brook flows, and which were once rich with cranberry-vines, are now all bush-grown. The old road down which teams drew heavy logs and took away the finished boards is so narrow, rough, and winding as to be almost unsafe. At the side of the road, and near the end of the house, is a little patch fenced with brush, which was every summer blooming and gay with purple amaranths and other well-kept flowers, which lent a bit of brightness to the lonesome and otherwise neglected spot. The picturesque old place is a fit one for the location of the scenes of a poem or a novel.

Title to the Soil.—When the success of the plantation at Plymouth had become well known throughout a large portion of England, it aroused a great interest in the cause of colonization, and preparations for emigration were made in earnest. Between 1620 and 1630 the number was small that came to New England, and only a few settlements were made.

In 1628 an energetic movement was made, having in view the settlement of Massachusetts. A patent² was granted to Henry Rosewell and others, conveying land lying between a line drawn three miles north of the Merrimac and a line drawn three miles south of Charles River, and extending east and west from the Atlantic to the Western Ocean. In the following year (1629) the number was enlarged, a royal charter obtained creating a corporation under the name of the "Governor and Company of the Massachusetts Bay in New England." The territory of Brookline, then a part of Boston, lies within this grant, under this patent.

The jurisdiction over and general property in the soil within the limits named in the above royal grant was conferred by the charter given to the Company of the Massachusetts Bay, while at the same time it was conceded by the colonial government that the native Indians had a prior right. In other words, the power given in the English charter was little more than a right or permission to purchase of the natives.

The usual course of proceeding in such cases was to obtain, from the chief or sachem of the tribes inhabiting the territory wanted, a deed of release, which was based upon such consideration as might be agreed upon, the General Court confirming their title, or such conditions as they thought best.

Thus we find, soon after the arrival of the early settlers with their charter, they commenced negotiations with the natives, and procured a deed of release from them, signed by "Chickatabut," chief of the Massachusetts tribe, the evidence of which we find in the following confirmatory deed given, over fifty years after their first settlement, thus establishing the fact that the same was honorably purchased and amicably arranged :

¹ Destroyed by fire a few years since.

² The original document is among the archives of the State at the State-House, Boston, with the following indorsement: "A perpetuity granted to Henry Rosewell and others of parte of Newe England, in America. Wolsely."

INDIAN DEED.

"To all to whome these prests. shall come. I Charles Josias, ALIAS JOSIAS WAMPATUCK, sone and Heire of Josias Wampatuck, late Sachem of the Indians Inhabiting the Massachusetts in New England, and Grandson of Chickatabut, the former Sachem Send greeting :—

"FORASMUCH as I am Informed, and Well Assured from Several Antient Indians, as well those of my Council as others, that upon the first Coming of the English to Sitt Downe and Settle in these parts of New England, my Above-named Grandfather, Chickatabut, the Chiefe Sachem, by and with the Advice of his Councill, for encouragement thereof, upon Divers good causes and Considerations him thereunto moving. DID give, grant, Sell, alienate convey and confirme unto the English Planters and Settlers, respectively and to their Severall and respective heires and Assignes forever. ALL THAT NECK, TRACT OR PARCEL OF LAND, seittuate, Lyeing, and being, within the MATTACHUSETTS COLONY, in Order to their Settling and Building a Towne there: now knowne by the Name of BOSTON, as it is Invironed and Compassed by the Sea, or Salt Water, on the Northerly, Easterly, and westerly sides and by the Line of the Towne of Roxbury on the Southerly side, with all the Rivers, harbours, Bayes, Creekes, Coves, flatts and appurtenances whatsoever thereunto belonging. As also severall other outlands belonging unto the s^d Towne on the Southerly and Easterly sides of CHARLES RIVER. And the Island Called DEER ISLAND, Lyeing about Two Leagues Easterly from the said Towne of Boston, betweene Pudding-Point Gutt and the Broad Sound, soe called, s^d Island containinge One Hundred and Sixty or Two Hundred Acres of Land more or less; with the priviledges and appurtenances thereunto belonging. WHICH, SAID NECK & LANDS have since been Distributed and granted out among themselves into particular Alotments and other Conveniences, and given, Alienated, and Transferred, to and from one another, Having been peaceably and quietly possessed, used, Occupied and Enjoyed, for the Space of about fifty and five years last past by the said first Grantees y^r heires Successours and Assigns. And now stand quietly and peaceably possessed thereof at this day.

"WHEREFORE, I the say^d Charles Josias, alias Josias Wampatuck, Sachem and William Habaton, Robert Momentauge, and Abawton, Senior, my Councillors (by and wth the allowance and advice of William Stoughton and Joseph Dudley, Esq^{rs} my Prochain Amy's and Guardian's), as well for the reasons and Considerations abovementioned as for and in Consideration of a Valuable Summe of Money to me and them in hand well and truly paid by Elisha Cooke, Elisha Hutchinson Esq^{rs}, Mess^{rs} Samuel Shrimpton, John Joyliffe, Simon Lynde, John Saffin, Edward Wyllys, Daniel Turel Sen^r, Henry Allen, John Faireweather, Timothy Prout Sen^r, and Theophilus Ffrary, of Boston, aforesaid, for and in the behalf of themselves and the rest of the Proprietated Inhabitants of y^e towne of Boston, above-said the receipt of which s^d summe of Money as full and Lawfull Consideration, wee do hereby acknowledge to have received; and thereof, and of every parte, and parcel thereof, doe fully acquitt and discharge the s^d Elisha Cooke, Elisha Hutchinson, Samuel Shrimpton, John Joyliffe, Simon Lynde, John Saffin, Edward Wyllys, Daniel Turel Sen^r, Henry Allen, John faireweather, Timothy Prout Sen^r, and Theophilus Ffrary, and every of them, their and every of their heires, Executors, and Administrators, & Assignes, forever by these Presents. HAVE & hereby Doe for the further Confirmation and Ratification of the s^d Guift, grante, bargain, or sale of the s^d Grand Sachem, Chickatabut, fully, freely, and willingly, approve, ratifie, Establish, Enfeoffe, and confirme the same; and Doe also fully and Absolutely remise, release, and for ever quitt claime unto the said Elisha Cooke, Elisha Hutchinson, Samuel Shrimpton, John Joyliffe, Simon Lynde, John Saffin, Edward Wyllys, Daniel Turel, Sen^r, Henry Allen, John Faireweather, Timothy Prout, Sen^r and Theophilus Ffrary, their heires, and assignes respectively forever, Soe farr as their owne severall and respective rights, and Interests, are or may bee: And farther, for and in behalf of the rest of the Proprietated Inhabitants of s^d Town of Boston and precincts thereof Severally and their severall and respective heires and assignes, for ever. According to the Severall Interest, rights title and propriety which each person, respectively hath right unto, and now Standeth seized, and possessed of, ALL THE AFORES^d NECK & TRACT OF LAND, now called and knowne by the name of the Towne of BOSTON, and all other Lands whatsoever, within the s^d Township or precincts thereof, Easterly and Southerly of and from Charles River; with all and every the Houseing, Buildings, and Improvements thereupon, and on every part and parcell thereof; And the Island afores^d called Deer Island, and the buildings thereon, with all Harbours, Streams, Coves, flatts, waters, Rivers, Immunities, rights, benefitts, advantages, Libertyes, priviledges, hereditaments and appurtenances whatsoever, to all and every y^e aforementioned premises belonging or in any manner or wise appurtening: or therewth, heretofore or now, used, occupied, or Enjoyed; Also all the Estate, right, title, interest-property, claime & demands of me the S^d Charles Josias, alias, Wampatuck, and of all and every of my before named Councillors, of in and to the same and every part parcel or member thereof. To HAVE AND TO HOLD, all and singular the abovementioned Lands, premises, and appurtenances and every parte and parcel thereof unto them the said Elisha Cooke, Elisha Hutchinson, Samuel Shrimpton, John Joyliffe, Simon Lynde, John Saffin, Edward Wyllys, Daniel Turel, Sen^r Henry Allen, John faireweather, Timothy Prout Sen^r and Theophilus ffrary, their heires and assignes respectively forever for and in behalf of themselves, So far as their owne Severall and Respective rights and interests are or may bee therein; And further for and in behalf of y^e severall and respective proprietated Inhabitants of y^e s^d Towne and precincts thereof, their Severall and respective heires and assignes forever, According to the Interest, title, and proprietary, w^{ch} each person hath, or may have just right unto; and Standeth now Seized & possessed of; And to their onely proper use benefit and behoofe forever. FREELY, PEACEABLY & QUIETLY without any manner of Reclaime Challenge or Contradiction of me the s^d Charles Josias alias Wampatuck and my above named Councillors or either or any of us our or either, or any of our heires, Executors, Administrators, or assignes and without any account, Reckoning, Answers Summe or Summes of money in time to come to be made, yielded paid or done. SOE THAT neither I the s^d Charles Josias alias Wampatuck, my Councillors, our or either of our heires, Executors, nor any others by from or under me, us or them or any of them shall or will by any wayes or meanes hereafter have aske, claime, challenge or demand, any Estate, right, title, or Interest of in or to y^e premisses; or any part, or parcel thereof. BUT, are and shall be utterly Excluded and forever Debarred from the same by vertue of these presents. AND I the said Charles Josias, alias Wampatuck, and Councillors afores^d for us and every of us, our and every of our heires Execut^{rs} Administrators and successors respectively. Doe hereby covenant promise grant and oblige unto ye aforementioned Grantees their heires Executors Administrators and assignes by these presents, do warrant maintaine and defend the aforementioned premises, all and every parte, and parcel thereof unto them the s^d Grantees their heires and assignes forever as aforesaid for and in behalfe of themselves, and others the Proprietated Inhabitants according to their respective rights and Interests; Against all and every person and persons whomsoever Lawfully claimeing or demanding the same or any parte and parcel thereof. AND at any time or times hereafter upon demand to give, pass, make full and ample release confirmation, and assurance of all and every the s^d premises, unto ye s^d Grantees, their heires and assignes to ye uses afores^d: and to doe and performe any other act or acts, device or devices in the Law necessary or requisite thereunto, as in Law or equity, can or may be devised, advised or required.—IN WITNESS whereof I s^d Charles Josias alias Josias Wampatuck,—William Hahaton—Robert Momentauge, and Ahawton Senr^r my Councillors, have hereunto Sett our hands and Seales ye Nineteenth day of March, Anno Domⁱ, One Thousand Six hundred Eighty and ffoure, 1684/5, Annoq RR^s Caroli Secundi Angliæ, &c XXXVII

“CHARLES A JOSIAS.
Signum

“Signed, Sealed and Delivered in presence of us.

“WILLIAM WILLIAMS

“E. LYDE.

“AHAWTON m SEN^r
Signum

“WILLEM HAHATO”.
his

“ROBERT S MOMENTAUGE. marke

{ five seals }

“Charles Josias & William Ahawton Jun^r in y^e Behalf of himself and his father Ahawton, Indians, Acknowledged y^e Aboves^d writing to be their vulluntary Act & Deed March 19th 1684, Coram

Ja^s Russell, Assis^t

“We underwritten Prochain Amyes and Guardians to Charles Josias, Sachem of the Massachusetts Do consent and approve of the Above s^d confirmation of title and release of clayme.

“WILLIAM STOUTON.

“JOSEPH DUDLEY.

“David, son & Heire of Sagamore George & in his right having some claym to deere lland doth hereby for Just Consideration, relinquish his right to the Town of Boston, of all his right & claym thereto and consents to y^e aboves^d Deed of Sale. As witness his hand & seal.

“In presence of us WILLIAM WILLIAMS.

“BENJAMIN DOWSE.

“Boston ffbruary 1st 1708. Received and Recorded with the Records of Deeds for the County of Suffolk Lib XXIV. to fol 101, et se:—

“pr ADDINGTON DAVENPORT, Regist^r.”

[Indorsed on the back] “Josias, Sachem & other Indians, Confirmation of the Town of Boston & Lands belonging. dat^d, March 1684.”

Indian History.

“There was a time when red men climbed these hills,
And wandered by these plains and rills;
Or rowed the light canoe along yon river,
Or rushed to conflict armed with bow and quiver,

Or, 'neath the forest leaves that o'er them hung,
They council held, or loud their war-notes sung.”

The very first mention of the name of the locality known as Muddy River in history informs us that there were Indians here at the time when the English settlers were coming over in 1632, and there is every reason to believe that the territory in and around Boston was at a much earlier period occupied by aborigines. These native occupants of the soil numbered about fifty thousand. They were divided into tribes, and each tribe subdivided into numerous smaller tribes. The Agawams occupied territory extending from the mouth of the Merrimac River to Cape Ann; the Wamesits, at the junction of the Concord and Merrimac Rivers, on the west side of the Merrimac, and on both sides of the Concord; the Nashuas, at Nashua; the Namaoskeags, at Amoskeag. The home of the Penacooks, or Pawtucket Indians, was in the Valley of the Merrimac and the contiguous region.

The Massachusetts tribe dwelt around Massachusetts Bay, and was under the government of the famous Chicatabut, who had under his command three thousand warriors. His dominion was bounded on the north and west by Charles River, and on the south extended as far as Weymouth and Canton, including this section. As before stated, these larger tribes were divided into numerous smaller divisions, and each had its sachem, or sagamore, kings and petty lords, each having a settlement of their own. It is supposed that one of these tribes occupied a secluded spot on a knoll in the centre of Longwood, then a primeval forest, and in the centre of the old Cedar Swamp, or Great Swamp, so called. On this spot the natives had about one-eighth of an acre of land, in square form, inclosed by palisades of cedar, around which was a ditch three feet in depth, and a parapet three feet in height, with an opening or gateway on each side, one of which was towards the swamp. Traces of this ancient fort were visible as late as 1845, which were removed by William Amory, Esq., the owner of the estate, who erected a beautiful residence near the same.

The following is an account of the Indian settlement by Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, as described in his address at the dedication of the new town hall, in Brookline, Feb. 22, 1873:

“Less than two years had thus passed since the birth, or certainly the baptism, of Boston, when the first recognition or mention of the locality in which we are interested to-day was entered in his journal by Governor Winthrop. That record, I think, is full of implication and suggestion as to the condition of the site on which we are now assembled, as well as in regard to the immediate circumstances and surroundings of the Massachusetts colony. Swarms of savages were still hovering around them. 'Ten sagamores and many Indians,' we are told, were assembled in this very neighborhood. A sagamore is second only to a sachem, or king of the tribe, and the titles are sometimes employed indiscriminately. Ten sagamores would thus imply a large number of warriors under them. They were evidently understood to be lying in ambush, the Governor's phrase being that our musketeers were dispatched 'to discover, etc.' John Underhill was the most trusted captain of that day, bearing very much the same relation to the Massachusetts colony which Miles Standish bore to the earlier but wholly distinct and independent Pilgrim colony at Plymouth. Twenty musketeers were sent with Capt. Underhill, more than twice the number which Miles Standish took with him when he was dispatched on a similar expedition ten years before, and when he achieved his grandest victory, or what is called his 'capital exploit.' Everything indicated danger, or certainly the strongest apprehension of danger, and before another week had elapsed, although this particular party of Indians had been 'broke up' or dispersed, we find Governor Winthrop recording the gravest reasons for suspecting that a conspiracy existed among the Narragansett men and the Neipnett men, under pretense of quarreling with each other, 'to cut us off to get our victuals and other substance.' And then the record proceeds: 'Upon this there was a Camp pitched at Boston in the night, to exercise the Soldiers against need might be; and Capt. Underhill (to try how they would behave themselves) caused an alarm to be given upon the quarters, which discovered the weakness of our people, who, like men amazed, knew not how to behave themselves, so as the officers could not draw them into any order. All the rest of the plantations took the alarm and answered; but it caused much fear and distraction among the common sort, so as some which knew of it before [that is, which knew that it was a false alarm], yet through fear had forgotten, and believed the Indians had been upon us. We doubled our guards, and kept watch day and night.'

"Such is the picture which Massachusetts and its principal town present to us, as we unfold the page which contains the earliest record of what is now called Brookline. There was plainly no settlement here at that day, or the Governor would have sent that little army of musketeers to assist and rescue the inhabitants, and not merely to discover and break up an ambush of the natives. And may we not well rejoice that it was so? May we not well rejoice that there was no handful of scattered planters here to encounter the wild savagery of those 'ten sagamores and many Indians?' and that Underhill and his twenty musketeers heard at Roxbury that they were already dispersed? Yes, my friends, let us thank God to-day that the narrative of our beautiful village—I might rather say of its prehistoric period—does not open with a scene of massacre. Let us thank God that yonder river—'Muddy,' as it was called—was not crimsoned and clotted with the gore of either white men or red men. Let us thank God that our brook was not destined to be called 'Bloody Brook.'

"I do not undervalue the gallantry and heroism of those upon whom the dire necessity has been laid, whether in earlier or later days, to wield the sword and wage war to the death against an Indian foe. Brookline, as we shall presently see, has exhibited her full share of such heroism. I fully recognize, too, that a real and inexorable necessity has often existed for suppressing and punishing by force of arms the lawless ferocity of the savage tribes. The early colonists must have abandoned their plantations altogether unless they were ready and resolved to defend them at all hazards against the conspiracies and treacheries and mad assaults of the aboriginal race which surrounded them on every side. Even at this hour there may be

Modoos or Apaches uncontrollable except by force. But we may all still sympathize with the sentiment which was so exquisitely expressed by the pious John Robinson, in Holland, when he heard of the first great victory of Miles Standish, in which six Indians had been slain, 'It would have been happy if they had converted some before they had killed any.' We may all rejoice to remember, also, that within a few months only of the date of this record about the Indians at Muddy River there arrived at Boston, and was immediately settled at Roxbury, where the first planters of this village so long went for their Sunday worship, a godly minister from England, who made it his special mission, in the same spirit which had actuated those brave Jesuit priests in Canada, to Christianize and civilize the natives, and who, during the next thirty years, had not only preached to many of them, and taught many of them to pray, but had accomplished the more than herculean labor of translating the whole Bible into their language. No more marvelous monument of literary work in the service of either God or man can be found upon earth than that Indian Bible of the noble John Eliot; nor can any of us fail to admire and applaud the earnest and seemingly successful efforts for the introduction of a more humane and Christian policy towards the Indian tribes still left in our land by the illustrious soldier who has just been called again to the executive chair of the United States. There has been nothing more creditable to our country, since, for a similar exhibition of humanity in the removal of the Cherokees beyond the Mississippi, William Ellery Channing paid that most eloquent and most enviable tribute to Winfield Scott.¹

"Pardon me, my friends, for such a digression. I may seem to have traveled a long way out of our little Brookline record; but it has only been, after all, to explain and amplify the gratification I could not refrain from expressing, and which I am sure you all feel with me, that those ten sagamores and their followers were fairly dispersed before Underhill and his musketeers arrived here."

In 1617 a fearful pestilence prevailed among these natives of the forests, called by the French "Les Hommes des Bois,"—"Men Brutes of the Forest," resulting in the destruction of thousands of the Indians. "The people died in heaps, whole families and tribes perished, so that the living were in no wise able to bury the dead," and for seven years afterwards the bones of the unburied lay bleaching on the ground around their former habitations. This epidemic is said to have been the yellow fever or smallpox.

We may thus judge that at the time of the early settlement of Boston the natives had become so reduced in numbers as to render occupation of the soil by the English settlers much easier than it would have been at an earlier period. In this immediate vicinity but little difficulty was had with the natives; undoubtedly the famous friend of the Indians, well known as the "Apostle" Eliot, had much to do with moulding the character of the natives from the rude and barbarous life of the tribe into a more civilized and enlightened community. When he passed back and forth, as he did often, from Roxbury, where he was pastor of the church, to "Nonantum Hill," Newton, his route from the Punch Bowl village was through Walnut and Heath Streets, Pond and Reservoir Lanes, to Newton. On his way he often called at the Indian village or settlement of Praying Indians, which occupied the territory on the west side of Brighton Street, known as the "John Ackers farm," including Ackers Avenue. Many relics are coming to light in the tilling of the soil, and for many years after the last Indians had disappeared from these early scenes some aged remnants of the tribe who had removed to the far West visited these old graves of their fathers. This locality is one of the wildest and most picturesque spots, and the land thereabouts such as any one who had never explored would hardly suppose could be found within the limits of such a town as Brookline, and so near to Boston. The present lane is narrow, rocky, winding, steep, up hill and down vale, bordered with briers and gay with wild flowers, or attractive with berries in their season. Although it is so secluded, since the Chestnut Hill Reservoir was built, every one should visit this locality. In the days when the many allotments were made, the "Great Swamp," or "Jacob Elliott's Swamp," was often alluded to, which was adjoining the above-named locality, leading from Ackers Avenue to the reservoir.

¹ Channing's Works, vol. v. p. 113.

In the journal of Judge Sewall we find a statement under date of March 27, 1688, of "three Indian children being alone in a wigwam at Muddy River, the wigwam took fire, and burnt them so that they all died." Where this wigwam stood we have no information. As the principal settlement in the earliest days of this town was in, around, or west of the centre, or west of the head of Cypress Street, so it was necessary to have a central position for a guard-house or fort in case of invasion. The garrison-house for the protection of the inhabitants was located in the rear of the old Caleb Clark house, at the corner of Cypress and Walnut Streets. It was a simple log house, with one door; no windows except in the upper part of the house. The upper part of the house projected over the lower three or four feet all around. In the floor of this projection were holes or scuttles, through which hot or cold water could be poured in case of fire, or in case the Indians came too near the building. This was the store-house or fort for the town, into which all the inhabitants gathered for protection from the savage foe in the event of an alarm. Whether this fort was ever attacked we know not. Thus much for the history of the times when our fathers began the settlement and the territory was somewhat occupied by the native Indians.

"Alas for them! their day is o'er;
Their fires are out on hill and shore"

Allotments of Land.—Among the first acts of the citizens of Boston as soon as it became a municipality, was that of dividing the land out to different settlers. For that purpose a certain number of persons were selected from their midst, usually five or seven, whose duty it was to define the number of acres, amount, and location of their lots. These persons were usually called "overseers of the town's occasions," "townsmen," and "allotters."

We here append a record of those granted between 1634 and 1640:

"10th moneth, day 18th (1634).—Att a generall meeting upon publique notice;

"Imprimis :—It is agreed that Mr. Winthrop, Mr. Coddington, Mr. Bellingham, Mr. Cotton, Mr. Olyvar, Mr. Colborne and William Balstone shall have power to devide and dispose of all such lands belonging to the towne (as are not yet in the lawfull possession of any particular persons) to the inhabitants of the towne, according to the Orders of the Court, leaving such portions in Common for the use of newe commers, and the further benefit of the towne as in their best discretions, they shall think fitt; the llands hyred by the towne to be also included in this Order.

"The 14th of the 10th moneth 1635.—At a genrall meeting upon publique notice;

"Imprimis :—It is agreed by general consent; that Mr. William Colborne, Mr. William Aspywall, Mr. John Sampford, William Balston and Richard Wright, or four of them, shall lay out at Muddy River a sufficient allotment for a farm for our teacher Mr. John Cotton:

"Item :—It is agreed that Mr. William Colborne shall have his proportion of ground for a farm unto him, laid out att Muddy River near unto and about his house which he hath there built, by the other four, before mentioned vizt., William Aspywall, John Sampford, William Balstone and Richard Wright or three of them.

"Item :—That the two Elders Mr. Thomas Olyver, and Thomas Leveritt shall have their proportion of allotments, for thaire farming layd out at Muddy River by the before named five persons, viz., William Colborne, Wil iam Aspywall, John Sampford, William Balstone and Richard Wright or four of them.

"Item :—That the poorer sort of the inhabitants, such as are members or likely so to be, and have noe cattell, shall have their proportion of allotments for planting ground and other assigned unto them by the Allotters, and layd out at Muddy River, by the aforesaid five persons or foure of them, and those that fall betweene the foote of the hill and the Water, to have but 4 acres upon a head and those that are farther off, to have five acres for every head, the plott to begin next Muddy River side:

"The 4th of the 11th moneth called January 1635.—Item :—It is agreed that hereafter from this day none shall fell any Wood or timber at Muddy Ryver or any other place of private allotments but upon their owne allotments.

"Item :—That all such as have felled any trees in any the appointed place for private allotments shall eyther cart away the same within this six monthes or else the owners of the ground shall have it.

"Item :—It is agreed that every one shall have a sufficient way unto his allotment of ground wherever it be, and that the Inhabitants of the towne shall have libertie to appoint men for the setting of them out, as need shall require, and the same course to be taken for all comon High-ways both for the towne and countrie.

"The 23d of the 11th moneth 1635.—Att a generale meeting upon publike notice;

"Item :—That such of the poorer inhabitants whose allotments were other where, should have libertie for 3 years, to plant at Muddy Ryver where the rest doe plant, upon such part of their Allotments, as themselves are not able for the present, to plant; they in regard thereof making their part of fence and leaving such fence as they doe make in due reparation and not taking away any of the Wood or timber upon those allotments.

"15 of the 9th moneth 1636.—Also it was agreed that our Teacher, Mr. John Cotton, shall have unto his lott at Muddy Ryver all the ground lying betweene the two brooks, next to William Colborne's allotment there and soe to the other end unto shortest overcut beyond the hill towards the north-west.

"The 12th of the 10th moneth (1636).—Att a meeting this day of Thomas Olyvar, Thomas Leveritt, Willyam Hutchinson, Robert Keayne, John Newgate, William Coulbourne, John Coggeshall, William Brenton, John Sanford and William Balstone, it is agreed that Edward Belchar, William Talmage, Thomas Snowe, William Dewinge and John Arratt, the servants of William Brenton, shall have their great Allotments at Muddy River, and also, our brother Robert Hull and Thomas Wheelar: Also it is agreed that not above one dwelling house shall be built upon any one lott without the consent of the Towne's overseers.

"The 9th of the 11th moneth called January 1636.—Att a meeting this day of Thomas Olyvar, Thomas Leveritt, William Hutchinson, Robert Keayne, John Newgate, William Coulbourne, John Coggeshall, William Brenton, John Sanford, and William Balstone—

"It is agreed that the Captaine Underhill shall have a great Allotment of 80 acers of Upland and 20 acers of marsh ground, in the most convenient place, after the laying out of the former graunted Allotments att Muddy Ryver.

"It was further agreed that our brother Isaac Grosse shall have a great Allotment at Muddy River.

"The 7th of the 12th moneth called February 1636.—Att a meeting this day of Thomas Leveritt, William Hutchinson, Robert Keayne, John Newgate, John Coggeshall, John Sanford, Willyam Brenton and Willyam Balstone,

"It was agreed that our brother Thomas Alcock shall have his great lott layd out at Muddy River.

"Also that our brother Thomas Savage shall have seaven acers of the marsh ground att Muddy Ryver, layd him out for the keeping of his Cattle (being in number five) by our brother William Coulbourne and others.

"29 of the 2d moneth, 1637.—Also it is ordered that the feild fences at Muddy Ryver shall be made sufficient before the 7th day of the next third moneth, by equall proportion of acers upon the planters thereupon, in default of 12d. for every acre then undone.

"The 2d of the 4th moneth 1637.—Also, that Thomas Flint hath allotted unto him 24 acers of the marsh ground at the mouth of Muddy River, there to be layd out for him.

"The 8th of the 11th moneth called January, 1637.—Also, whereas att a Generall Meeting the 14th of the 10th moneth, 1635, it Was by generall Consent agreed upon for the laying out of great Allotments unto the then Inhabitants, the same are now brought in bounded as followeth :—

"Imprynis :—Edward Browne, eight acers, bounded on the south west with Mr. Willyam Coulborne, on the North West with Richard Bulgar and on the south East with Muddy River and North East with Beniamyn Ward :

"2. Benjamin Ward, 12 acers, bounded on the South-West with Edward Browne, on the North West with the Cedar swamp and on the South East with Muddy River, and on the North East with John Cramme :

"3. John Cramme sixteene acers bounded on the south West with Benjamin Ward, on the North East with the Cedar swamp, and on the south East with Muddy River, and on the North-West with Robert Houlton :

"4. Robert Houlton sixteene acers bounded on the south West with John Cramme : on the North West with the Cedar swamp, and on the south East with Muddy River, and on the North East with Jarrat Bourne :

"5. Jarrat Bourne eight acers bounded on the South West with Robert Houlton, on the North West with the Cedar swamp and on the South East with Muddy River, and on the North East with John Bigge.

"6. John Bigge eight acers bounded on the South West with Jarrat Bourne, on the North East and South East with Muddy River Marsh, and on the North West with William Beamsley :

"7. William Beamsly sixteene acers bounded on the South East with John Bigge and on the South West with the Cedar swamp and on the North East with Muddy ryver marsh and on the North West with Thomasyn Scottua, widdow.

"8. Thomasyn Scottua, widdow, sixteen acers bounded on the South East with William Beamsley, on the South West with the Cedar swamp and on the North East with Muddy River Marsh and on the North West on Alexander Becke :

"9. Alexander Becke eight acers bounded on the South East with Thomasyn Scottua, widdow, on the South West with the Cedar Swampe and on the North East with Muddy River marsh and on the North West with Raphe Route, laborer :

"10. Raphe Route twelve acers bounded on the South East with Alexander Becke, on the North East with a little marsh at the mouth of Charles Ryver and on the Robert Reade on the north west.

"11. Robert Reade eight acers bounded on the South East with Raphe Route and the said little marsh, on the North East with Charles River running from thence towards the south West a quarter of a myle in length towards the surveyors marke and on Mathew Ines on the North west :

"12. Mathew Ines eight acers : bounded on the south East with Robert Reade, on the North East with Charles River of the same length towards the South West and on Anthony Hawker on the North West :

"13. Anthony Hawker eight acers : bounded on the South East with Mathew Ines, on the North East with Charles River and of the same length to the South West and on John Pemmerton on the North West :

"14. John Pemmerton eight acers : bounded on the South East with Anthony Hawker on the North East with Charles River and of the same length to the South West and on George Griggs on the North West :

"15. George Griggs twentie and eight acers : bounded on the South East with John Pemmerton, on the North East with Charles Ryver and of the same length to the South West : and on James Fitch and Richard Fitch on the North west :

"16. James Fitch and Richard Fitch sixteen acers : bounded on the South East with George Griggs and Edmund Jackson, on the North East with Charles River and on the North West with Watertowne and on Anne Ormesby, widdow, on the South west :

"17. Anne Ormesby, widdow, eight acers : bounded on the South East side and both ends, with the Cedar Swamp and on Nathaniell Woodward the elder, on the South West :

"18. Nathaniel Woodward, the elder, twenty and eight aers : bounded on the South East with Anne Ormesby, the widdow, on the North East with the Cedar swamp, the South East side extending 60 rodd and the North West side 80 rodd towards the Southwest :

"19. James Johnson eight aers : bounded on the South East with Nathaniel Woodward, being 80 rodd in length ; and on Nathaniel Heaton to the Northwest .

"20. Nathaniel Heaton twenty aers : bounded on the South East with James Johnson, being 80 rodd in length, and on Edmund Jackson to the Northwest :

"21. Edmund Jackson eight aers : bounded on the South East with Nathaniel Heaton and of the same length towards the North East and on the North West with James Fitch and Richard Fitch and on the Southwest with a Swamp :

"22. Richard Bulgar twenty aers : bounded on the South East with Edward Browne and on Mr. William Coulborne on the North East, with the Cedar Swamp and Nathaniel Woodward, the North West side being 80 rodd in length :

"23. Elizabeth Purton, widdow eight aers : bounded on the South East with Richard Bulgar and of the same length towards the South West and North East and on William Salter towards the North West :

"24. William Salter eight aers : bounded on the South East with Widdow Purton of the same length to the South West and North East and on William Wilson to the North West .

"25. William Wilson twelve aers : bounded on the South East with William Salter and of the same length to the South west and North East and on William Townsend to the Northwest :

"26. William Townsend eight aers : bounded to the South East with William Wilson, on the North West with a Swamp, by Mr. John Coggeshall's Wigwam and William Dyneley :

"27. William Dyneley foure and twenty aers : bounded on the South East with William Townsend, and on the North East by the said Swamp, extending to the southwest, about 40 rodd in length and on Richard Tappin to the Northwest :

"28. Richard Tappin, four and twenty aers : bounded on the South East with William Dyneley and on the North East with the said Swamp, extending to the South West about 40 rodd in length and on the North West to Newtowne, a small peece of land lying betweene .

"29. Francis Bushnall foure and twenty aers, lying in the forme of a Triangle : bounded on the South with William Coulborne and on the North East with Richard Bulgar, Widdow Purton and William Salter and on Henry Ellyn to the Northwest :

"30. Henry Ellyn eight aers : bounded on the South East with Francis Bushnall and on the Southwest with Mr. Willyam Coulborne : being about 70 Rodd in length and on Richard Fairbancke to the Northwest :

"31. Richard Fairbancke three and twenty aers bounded on the South East with Henry Ellyn and on the South end partly with Mr. Willyam Coulborne, being 80 rodd in length on the Northwest syde :

"32. John Mylam, fourteene aers : bounded on the South East with Richard Fairbancke, being 80 rods in length to the South West and North East, and on Robte Walker to the North West :

"33. Robert Walker, fourteene aers : bounded on the South East with John Mylam, on the Northwest with James Davisse and a fresh marsh by Newtowne, being 80 rodd in length to the Southwest and Northeast :

"34. James Davisse, tenn aers : bounded on the Southeast with Robte Walker, on the North East with the said fresh marsh extending from it to the Southwest about 40 rodd, on the Northwest by Newtowne, about two aeres of ground overplus betweene :

"35. William Pell, five and twenty aers, bounded on the South West with Mr. Willyam Coulborne and a brook running betweene Mr. John Cotton and him on the Northwest syde being 80 Rodd in length :

"36. Robert Reynolde five and twenty aers : bounded on the South East with Willyam Pell, and John Cranwell and George Baytes, on the North West with Newtowne, being on the Northwest syde, half a myle in length :

"37. John Cranwell, ten aers : bounded on the South East with Mr. John Cotton, on the North East with the said Fresh brooke and on the Northwest with Robte Reynolds and George Baytes :

"38. George Baytes fifteene aers : bounded on the North East with John Cranwell, on the South East with Mr. John Cotton, and on the North west with Roberte Reynolds :

"39. Philemon Pormont thirtie aers : bounded on the North East with John Cranwell, on the South East with Mr. Thomas Leveritt and by a peece of ground lying between him and Mr. John Cotton, on the Northwest with Newtowne :

"40. Robert Mear twenty aers bounded on the North East with Mr. Thomas Olyvar, on the South East with Roxburie and on the Southwest with Captaine John Underhill, his land lyeth in the forme of a tryangle :

"41. Edward Bendall, five and thirty aers bounded on the South East with Roberte Meares, on the North East with Mr. Thomas Leveritt, extending itself to the North West side about 70 rodd in length and on Thomas Wardall to the South West :

"42. Thomas Wardall twenty aers : bounded on the south-east with Edward Bendall, on the North East with Mr. Leveritt, extending itself on the North West side 80 rodd in length :

"43. Mr. William Blackstone fifteene aers bounded on the South East with Thomas Wardall extending itself eighty rodd in length to the Southwest and North East, and on Robte Tytus to the North West :

"44. Robert Tytus twenty aers : bounded on the South East with Mr. Blackstone ; extending it self 80 Rodd in length towards the Southwest and Northeast and on William Courser to the Northwest :

"45. William Courser, tenn aers : bounded on the South East with Robert Tytus, being 80 Rodd in length to the Southwest and North East and on Alexander Winchester to the Northwest :

"46. Alexander Winchester twenty aers : bounded on the Southeast with William Courser, being 80 Rodd in length towards the Southwest and North East and on Henry Burchall to the Northwest :

"47. Henry Burchall fifteen aers bounded on the South East with Alexander Winchester being 80 Rodd in length to the Southwest and North East and on Robert Turner to the Northwest :

"48. Robert Turner ten aers bounded on the South East with Henry Burchall, on the Northwest with Newtowne being 80 Rodd in length to the Southwest and North East :

"49. William Denning ten aers bounded on the South East with Roxbury, being 80 Rodd in length to the Southwest and North East and on Joseph Arratt to the Northwest :

"50. John Arratt, ten aers : bounded on the South East with William Denning being in length 80 Rodd to the South West and North East and on Captaine John Underhill to the Northwest :

"51. Captaine John Underhill four score aers : bounded on the South East with John Arratt being 92 Rodd in length on the North west syde :

"52. William Talmage fifteen aeres : bounded on the South

East with Captaine John Underhill, being 80 Rodd in length to the Southwest and North East and upon Thomas Snow on the Northwest:

"53. Thomas Snow tenn acers bounded on the South East with William Talmage, being 80 Rodd in length to the Southwest and North East and upon Isaack Grosse on the Northwest:

"54. Isaack Grosse fifty acers: bounded on the South East with Thomas Snow, being 80 Rodd in length to the southwest and North East:

"Mr. William Coulborne a hundred and fifty acers, bounded on the North West by Francis Bushnall, Henry Elkin, Richard Fairbank and William Pell, to the west by William Pell, to the south by a fresh brooke running betweene him and Mr. Cotton, to the North East by Edward Browne and to the East by Muddy River:

"Mr. John Cotton, all the ground lying between the twee brooks, next unto Mr. Coulborne's Allotment, and so to the other end, unto the shortest Cutting over beyond the hill towards the North West, conteyning twee hundred and fiftie acers, (be it more or lesse,) bounded on the North by the said fresh brook, on the West by John Cramme and George Baytes, on the South by a fresh brooke running between him and Mr. Leveritt and on the East by Muddy River:

"Mr. Thomas Leveritt a hundred acers: bounded on the North by the sayd fresh brooke running betweene him and Mr. Cotton, on the West by Edward Bendall and Philemon Pormont: on the South by Mr. Oliver, the East end being a sharp angle,

"Thomas Oliver a hundred acers: bounded on the North with Mr. Leveritt, on the West with Roberte Meares; on the South with Rocksby, the east end being a sharp angle:

"Mr. Thomas Oliver fifteen acers of the same Marsh: bounded on the South with Muddy River, on the West with Jarratt Bourne, the browes of his upland being 80 Rodd in length, and on the North with Mr. Leveritt:

"Mr. Thomas Leveritt fifteen acers of the same Marsh next adjoining, bounded on the South with Mr. Oliver, on the west with the browes of the Upland there being 80 Rodd in length, and on the North with Mr. Coulbourne:

"Mr. William Coulborne tenn acers of the same marsh, bounded on the South with Mr. Leveritt, on the West with browes of the Upland, there being 80 Rodd in length, and on the North with Robte Walker:

"Robert Walker five acers of the same marsh: bounded on the South with Mr. Coulborne; on the West with the browes of the Upland there being 80 Rodd in length and ten Rodd broad:

"And for the more cleare distinctions of all these, the Markes and Lymmitts of the surveyors are extant:

"The 19th of the twelfth moneth, called February, 1637.—Also there is granted to John Love to have a housplott and also a great Lott at Muddy Ryver:

"Also to Thomas Scottoe a great Lott at Muddy Ryver, for three heads:

"Also, to brother Isaac Perry, a houseplott neere to brother Robte Walker's and a great Lott at Muddy Ryver for three heads:

"Also to Silvester Saunders a great Lott at Muddy Ryver for two heads:

"Also to Ralph Mason a great Lott at Muddy Ryver for six heads.

"The 16th of the second Moneth called April 1638.—Also a great Lott is granted to Edmund Orembsy for three heads, at Muddy River:

"Also to our brother, Thomas Wheeler, a great Lott at Muddy Ryver, for three heads:

"Also, to Jacob Wilson a great Lott there for three heads:

"Also, to Mawdit Inge, a great Lott there for three heads:

"Also there is granted to William Hudson the younger, a great Lott at Muddy Ryver for three heads.

"The 9th of the fifth moneth called July, 1638.—It was agreed that Robert Reynolds shall have five acers of Marsh ground att Muddy River in excheange for five acers of his upland there, to be laid out by Mr. Coulborne:

"The 8th of the 8th moneth 1638.—At a meeting this day of Thomas Olyvar, Thomas Leveritt, Robert Keayne, William Coulborne, John Newgate, James Penne and Jacob Elyott,

"There was granted to Mr. William Tinge the having of his great Lott at Muddy Ryver for Eight persons and Forty and twee heads of Cattell, in present possession and thirtie heads to come, foure hundred acers and an hundred more:

"24th day of the 10th moneth.—Also, Esdras Reade, a Taylor, is this day allowed to bee an inhabitant, and to have a great Lot at Muddy River, for 4 heads:

"The 21 of the 11th Moneth, January 1638.—At a meeting this day of Thomas Olyvar, Thomas Leverett, Willyam Coulbourne, Robert Keayne, Robert Harding, James Penne, and Jacob Elyott, leave was granted to John Odlyn to make use of a peice of Marsh ground at Muddy River, conteyning an acre, lying against the third Lott there until the Towne shall see occasion for further disposing of it:

"Also, this day, our brother Robte Scott, hath for the sume of £13 16s. sould 23 acers of Upland att Muddy River, that was our brother Richard Fairebanckes great Allotment, unto our brother Thomas Savage, his heirs and Assignes forever:

"Further, at the same meetinge, it appeared by a Writing dated this same 18th day of 12th Moneth 1638, that Thomas Scottow, of Boston, Joyner, hath sold to Thomas Grubb of the same, all his six acers of ground, lying at Muddy River 'adjoyning to my Mother's Lott there and which I bought of her:'

"The 25th day of the 1st moneth called March 1639.—Our brother, Mr. Gryffen Bowen hath a great Lott granted unto him at Muddy River.

"Likewise our brother Richard Holledge hath a great Lott granted unto him there for three heads:

"Further at this Meeting it appeared by a Writing, dated the first day of August, 1638, that Mr. John Underhill hath surrendered unto Mr. Thomas Makepeace of Dorchester, his house in Boston, with an hundred Akers of upland ground at Muddy River and tenn acers of meadow or marsh ground there, and his share of Woodland in the Ilands, with a garding at the house and another behind Mr. Parker's house, to the quantity of halfe an Aker and somewhat more, and also neare half an Aker upon the fort hill, for the Some of an hundred pounds:

"It is Also ordered that all the Corne feild fence at Muddy River shal be made sufficient before the 20th of this next 2nd Moneth, Aprill, upon penaltie of every Rodd then undone ^{vis.} viiid. And to be seene unto by our brethren John Audlyn and Edward Baytes. And for the Charge of the fence, the broken up ground to pay for every aer three thirds thereof, and the unbroken up twee thirds of the Charge of every Aer.

"The 29 of the 5th moneth, July 1639.—There is granted a great lot to our brother John Smyth, Taylor, at Muddy River, for three heads:

"Also, John Leveritt hath granted unto him a great Lott at Muddy River for tenn heads:

"30th day of the 7th moneth, Sept. 1639.—Also, to Mr. David Olley a great Lott at Muddy River for 15 heads:

"The 28th day of the 8th moneth October 1639.—Also a great Lott granted to our brother Nathaniell Woodward, at Muddy River for three heads:

"The 30th day of the 10th moneth, December 1639.—There is granted to Richard Sherman a great Lott for seaven heads att Muddy River if it be there to be had :

"Also, our brother John Kenricke hath a great Lott allowed to him at Muddy Ryver for four heads :

"Also our brother George Curtys hath a great Lott granted to him there for 2 heads :

"At this day it was agreed that 500 acrs at Muddy River for perpetuall Commonage to the Inhabitants there and the towne of Boston, to begin at the outer bounds of Mr. Hibbin's Lott, and soe to goe into the Country, as the Land will afford, before any other allotments are laid outt hereafter :

"Whereas at a former meeting there was granted to our brother Thomas Scottoe a great Lott at Muddy River for three heads, which as yet have not bene layde out, for him and that now he is increased to fyve heads. He is, therefore, now allowed to have said Lott for five heads :

"27th day of the 11th moneth 1639.—Also to Henry Messenger a great Lott at Muddy River for 2 heads :

"Also to our brother Joshua Scottoe a great Lott there for 3 heads :

"Also to Thomas Painter, Joiner, a great Lott at Muddy River, for 4 heads :

"Also, there is further granted to Mr. William Ting, in regard that his great Lott at Muddy River is not yet layd out, nor could be in regard to the Bounders between Boston and Roxbury were but lately determined, and that now the number of his Persons and Cattell are increased, there is further granted to him an hundred acrs more, to be layd unto his Lott formerly granted, The Brethren's Lotte and the Commonage there already granted being first layd out :

"Also, there is granted to our elder Mr. Thomas Olyvar all the fresh meadow belonging to Boston, lying under the foote of the great Hill at Muddy River, next Newtowne, bounds there.

"Also there is granted to Mr. William Coulbron a parcell of fresh meadowe adjoining to the little fresh brooke parting betweene us and Newtowne bounds at Muddy River and Running into Charles Ryver there :

"The 24th day of the 12th moneth February 1639.—Also, there is granted to William Blanton, Carpenter, a great Lott at Muddy River for 3 heads.

"Also there is granted to Leonard Buttles, bricklayer, a great Lott at Muddy River, for 4 heads :

"Also there is granted to ould Robert Wing a great Lott at Muddy River for 4 heads :

"The 30th day of the 1st moneth, March 1640.—It is ordered that Mr. Willyam Coulbron and Jacob Elyott shall set out to brother John Odlin such quantity of Marsh ground at Muddy River as they shall think Convenient for him, and shall Certify the same at the next towne's meeting, that a pryce may be sett of the same, upon payment Whereof, the said Marsh ground to be granted to the said John Odlyn and to his heirs forever.

"Also Willyam Colbron and Jacob Elyott are appointed to lay out the high Ways at Muddy River towards Cambridge.

"The 27 day of the 2nd moneth, April, 1640.—At a meeting this day of Mr. John Winthrop Governor, Mr. Richard Bellingham, Assistant, Captaine Edward Gibbones, Mr. William Colbron, Mr. William Ting, Mr. John Cogan and Jacob Eliott. Ordered,

"First, that William Hibbins should have his greate Lott at Muddy River (yt it be there to be had,) as neare his land he bought as may be, without wrong to others; and for this end Mr. Colebron and Goodman Eliott are to vue the place and Certify at the next meeting what may bee donne.

"Edward Grosse is granted a lot for twoe heads at Muddy River, if it be there to be had after former grants are served :

"John Odline is to have 8 Acres of Marsh at muddie river for 4£ which he payd downe; and Ed Grubb six acrs there for

3£; and Ben Gillum 10 acrs for 5£; and Joh Davis 8 acrs for 1£, to be set out by Mr. Coleburne and Goodman Eliott after Mr. Hibbins is served :

"The 25th of the 3d moneth called May 1640.—Also To William Hibbins is granted a parcell of meadowe at Muddy River, Containing by estimation about 10 Acres, inclosed by a greate swampe on the one side and greate Rocks on the other, provided it fall not in any former graunt; if wee can better accomodate him heare after, he is content to resigne his againe.

"The 31st of the 6th month 1640.—Theodor Atkinsone is granted his greate Lott for twoe heades, at muddie River, yt it be there to bee had after others are served that had their graunts before him :

"The 26th of the 8th moneth 1640.—There is sould to our brother John Odline one Acre and halfe of marsh at muddy river adjoining the 8 acrs formerly sould him for which he hath payd in hand 15s.

"Also at the same meeting our brother Thomas Grubb and our brother Garrett Bworne are appoynted overseers of the fence at muddy river in the Common feyld to See it made by the first of Aprill; and in default of every Rod not then repaired and made, the owners of the said land are to forfeit 3s. 4d p rod; and the said overseers shall have power to distraine for such moncy sœe groing due :

"Our brother Peter Oliver granted unto him sixtie acers of land at muddy river, if it bee there to be had; of the which there is granted some marsh, if there be any there, always provided that those graunts before granted are first served.

"Our Brother James Oliver hath granted to him 40th acers at muddy river, if it be there to be had when those afore granted are served.

"There is at this meeting a bridg appoynted to be made at muddy river; Mr. Coleburne, our brother Eliott and our brother Peter Oliver are appoynted to see the same donne.

"There is likewise granted, this day, to William Hibbins, three hundred acrs of land at muddy river, bounded by Cambridge line on the one side, Mr. William Ting'e on the other side and Dedhame line on the other, with the ordinary allowance for rockes &c.

"Our brother John Biggs hath sould unto him 4 acres of marsh, at Muddy River, for 10s. per acr, the former grants being made good :

"Our brother William Talmage being layd out shorte of his former graunt at muddy river, hath granted him to be added thereto, five acres if it may be laid out adjoining to his former graunt and bounding upon Cambridge line :

"Also he hath granted him 3 acres of marsh at muddy river, paying therefor 10s. per acre if it be there to be had when former graunts are performed :

"Our brother Ed Fletcher hath granted him a greate Lott at muddy river, for three heads, the which is supposed was formerly granted to him :

"It is ordered at this present meeting that there shall be noe more land granted at muddy river nor the Mount until such lands as are already granted are layd out, and the residue of the land knowne what the acrs are.

"The last day of the 9th moneth 1640.—Mr. William Ting, his Allotment formerly granted him at muddy river conteyning 600 acres in all, is thus bounded: namely, with lands as yet in Common towards the northeast, with Roxbury land towards the southeast; with Dedham land towards the southwest; and with land granted William Hibbins towards the northwest :

"28th of the 10 moneth 1640.—Our brother Mr. Wentworth Day, his suit for a lot at Muddy River :

"Our brother Day desireth at Muddy River to have a Lott and the towne men have taken it into Consideration :

"The townsmen have taken into consideration likewise the sute of Miles Tarne for a Lott for five heads:

"The 22d of the last moneth 1640.—Brother Courser of Boston hath sould and resigned up his Lott at muddy river, it being 10 Acres, to our Brother Alexander Beck of the same towne.

"29th of the First moneth 1641.—It is graunted that those Lotts formerly graunted our twoe Elders Mr. Oliver and Mr. Leveritt in the full proportion of land as it now lieth, shall by this order be confined unto them, although their Lotts doe amount to a greater quantity of land than was intended at the graunting thereof:

"The 26th of the 2nd moneth 1641.—Our brother Mr. Wentworth Day hath graunted unto him 100 acres of land for his great Lott at Muddy River, out of a parte of that land which was appoynted for the Comune.

"There is graunted to our brother Henry Webb to purchase 3 acres of marsh at muddy river if it be there to be had:

"William Hibbins hath Confirmed unto him that fresh marsh which was formerly graunted him, at muddy river, valued at 10 acrs formerly but proveth to bee about 18 acres bounded with a rock on one side and a great swampe on the other.

"31st of the 3d month.—Our brother Robert Turner is graunted that land which lieth betweene his lott and Cambridge nue line soe fare as the lemyts of his lot retcheth, it lieing along by the side thereof and noe further:

"To our bro Thomas Scottua is granted a small quantity of salt marish lying betweene his great lott and Charles River.

"The 7th of the 12th month 1641.—There is granted unto Robt. Reynolds three acres of marish at muddy river for which he is to pay six shillings eight pence unto the Town, according to what he should have paid for that parcell of marish which was to be purchased by him at Hog Island but is now sold unto Thomas Marshall:

"This 4th day of 1st moneth 1642.—At a general town meeting upon lawfull warning, It's Ordered that the residue of the Townes Lands not yet disposed of (excepting those that are layd out for commons at Boston, Braintry and Muddy River) shall be devided amongst the present Inhabitants (together with such as shall be admitted within two months now next following) and yt in this manner, vitz: a greater Proportion to them that have had lesse than their due, and the lesse to them that have had more and proportionable to them, that have had none and this is to be done by the select men chosen for the towne's businesse."

We see by the foregoing list of allotments that the most of the land was in the hands of residents of Boston, and but a small portion of the names of proprietors of the soil are represented in the present population. The easterly section of the town had only five owners adjoining Muddy River, and running westerly as far as the "great hills" or thereabouts.

Chief Justice Sewall was the largest owner, at a later period, who came into possession of his estate by marriage with a daughter of John Hull, the mint-master, including lands around "Cottage Farm," "Chapel Station," "Longwood," and the "Stearn's" farm. Adjoining his estate on the south boundary was that of William Colborne, afterwards the estates of Aspinwall and Sharp, now owned by descendants of the Aspinwall family and others. Then came the land of Rev. John Cotton, since passed into the hands of the Davis family. Next was Thomas Leverett, south of the Cotton estate, and bounded on the north by a brook. The other was the land between Thomas Leverett and Roxbury line.

Early Settlement of Muddy River.—During the first seventy-five years of the settlement of Boston the territory comprising what is now known as Brookline was known as "Muddy River," or "Muddy River Hamlet," otherwise called "Boston Commons." The name of Muddy River was given to it on account of a stream that formed the easterly boundary of the place, the water of which was somewhat turbulent.

There is but little mention made of this place in the early history of the colony. The first we find in print is in "Winthrop's Journal," page 88, where mention is made of Indians being assembled at that place, as follows:

"Notice being given of ten Sagamores and many Indians assembled at Muddy River, the Governor sent Captain Underhill with twenty musketeers to make discoveries; but, at Roxbury, they heard that they were broken up."

It is supposed these Indians erected a fort in the northerly part of the town, near Charles River, which they were obliged to abandon.

Again, we find in Wood's "New England Prospect," 1633:

"The inhabitants of Boston, for their enlargement, have taken to themselves farm houses in a place called Muddy River, two miles from their town, where is good ground, large timber, and store of marsh land and meadow. In this place they keep their swine and other cattle in the summer, whilst corn is on the ground, at Boston; and bring them to town in the winter."

Also in Josselyn's "Two Voyages to New England," p. 162, published in 1675, is a similar account, viz.:

"Two miles from the town, at a place called Muddy River, the inhabitants have farms, to which belongs arable grounds and meadows, where they keep their cattle in summer, and bring them to Boston in the winter."

In an English account of "King Philip's War" is the following reference to Muddy River:

"On 28th August, 1675, happened here, at eleven o'clock at night, a most violent storm of wind and rain. The like was never known before. It blew up many ships together, that they bulged one another; some towards Cambridge; some to Muddy-river, doing much hurt to very many. Also, it broke down many wharves, and blew down some houses. Thereupon the Indians afterward reported, that they had caused it by their 'Powow,' that is 'Worshipping the Devil.'"

The next notice we find of the place is found in volume one of "Winthrop's Journal," page 290, as follows:

"In this year (1638), one James Everett, a sober, discreet man and two others, saw a great light in the night at Muddy River: When it stood still, it flamed up and was three yards square. When it ran, it was contracted into the figure of a swine. It ran as swift as an arrow towards Charlton¹ so up and down about two or three hours. They were come down in their lighter, about a mile, and, when it was over, they found themselves carried quite back against the tide to the place they came from. Divers other credible persons saw the same light, after, about the same place."

The editor of the "Journal," in a note, says of this phenomenon,—

"This account of an ignis fatuus may easily be believed, on testimony less respectable than that which was adduced. Some operation of the Devil, or other power beyond the customary agents of Nature, was probably imagined by the relaters and hearers of that age; and the wonder of their being carried a mile against the tide became important corroboration of the imagination. Perhaps they were wafted, during the two or three hours astonishment, for so moderate a distance, by the wind. But, if this suggestion be rejected, we might suppose, that the eddy, flowing always, in our rivers, contrary to the tide in the channel, rather than the meteor, carried their lighter back."

The following description of Boston was given in 1639. At that time Brookline was called "Muddy River Hamlet" and belonged to Boston:

"Boston is two miles northeast from Roxberry; its situation is very pleasant, being a Peninsula, hemmed on the South side with the bay of Roxberry, on the North side with Charles River, the marshes on the back side being not half a quarter of a mile over, so that a little fencing will secure their cattle from the wolves. The greatest wants be wood and meadow ground, which never were in that place; being constrained to fetch their building timber and fire wood from the islands in boates. It being a neck they are troubled with three great annoyances of wolves, rattlesnakes, mushketoes, etc."

The inhabitants of the hamlet of Muddy River remained under the care and jurisdiction of the town of Boston till March 29, 1686, at which time the subject of schools was brought to the attention of the parent town as follows, as appears on the early records of Boston:

Muddy River, "Motion for a schoole, referd to the selectmen to consider of & to make their report of it to the Inhabitants at ye next towne meetinge."

March 29, 1686.—"A Motion of the Inhabitants of Muddy river for a writinge school for theire children was read at a publique meetinge of the Inhabitants of this towne the 8th of March 1686, and that theire town rates may be improved to that use & the selectmen apoynted to choose a place for the erectinge of a house:"

In answer to said Motion, "It was voted that the selectmen take this matter into consideration and inquire into the reason thereof and represent it to the next General Towne Meeting what is necessary to be done therein."

We find nothing further in reference to any action of the town, neither any report from the selectmen. Thus matters remained till the 18th of December of that year, at which time the president and Colonial Council, in answer to a petition from citizens of the hamlet of Muddy River, granted them exemption from town rates, and liberty to choose their own officers, thus practically becoming a separate municipality, although still belonging to Boston.

"NEW ENGLAND.

"BY THE PRESIDENT AND COUNCILL OF HIS MAJESTIES TERRITORY AND DOMINION, AFORESAID &CA.

"Wednesday Decembe. 8th 1686.

"Present, the Honble. JOSEPH DUDLEY, Esq. President.

WILLIAM STOUGHTON Esq. Deputie Prest.

EDWARD RANDOLPH

WAITE WINTHROP

RICHARD WHARTON

JOHN USHER

BARTHOLOMEW GIDNEY &

JONATHAN TYNG

Esqrs.

"In answer to the petition of ye Inhabitants of Muddie River, prayinge to have libertie to erect a school &ca. upon the hearinge thereof, The President & Councill doe order, That henceforth the said Hamlet of Muddie River be free from Towne rates to ye Towne of Bostone, they maintaineinge theire owne high wayes and poore and other publique charges ariseinge amongst themselves, And that within one yeare next comeinge they raise a school-house in such place as the two next Justices of the Countrie (upon a publique hearinge of the Inhabitants of the said Hamlet) shall determine as also maine-taine an able readinge and writinge Master there, from and after that day, and that the Inhabitants annuallie meete to choose three men to manage theire affaires"

"EDWARD RANDOLPH, Secr.

"A true coppie as attests

"BENJAMINE BULLIVANT

"late Clerke of ye Councill.

"Muddyriver

"January 19th 1686. At a full Meeting of the Inhabitants of Muddyriver they Voted the acceptance of the late grant of the president in council as the same was read and is expressed."

The acceptance of the above order one month after it had passed the Colonial Council, and the provision made for the maintenance of a schoolmaster, with the choice of Ensign Andrew Gardner, John White, Jr., and Thomas Stedman to "manage theire affaires," is the first item in the "Muddy River Records."

The privileges accorded to the early settlers were of short duration, as we find the following vote of the town of Boston, dated March 16, 1689-90:

"Voted, that Muddy river Inhabitants are not discharged from Bostone to be a hamlet by themselves, but stand related to Bostone as they were before the yeare 1686."

A few more years rolled on. The people of the hamlet had increased, had been successful in their business, were in a better condition to regulate affairs by themselves, and desired more freedom. In 1698 they applied to the General Court for a confirmation of their former privileges, which the people of Boston had attempted to deprive them of.

¹ Charlestown.

"To the Hon. William Stoughton, Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts, the Honorable Council, and the Representatives in General Court assembled, 25th May, 1698:

"The humble petition of the inhabitants of Muddy-river humbly sheweth;

"Whereas in the year 1686, the Honorable Joseph Dudley, President, William Stoughton, Deputy President, and the Council, in answer to the petition of the inhabitants of Muddy-river, praying liberty for a school among them, &c., did order, that the Hamlet of Muddy-river be free from Town rates to the Town of Boston, and other privileges, as in said grant, on the other side, may more at large appear;

"We, your petitioners, do humbly pray, that the said granted privileges may be confirmed unto the said Hamlet, with the addition, that the inhabitants may choose such officers amongst themselves, as may assess the inhabitants their due proportion, as may be thought sufficient and expedient for defraying such necessary charges to said school, and other things; and that one constable may be chosen, who may be sufficiently empowered to collect the rates for the County and the Hamlet; and your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray,

"THOMAS GARDNER,	} In the name of the inhabitants.
"BENJAMIN WHITE,
"ROGER ADAMS,

"True list of the names given, 20 December, 1697:

"Joshua Gardner, Joshua Child, Samuel Aspinwall, Peter Boylston, Nathaniel Stedman, Eleazer Aspinwall, Andrew Gardner, Thomas Woodward, Solomon Phipps, Ralph Shepard, Jonathan Torrey, George Bass, Joseph White, Josiah Winchester, John Devotion, Nathaniel Holland, Joseph Buckminster, Edward Devotion, John Ackers, Benjamin Whitney, Simon Gates, Thomas Stedman, Senr., John Grosvenor, John Ellis, Joseph Gardner, William Sharp, John Parker;

"The persons whose names are here under written, are otherwise minded;

"Timothy Harris, Daniel Harris.

"Neuters.—John Winchester, Samuel Clark, John Druce, Erosamon Drew, Dorman Marean, Abraham Chamberlain."

What became of this petition, or whether any action was had upon the same, we have no information.

The above petition was simply an aid to a former request, that their rights, which had been revoked by the town of Boston, might be restored. About two years from this date measures were taken to separate from the town and become independent.

Incorporation of Brookline.—But a short time had passed when they were dissatisfied with exemption from taxation and the permission given them to manage their affairs in their own way, and they aspired to be a town by themselves. Hence on the 11th of March, 1700, they sent a petition to the parent town to be a district or hamlet separate from the town.

This petition was not very favorably received by the town of Boston, and instead of listening favorably to their request, they rebuked them sharply for their presumption and reproached them for their ingratitude for past favors, and exercised over them all the authority they possessed in language as follows:

"At a public meeting of the Inhabitants of Boston upon Publick Warning according to law, held March 11, 1700,—1.

"Upon the Petition of the Inhabitants of Muddy River to be a District, or Hamlet, separate from the Town for these reasons, following, viz., the remoteness of the situation, which renders them incapable of enjoying equal benefit and advantage with other of the Inhabitants of Publick Schooles for the instruction of their children, relieve of their Poor, and Repairing of their Highways.

"Their petition being read and reasons given therein debated, It was voted in the negative, and that though they had not for some years been rated in the Town rate, yet for the time to come, the Selectmen should vote them in the Town Tax as the other Inhabitants, and as formerly they used to be, and for their encouragement it was voted that the Selectmen should provide a schoolmaster for them to teach their children to read, write and cypher, and order him his payment out of the Town Treasury.

"A True Coppie as entered with the records of the Town of Boston.

"Examined per

JOSEPH PROUT,
"Town Clerk."

The treatment which their petition received at the hands of the people of Boston was such as to make the inhabitants of the hamlet the more determined to become separated. They accordingly resolved to apply to higher power, which they did in the following language:

To his Excellency the Governor, Council and Assembly.

"The humble petition of the Inhabitants of Muddy River. Humbly Sheweth, That they are a Hamlet belonging to Boston, have been lately settled there and sometime since in the year 1686 being grown to a good number of inhabitants represented to the Government then in being, praying to be acquitted from paying duties and taxes to the Town of Boston, being then willing to bear their public charges of Bridges, Highwaies and Poor, and were accordingly then released and ordered to maintain a Reading and Writing Schoole as the order annexed will show, which accordingly we have ever since done, and now further humbly pray that being grown to a greater number of good settled inhabitants we may be allowed a separate right to have Selectmen, and all other rights belonging to a Township, which may further encourage us as we are able to settle a minister and other benefits amongst us, and we shall ever pray.

"SAMUEL SEWALL, JR.,
"THOMAS STEADMAN, SEN'R,
"THOMAS GARDNER, SEN'R,
"JOSEPH WHITE,
"BENJAMIN WHITE,
"JOHN WINCHESTER, SEN'R,
"SAMUEL ASPINWALL,
"JOSIAH WINCHESTER.

"Read in Council—The General Assembly sitting, June 17, 1704, and ordered, That the Selectmen of Boston have a copy of this petition and be heard thereon at ye next Session of this Court.

ISAAC ADDINGTON,

"Secretary.

"November 1, 1704. In Council, Ordered, That the Selectmen of Boston bee notified to attend on Saturday morning next, the fourth, current, November 4, 1704.

"Continued to next session. In House of Representatives, June 29, 1705. Read and sent up."

The town of Boston continued to oppose the setting off the hamlet by every means in their power, as may be seen by the following documents :

"At a meeting of the Freeholders and other Inhabitants of the Town of Boston duly qualified and warned according to law, being convened at the Town House in Boston, the 12th day of March, 1704—5, did then and there choose, Elisha Cook, Esq., Elder Joseph Bridgham, Capt. Ephraim Savage, Capt. Bezour Allen, and Capt. Oliver Noyes,—To be a Committee to consider and draw up what they should think proper (on the behalf of this Town) to lay before the General Court at their next session relating to a petition of sundry of the Inhabitants of Muddy River, that the said District be dismiss from the Town of Boston and be admitted to be a Town of themselves.

"Attest

JOSEPH PROUT,
"Town Clerk."

The committee having attended to their duty, reported the following :

"The Committee appointed to consider and draw up what might be thought proper to lay before the General Court relating to a petition of sundry persons of Muddy River, praying to be dismiss from the Town of Boston and admitted to be a town of themselves. Upon perusal of the said petition observed that several sessions of the General Court had passed after the time set for the hearing thereof and that consequently the matter then fell, however if it be again revived by any new petition or order, we think it proper to lay before the Court the unreasonableness of their demand, they having been hitherto supported by the Town while they were not able themselves to defray their necessary public charges, many of which might be enumerated, and the town charges, now increasing upon us and the body of ye town abounding with poor, and such as are not capable to defray, but rather greatly increase the charges for the Inhabitants of Muddy River at such a time, and being themselves now grown more opulent and capable to be helpful to ye town, to be sent from us seems most unreasonable, and in them very ungrateful and may be a bad example to others to endeavor the like, and to Cutt the town into such shreds, as will best suit themselves without any due regard to ye public Intrest, the charge of the Road upon ye neck is great and is still growing and ye petitions and Inhabitants of Muddy River have had more benefit and do more to increase the charge of that way, than all of the rest of the town. Several other things might be instanced which the Selectmen are well acquainted with and we think they ought (if the General Court see cause to proceed on the petition) to pray to be heard therein.

"ELISHA COOK.

"In the name and by order of ye Committee.

"In council, June 15, 1705.

"Read and ordered a hearing before this Court, on Tuesday the 19th Current. And that the Selectmen of Boston be notified thereof.

"ISAAC ADDINGTON, Secretary.

"Sent down for concurrence.

"June 15, 1705. Read in ye House of Representatives.

"June 20, 1705. Resolved that since the time of hearing of ye premises Before this Court is Slit. There should be a hearing thereof on friday next at three of the Clock in ye afternoon and that ye Selectmen of Boston be notified thereof.

"THOMAS OAKES, Speaker.

"Sent up for concurrence.

"Agreed to."

The selectmen of Boston having been duly notified agreeably to the foregoing order, submitted the following answer to the petition of the inhabitants of Muddy River :

"To his Excellency, Joseph Dudley, Esq., Captain-General and Commander-in-Chief, and to ye Honorable, ye Council and Assembly.

"The Answer of ye Selectmen and ye Committee of ye Town of Boston, to ye Inhabitants of Muddy River.

"Humbly Sheweth.

"That they have been as easy in this Town as they could in reason desire. That they have not urged anything in their petitions to the contrary. This Town has never called on them to support the ministry of the town as is usual in like cases in ye Country. They have not been enjoined to watchings and wardings, either stated or occasionally, which has layn heavy on ye body of the Town. That they have constantly had ye nominations of their own officers ye town has usually confirmed. Upon ye desire and Regular motion for a Schoole in that part of ye Town. It has bin allowed them. That lately there has not been more levied on them (and not always so much) as would defray the charges incident in that Part of ye Town and when as they mention in ye petition, it would in them in time to support the charge of a stated ministry thereby importing ye present inability, which seems a very preposterous arguing.

"The law requiring a settled ministry thereby as one qualification for a Township and some of the subscribers since ye signing have declared ye contrary Intentions. And that which makes this ye desire, the more unreasonable is that they have been hitherto supported by the Town, while they were not able themselves to defray ye public charges in too many instances to be enumerated. That it may be a precedent of ill consequences to ye public to divide Townships into small slips of land rendering them weak and every charge a Burden, tending to starve learning and religion out of ye countrey, especially when no reason of state requires. Ye consideration of which we submit to this honorable Court.

"We humbly offer further to this honorable Court that such a separation is contrary to ye undoubted right and interest of Boston, there being 500 acres of land comon in that part of the Town, which is the Town's right, but on a separation can be of no service to the Town. That the Town is very much straitened in its present boundaries by our former too easy concessions as was that of the Neck to Dorchester, or the Lane to Newtown and Cambridge, and the whole Townshipp of Braintree, and would so much more if Muddy River so near to us should be separated from the Town. Rumney Marsh, &c., would have a precedent to desire the same so that Boston would only be confined to this Isthmus of a mile long which was never thought sufficient bounds for a Townshipp, especially at this time when Boston is daily ye centre of all foreign poor, of saylors widows, and the refuge of our distressed neighbors from ye frontier who Insensibly grow upon us, so that upon the whole, we hope your Excellency's honorable Court will not grant the Sd. petition.

"June 22, 1705.

"Per order of the Selectmen,

"JOSEPH PROUT, Town Clerk.

"EPHRAIM SAVAGE, }
"BEZOUR ALLEN, } Committee."
"OLIVER NOYES, }

In consequence of the continued strenuous opposition to the petition of the people of Muddy River, another petition was sent to the Legislature in the fall of 1705, signed by thirty-two citizens of that village, as follows :

"To his Excellency, the Governor, Council, and Assembly, in General Court convened. The humble petition of the inhabitants of Muddy River, sheweth.

"That at a session of this honorable Court, held at Boston on 13 August, 1704, the said inhabitants exhibited their humble petition praying, that the said Muddy River might be allowed a separate village or peculiar, and be invested with such powers and rights, as they may be enabled by themselves to manage the general affairs of the said place. Which petition has been transmitted to the Selectmen of the Town of Boston, that they may consider the same; since which your humble petitioners, not having been informed of any objection made by the Town of Boston, aforesaid, we presume, that there is no obstruction to our humble request made in our petition.

"Wherefore we humbly beseech your Excellency, that this honorable Court will be pleased to proceed to pass an Act for the establishing of the said place a separate village or peculiar, with such powers as aforesaid, and your petitioners shall ever pray.

"Samuel Sewall, Jr.	Josiah Winchester.
"Thos. Gardner.	John Devotion.
"Benjamin White.	Joseph Gardner.
"Thomas Steadman.	Thomas Steadman, Jr.
"John Winchester.	John Ackers.
"Samuel Aspinwall.	Josiah Steadman.
"Eleazer Aspinwall.	Thomas Gardner, Jr.
"William Sharp.	Ralph Shepard.
"Edward Devotion.	Abraham Chamberlain.
"Josiah Winchester, Jr.	Peter Boylston.
"John Ellis.	John Ackers, Jr.
"John Winchester, Jr.	William Ackers.
"Thomas Woodward.	Benjamin White, Jr.
"— Holland.	Caleb Gardner.
"— Gardner.	John Seaver.
"Joseph White.	Henry Winchester."

The prayer of the above petition was granted on the thirteenth day of November, 1705, as appears by the following record of the town grants :

"Anno Regni Annæ Regine Quarte.

"At a great and general Court for her Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay, in New England, begun and held, at Boston upon Wednesday, 13th May, 1705 and continued by several prorogations unto Wednesday, 24th October, following and then met, 13th November, 1705.

"In Council.

"The order passed by the Representatives, upon the Petition of the inhabitants of Muddy River, a Hamlet of Boston, read on Saturday last,

"Ordered, That the praiser of the petition be granted; and the powers & Privileges of a Township, be given to the Inhabitants of the lands commonly known by the name of Muddy River, The Town to be called BROOKLYN; who are hereby enjoined to build a meeting-house, & obtain an able Orthodox Minister, according to the Direction of the Law, to be settled among them, within the Space of Three Years next coming.

"Provided, That all Common Lands, belonging to the Town of Boston, lying within the bounds of the said Muddy River, not disposed of, or allotted out, shall still remain to the Proprietors of said lands.

"Which order, being again read, was concurred, and is consented to.

"JOSEPH DUDLEY.

"A True Copy Examined by me,

"ISAAC ADDINGTON, Secretary."

Origin of Towns.—The early history of this section of country has a peculiar charm to those who are descendants of the early settlers, and they may take just pride in the fact that this is one of the finest specimens of a New England town. The origin of these bodies politic has a curious and interesting history. It is believed to have been an institution originating in and peculiar to the colonies, as nothing had existed like them in any of the older countries. The "Hundreds" or Tithings of England may have suggested the idea, but those have a different purpose. They are for the purpose of civil and domestic police, while the division of a territory into local districts, bounded by geographical lines, the inhabitants clothed with corporate powers and duties like the towns of old Massachusetts, is an institution originating in the colonies planted here. It is highly probable the result, in part, of accident at first, like many other measures of the early settlers, while, later on, their wisdom, foresight, and good judgment led them to adapt their policy to the condition of the people. Many of the early towns simply had the name changed by order of the General Court, as, for example, "that Trimountain shall be called Boston," while other settlements, in process of time, were allowed to organize and take on the form of town government on certain conditions, such as the support of the gospel, maintenance of highways, and the general management of municipal affairs, and the support of free schools. The chief requisition in the incorporation of this town being the building of a meeting-house and the supporting of an "orthodox minister."

"To be made a Town, then, in 1705, was to be admitted to an equal partnership in that great company of Massachusetts municipalities, which were gradually but surely building up the Colony into a grand Commonwealth, fit to take its stand and do its whole share in establishing and upholding an Independent and United Nation. The old Colony of Plymouth, with all its cherished Pilgrim associations, after just threescore years and ten of separate existence, had been made a part of Massachusetts, only fifteen years before, under the new Provincial Charter. There were at that time about eighty-two towns in Massachusetts, not including such as have since fallen within the jurisdiction of Maine, or other adjoining States; there are now, I believe, more than three hundred and forty. Brookline was the eighty-third, if my careful friend, Mr. W. H. Whitmore, has counted correctly; and she was not slow in attesting her title to be included in this goodly fellowship. Her records, indeed, afford ample evidence of the patriotism and public spirit which have characterized her inhabitants in every memorable period from that day to this."—Winthrop.

The inhabitants having been duly organized and become a town, entered immediately upon the duties of a municipal corporation. The first meeting was held at the old school-house on Monday, March 4, 1706, and the first business was to choose town officers. The following is a record of the first town-meeting:

" Brooklin 1706

"At a Meeting of the Inhabitants of Brooklin on Munday March 4th 1705/6 leagally warned

"Voted that Peter Boylston should sarve as Counstable for this present yeare

"Voted that five Select-men be chosen to manage the affairs of this Town. The parsons chosen by vote of ye Inhabitants to serve as Select men for this present yeare were Leut. Thomas Gardner Samuel Aspenwall John Winchester Josiah Winchester Mr Samuel Sewal

"Voted that Josiah Winchester sen'r should serve as Town clark for this yeare instant

"Voted that 3 mēt parson be chosen for Assessors for this present yeare

"Voted that Samuel Aspenwall Joseph Gardner and Rogger Adams should serve as Assessors for this yeare currant

"Voted that Daniel Harris and Samuel clark should sarve as Tything-men

"Voted that Eleazer Aspinwall Benjamin White jun'r and Robert Harris should serve as surveighers of High wayes

"Voted that John Winchester jun'r & Edward Devotion should serve as fence viewers

"Voted that Daniel Harris and Thomas Stedman jun'r should be overseers of the Common-Lands In Brooklin for this yeare Currant

"Voted that Nathaniel Holland and William Sharp should serve as Hawards or field-drivers for this yeare

"At a Town Meeting of ye Inhabitants of Brooklin March 25 1706 leagally warned

"Voted that John Winchester sen'r should serve as an assessor for this present yeare in the Rome of Rogger Adams who refused to serve

"Voted that there should be a Burying place in this Town of Brooklin.

"Voted that the Burying-place should be on a spot of Land on the south side of the Hill in Mr Cottons farm pointing between the two Roads if it can be attained.

"At this Meeting of the Inhabitants they were desired to manifest their minds concerning their Building a Mēting-house In Brooklin and setting an Orthodox Minister there which proposal was declined by them and left to further consideration

"Voted that twelve pound be levied by tax upon the Inhabitants of this Town for Repairing the School-House and for the Support of the School for this present yeare. 1706.

"John Winchester sen'r Samuel Aspenwall and Joseph Gardner being chosen Assessors of the province Tax to be levied on this Town for this present yeare, mad Oath to perform the work, and office of Assessors as the Law Directs adminisr to them by Josiah Winchester, Town clark, on March, 25, 1706

Ecclesiastical History.—Attending Church in Roxbury.—On the 10th of December, 1672, the meeting-house belonging to the church in Roxbury, where the people of Brookline attended, needing repairs, it was, "after much debate with love and condescending one to another, concluded by Voate to build a 'nue' meeting house as near the other as conveniently may be;" and on the 14th of April, 1674, the selectmen and the committee met at Sergt. Ruggles', and "there toke account of the number of hands that were hired to help 'raze' the nue meeting-house." In the construction of this building the people of Brookline contributed £104 5s., and worshiped there until the erection of their own church, in 1715, one-fifth part of the church being allotted to them, they having contributed in that proportion towards the parish expenses. Here follows a list of the contributors:

A List of the names and sums of our Brethren & neighbors of MUDDY RIVER that they contribute towards the erecting of a new meeting house in Roxbury.

	£	s.	d.		£	s.	d.
Thomas Gardner...	10	0	0	John Clarke.....	3	0	0
John White, Jr.....	10	0	0	Edward Mills.....	0	10	0
Peter Aspinwall....	7	0	0	James Clarke.....	1	10	0
John Sharpe, Jr....	5	0	0	Edward Devotion...	5	0	0
Thomas Boistan....	5	0	0	Henry Stevens.....	5	0	0
Richard Wolford...	1	10	0	John Parker.....	1	10	0
Andrew Gardner...	5	0	0	Edward Keebe.....	1	10	0
Joseph White.....	3	0	0	Goodwife Keebe....	0	10	0
Moises Crafts.....	2	0	0	Mrs. ——— Mather }	7	0	0
Clement Corban....	1	10	0	and
John Evens.....	0	15	0	James Rementon }	0	10	0
John Accers.....	1	10	0	Thomas Woodward
John Winchester...	3	0	0	Goodman Winches-	7	0	0
Robert Harrise....	4	0	0	ter
John Harise.....	2	0	0	Samuel Dunkin.....	1	10	0
Benjamin Chilk....	2	0	0
Denman Meriam...	1	0	0	Total.....	104	5	0

For many years previous to the incorporation of the town of Brookline the people subjected themselves to great inconveniences before they were able to erect a house of worship, and united with a neighboring society. Tradition informs us that they assembled regularly with the church in Roxbury, and according to the records of that church many were admitted members on equal terms with its own members, to partake of the benefit of gospel ordinances.

"In the year 1698 the Select men of Roxbury with the Deacons being a commite chosen by the Town of Roxbury for seating people in the meting House they sent to the Inhabitants of Muddyriver to request of them to send sum Men to set with them selves In sd commitie to Act for and in behalf of the rest of the Inhabitants in that Respect upon which motion the Inhabitants of Muddyriver being notified did convey to gather to consider of this matter and cam to this result that they would chuse by voate three men and send to assist In managin the matter aforesaid. the persons chosen were Leut. Thomas Gardner, Sarg't Benjamin White & John Winchester who met and sat with them at time and place appointed at which time it was demanded what Right and previledg the Town of Roxbury did apprehend that the Inhabitants of Muddyriver ought to enjoy in sd Meting-house and it was Granted they ought to have a fifth part and accordingly to defrey one fifth part of the expens & charge that did arise for Repairing sd Metinghouse. at which place namely at Mr. John Rugglises house at ye Flower-de-luce in Roxbury upon the 21 of February In the year 1699 the three men chosen as a foresaid by the Inhabitants of Muddy-river did on behalf the Rest of the Inhabitants defray the fifth part of all past and present charges their part amounting to six pound & four shillings."

First Meeting-House in Brookline.—When the act of incorporation was passed it contained a clause which enjoined the building of a meeting-house and the settling of an "able orthodox minister" within three years. But, for reasons not stated, this act was not carried into effect till nine years later. The first record having reference to the building of a meeting-house was

March 2, 1713.—"Voted that three men be chosen and appointed to surveh the limits of this town and to find the center or middle thereof and to inquire where a Convenient Place may be Procured whereon to build a meeting-house; as neare the center of said Town as may be."

"Voted that Samuel Aspinwall, John Druce & Peter Boylston be appointed a Committee to Manage the affaire relating to the Meeting-house aforesaid."

Several places for building were proposed, but, owing to a disagreement, a committee of the General Court was called to fix upon the location.

"At a Meeting of the Inhabitants of Brooklin. Regularly assembled on December 2d 1713. Mr Caleb Gardner jun'r did offer and tender freely to Give and bequeath raife and confirme unto the Town of Brooklin above said, a piece of Land nigh to his dwelling House, Lyeing west ward therefrom on the left hand of the Road way Leading to Roxbury. where on to build a Meeting house for the Publick worship of God.

"Voted that Leut. Thomas Gardnar Leut. Samuel Aspinwall Mr Joseph White. Mr Thomas Stedman and Mr John Sever, be a Commitee for the sd Town to treat with Mr Caleb Gardnar above sd about the Bounds of sd piece of Land, and to Desire of him a Legal Conveighance and Confirmation thereof to sd Town.

"Voted that the Meting-House aforesaid should be of the same Demensions with the Meting-House in the South-west part of Roxbury.

"Voted that Leut. Thomas Gardnar. Leut. Samuel Aspinwall Mr Erosamond Drew. Mr Thomas Stedman & Mr John Sever be a Committee to Manage the Concern or affair of Building the above said Meeting-House."

The committee of the General Court decided upon the above location as the best, and no further opposition was manifested. It must be borne in mind that at this time the cemetery lot on the south side of the road had not been purchased, and neither Cypress Street nor the old "Worcester Turnpike" had been thought of. The spot where this old meeting-house stood is that now occupied by Mr. John Townsend as a stable-lot, formerly the old parsonage ground. This "meting-hous spott" contained about one-quarter of an acre of land, and cost about fifteen pounds and eighteen shillings. The building stood with the side to the road, having entrances at the east and west ends, and a door in the centre of the front.

On account of the extra expense incurred in the erection of the meeting-house, Dec. 2, 1713, it was "voted not to send a Representative to General Court," as they were "too poor."

The frame of this church was raised Nov. 10, 1714, and the following anecdote is told of the two builders,—Deacon Samuel Clark and Lieut. Isaac Gardner :

"The young carpenters, when the frame was raised, played at leap-frog on the ridge-pole. They lived to be, the one eighty-one years of age and the other eighty-three, and each came to the same place of worship in his old age supported by two canes or crutches."

The meeting-house was forty-four feet long and thirty-five feet wide. It originally contained but fourteen pews and several long benches. There was a gallery, and probably long benches therein for the children, who, in those days, never sat with their parents. Afterwards fourteen more pews were added on the floor and four in the gallery. There was no steeple to this house till the town voted, in September, 1771, to build one.

It is generally supposed that those who assisted at the raising had a pretty good time, with plenty to eat and to cheer, as was the custom at raisings in those days. It also appears there was some fault found, as may be seen in the following vote :

October 31, 1715.—"Att a Town meeting. Legally Warned that whereas a Demurr being raised among the inhabitants of the Town Concerning the cost and manner of the Dinner that was Provided att the Raising of the meeting House."

"Voted that they do Allow both of the cost and manner thereof."

"Our meeting-house—our meeting-house,—

It stood upon a hill,
Where autumn gales and wintry blasts
Piped around it loud and shrill.

"No steeple graced its homely roof
With upward-pointing spire;
Our villagers were much too meek
A steeple to desire.

"And never did the welcome tones
Of Sabbath-morning bell
Our humble village worshippers
The hour of worship tell."

The pulpit was of oak, and upon it was kept an hour-glass for measuring the time. Over the pulpit was an immense sounding-board, a thing common in early days. A clock was a luxury not yet aspired to by the fathers of the town.

May 16, 1715.—Voted, "that the committee shall lay the lower floor and gallery floors, fill the walls with brick and laithe & Plaister with lime, to set up all the Windows and Glaze them and to make and set up all the Doors, to be performed with convenient speed, and that they shall also Clapboard the house throughout." Also voted, the committee "shall glaze the windows with Diamond glaze."

The building having at length been completed, it was dedicated to public worship June 3, 1715. Rev. Nehemiah Walter, pastor of the First Church in Roxbury, and for several years colleague with the famous "Apostle Eliot," preached the sermon. Next came the "Seating of the meeting-house." A principal part of the lower floor was divided into long seats, and heads of families were located in situations remote from their respective households. The seats were arranged by persons appointed by the town for that purpose, respect being had to dignity, age, standing, etc.

"March 12 1716 Att a meeting of the inhabitants of Brookline Legally warned:

"Voted that the vacant room in the meeting house aforesd. whereon to erect pews be disposed of by sale to those persons who by a committee chosen by the vote of the town for that end, shall think meet: and consequently a committee was elected: to wit: Josiah Winchester sen'r Erosamond Drew, Samuel Aspinwall, John Druce John Winchester Thomas Stedman & Benjamin White Jun'r.

"The Committee Chosen to dispose of the vacant room in ye meeting house whereon to Erect Pews & to value the same having concluded that Affair made their return. And by order of the select men it is here Entered to me John Seaver Town Clerk May 1-1718 & is as followeth—

"To Mr Sam'l Sewall the sd committee ordered that he should have that spott or room next the Pulpit on the west. & valued it at five pounds, who accepted thereof.

"To John Winchester sen'r said committee ordered that he should have the next spott or room westerly of mr Sewall's & valued it at four pounds & ten shillings who accepted thereof.

"To Capt. Sam'l Aspinwall the said Committee ordered that he should have that spott or room at the westerly Corner of the meeting house, & valued it at three pounds and fifteen shillings who accepted thereof

"To Lt. Thomas Gardner the said Committee ordered that he should have that spott or room between Capt. Aspinwall's And the westerly Door of the meeting house and valued it at four pounds & ten shillings who accepted yr of

"To John Seaver the said Committee ordered that he should have that spott or room between the westerly Door of the meeting house & the stairs leading to the mens Gallerie & valued it at four pounds & five shillings who accepted thereof

"To John Druce the said Committee ordered that he should have that spott or room on the left hand of the going up the stairs, into the mens Gallery & valued it at three pounds & ten shillings who accepted thereof.

"To Joseph Gardner the said Committee ordered that he should have that spott or room on the left hand of the coming in at the Southerly Door of the meeting house & valued it at three pounds & ten shillings who accepted thereof

"To Josiah Winchester sen'r the sd committee ordered that he should have that spott or room on the right hand of the coming in at the southerly Door of the meeting house & valued it at three pounds & ten shillings who accepted thereof

"To Thomas Stedman the said Committee ordered that he should have that spott or room between Josiah's Winchester's & the going up into the women's Gallery and valued it at three pounds and ten shillings who accepted thereof.

"To William Sharp the said Committee ordered that he should have that spott or room between the stairs leading up into the women's Gallery & the Easterly Door of the meeting house & valued it at four pounds and ten shillings who accepted thereof.

"To Ensign Benjamin White the said Committee ordered that he should have that spott or room on the right hand of the coming in at the east Door of the meeting house & valued it at three pounds who accepted thereof.

"To Benjamin White Jun'r the said Committee ordered that he should have that spott or room between Ensign White's and Peter Boylston's & valued it at four pounds who accepted thereof.

"To Peter Boylston the said committee ordered that he should have that spot or room at the North corner of the meeting house between Benjamin White's and the minister's Pew & valued it at three pounds and ten shillings who accepted yr of "The said Committee appointed the minister's pew to be next the Pulpit on the right hand of the going up into the Pulpit on the North"

When Hon. Jonathan Mason purchased the house formerly belonging to Deacon Benjamin White, now the residence of Hon. Theodore Lyman, he removed the old farm-house to make room for a new one in 1809, and between the floors was found a paper containing the following account of the manner in which the congregation were seated on the ninth day of March, 1719, as follows:

"Whole number of individuals seated, 66, of whom 28 couples were men and their wives.

"In the men's foreseat, in the body seats are seated Josiah Winchester, Capt. Aspinwall, Joseph Gardner and Edward Devotion.

"In the second seat, are seated William Story, Joseph Goddard, Thomas Woodward, Daniel Harris and John Ackers.

"In the third seat, are seated James Griggs, Samuel Newell, Abraham Chamberlain, Ebenezer Kendrick and Robert Harris.

"In the fourth seat, are seated Thomas Lee, William Davis and Joseph Scott.

"In the front foreseat in the gallery, are seated Caleb Gardner, Josiah Winchester, Samuel White, Henry Winchester, Joseph Adams, Robert Sharp, Thomas Cotton and Samuel Clark, Jun.

"In the foreseat in the side gallery, are seated Joshua Stedman, William Gleason, Dudley Boylston, Addington Gardner, John Taylor, Stephen Winchester and Philip Torrey.

"In the second seat in the front, are seated Isaac Gleason, John Wedge, Thomas Woodward, Jun., and James Goddard.

"In the women's foreseat, in the body seats are seated the wife of Josiah Winchester, sen., the widow Ackers, the wife of Joseph Gardner and the wife of Edward Devotion.

"In the second seat, are seated the wife of William Story, the wife of Joseph Goddard, the wife of Thomas Woodward, the wife of Daniel Harris, the wife of John Ackers and the widow Hannah Stedman.

"In the third seat, the wife of James Griggs, the wife of Samuel Newell, the wife of Abraham Chamberlain, the wife of Ebenezer Kendrick, and the wife of Robert Harris.

"In the fourth seat, the wife of Thomas Lee, the wife of William Davis, and the wife of Joseph Scott.

"In the front foreseat in the gallery, the wife of Samuel White, the wife of Henry Winchester, the wife of Joseph Adams, the wife of Robert Sharp and the wife of Samuel Clark, jun.

"In the foreseat in the side gallery, the wife of Joshua Stedman, the wife of William Gleason, the wife of Dudley Boylston, the wife of Addington Gardner, the wife of John Taylor.

"In the second seat in the front, the wife of John Wedge and the wife of James Goddard."

Second Meeting-House.—The old church edifice, after standing more than fourscore years, was quite inadequate to accommodate the increased population of the town. The congregation received quite a large accession, soon after Dr. Pierce's ordination, of Dorchester people who removed here, following their fellow-townsmen in whom they took a just pride. Among these were the Robinsons, Withingtons, Leeds, Tolmans, and others.

The subject of building a new meeting-house was soon agitated, and some mischievous person, probably desiring to facilitate the matter, set fire to the old one. It was soon discovered and extinguished after some damage to one of the rear corners.

May 16, 1804, it was voted to build a new meeting-house on the site of the old one.

This, however, was found to be impracticable for various reasons, and the vote was reconsidered. On the 5th of September of the same year it was voted to build the meeting-house on the spot occupied by the present house.

In April, 1805, the corner-stone was laid.

The frame was raised by the help of machinery in a few days. The architect and master-builder was Mr. Peter Banner, an Englishman. This man settled in Brookline, and for many years after his death his widow occupied the house in Aspinwall Avenue, until recently occupied by Mr. Melcher.

The new meeting-house stood fronting the street, with a grass-plot in front of it.

It was sixty-eight feet long and sixty-four feet wide, with a porch nineteen feet long and thirty-eight feet wide. There were lobbies or anterooms each side of the porch, eleven feet square. There was no cellar under the building, it being a rocky foundation, and the house was raised up a little from the ground, and openings on either side in the underpinning afforded space for ventilation.

The height of the house was thirty-five feet and six inches from the foundation to the eaves. The spire measured one hundred and thirty-seven feet from the ground.

There were seventy-four pews on the floor and fourteen in the gallery. Afterwards, during Dr. Pierce's ministry, some improvements were added. No provision was ever made for warming the old church, and the women carried foot-stoves with them. The new church was warmed by two square-box stoves in which wood was burned. The pulpit and the caps of the pews were made of Southern cherry-wood, contributed by Stephen Higginson, Jr.

The bell, which was cast in London and weighed one thousand pounds, was given by Hon. Stephen Higginson, father of the above.

Mr. John Lucas, who lived nearly opposite the Reservoir, gave four hundred dollars, out of which was purchased a clock.

Richard Sullivan, Esq., who lived on the place now owned by Mrs. Bowditch, gave a hundred and fifty dollars for the stone steps.

Mr. Thomas Walley gave an elegant pulpit Bible valued at thirty-six dollars.

Mr. David Hyslop gave a baptismal basin, which cost forty-seven dollars.

The whole cost of the house was eighteen thousand and eighty-three dollars. Some additional expenses (of furnishing probably) brought the amount up to twenty thousand one hundred and ninety-three dollars, and the whole was apportioned on the pews, which were sold at auction.

No pew on the first floor was priced at less than one hundred and sixty dollars, and none in the gallery at less than one hundred and ten dollars. The highest cost of a pew, including a bonus paid for a choice, was five hundred and twenty-five dollars.

Dr. Pierce preached a valedictory sermon on leaving the old house, June 8, 1806.

The valedictory sermon was from the text, "Lord, I have loved the habitation of thy house and the place where thine honor dwelleth."

The dedication sermon, June 11, 1806, was from the words, "In all places where I record my name, I will come unto thee and I will bless thee."

The next day the work of demolishing the old church commenced. The ancient pulpit, which had been faithfully pounded and belabored by the fists of the energetic Mr. Jackson, was denuded of its upholstery, and carried into the parsonage attic, where it served as a play-house for the pastor's children for many years. The hour-glass, whose sands had run through many a tedious hour for the unfed souls in the old house, or had needed turning only too quickly for the more devotional, now served its time in fleeting minutes among the attic treasures of the little ones. The ancient pewter christening basin, from which Mr. Jackson had bathed the infant brow of many a now gray-haired father and mother of the town, was turned to domestic uses in the pastor's house.

The ancient church for many years, instead of having a sexton, was taken care of by a slave belonging to the Sewall family, as Henry Sewall's bill against the town for the services of his "slave Felix" in that capacity is still in existence.

The first white sexton of whom we can gather any account was a man named Blanchard, who lived in a little house on the Aspinwall estate, close to Washington Street. He was succeeded, if we are correctly informed, by Capt. Benjamin Bradley, who served for many years in that capacity after the second meeting-house was built.

In 1829 or 1830, Mr. Elisha Stone succeeded Capt. Bradley as sexton of the church, which office he filled for thirty years. He was a plodding but faithful citizen in the duties not only of his office as sexton, but was the only undertaker and constable in the town for many years. He lived to lay away all but two of his own large family in the cemetery whither he had carried so many of our townspeople, and where he at last was borne, worn out with the infirmities of age.

Previous to Dr. Pierce's time there had been presented at various times to the First Church four silver tankards. One was the gift of Edward Devotion, in 1744; one the gift of Miss Mary Allen, daughter of the first minister, in 1750; one was given by Miss Ann White, and one by Mrs. Susanna Sharp in 1770. In the same year two silver cups were presented by Thomas and Mary Woodward, and two more were given by William Hyslop in 1792. This ancient silver is still the property of the church, just as it was presented.

In addition to these, two silver cups were presented by Miss Prudence Heath, in 1818, and two by Deacon Robinson and wife the same year.

Third Meeting-House.—The meeting-house and the minister grew old together. There would have been something incongruous in the building of a modern church, with stained-glass windows and new and fashionable appointments, while Dr. Pierce was the only minister. The house and the minister were in perfect adaptation to each other. Many regretted that the fine, substantial old edifice should be taken down. It much resembled Dr. Putnam's church, on Roxbury Hill, and might have been as well preserved till the present day; but there being no cellar under it, furnaces could not be introduced, and it was not thought advisable to refit a building which must be warmed by stoves. It was also difficult for Mr. Knapp to preach in it. In 1848 the new church at present standing was built. The corner-stone for a new church was laid June 1, 1848. The dedication took place Dec. 1, 1848. The shrubbery around it was set out by Dr. Charles Wild, in the spring of 1849.

First Church of Brookline.—This church was organized Oct. 26, 1717, and the following covenant was read and adopted:

"We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, apprehending ourselves called of God to join together in church communion, acknowledging our unworthiness of such a privilege, and our inability to keep covenant with God, unless Christ shall enable us thereto, in humble dependence on free grace for divine assistance and acceptance, do in the name of Jesus Christ, freely covenant and bind ourselves to serve the Lord, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, cleaving to him as our chief good; and unto our Lord Jesus as our only Saviour, prophet, priest and king of our souls, avouching the Lord to be our God, and the God of our children, whom we give unto him, counting it a high favour, that the Lord will accept of us, and our children with us to be his people.

"We do also give ourselves unto another in the Lord, covenanting to walk together, as a Church of Christ, in all the ways of his worship, according to his word; promising in brotherly Love, to watch over one another's souls, and to submit ourselves to the discipline of Christ in his church, and to attend the seals and censures, or whatever ordinances Christ has commanded to be observed by his people; beseeching the Lord to own us for his people, and to delight to dwell in the midst of us. That we may keep our covenant with God, we desire to deny ourselves, and to depend on the free mercy of God and merits of Christ; and, wherein we fail, to wait on him for pardon, through his name, beseeching the Lord to own us, as a Church of Christ, and to delight to abide in the midst of us."

This covenant was read in public, and the church gathered by the Rev. Ebenezer Thayer, pastor of the Second Church of Christ in Roxbury, Oct. 26, 1717, one hundred and sixty-seven years ago. At that time seventeen males and twenty-two females were united in church fellowship.

List of the original members of the First Church in Brookline, Oct. 26, 1717:

Males.

James Allen.	Joshua Stedman.
Thomas Gardner.	John Winchester.
John Winchester.	Caleb Gardner.
Joseph White.	Benjamin White.
Josiah Winchester.	Samuel White.
Samuel Sewall.	Amos Gates.
William Story.	Ebenezer Kenrick.
Joseph Goddard.	Addington Gardner.
Thomas Stedman.

Females.

Mary Gardner.	Sarah Winchester.
Joanna Winchester.	Abiel Gardner.
Hannah White.	Ann White.
Mary Winchester.	Hannah Kenrick.
Mary Boylston.	Tryphena Woodwar
Sarah Stedman.	Eunice Clark.
Desire Ackers.	Mary Gardner.
Hannah Stedman.	Susanna Gardner.
Rebecca Sewall.	Elizabeth Boylston.
Abigail Story.	Elizabeth Taylor.
Mary Stedman.	Francis Winchester.

The deacons of the First Church in Brookline have been as follows:

Thomas Gardner, elected Dec. 7, 1718.

Benjamin White, elected Dec. 7, 1718; resigned Feb. 12, 1749.

Samuel Clark, resigned Feb. 12, 1749; died May 7, 1766, age 81.

Thomas Cotton, dismissed to Pomfret.

Ebenezer Davis, elected Feb. 19, 1749; resigned April 5, 1770; died Sept. 30, 1775, age 72.

Joseph White, elected Feb. 19, 1749; resigned April 5, 1770; died Aug. 19, 1777, age 75.

Elisha Gardner, elected April 15, 1770; resigned Dec. 2, 1792; died Jan. 29, 1797, age 70.

William Bowles, elected April 15, 1770; dismissed to Newton, Sept. 20, 1772.

Samuel Clark, elected Feb. 27, 1797; died March 29, 1814, age 61.

John Robinson, elected Feb. 27, 1797; died Jan. 13, 1855, age 92.

Joshua Child Clark, elected May 1, 1814; died July 4, 1861, age 80.

Abijah Warren Goddard, elected Oct. 17, 1856.

Benjamin B. Davis, elected Oct. 17, 1856; died Aug. 22, 1877.

First Church.—The church having been organized, and the meeting-house completed, the next in order was to choose a minister. On the 23d of July, 1718, a fast was observed in the new church "to seek divine direction in the ordination of a minister." Rev. Dr. Cotton Mather and Rev. Dr. Colman officiated on that occasion.

Dec. 10, 1716, the following vote was passed, viz.:

"Att a meeting of the Inhabitants of Brookline legally warned, chose mr James Allin to be our settled minister in sd Town.

"Voted to give mr Allin 100 pounds gratuity for settlement & 80 pounds Sallary."

On the 18th of February, 1717, the following persons were chosen to treat with Mr. James Allen, viz.: Lieut. Thomas Gardner, John Winchester, Joseph White, Ensign Benjamin White, Josiah Winchester, Capt. Samuel Aspinwall, and Erosaman Drew.

Mr. Allen having accepted the call extended him, he was ordained Nov. 5, 1718, as their first pastor. Rev. Benjamin Colman, D.D., and Rev. Benjamin Wadsworth, D.D., made the prayers on that occasion; Rev. Cotton Mather, D.D., gave the charge, Rev. Jeremiah Shepard, of Lynn, gave the right hand of fellowship. Mr. Allen preached his own sermon, as was customary in the early days of the church settlements: text, Matthew xxiv. 45, 46, 47: "Who then is a faithful and wise servant?"

Rev. James Allen was the son of Peter and Mary Allen, born in Roxbury, Mass., June 5, 1692; graduated at Harvard College, 1710. He was a man of piety and talents. For the greater portion of his ministry he and his people were happily united. During the troublous times which deeply agitated the churches in this region just before the middle of the last century, he was active in the new measures which were then pursued. But from certain causes, to such excesses did it lead, that he, who had during its progress considered it as the work of God, in a public and explicit manner ascribed it to a very different origin. This led many to join a new society, which had for its pastor Mr. Jonathan Hyde, a zealous but illiterate layman from Canterbury, Conn., who was ordained Jan. 17, 1751. Mr. Allen preached in this town for about twenty-eight years. He lived on the south side of Walnut Street, nearly opposite Cypress Street, where he died of a lingering consumption, and was buried in the Brookline Cemetery. The character of Mr. Allen, as given by his contemporaries and by others who were well acquainted with him, is that of a pious and judicious divine, and the seven publications of his do honor to his head and his heart. He died on the 18th of February, 1747, aged fifty-six.

The printed works of Mr. Allen were:

1. "A Thanksgiving Sermon." Psalms cxvi. 12. Nov. 8, 1722.

2. "The Wheels of the World Governed by a Wise Providence." Ezekiel i. 15-16. 1727.

3. "The Doctrine of Merit Exploded and Humility Recommended." Luke xvii. 10. 1727.

4. "Thunder and Earthquake, a Loud and Awful Call to Reformation." Isaiah xxix. 6. A fast-day sermon occasioned by the earthquake in 1727.

5. "Evangelical Obedience the Way to Eternal life." A sermon to a society of young men in Brookline. Matthew xix. 16-17. 1731.

6. "The Eternity of God, and the Short Life of Man Considered." A sermon on the death of Samuel Aspinwall, A.M. Psalms cii. 11-12. Aug. 13, 1732.

7. "Magistracy an Institution of Christ upon the Throne." An election sermon. Isaiah vi. 1. May 30, 1744.

After the decease of Mr. Allen, Rev. Mr. Walley, who had been supplying the pulpit during Mr. Allen's last illness, preached occasionally, and May 13, 1747, the following was the action of the town:

"Voted that the Town Desired to hear some other Ministers besides Mr. Walley

"Voted that the Select Men are to Provide three young Ministers to preach two Sabbath Days Each Namely Mr. Wally Mr. Cheekly and Mr. Hale."

May 18, 1747. "Voted that the Select men are to procure Mr. Stevens and Mr. Harrington to preach two Sabbath Days Each"

Several candidates supplied the pulpit till Feb. 12, 1748, when the town voted as their "choise" Rev. Cotton Brown, of Haverhill, Mass., who was ordained their pastor, Oct. 26, 1748. Rev. Mr. Cotton, of Newton, and Rev. Mr. Walter, of Roxbury, offered prayers; Dr. Appleton, of Cambridge, gave the charge; Rev. Mr. Townsend, of Needham, gave the right hand of fellowship; Rev. Samuel Cook preached the sermon from 2 Timothy ii. 2, which was published. So short was his ministry that his people hardly had an opportunity to become acquainted with him before he was summoned to the world of spirits. He died of a violent fever, April 13, 1751. Rev. Cotton Brown was the son of Rev. John and Joanna (Cotton) Brown, and grandson of Rev. Rowland Cotton, of Sandwich, Mass., and a lineal descendant of Rev. John Cotton, of Boston, who formerly held a large amount of land in Brookline, among the earliest allotments. He was born in Haverhill, Mass., about 1726, graduated at Harvard College, 1743. He was engaged to Mary Allen, a daughter of his predecessor, Mr. Allen, and the house known as the "Walley" house was erected for him to live in. The young lady, however, died in 1750, and he died in 1751, at the early age of twenty-five, having been pastor two years, five months, and eighteen days.

The eminent Dr. Cooper, of Brattle Street Church, spake thus of his character at the time of his decease:

"He was a gentleman, who, by the happiness of his genius, his application to study, and taste for polite literature, his piety and prudence, his sweetness of temper and softness of manners, had raised in his friends the fairest hopes, and gave them just reason to expect in him one of the brightest ornaments of society and a peculiar blessing to the church."

Mr. Brown was buried in Brookline Cemetery.

Rev. Samuel Haven, afterwards of Portsmouth, N. H., from 1752 to 1806, was invited to settle as pastor, but did not accept their offer.

Subsequently Rev. Robert Rogerson, a foreigner, received a call from the church and parish, which he accepted. But certain difficulties arising among the people, he was dismissed by a council in 1753. He afterwards became pastor of a church in Rehoboth, Mass., where he passed a long life in the ministry, highly beloved, respected, and eminently useful.

The next clergyman who accepted a call to the Brookline church was Mr. Nathaniel Potter, of Elizabeth, N. J., who was ordained pastor of the church Nov. 19, 1755. He remained in this connection three years and a half. He had been hastily called from a distant city, without credentials, and was as hastily settled. Of him Dr. Pierce remarked in an anniversary sermon, that "though professedly orthodox in faith, he was destined, during a short ministry, to give woeful emphasis to the apostle's monition, 'Lay hands suddenly on no man.'"

A bill presented to the town by Deacon Elisha Gardner for the expenses of this man's ordination possesses a curious interest when viewed with modern eyes:

"to money Paid at The ordination.

old tenor.....	£6. 0 0 0
to Rum.....	£1. 1 4. 0
to Shugar.....	£1. 1 0. 6
to spice.....
to turces (turkeys?).....	3 0. 0. 0
to fouts.....	1. 1. 0 0
to pork.....	3 0 4 6
to crambres.....	0 0 8 0
to puding pans.....	0 1 5 0

£18. 0 2 6"

Of this charge the selectmen ordered the paying of £2 8s. 4d., and probably the society paid the rest.

Ordinations in those days evidently involved the consideration of material as well as spiritual wants for the time being.

Agreeably to his request, he was dismissed June 17, 1759. He delivered a discourse, Jan. 1, 1758, from Jeremiah viii. 20, entitled "A New Year's Gift."

Immediately after the departure of Mr. Potter the church proceeded to select another pastor. They were not long without a regular supply for their pulpit, as on the 24th of December the church and parish were united in their choice of Rev. Joseph Jackson to be their pastor. A call was extended to him, who was then a tutor in Harvard College, where he had often preached. The following is the letter of acceptance of the call:

"Mr. Jacksons Answer

"CAMBRIDGE Feb'y 2 1760

"To the Church & Congregation in Brookline

"My Christian Friends and Bretheren.

"Having by a Committee appointed by you for that purpose received an account of your proceedings with regard to the settlement of a Minister, and that the great need of the Church, has disposed your hearts to make choice of me however unworthy, to take the pastoral charge over you, and to desire my answer to your kind Invitation

"This is therefore in answer to said invitation to inform you: that being deeply sensible of the difficulty and importance of a right discharge of the Ministerial office, and from such light as I have been able to obtain, I find myself disposed to accept of your invitation, with this Proviso, that it shall pleas'd to engage, in case, that Contribution which was Voted shall in any year fall short of thirteen Pounds, Six Shillings & Eight pence, that you will yearly during the time of my being your Pastor, Make up such deficiency, so as to make a sum equal to thirteen Pounds, Six Shillings & Eight pence p^a annum which Sum I have been informed by certain Persons they supposed the condition would amount to.

"I ask this not from any desire of making a large estate or living in extravagance at your expense but on the other hand, that I may be so supported as to give myself wholly to the work of the Ministry without any incumbrance on my worldly Affairs —And also that fixing the said Sum may serve to prevent any future uneasiness, which Tho. I have no reason to expect from you in particular, might Nevertheless possibly happen If I Should hereafter be necessitated to ask it. Your compliance with this alteration in your offers I may rather expect, by being informed in conversation that it was Very likely the Town would comply with it, and also from that kind & generous disposition you have already discovered to wards me. Thus my friends, I should choose to Settle among you, to spend & be spent for you, together with my reasons therefor, which I apprehend are no ways inconsistent with that Christian spirit which I desire to exercise to wards you nor with the Character of a Minister of Jesus Christ.

"And now may God so overrule your proceedings as shall most effectually tend to advance his glory & the welfare of your immortal Souls.

"If he should so order it, that I should be your Pastor, may I have grace given me from above so to impart to you in spiritual things as that you may never have occasion to repent of bestowing on me these that are temporal That the divine blessing may always rest upon you, and that you may have direction from Above in all your proceedings, is the earnest Prayer of him who wishes your welfare in this and the coming world

"JOSEPH JACKSON"

On the 3d of March, 1760, Moses White, Isaac Winchester, Elisha Gardner, and Joshua Boylston were chosen a "Com'ty to provide for y^e Counsel;—and the sum of Ten pounds to be assessed on the inhabitants to defray the charges of Said Ordination." After the usual preparation, Mr. Jackson was regularly ordained on the 9th of April, 1760. The Rev. Seth Storer, of Watertown, and Rev. Dr. Ebenezer Pemberton, of Boston, offered the prayers; Rev. Dr. Nathaniel Appleton, of Cambridge, gave the charge; Rev. Samuel Checkley, of Boston, gave the right hand of fellowship; Rev. Dr. Samuel Cooper, of Boston, preached the sermon (from 2 Tim. i. 7),, which sermon was published.

Rev. Joseph Jackson was born in Boston about 1734, graduated at Harvard College in 1753 (commenced preaching soon after), and for several years was tutor in that institution.

"The great Parent of man, and the Supreme Disposer of all, was pleased, in his discriminating goodness, to favor Mr. Jackson with shining mental powers, which under the advantages of a collegiate education, were much enlarged. He was quick of apprehension, clear in perception, and in the comprehension of his understanding or soundness of judgment few excelled him. He was wonderfully endued with talents which qualified him for the important work of the Gospel ministry, and made him a burning and shining light in this part of the vineyard of the Lord,—whose praises is in all our churches."

He ever sustained a fair moral character, worthy of imitation: his regularity and uniform punctuality were remarkable traits in it. Those well acquainted with him must have seen his amiable deportment in the several relations of life,—as a faithful, tender husband, an affectionate father, a just and equal master; as a friend, true to his professions, safely to be confided in; as a minister, diligent, laborious, skillful,—aiming, in his discourses, to inform the mind, affect the heart, and regulate the conduct. Few composed their sermons with so much ease, and yet so pertinently. He was a scriptural, intelligent, and edifying preacher, and judiciously noticed the dispensations of Providence for the instruction and benefit of his hearers. Above all, he was a man of piety and true devotion,—a sincere disciple and servant of Jesus Christ. He was an example in word, in conversation, in charity, in faith, in purity, and in all the virtues which adorn the Christian and ministerial character. So he lived, and when he died he received the glorious reward of those who are faithful to the end. He died July 22, 1796, in the sixty-second year of his age, and in the thirty-seventh year of his ministry.

Rev. Jacob Cushing, of Waltham, Mass., preached a sermon at his funeral, July 25, 1796, from the text Luke xii. 35–37, which sermon was published.

The proceedings at the ordination of Mr. Jackson were somewhat like his predecessor, and the bill of expenses was more than double the appropriation, as may be seen by the following bill:¹

"Brookline, 1760. Elisha Gardner's account to providing at the Ordination of mr. Joseph Jackson. old tenor to cash for Sundries at the ordination.....	£14. 00. 0
to cash for crambres and Ross water	2. 00. 0
to cash for butter and Eggs and Pickels.....	2. 15. 0
to cash for to pay the Cakes.....	6. 00. 0
	£24. 15. 0

Errors Excepted.
Allowed by the Selectmen."

It appears by the above bill that the rum and sugar were omitted in this bill, but probably "Ross water" served the purpose instead.

It seems that the church needed some repairs, and that, as they were to have a new minister, they must put the building in good order. The following bill was presented two days after the ordination:

"Aprel the 11 Day 1760.
for work Brookline Meeting house on the Pulpit
Laying a floore in the Same and Raising the Same and Paint and Painting, for weather	£ s. d.
Boards and Doore.....	2.- 2.-8
caseings for one End of the Meeting hous.....	0.- 5.-4 for a Lock for the Doore and a Paire of.....	9.-4
hinges	5.-9
for three Bolts and three Quarters of a hundred of Board nails	4.-8
for the Doors and Step. Except Arrows.....	1.-10.-0 £4.-17.-9
"EBENEZER THWING."

A year later was the following:

"BROOKLINE March 19, 1761.

"The Select men of Brookline in Behalf of ye town to Joshua Davis Dr. Decem 16th

¹ A common occurrence at the present day, to exceed appropriations.

To a Shutter for the Meting-house & a Draw for ye Bible Putting up ye same..... £0.- 5.-4
To a bench for the School and mending seats..... 5.-4

10.-8

"Errors Excepted

"JOSHUA DAVIS."

Mr. Jackson married Hannah, daughter of John Avery, Esq., of Boston, and had two children, a son and daughter. Sarah married, first, Atherton Thayer, of Braintree; second, Stephen Thayer. His son, Joseph, graduated at Harvard College, 1787; student of medicine at Portsmouth, N. H., where he died, Aug. 19, 1790. The mother died Oct. 2, 1800.

After the death of Joseph Jackson, at a meeting of the town held Aug. 29, 1796, Dr. William Aspinwall, Isaac S. Gardner, Esq., and David Hyslop were chosen a committee to supply the pulpit. The first person called to preach on probation was Rev. John Pierce, A.M., of Dorchester, Mass. Previous to this time a Rev. Mr. Merrick, a resident of Brighton, and a native of England, and Rev. Thomas Craft, of North Bridgewater, who had been dismissed from Princeton, Mass., and others, supplied the pulpit. On the 2d day of October, 1796, Dr. Pierce preached his first sermon to Brookline people, preached four Sabbaths, and then went to Quincy to fulfill a prior engagement. Rev. James Hawley supplied the pulpit till the return of Mr. Pierce. On the 27th of November, 1796, he resumed preaching in Brookline, and at the end of a few weeks, after preaching ten sermons, the church held a meeting in the old brick school-house, and passed the following votes:

1. "Voted to proceed to the choice of a gospel minister to settle in the town by written Votes."

2. "Voted To choose a committee to wait upon the selectmen with a copy of the votes passed at this meeting and request them to call a Town Meeting, to know whether the Town approve of the choice the church have made of Rev John Pierce for a gospel minister to settle in this town, and will unite in making adequate appropriation for his Support."

3. "Voted, That Messrs Samuel Clark—Ebenezer Davis, and David Hyslop be a committee for the above purpose."

4. "Voted, To choose a committee to be joined with such, as the congregation may see fit to appoint, to wait upon Mr. John Pierce with a copy of the Votes of the church and congregation and invite him to settle in this town, and be our minister."

5. "Voted, That Messrs William Aspinwall, Isaac S. Gardner and David Hyslop be a committee for the above purpose."

"Attest, ISAAC S. GARDNER,

"Clerk to the church."

"Decem'r 20, 1796.

"At a meeting of the inhabitants of the Town of Brookline holden on the 20th Day of December 1796. for the purpose of knowing whether the Congregation would concur with the choice the Church made at their meeting holden on the 13th Inst. of Mr. John Pierce for a Gospel Minister to settle in this Town;

"Also to know whether the Town will make appropriation for his settlement and Salary &c.

"Wm. Aspinwall Esquire was chosen Moderator.

"The Inhabitants gave in their votes and upon counting the same it appeared that Mr. John Pierce was unanimously chosen.

"Voted unanimously to give Mr. John Pierce Five hundred Dollars as a Gratuity or settlement.

"Voted unanimously, to give Mr. John Pierce four hundred Dollars and sixteen Cords of wood Deliv'd at his Door, or one hundred & six Dollars sixty six tenths & seven mills, in lieu of the wood, also the use of the Parsonage House Barn &c. annually, for his salary so long as he shall continue to be our Minister—provided he shall accept Our invitation to settle with Us.

"Then Stephen Sharp and Mr. Ebenezer Heath were chosen a Committee to Join the Committee Chosen by the Church, to wait on Mr. Pierce, with a Copy of the proceedings of the Church and Congregation, and invite him to settle in this Town and be Our Minister.

"Then the Meeting was Dissolved.

"Attest STEPHEN SHARP Town Clerk."

"February 6, 1797.

"At the meeting of the Inhabitants of the Town of Brookline, at the brick School house, warnd & assembled according to Law—For the purpose of receiving the report of the Committee appointed to wait on Mr. John Pierce & acquaint him of the proceedings of the church & congregation, and to transact & do any thing relative to the Settlement of a Minister.

"Stephen Sharp was chosen Moderator.

"Mr. Pierce's answer being read a copy of which is as follows. viz.

"To the Church and Town of Brookline

"Christian Friends

"Having taken your proposals into serious and attentive consideration, and sought such counsel and direction, as the importance of the subject demands, I take this opportunity to inform you that I accept your invitation to settle with you in the ministry.

"As to that part of the terms, which you have left optional with me, my choice is to receive the wood.

"From the kindness you as a town, have always discovered towards your ministers as well, as from the unanimity, which has marked all your proceeding respecting me, I trust you will ever make provision for my comfortable support 'so long as I shall continue to be your Minister.'

"That your brotherly love may continue & increase, that no root of bitterness springing up may disturb your harmony, that you may grow in grace, in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and improve in every Christian virtue, is the fervent wish and shall ever be the constant aim of "your servant

"in the Lord

"JOHN PIERCE.

"CAMBRIDGE, January 31st, 1797."

Dr. Pierce was regularly ordained March 15, 1797. There were present representatives of twelve churches, as a council, convened for the purposes of ordination. After an introductory anthem, the male members of the church were asked if they wished to accept of the Rev. John Pierce as their pastor. An affirmative reply was made, when the candidate made the following response:

"In the same public manner you, my Christian friends, again invite me to settle with you in the ministry. I renew my acceptance. My inexperience in the sacred profession I have undertaken fills me with painful emotions hitherto unknown. I cannot withhold my most earnest wishes, as it is the subject of my constant prayers, that the solemnities of this day may cement a union which may both promote the cause of religion and conduce to our mutual happiness."

Rev. John Bradford, of Roxbury, led the service in prayer. The sermon—text, 1 Corinthians iii. 10–15—was by the Rev. Thaddeus Mason Harris, of Dorchester, of whom it is said he preached his first and his last sermons in this town. Ordaining prayer was by Rev. Peter Thacher, D.D., of Boston. The charge was by Rev. Jacob Cushing, of Waltham. Right hand of fellowship was tendered by Rev. Eliphalet Porter, of Roxbury, of the church where our fathers formerly worshiped. The concluding prayer was by the Rev. William Greenough, of the Second Church in Newton, the exercises closing with an anthem, "Arise, Shine, O Zion," etc., under the leadership of Isaac S. Gardner, Esq.

The history of the First Church or the town would not be complete without an account of the Rev. Dr. John Pierce. He perhaps did more than any other person to give character to the habits and life of early Brookline. On one occasion a neighboring clergyman, the Rev. Dr. Putnam, said, "As I understand it, Dr. Pierce is Brookline, and Brookline is Dr. Pierce," in 1797. Rev. John Pierce, D.D., the son of John and Sarah (Blake) Pierce, was born in Dorchester, Mass., July 14, 1773. His father was a shoemaker, an honest, intelligent, religious man; died Dec. 11, 1833, aged over ninety-one years. From his earliest childhood he had an earnest desire to become a minister. He commenced to study Latin with the same woman who taught his mother, and in 1789 entered Harvard College, graduating with high honors in 1793, with an excellent reputation as a scholar. After leaving college he was assistant preceptor of Leicester Academy for two years. In 1795 he commenced the study of theology with Rev. Thaddeus Mason Harris, of Dorchester; approved by the Boston Association, Feb. 22, 1796, and preached for the first time in his native town March 6th, the same year. At the close of the year 1796 he became a tutor in Harvard College, where he remained four months, and while there was called to settle in the town of Brookline, where he spent the remainder of his days. He died Aug. 24, 1849, aged seventy-six years. Dr. Pierce was a fine-looking, tall, large-framed man, with a countenance "beaming with cheerfulness and benignity." His hair from his early manhood was almost white, and became beautiful in its snowy whiteness long before he was old. He remarked during his last sickness that for forty years he had not known what it was to have a physical infirmity worth naming. He had always had a habit of rising early, and either sawing or splitting wood or working in his garden for two hours or more before breakfast. He was so vigorous a walker that, when on an exchange anywhere within six or seven miles, he used to go out and back on foot, and without fatigue.

He was temperate both in eating and drinking, and economical without a shade of meanness or miserly tendency.

In March, 1849, Dr. Pierce was seized with a sharp, sudden illness. Relief was obtained, but not a cure. He continued to suffer great pain, and, as weeks passed on, seemed gradually failing. During his long ministry he had lost only thirteen Sabbaths by ill health, and several of those were in 1805, when he had a rheumatic fever.

He belonged to a long-lived family, and though at an age when most men grow infirm, he was as elastic and vigorous as a boy till the day of his first attack of illness.

All was done that love and skill could suggest to arrest the course of the disease, but in vain; and it soon became apparent that the beloved pastor and friend of the people was soon to be called away. Unused as he was to illness, there was no irritability or impatience, and with unfailing serenity and cheerfulness he waited for the end. In August of that year a new organ was placed in the church, and on Saturday, the 18th, there was a trial of the instrument.

This was, of course, an event of great interest to one so fond of music as the doctor; and though he was too feeble to walk or ride, he was carried in his chair by some of his young friends to the church. There he read some passages from the Scriptures and a hymn, joining heartily in the singing. At his own special request the tune sung was "Old Hundred," which Dr. Pierce used to say was "the best tune that ever was written or ever would be."

All rose and sung the hymn standing, except the doctor himself, who playfully asked that the old pastor be excused, as he no longer belonged to "the rising generation."

He was borne to his home by the same loving hands, never to be carried out again till he was carried for burial. Daily, however, he received the visits of a host of friends, who came laden with flowers, fruits, or other proofs of their affection, and, in the words of another, "wealth never purchased and power never won attentions of all kinds so devoted and loving as were gladly rendered without stint, and in constant anticipation of his slightest wishes," not merely from his own society or townspeople, but from all sects and many towns and the neighboring cities.

Dr. Pierce failed very rapidly after his visit to the church at the trial of the organ, but retained possession of his faculties and consciousness until the evening of Thursday, August 23d.

His last words were spoken that evening to Mr. Shailer, who with the family and two or three near friends were present. Mr. Shailer made an inquiry respecting the petition which he should offer for him in the evening prayer, to which he replied, "Entire submission to the Divine will." He never spoke again, but still reclining in the chair which he had occupied for weeks without lying down, he quietly breathed his last at half-past eleven, in the forenoon, Aug. 24, 1849, aged seventy-six years.

No one has any moral right to do for him that which he always refused to do for himself—class him anywhere as a theologian. He must be simply known as an "eclectic Christian," to use his own terms; and if this phrase is indefinite, it must be remembered that it has all the precision which he desired. On one point we may, however, be very explicit. He set his face like a flint against every form of sectarian exclusiveness and bigotry, and was only intolerant towards those who ventured to judge any body of believers in Christ, and to deny them the Master's name.

Towards some views—more or less prevalent in New England of late years—he might have failed a little in preserving that "charity which is not easily provoked;" but on the whole, his Catholicism was a marked trait in his character, which, often severely tried, was seldom found wanting. He was an earnest, plain preacher; dealing generally with practical subjects, without seeking originality of thought or being remarkable for any graces of rhetoric.

But his style was that of former days; and few men have retained so much of their early acceptableness in the pulpit, owing to the impression he made upon his hearers of his own deep sincerity and unfeigned piety. You felt that he believed with his whole heart and soul everything he said, and was thoroughly in earnest. It was, however, by the daily beauty of his life as the faithful pastor that Dr. Pierce won the confidence and affection of his people. . . . With the same hearty simplicity he visited the rich and the poor, the refined and the unlearned, and though there were wide diversities in the social condition of the members of his society, there were none to charge him with partiality, none to doubt his friendliness and ready sympathies.

His memory has been kept fresh, and is still dear to all who knew him, and the recollections of the hallowed months of beautiful serenity and peace and faith which made his sick-room like the threshold of the heavenly kingdom have been a ministry of holy influences to many souls.

In the words of his colleague, in his funeral discourse, "Simply thus to dwell upon the life of a good man is better than to have entered into a discussion of the mysteries of Godliness."

"He uniformly refused to be classed with any sect whatever, or to take any names except those of a 'Congregationalist' and a 'Christian.' He seldom preached doctrinal sermons. He had no taste for controversy, and hardly ever indulged in expressions of his belief clothed in any other phraseology than that of the Bible. For any party to claim him as a member on account of his opinions would be showing a sad want of respect to his memory, and an utter disregard of his feelings and wishes when alive."

The funeral solemnities took place at the church on the afternoon of the 27th.

The body was borne from the parsonage to the church by the same young men who had carried him thither a week before, attended by eight clergymen as pall-bearers. Rev. Mr. Shailer read the Scriptures, the venerable Dr. Lowell, of Boston, offered the prayer (in compliance with the special wish of Dr. Pierce), and Rev. Mr. Knapp, his colleague, delivered the discourse. The last message of the dying minister to his people was so beautiful that we give it as repeated by Mr. Knapp on this solemn occasion:

"When you gather with my friends around my remains," he said, "read to them those cheering words of Jesus, 'I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die.' And say to my people," he continued, "my faith and hope are there; that I do not feel that I shall ever die, but only pass on to a higher life. And beseech them," he added, "beseech them, if they love me, and would express their love, to do it by remembering me while they seek Christ as their Saviour and strive to live as his disciples."

A simple white monument just within the cemetery wall marks his last resting-place.

Dr. Pierce married, Oct. 31, 1798, Abigail, daughter of Joseph and Jemima (Adams) Lovell, of Medway, Mass., who had been a pupil of his while preceptor at Leicester Academy. She died July 2, 1800, leaving a son, who died at the age of two years. He married a second time, May 6, 1802, Lucy, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Homes) Tappan, of Northampton, Mass., by whom they had ten children, viz.: Sarah Tappan, Elizabeth, Abigail Lovell, Lucy, Fero-line Walley, John Tappan, Robert, William Blake, Benjamin Tappan, Mary Wilde. The widow died at Brookline, Feb. 12, 1858.

Sermons and addresses by Rev. John Pierce:

1. Discourse on the Mystery of Godliness, at Medfield, Oct. 8, 1797.
2. Eulogy on Washington, Feb. 22, 1800.
3. Discourse on a Christian Profession, at Brookline, 1800.
4. Sermon at installation of John S. Popkin, Newbury, Sept. 19, 1804.
5. Century sermon from incorporation of Brookline. Nov. 24, 1805.
6. Valedictory sermon, old meeting-house, June 8, 1806.
7. Dedication sermon, new meeting-house, June 11, 1806.
8. Sermon at gathering of Second Church, Dorchester, Jan. 1, 1808.
9. Valedictory sermon, Burlington, Vt., Jan. 9, 1817.
10. Sermon at ordination of Samuel Clark, Princeton, June 18, 1817.
11. Century sermon, church in Brookline, Nov. 9, 1817.
12. Dudlean Lecture on Errors of Church of Rome, at Cambridge, Oct. 24, 1821.
13. Sermon at ordination of Rev. Benjamin Huntoon, Canton, Jan. 30, 1822.
14. Sermon, "Second Century," Dorchester, June 17, 1830.
15. Charge at ordination of Rev. T. B. Fox, Aug. 3, 1831.
16. Sermon in Liberal Preacher, February, 1835.
17. Reminiscences of Forty Years, Brookline, March 19, 1837.
18. Address at funeral of Thomas A. Davis, mayor, at Boston, Nov. 25, 1845.
19. Address at opening of town hall, Oct. 14, 1845.
20. Address at Brookline jubilee, fifty years, March 15, 1847.
21. Disciples called Christians, Religious Magazine, August, 1848.
22. Election sermon, Jan. 3, 1849.

Rev. Frederic Newman Knapp, son of Jacob Newman Knapp, of Walpole, N. H., graduated at (Harvard College) 1843, Divinity School Harvard College, July, 1847. In April, 1847, Dr. Pierce asked that a colleague might be settled with him. On the 10th of August of that year, while Mr. Knapp was in the Divinity School, he received a call to become a colleague pastor with Rev. Dr. Pierce, which call was accepted, and Mr. Knapp was publicly ordained as their colleague pastor, Oct. 6, 1847, and continued to preach for seven years. He was much esteemed as a pastor, and was succeeded by Rev. Dr. Frederic H. Hedge in October, 1856. Dr. Hedge, son of Professor Levi Hedge, of Cambridge, was born Dec. 12, 1805; graduated at Harvard College, 1825; settled in West Cambridge, Mass., in 1828; pastor of a Unitarian Church in Bangor, Me., 1835 to 1850; pastor of Westminster Church, Providence, R. I., 1850 to 1856; from October, 1856, to 1872, pastor of the First Church, Brookline, where he labored for sixteen years. Dr. Hedge married Lucy, daughter of Rev. Dr. John Pierce before mentioned. He is now a professor in Harvard College, Cambridge.

Rev. Howard N. Brown is the present pastor, son of Mather C. and S. A. Brown, born in Columbia, N. Y., May 11, 1849; fitted for college at Whites-town, N. Y.; studied at Harvard College Divinity School, and was ordained at Iliion, N. Y., where he remained 1871-72. Settled in Brookline, Sept. 1, 1873.

Baptist Church.—The origin of this church may be said to date from 1805. In that year Mrs. Beulah Griggs, a member of Rev. Dr. Pierce's church, and the mother of Deacon Thomas Griggs, now living at the age of ninety-six years (in 1884), invited Rev. Joseph Grafton, well known as "Father Grafton," to preach in Brookline. The first service was held in Thomas Griggs' house Oct. 27, 1806, from the text, "Fear God and keep his commandments." And the result of this meeting may be said to have been the birth of the present church. Those who held Baptist views in this town previous to 1827 were in attendance on church worship in Newton, Cambridgeport, and Roxbury. During this year meetings began to be held in private houses, the preachers of neighboring towns supplying the want. In June of that year the first concert of prayer for foreign missions was held in the house of Edward Hall, at the corner of Washington and School Streets. The number of attendants on the services increased beyond the means of private houses, and in the month of February, 1828, a lease of a lot of land where "Joyce's" building now stands was secured, and a chapel twenty-six by thirty-six was erected, which was ready to occupy in March of the same year. On the 5th of June, 1828, thirty-six individuals—eleven brethren and twenty-five sisters—were regularly recognized as the “Baptist Church of Brookline.”

Names of members constituting the church :

Brethren.

Deacon Elijah Corey.	Elijah Corey, Jr.
Deacon Timothy Corey.	David Hart.
Thomas Griggs.	Samuel C. Davis.
David Coolidge.	Thomas Seaverns.
Daniel Sanderson.	Arthur Sumner.
Thaddeus Graves.

Sisters.

Beniah Griggs.	Mary Irving (2d).
Mary Corey (1st).	Mary Pool.
Nancy Pierce.	Harriet F. Griggs.
Mehitable Stone.	Maria Griggs.
Lucinda Reekard.	Helen Maria.
Sarah Richards.	Sarah Hall.
Margaret Simmons.	Eliza May.
Elizabeth Griggs.	Mary Ann Corey.
Eliza Hart.	Lydia Pierce.
Susan Coolidge.	Matilda Ellis.
Mary Corey (2d).	Sarah Griggs.
Elizabeth Corey.	Rebecca Stetson.
Susan Cheever.	Almira Sanderson.

“The above-named brethren and sisters were regularly dismissed and recommended by their respective churches, and constituted agreeable to their request into a church by the name of the Baptist Church in Brookline, on June 5th, 1828.”—Church Records.

At the expiration of one month after the organization of the church, it became evident that increased accommodations must be had. Accordingly, five gentlemen deeply interested pledged themselves to pay for a new church, viz.: Deacon Elijah Corey, forty per cent.; Deacon Timothy Corey and Deacon Thomas Griggs, twenty per cent. each; and David Coolidge and Elijah Corey, Jr., ten per cent. each. The cornerstone was laid Aug. 15, 1828, and the new church was built and dedicated Nov. 20, 1828. The chapel was converted into a parsonage, which now stands the first building south of the new church on Harvard Street, and is occupied by Thomas S. Brown.

On the 25th of March, 1830, Rev. Joseph M. Driver, a student at Andover Theological Seminary, was recognized as pastor, continuing till November following. The next pastor was Rev. Joseph Andrews Warne, D.D., of London, England, a graduate of Stepney College, recognized April 14, 1831, and preached his farewell sermon Jan. 29, 1837, and soon after was recognized pastor of the Third Baptist Church in Providence, R. I. During the past few years he resided on his farm at Frankford, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia, where he died March 10, 1881. He is said to have been “mighty in the Scriptures,” and was highly esteemed and his memory affectionately cherished. He was a man of great force of will and of marked logical power. In his purchase of land he was remarkably fortunate, so much so that by shrewd management he became the possessor of a comfortable property. Having no children, he gave his property, amounting to forty thousand dollars, to the Baptist Missionary Union, reserving a small income only during his life.

Following Mr. Warne was the long and faithful pastorate of Rev. William Hosmer Shailer, D.D., of Haddam, Conn., where he was born Nov. 20, 1807. He was the son of Smith and Lucinda (Shailer) Shailer. His early life was spent in teaching, and pursued a course of study preparatory to entering Wilbraham Seminary; afterwards entered the institution at Hamilton, N. Y., now known as Madison University, where he graduated in 1835; studied theology in the Newton Theological Institution nearly one year. In December of that year he assumed control of the Literary Institute at Suffield, Conn. He was ordained at Deep River, Conn., Feb. 26, 1836, and thus was teacher as well as preacher for about one and one-half years, when he accepted a call from the First Baptist Church in Brookline, commencing his labors there Sept. 1, 1837. For ten years he was secretary of the Massachusetts Baptist Association; for thirteen years was secretary of the American Baptist Missionary Union, and seven years member of its executive committee. He was always deeply interested in the work of education, rendering valuable service in the public schools. He became a trustee of the Newton Theological Institution in 1853, an office which he held till his decease. In December, 1853, he accepted an urgent call to settle with the First Baptist Church in Portland, Me., commencing his duties there March 19, 1854, preaching his farewell sermon to the Brookline Church Feb. 26, 1854. He was pastor of the church in Portland for nearly twenty-four years, and resigned in August, 1877. He died in Portland, Feb. 23, 1881. For nearly all the time he lived in Portland, and one of the board of managers the larger portion of the time. For twenty-five years was a trustee of Colby University. In 1858 he became editor and proprietor of Zion's Advocate, which position he retained until 1873. A school building in the city of Portland was named Shailer School, as an appreciation of his services in the cause of education.

He was indeed a “born teacher and leader of men, as well as an accomplished Christian preacher and pastor.” “Always gentle in spirit, as he was wise, discreet, and true.”

The year following the settlement of Mr. Shailer the old house of worship was enlarged and remodeled throughout.

After the resignation of Dr. Shailer, Rev. Nehemiah M. Perkins, of Waterbury, Conn., was recognized as pastor May 20, 1855. This relation continued till August, 1858, when, his health failing him, he was compelled to resign. "He was an able and scriptural preacher." It was during the pastorate of Mr. Perkins that the present house of worship was commenced, though he did not remain to see it completed.

The next pastor was Rev. William Lamson, D.D., who came here from Portsmouth, N. H., in answer to a call dated November, 1859. He preached his first sermon in Brookline Oct. 16, 1859, from the text, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." His first service as pastor commenced Dec. 4, 1859; sermon from the text, "The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear Him, in them that hope in His mercy." The services of recognition were held Jan. 29, 1860. The sermon on that occasion was by Rev. Baron Stow, D.D., of Boston, who had been a predecessor of Dr. Lamson, of Portsmouth, N. H. The fifteen years he passed in Brookline were of uninterrupted harmony, and his memory is tenderly remembered for his friendships and pastoral watchfulness of his people. Not only was he highly respected and loved by his own people, but he was a man of the community. He had no enemies. Often was he called into public positions to look after the schools in the town, and as a trustee of the public library, looking after its interests with a zealous care. The church placed the following on record of his character and services: "An eloquent and faithful preacher, he shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God; an affectionate pastor, he was beloved by his flock; a wise and safe counsellor, his praise was in all the churches." Dr. Lamson was the son of William and Sally (Richardson) Lamson, who was of New Boston, N. H., who removed to Danvers previous to the birth of Dr. William Lamson. He was born in that part of Danvers, Mass., known as the Port, Feb. 12, 1812; fitted for college at the South Reading Academy (Wakefield); entered Waterville College with the class of 1835, and became a tutor in that institution. Ordained at Gloucester, Mass., June 7, 1837. Resigned his pastoral charge July, 1839, and took a two years' course of study in the Newton Theological Institution. From October, 1841, to July, 1848, pastor of the same church in Gloucester. He was settled in Thomaston, Me., two years; at Portsmouth, N. H., eleven years; in Brookline sixteen years. Resigned his pastoral charge in February, 1875, on account of ill health, and retired to spend his last days at Salem and Gloucester. He died at the last-mentioned place Nov. 29, 1882. On the 7th day of November, 1837, he married Eliza Wonsan, daughter of Capt. Samuel and Lydia (Greenleaf) Giles, of Gloucester, Mass., and had one son, Samuel Giles Lamson, who was a paymaster in the army during the Rebellion, and lost on the steamer "Ruth," which was burned on the Mississippi in August, 1863, at the age of twenty-three years.

In December, 1875, the church and society united in a call to Rev. Henry C. Mabie to become their pastor. He entered upon his work Jan. 1, 1876, and was publicly recognized January 13. The sermon on that occasion was by Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., of Boston.

The present pastor, Rev. John Billings Brackett, D.D., was recognized in May, 1880. He was born in Woburn, Mass., Dec. 31, 1835; fitted for college at Phillips' Academy, Andover, Mass.; graduated in 1853; graduated at Brown University, 1857; took a theological course in Newton Theological Institution two years; first settled as pastor in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from July, 1859, to November, 1865; pastor of First Baptist Church of Brooklyn, E. D., from November, 1865, to April, 1873; in Lynn, Mass., from April, 1873, to February, 1878; in Charlestown, Mass., from February, 1878, to May, 1880. He was honored with the degree of D.D. by the University of Rochester, N. Y., in 1871.

List of deacons of the First Baptist Church, Brookline: Elijah Corey, 1828; Timothy Corey, 1828; Thomas Griggs, 1828; Daniel Sanderson, 1846; William H. Jameson, 1855; George Brooks, 1855; Thomas Seaverns, 1863; Samuel C. Davis, 1869; Austin W. Benton, 1874; George F. Joyce, 1874.

Church clerks: Thomas Griggs, 1828; Andrew H. Newell, 1850; James Edmond, 1853; George F. Joyce, 1872; Benjamin F. Baker.

Superintendents of Sabbath-schools: Daniel Sanderson, Thomas Griggs, David R. Griggs, Julius S. Shailer, Benjamin H. Rhoades, David R. Griggs, George Brooks, H. Lincoln Chase, David Bentley, George Brooks, H. Lincoln Chase, Thomas S. Brown, the present superintendent.

"Englewood" is the name of a small chapel built by Francis F. Morton, Esq., on Englewood Avenue, near the Chestnut Hill Reservoir. Mr. Morton, assisted by Thomas S. Brown and others, is active in providing for the wants of that immediate locality.

The Sunday-school is now in a flourishing condition. Services are held on the Sabbath at three p.m., and a prayer-meeting Wednesday evenings.

Harvard Church.—Early in 1844 many people who had been worshipping with the First Church and in various places out of town, united for the purpose of erecting a house of worship of their own as an Evangelical Congregational Church. They immediately erected a house on the corner of Washington and School Streets, which was dedicated August 26th of that year. The sermon on that occasion was by Rev. Edward N. Kirk, D.D., of Boston. On the same day a church was organized of twenty-seven persons.

The church records also show that a communion service was presented to the church by Mr. T. C. Leeds, a baptismal vase by Mrs. Anna French, and a Bible by Mr. J. B. Kimball, and a vote of thanks was passed to them respectively for their very acceptable presents.

May 21, 1845, the church extended a unanimous invitation to Mr. Richard Salter Storrs, Jr., of the Andover Theological Seminary, to become the pastor. He accepted the call, and was ordained October 22d ensuing, Rev. R. S. Storrs, of Braintree, father of the pastor-elect, preaching the ordination sermon.

On the 27th of October, 1846, the pastoral relation existing between Mr. Storrs and this church was dissolved by a mutual council, in order to an acceptance by the pastor of a call from the Church of the Pilgrims, in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Nov. 13, 1846, the church unanimously invited Rev. Joseph Haven, Jr., of Ashland, to the pastorate. He accepted the invitation, and was installed Dec. 31, 1846. The sermon on this occasion was by Rev. Professor Ralph Emerson, D.D., of Andover.

On the 12th of December, 1850, Mr. Haven having received the appointment to the professorship of Moral Philosophy in Amherst College, the relation between him and the church was dissolved by a council convened for the purpose.

Deacons.

	Elected.	Term expired.
Otis Withington,	Nov. 18, 1845;	Sept. 20, 1858.
John Dane,	Jan. 1, 1846; died	June 30, 1854.
John H. Dane,	July 24, 1854; resigned	March 18, 1870.
Lewis T. Stoddard,	Nov. 24, 1854;	Sept. 21, 1857.
John N. Turner,	Sept. 20, 1858; resigned	April 29, 1864.
William Lincoln,	Sept. 20, 1858;	Sept. 16, 1861.
	Re-elected July 17, 1864;	Jan. 20, 1873.
	Re-elected Jan. 20, 1873;	Jan. 20, 1877.
	Re-elected Jan. 20, 1877, for 4 yrs.
James R. Burditt,	Sept. 20, 1861; resigned	Sept. 21, 1863.
Charles B. Dana,	Sept. 20, 1861; resigned	Sept. 15, 1862.
Geo. L. Richardson,	July 17, 1864; resigned	Feb. 2, 1872.

	Elected.	Term expired.
Horatio S. Burdett,	June 11, 1869;	Jan. 20, 1873.
	Re-elected Jan. 20, 1873;	Jan. 17, 1876.
	Re-elected Jan. 17, 1876, for 4 yrs.
Edward I. Thomas,	June 25, 1869;	Jan. 20, 1873.
	Re-elected Jan. 20, 1873;	Jan. 18, 1875.
	Re-elected Jan. 18, 1875;	Jan. 20, 1879.
	Re-elected Jan. 20, 1879, for 5 yrs.
William H. Cooley,	Jan. 20, 1873;	Jan. 19, 1874.
	Re-elected Jan. 19, 1874;	Jan. 21, 1878.
	Re-elected Jan. 21, 1878, for 5 yrs.
Oliver H. Hay,	Jan. 20, 1877, for 5 yrs.
William Lincoln,	re-elected 6 years from Jan. 17, 1881.
Horatio S. Burdett,	" 5 "	Jan. 19, 1880.
Edward I. Thomas,	" 6 "	Jan. 20, 1884.
Denison D. Dana,	" 6 "	Jan. 23, 1880.
John K. Marshall,	" 6 "	Jan. 21, 1883.
Jacob P. Palmer,	elected 5 "	Jan. 15, 1883.

Clerks.

	Elected.	Resigned.
John N. Turner,	Aug. 23, 1844;	Aug. 16, 1854.
George F. Stoddard,	Aug. 16, 1844;	Sept. 15, 1856.
C. F. Huntington,	Sept. 15, 1856;	Oct. 22, 1863.
Edward I. Thomas,	Oct. 22, 1863;	Sept. 19, 1864.
C. F. Huntington,	Sept. 19, 1864;	Feb. 12, 1869.
Henry B. Eager,	Feb. 12, 1869;	Jan. 15, 1877.
C. W. Wrightington,	Jan. 15, 1877;	Jan. 20, 1879.
H. Edward Abbott,	Jan. 20, 1879.

Treasurer.

Henry B. Eager,	elected Feb. 2, 1872.
-----------------	-----------------------

Auditors.

	Elected.	Resigned.
Edward I. Thomas,	Feb. 2, 1872;	Jan. 15, 1877.
John A. Howard,	Jan. 15, 1877.

Superintendents of the Sabbath-School.

John Dane,	from its formation to his death, June 30, 1854.
S. I. Lovett,	from July 21, 1854, to Aug. 15, 1855.
George F. Homer,	" Aug. 15, 1855, to Sept. 21, 1857.
J. Emory Hoar,	" Sept. 21, 1857, to May 7, 1858.
Charles B. Dana,	" May 7, 1858, to Sept. 28, 1859.
George F. Homer,	" Sept. 28, 1859, to " 17, 1860.
Charles B. Dana,	" " 28, 1860, to " 16, 1861.
John H. Dane,	" " 16, 1861, to " 21, 1863.
William Lincoln,	" " 21, 1863, to " 19, 1864.
George F. Homer,	" " 19, 1864, to " 24, 1868.
George W. Merritt,	" " 21, 1868, to Feb. 1, 1873.
Charles G. Chase,	" Jan. 20, 1873.

March 21, 1851, the Rev. Matson Meier Smith, of New York, was unanimously called to the pastoral charge, and, having accepted the invitation, was installed by an ecclesiastical council, June 5, 1851. The installation sermon was preached by Rev. R. Salter Storrs, Jr., of Brooklyn, N. Y.

In November, 1858, Mr. Smith resigned the pastorate, having accepted a call from the First Congregational Church in Bridgeport, Conn., and on the 23d of that month was dismissed by a mutual council convened for that purpose.

Oct. 20, 1859, the church gave a unanimous call to Rev. J. Lewis Diman, of Fall River, which was accepted, and he was installed March 15, 1860, Rev. Thatcher Thayer, D.D., of Newport, R. I., preaching the installation sermon.

Invited to the professorship of History and Political Economy in Brown University, Rhode Island, in 1864, Mr. Diman accepted the call, and a mutual council, convened June 29th of that year, dissolved his pastoral relation to the church.

April 10, 1865, Rev. C. C. Carpenter, of Birmingham, Conn., was invited to the pastorate. He accepted, and was installed June 29, 1865. Rev. William M. Barbour, then of South Danvers, preached the installation sermon.

In 1867, Mr. Carpenter resigned on account of ill health, and was dismissed by a mutual council September 18th of that year.

Sept. 24, 1868, the church invited Rev. C. Maurice Wines, of Rochester, N. Y., to become its pastor, and he was installed Nov. 12, 1868. The sermon was preached by Rev. E. C. Wines, D.D., of New York, father of the pastor-elect.

Feb. 20, 1870, Mr. Wines resigned his office, and a mutual council, on April 27, 1870, dissolved the pastoral relation.

The time having now come when the growing demands of the community called for a new church edifice in a more central location for a greater number of worshipers, and with more conveniences for service, the society voted to build. An eligible lot was secured at the corner of Harvard and Marion Streets, and the corner-stone of the new church was laid with appropriate ceremonies July 6, 1871, interesting addresses being made by Rev. Nehemiah Adams, D.D., of Boston, and Rev. Albert E. Dunning, of Boston Highlands.

In May, 1873, the present beautiful edifice having been completed, was dedicated with appropriate services to the worship of Almighty God, Rev. R. S. Storrs, D.D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., preaching the sermon. Thus was completed an enterprise which in its progress had tested the liberality and devotedness of the society to a remarkable degree. The work, however, under the care of large-hearted men, inspired by the genius and taste of that eminent artist, Edward Tuckerman Potter, Esq., had so far surpassed the original design as to have become encumbered with a debt of sixty thousand dollars. To free it from this threatening embarrassment many liberal-hearted men came forward with generous donations, which, being crowned with the princely gift of forty thousand dollars by Martin L. Hall, Esq. (who had before been among its largest contributors), swept away the entire debt, and in June, 1874, by the adoption of the present constitution, Harvard Church was established a free church forever, in accordance with the desire of its chief benefactor, Mr. Hall.

That good Providence which had brought the church to this happy condition continued to bless it by providing for it a pastor in the person of Rev. Reuben Thomas, Ph.D., of Wickliffe Chapel, London, who was installed its minister May 4, 1875. Thus has the "little one become a thousand," and may it not hope that the Lord has reserved for it a history of blessing which shall exceed the past as far as the glory of the latter temple surpasseth that of the former.

There is connected with this church a large and flourishing mission department, called the "Bethany Sunday-School." Meetings are held on Sunday afternoon and Thursday and Saturday evenings, under the direction of Deacon John K. Marshall, superintendent, and Deacon Dennison D. Dana, assistant superintendent. These meetings are held in Goddard Hall, and are intended to reach the masses, or a class of people who have no regular place of worship, who are always welcome. These meetings are well attended, and are doing a great work in providing for a large population.

St. Paul's Episcopal Church.—At the junction of St. Paul Street and Aspinwall Avenue may be seen an elegant architectural structure which has often been the object of admiration. Approaching it from any point, but particularly from Harvard Street, is one of the finest views to be found in this vicinity. Not as expensive as some buildings used for churches is this, but taking the peculiar location, the gray-stone walls and tower, with the dark clustering vines which almost conceal the walls in midsummer, together with the beautiful scarlet and crimson foliage of the autumn months, covering porch and gable, renders the whole pleasing to the eye, and displays good taste in the originators of the same. The building and surroundings form the most pleasing and picturesque bits of scenery to be found in this region, reminding the beholder of the many fine landscape views of the English seats and rural scenery of England.

The first meeting for church worship by this society was held in the town hall on the second Sunday of July, 1849. Prominent among the earliest members were Eliakim Littell, James S. Amory, Harrison Fay, Augustus Aspinwall, William Aspinwall, Theodore Lyman, Frederic P. Ladd, Moses B. Williams, John Shepherd, James S. Patten. Rev. Thomas M. Clark officiated as pastor for a few Sabbaths during his vacation. Rev. William Horton, of Newburyport, was the first settled pastor, who remained for three years, the society steadily increasing in numbers all the while. In the latter part of 1850 active measures were taken towards building a church. A subscription was started, the following persons contributing, viz.: Harrison Fay, Augustus Aspinwall, James S. Amory, Moses B. Williams, John S. Wright, Benjamin Howard, Theodore Lyman, William Appleton, and others. Mr. Fay gave five thousand dollars; Mr. Aspinwall gave the land on which the church stands and two thousand dollars. The land at that time was worth about fifteen hundred dollars. The amount of twelve thousand dollars being subscribed, was sufficient for the body of the church, Mr. Aspinwall and Mr. Fay building the tower in equal amounts, costing thirteen thousand dollars more, making twenty-five thousand dollars the total cost. The bell, costing nearly one thousand dollars, was presented by Timothy C. Leeds, a native of this town, then a resident of Boston.

The building committee were Harrison Fay, Augustus Aspinwall, and Moses B. Williams. Richard Upjohn, of New York, was the architect. The building is of stone, built in the most substantial manner.

In May, 1852, Rev. Mr. Horton resigned his position, and Dr. John Seeley Stone, of Brooklyn, N. Y., formerly of St. Paul's Church, Boston, accepted a call as his successor. The new church was formerly consecrated in December, 1852, and Dr. Stone entered upon his duties as rector. He continued here about two years, and resigned in the fall of 1862 to accept a professorship in the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Philadelphia, Pa. After a few months, Rev. Francis Wharton, D.D., of Kenyon College, Ohio, was installed as rector. He continued till the summer of 1869, when he resigned, and the following spring (1870) Rev. William W. Newton, a quite young and talented man, was installed.

During the pastorate of Dr. Stone, in 1857, a chapel was erected near to the church, to complete which the ladies of the parish contributed four thousand dollars. Mrs. Sarah P. Rogers, of Boston, contributed one thousand dollars towards the same on condition that it should contain a mural tablet in memory of her daughter, who died in Cairo, Egypt. In compliance with the above condition a beautiful marble tablet in bas-relief, with a tasteful design representing Mary sitting at the feet of the Saviour, under which are the words, "Mary sat at Jesus' feet and heard his word;" also an inscription commemorating the death of Mrs. Rogers and her daughter, as follows:

"Sacred to the memory of Sarah P. Rogers.
Aged 56 years, who died in Boston, Feb 2^d, 1858.

And of her daughter Sarah,
Louise Rogers,
Aged 19 years, who died
in Cairo, Egypt, March 16, 1856."

In the easterly end of the church is a memorial window, in the chancel, placed there by the children of Dr. William Aspinwall as a memorial, which bears the following inscription:

"In Memoria h'on Gulielmus Aspinwall.
Pat III. Inn. M.D.CCCXLIII. Ob XVI. Aprilis
M. D. CCCXXIII."

To the right hand of Dr. Stone's memorial tablet is a window containing a figure of St. John in stained glass, with the following words accompanying:

"To the glory of God and in memory of William Chadbourne"

On the north side of the church, near the organ, is a black marble tablet with gilt letters, on which is the following inscription:

"TO THE MEMORY
of 1805.+HARRISON FAY.+1882.
One of the Founders of this Parish
A Warden for twenty one years, its constant friend
And liberal benefactor.
and
A faithful worshipper with its people
Rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation."

At the easterly end of the church, on a polished metallic plate, may be found, to the memory of their pastor,

"Rev. John Seeley Stone, D.D., Rector of this Parish,+1852 to 1862.

Powerful as a Preacher beloved as pastor. He was remarkable for the length and character of his services to the American Episcopal Church in which he was born and nurtured This tablet affectionately dedicated to his memory And to the Glory of God may best serve its purpose by recording his own impressive words.	The members of the church on earth ought to regulate the whole course of life, Association habit, and feeling with reference to future membership in the church in Heaven The true church here. They are both parts of one and the same communion. and fellowship. The earthly passes, into The heavenly is more than a type of the Glorified Church there. . .
---	--

Born, Oct 7. 1795. Died, Jan 13. 1882."

New Jerusalem Church.—Previous to 1852 a few members of the Boston society of the New Jerusalem, in Bowdoin Street, Boston, who were residents of Brookline were obliged to go to Boston or to have meetings of their own nearer home. Religious services commenced in private houses, and the Sunday-school was held in the parlors of the members, and sometimes a public conveyance was procured to carry them to their church in the city. At length the members increased, and in 1852 these members commenced church worship in the town hall. In April, 1857, a society was organized. Their first pastor was Rev. Tiley Brown Hayward, a graduate of Harvard College, 1820. He remained here till 1861. He was succeeded by Rev. John C. Ager. In 1862 a new temple was erected at the corner of High and Irving Streets. Mr. Ager continued here till 1864, at which time he was called to the pastorate of the New Jerusalem Church in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was succeeded by Rev. S. M. Warren. Mr. Warren being called to Europe, Rev. Abiel Silver supplied their pulpit during his absence. Rev. Warren Goddard, Jr., of Brockton (born Oct. 10, 1849), was the next pastor, who is now in Providence, R. I. Rev. Willard H. Hinkley, of Baltimore, Md., came to town in 1881, and was installed as their pastor. The church is a neatly constructed building of stone, in the English-Gothic style, capable of holding about two hundred and fifty people. Its interior finish is of oak, open to the roof, has an organ in the rear of the chancel, pastor's room on one side, and library-room. The building sits east and west, with a pulpit at the east end and a depository for the Word in the centre, at the back of the chancel.

In 1882 this society erected a commodious two-story parsonage on the same lot on which stands the church. This society is now in a prosperous condition.

St. Mary's Church of the Assumption.—This church belongs to the diocese of the Most Reverend Archbishop J. J. Williams, of Boston. The first Catholic services in this town were held in Lyceum Hall. The first record being July 30, 1852. In 1854 the church on Andem Place was erected, and the first services held there on Christmas-day of that year. Rev. Michael O'Bierne was the first priest of the parish, who was succeeded by Rev. Joseph M. Finotti, in 1856. The church increased in numbers so rapidly that an assistant was necessary, and Rev. J. C. Murphy was associated with him as colleague. Father Finotti closed his labors here at Easter, 1873, leaving the parish in the care of Rev. Patrick F. Lamb. He was extremely popular, and devoted much time in the interests of young people. His health soon gave out, and he removed to the South in the hope of restoration. Rev. A. J. Molinari took charge of the parish for five months, during the absence of Mr. Lamb. But he died on his way home, in New York, July 2, 1873, and his body was buried from St. Mary's Church, an immense congregation being in attendance at the services. Following Mr. Lamb was the present pastor, Rev. L. J. Morris, who began his pastoral labors July 19, 1873. Father Morris was born in Lowell, Mass.; educated in the common schools of that city; afterwards went to Montreal College, and later to St. Charles', in Baltimore, Md., where he remained four years. He was then sent to St. Joseph's Seminary, Troy, N. Y., where he completed his philosophical and theological studies, and after a four years' course he was ordained May 22, 1869, and was sent to Waltham, Mass., as curate, where he remained for four years, and from thence was placed in charge of the church in Brookline.

In consequence of a pressure for larger accommodations, land was purchased of George F. Homer, on Harvard Street, for a new church in October, 1873, containing 57,000 feet, for $27,000, to which was added, Aug. 10, 1878, 25,000 feet more at the corner of Linden Place and Harvard Street, of A. L. Wood, for the further sum of $13,400, making in all 82,000 feet, at a cost of $40,400. On this very desirable lot of land a new and elegant brick church with freestone trimmings has been erected, capable of holding 1200 people, the principal entrance being from Linden Place. The corner-stone was laid July 19 with proper ceremony. The dedication of the new church was Oct. 1, 1882. The architects were Messrs. Peabody & Stearns; the house cost about $80,000. This church has a much larger attendance of church worshippers than any other church in the town.

Christ's Church.—Those of our readers who are accustomed to travel in the steam-cars to Boston, cannot fail to have noticed a large stone building with paneled walls, and having a large square tower, making a fine appearance, near to Chapel Station. This building was erected by Hon. David Sears, at a time when that section of the town had no facilities for church worship. It was erected about 1860, at the private expense of Mr. Sears, with the hope and expectation that people of all denominations would congregate here for church worship. Mr. Sears prepared a liturgy, or book of worship, in which he gives his own ideas on religious subjects. The plan, which was purely original in the mind of the projector, has not succeeded as he might have thought it would, and it now stands as a memorial of the kind wishes and good intentions of, and serves as a monument to the memory of, the originator, whose remains lie in peace and quiet underneath the building. Worship was sustained for a time here, but was at last given up. We cannot give a better idea of the intentions of the proprietor than to quote his own words in the "Christian Liturgy and Book of Prayer," viz.:

"The Christian Liturgy."

"The purpose of Christ's Church in Brookline, Longwood, a Gospel Church, the first of the Union of Churches in the Spirit of Charity—is to provide a Liturgy which shall comprehend those doctrines, and those only, which are essential to guide the mind in a right worship of God. It is obvious that men who differ as to the origin of sin, or as to the precise nature of the atonement, may nevertheless equally love God, and may be alike grateful to him for his mercy, and desire his approval, and seek his will, and adore his infinite perfections. They may differ on many theological questions, and yet may have the same sentiments of devout trust and reverential gratitude, and may equally feel the need of Divine help. If they may thus agree in what is essential to devotion, why may they not unite in religious worship? If they will abstain from obtruding into the act of worship those theological speculations which have no necessary connection with it, why may they not bow together before that God which they all adore?"

"The Liturgy of the Church of America professes only to give expression to those feelings which should be in man's heart when he looks up to God. It would leave the theological questions on which sects divide to be settled by each individual in his own way, while it would draw all Christian people together in the sentiment and offices of devotion."

This house was modeled after a church in Colchester, England, and is situated on Colchester Street, Longwood.

Church of our Saviour.—This church is famous for its neat and attractive appearance, situated as it is in one of the finest sections of the town, at the corner of Monmouth and Carleton Streets, but a short distance from Chapel Station; not only is it tasteful in its external appearance and surroundings, but it is also exquisite in its internal appointments. It is built of broken stone, with hammered granite trimmings, having a tower at the easterly end of the same. This parish was organized Feb. 19, 1868. Amos Adams Lawrence and Dr. William R. Lawrence erected the building as a tribute to the memory of their father, Amos Lawrence,—an exceedingly appropriate and beautiful expression of their regard for one whose memory they delight to cherish.

The marble tablet on the west wall of the church is as follows:

"This Church is built in memory of AMOS LAWRENCE, by his two Sons. Divine service first held March 22, 1868."

The organ, built by Messrs. E. & G. Hook, was presented by Mrs. Amos A. Lawrence in memory of her mother. The baptismal font was the gift of Mrs. F. W. Lawrence. Prominent among the members of this society are the various branches of the Lawrence family, the prime movers in its organization, S. H. Gregory, Samuel L. Bush, the late Commodore George S. Blake, William C. Hichborn, and Dr.

Robert Amory. The first service in the church was March 22, 1868. Rev. Elliott D. Thompson was the first rector. The consecration of the church was by the late Bishop Eastburn, on the 29th of September, 1868. The second pastor was Rev. Frank L. Norton, the present dean of the cathedral at Albany, N. Y.

Present officers of the church: The rector is Rev. Reginald H. Howe; Wardens, S. L. Bush, S. H. Gregory; Vestrymen, Amos A. Lawrence, W. L. Chase, A. P. Howard, William H. Lincoln, Francis W. Lawrence, John Wales, Thomas P. Ritchie, Charles Thorndike, Hammond Vinton, G. F. Clarke, J. L. Carter; Clerk, Hammond Vinton; Treasurer, J. L. Carter; Sexton, A. B. Marston.

This society have an elegant stone chapel, used for evening meetings, and rooms for the various benevolent and charitable objects of the church. Connected with this church is a guild established in 1880, a parish aid society, and a church temperance society, beside a Sunday-school numbering about one hundred. The number of communicants of the church is about one hundred and sixty.

Washington Street Methodist Episcopal Church.—The first attempt to establish a Methodist church in Brookline was in the early part of 1873. Three persons from other places saw an opening for, and the need of, a Methodist Church where people could worship in their own way in this town. They united with two others and purchased the building formerly belonging to the Harvard Congregational society, at the corner of Washington and School Streets, for the sum of twenty-four thousand five hundred dollars. The church was refitted in an attractive manner, and dedicated to public worship soon after, and the Rev. E. D. Winslow, of Newton, was appointed by the New England Conference as their pastor. Bishop Simpson preached the dedication sermon from 1 John iv. 19. A Sunday-school was connected with this church of about one hundred members. In 1876 the society sold the house, and worshipped in the town hall till May, 1879, when land was purchased for a church nearly opposite their first building, on the corner of Washington and Cypress Streets, and a new church was built by William Wood, which was dedicated in September, 1879, costing two thousand six hundred and fifty-seven dollars and ninety-one cents, Mr. Wood presenting the stained-glass windows and pulpit. The following are the preachers who have supplied since the commencement: Rev. E. D. Winslow, Rev. Mark Trafton, Rev. W. S. Robinson, Rev. Henry Witham, Rev. M. V. B. Knox, Rev. E. R. Watson, Rev. William McDonald, Rev. Joshua Gill, Rev. William G. Leonard. Enoch Doran is superintendent of the Sabbath-school, William Wood secretary and treasurer of the society.

Schools.—It will be seen by the vote allowing Muddy River to manage their own affairs as early as Dec. 8, 1686, provision was made for educating the young, viz.: Ordered, "That henceforth the said Hamlet be free from Town rates to Boston, they raising a School-House and maintaining an able reading and writing master." The above act was accepted at a full meeting of the inhabitants on the 19th of January, 1686-87, also the sum of twelve pounds raised for the maintenance of said school. What kind of a building was used for a "Scholl hous" we are not told, but we find that on the 28th of May, 1697, it needed repairs. Also, on the same day, it was "voated that Mr. John Searl should tech school in sd Muddyriver from the first Munday in may 1697 until the last day of February 1697" (?).

The first school-house erected by the "hamlet" of Muddy River was situated on the ground now occupied by the block of houses of Arthur Williams on School Street, then known as "School-house Lané." The lane was narrow, not much more than a cart road, and bordered on either side by a low stone wall overhung by trees, and on the east side by a thick, natural hedge of barberry-bushes, which nearly concealed the wall.

A school was kept in this lane from a very early period, probably the only school in the town while it was a part of Boston. The original school-house was a very small and low, square, hipped-roof building, on the spot above mentioned. Some of the oldest inhabitants can just remember it as a mere hovel going to ruin in their early childhood.

The second school-house was the same style of building, a little larger, and stood on the spot now forming the corner of School and Prospect Streets. We have been informed that this bit of ground was given to the town for a school-house lot forever by one of the early Davis families.

The arrangements in and about this ancient edifice of learning for the accommodation of teacher and pupils would hardly satisfy modern tastes and requirements.

On each side of an alley through the middle of the room the seats were arranged facing the alley, like seats in a street-car, only they were long, narrow benches, with a plank supported upon legs, running the whole length of the room (except a space for admission at the ends), and this plank served the purpose of a desk. A sort of drawer underneath served to hold the books, which were not numerous. The Bible, the Psalter, the Spelling-Book and the Arithmetic being all that were used, and not all those at once. Perhaps they feared softening of the brain. The teacher's desk was in the left hand corner farthest from the door, and the right-hand corner was occupied by an immense fireplace with a chimney to match. The clothing was hung on the wall, in the absence of a clothes-closet.

The wood, of cord length and often unseasoned, was deposited outside the school-house, and autumnal rains and winter snows fell unchecked upon it. The winter school, taught by a man, used to begin with the Monday after Thanksgiving, and the boys took turns, week by week, in sawing and splitting the wood and making the fire. Friction-matches were one of the blessings reserved for modern times, so the luckless wights who made the fires had to bring live coals in an iron skillet, kept for the purpose, from "Squire Sharp's," the nearest neighbor, and for some time the schoolmaster.

"Squire Sharp" was teacher of the winter school several years, as was also Dr. Aspinwall. Three teachers by the name of Allen (not brothers) also served for several winters. One of them was afterwards president of Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., and another became subsequently a Unitarian clergyman.

Among the female teachers of those days were two sisters, Nabby and Joanna Jordan, who lived with their parents in the little house. Many good people, now far advanced in life, learned their A, B, C in that little old building of Miss Nabby or Miss Joanna. Another of the female teachers for many successive years was Miss Lucy Aspinwall.

The school-house was built two stories high, with a place for clothing in the entry and a little room for fuel in the rear of each room. A platform ran across the end, on which was the teacher's desk, opposite to the door. The seats were arranged to face the teacher, six in a row, the desks being all under the same board for one row, but separated inside from one another. A square box-stove for wood heated each room. On each end of the platform were three more seats, and in front of the desks a narrow board was placed a few inches from the floor for a seat for the little children. Who that ever sat upon those seats will forget their hardness? We have heard mention made of "the soft side of a plank." That there was no soft side to those planks none who sat there will deny their testimony. Poor little urchins of four years and upwards sat there from nine to twelve in the forenoon and from one till four in the afternoon, summer and winter, to read the alphabet once through from A to Z each half-day, with five minutes' recess only in each session, and a smart application of the rattan or ruler if they turned round or whispered.

For many years the town appropriated money for two terms of school in the year, three or four months each, in summer and in winter. The people of the district then contributed somewhat more than a few weeks might be added to the terms. Thus the schools were kept nearly as many weeks in the year as at present, only the vacations occurred in the comfortable weather of fall and spring when the children were in good condition to study, and through the whole of the sweltering dog-days teachers and pupils were kept at their tasks.

The first school-house built by the people of the town, unaided by Boston, stood on the hill, on the triangular piece of ground where Warren and Walnut Streets diverge, near the church. It was probably a small wooden school-house, but it must have served for a hundred years or more. An ancient bill presented to the selectmen for repairs on this building is a curiosity. It reads as follows:

December ye 6. 1758.
to work don at the Skul hous
to shingeling the ruf and finding 15 shingels, and nales and Lime to pint it,	1.1.0
to Laying the harth and finding 60 ty bricks and wheling 12
whelberrers of Durt to Ras it.	2.00
Lathing and plastern Sevel plases	0.1.0
Moses Scott	4.00

We do not find Mr. Scott's arithmetic or spelling to indicate that he ever spent much time in the "Skul hous," except in the exercise of his calling as carpenter. The indorsement of the selectmen on the back of the bill orders the town treasurer, Jona Winchester, to pay him ten shillings and eight pence for his work. Another old bill, presented by a female teacher, who probably taught in School Street, affords a similar anomaly:

"The Town of Brookline Depttor to Mary Bowen for Keeping School fore months from the seventh of June 1760, at twenty six shillings and Eaight pence per month. 5. 6 8."

on which the indorsement reads:

"allowed twenty four shillings pr. month In Consideration of her haveing a great number of Schollers & there being but one school Kept."

We have known of instances where an increase of the number of scholars did not secure a corresponding increase of salary, but hope the above is the only instance on record of an abatement being made for a similar reason. Perhaps, however, the deficiency was made up by a tax on the pupils.

The next school-house of which we hear on this spot was of brick, and was built in 1793. This building was the Alma Mater of many, if not most, of our present middle-aged and elderly townspeople. It was a square, hip-roofed building, fronting eastward, with out-blinds, porch or shed, and here school was kept, always by a male teacher, from April to November. Then it was closed, and the winter school for many years was kept by "the master" in the School Street school-house. Another school was also kept during the same time in a small wooden school-house on Heath Street, nearly opposite the present one.

The brick school-house was not an important building in town merely for its service in school uses, but it was also used for town-meetings from the time it was built as long as it remained standing. It was at the brick school-house that the people of the town met to form a procession on the occasion of the funeral services in honor of George Washington. From thence they marched to the church, then standing in what is now the garden of the parsonage, and listened to the eulogy delivered by Dr. Pierce.

After the close of the second war with England the town began to grow more rapidly. Several gentlemen came here and built fine houses, and there was a general increase of prosperity. The subject of building a town-house began to be discussed, but met with considerable opposition from old citizens, who thought the school-house had been good enough for them and their fathers, and ought to suffice for the coming generation. However, the more enterprising carried their point at last so far as to get a vote to build a town-house. The next thing to be considered was the place and the material. The brothers John and Lewis Tappan and Mr. Joseph Sewall had built stone houses, and it was proposed to build a stone town-house. This was opposed, of course, as unnecessary extravagance by the men who thought the old school-house was good enough. But once more enterprise triumphed, and the building was decided upon, as well as the location. This was the origin of the building known as the old stone school-house, still standing next the Unitarian Church.

The contract for building it was let out to mechanics from Roxbury; but the work is said to have been badly done. The building was completed in 1824, and dedicated with appropriate ceremonies on the 1st day of January, 1825.

The lower room was fitted for a school-room, and the old brick school-house was taken down the same year. On the spot where the building stood, at the site of the door, an elm-tree was planted by Mr. Ebenezer Heath, and it still marks the spot. The old plan of keeping the school a part of the year in that neighborhood and changing to School Street in winter continued for a while longer, but the increase of population soon made it necessary to have a school the year round in that part of the town.

For several years the town hall, on the second floor of the building, was a popular place for singing-schools, political meetings, and lyceum lectures. About the year 1832, Mr. Isaac Thayer, who had rushed like a comet into the quiet atmosphere of Brookline and left his trail along the horizon for some time after his departure, started the idea of a series of lyceum lectures. A company was organized as the Brookline Lyceum Society, and for several winters the hall was filled with the élite of the town on these occasions.

On alternate weeks a debate was held instead of a lecture. A course of lectures on phrenology the first season created much discussion and awakened great interest. An impulse was given to intellectual growth by the lyceum lectures which was felt throughout the town. Quiet farmers who scarcely read anything before but the Bible and the almanac were roused into new mental life. A premium of ten dollars was offered by the Lyceum Society to the person who should remember and be able to repeat the most of any lecture heard. A daughter of Deacon Joshua C. Clark was the successful competitor.

The first public high school in Brookline was opened in this building in May, 1843, under Mr. Benjamin H. Rhoades, a graduate of Brown University, now librarian of Redwood Library, Newport, R. I. The second town hall was built in 1845.

His assistant teacher, James Pierce, a young man of great promise and much beloved, though a native of Dorchester, was related to Brookline families and well identified with its interests.

He was preparing to enter the Unitarian ministry when his health failed, and a trip to Europe was advised. On the return voyage he died, and was buried in the sea. Many hearts sincerely mourned his loss and still tenderly cherish his memory.

Mr. Rhoades was succeeded by Hezekiah Shailer, a brother of Rev. W. H. Shailer, who was then minister of the Baptist Church in this town. He was called a good disciplinarian, as those who experienced the shakings which he gave in a quiet way after school were usually reduced to submission as effectually as if they had been experimented upon with the "clapper" of his ancient predecessor.

Mr. Shailer was succeeded by Mr. John Emory Hoar, the present teacher of the high school. After the school was removed to its present location the old stone building continued in use for primary schools until sold by the town a few years since, when it became private property. A select private school is now kept in this building, which has been completely fitted and enlarged, and is in a flourishing condition under the care of Miss Carrie L. Rideout, formerly a teacher in the public schools of Brookline.

The present High School building is at the corner of School and Prospect Streets, and near to the site of the first school in the town.

Classical School.—In 1823, Rev. John Pierce, Richard Sullivan, Elisha Penniman, Henry Colman, Henry A. S. Dearborn, Henry Oxnard, Charles Tappan, Lewis Tappan, John Tappan, William Raymond Lee, John Robinson, Oliver Whyte, Elijah Corey, Timothy Corey, Thomas Griggs, Samuel Craft, David S. Greenough, Jr., Joseph Sewall, Ebenezer Craft, James Leeds, Ebenezer Francis, Ebenezer Heath, Augustus Aspinwall, and Dr. Charles Wild were incorporated as the Brookline Classical School.

A building was erected on Boylston Street, now Dr. Shurtleff's house, where a school was kept for boys. The first teacher was David Hatch Barlow, followed by Gideon F. Thayer, the founder of the Chauncy Hall School, Boston. This school usually had from thirty to forty pupils, and was continued till about 1837. After that time it was continued for a year or two with varied success. George B. Emerson, the well-known educator, became the next owner, residing here for two years, and during that time spent a winter in Boston, having leased his house to William Ware, author of "Zenobia," "Last Days of Aurelian," and other works. The first named above was written in the parlor of that house.

Lucius V. Hubbard, Nathaniel Ingersoll, David Fosdick, Jr., Thaddeus Clapp, Luther Farrar, and Samuel Rogers, who afterwards became a physician in Roxbury, taught in this school at different times.

Devotion Fund.—Two persons have made donations for schools in the town at different times. Edward Devotion, who by his will, dated 1743, left the following to the town of Brookline:

"Item: in case my Estate prove to be sufficient to pay my Just Debts, Funeral Charges and the aforementioned Legacies and there should be any overplus left then my will is and I hereby give the sd overplus to the Town of Brooklyn towards Building or Maintaining a School as near the Centre of the said Town as shall be agreed upon by the Town. But if the said Town cannot agree upon a Place to set the said School upon then my Will is that the said overplus be laid out in purchasing a Wood Lott for the use of the School and the ministry of said Town forever."

The sum of money, which at the time of its being received in 1762, amounted to "£739 4s. lawful money" for the use of schools, was borrowed by the State during the Revolutionary war, and when it was paid back to the town it was in depreciated Continental currency. It was put at interest, however, and in 1845 had accumulated to the amount of $4531.01, which was appropriated to the building of the town hall, which was to have two school-rooms in it.

Hyslop Donation.—Jan. 4, 1793, "Voted to accept the Donation of William Hyslop Esquire for the purpose of Building a School House on, or near the spot where the Old School House in the middle of the Town stands."

"Voted, that the Town Sensibly imprest with the (the) great obligations they are under to William Hyslop Esquire, for his generous Donation for the purpose of Building a School House in said Town for the Incouragement and promotion of Learning among the Youth of the Rising Generation, Sincerely Return him their thanks."

College Graduates.—John White, A.M., son of Joseph and Hannah White; graduate Harvard College, 1698; ordained pastor of church at Gloucester, Mass., April 21, 1703; died Jan. 16, 1760.

Ebenezer Devotion, A.M., son of John Devotion; graduate Harvard College, 1707; taught school 1709; ordained pastor of a church at Suffield, Conn., June 28, 1710; died April 11, 1741, aged fifty-seven.

Edward White, A.M., son of Benjamin and Hannah (Wiswall) White, graduate Harvard College, 1712; was a farmer, justice of the peace, major in the militia, and representative to the General Court, town clerk, selectman, moderator of the town-meetings, town treasurer, and other public offices; died May 29, 1769, aged seventy-six.

Andrew Gardner, A.M.; graduate Harvard College, 1712; ordained at Worcester, Mass., 1719, and dismissed Oct. 31, 1722; installed at Lunenburg, Mass., May 15, 1728, and dismissed Feb. 22, 1732. Soon after his dismissal he retired to one of the towns on the Connecticut River, in the State of New Hampshire, where he died at a very advanced age.

Samuel Aspinwall, A.M., son of Lieut. Samuel and Sarah (Stevens) Aspinwall, born Feb. 13, 1696; died Aug. 13, 1732, aged thirty-seven. We find the following in the New England Weekly Journal, No. 283:

"BROOKLINE, Aug. 21.

"On the 13th inst died here, Mr. Samuel Aspinwall, of this Town, in the 37th year of his age, after between six and seven years illness. He commenced Master of Arts, in Cambridge, 1717, and was designed for the ministry; but discouraged by inward weakness; which after he had been for some little time, settled here, so advanced, as to take him off from business, and, at length, proved fatal. He was a gentleman of bright parts, natural and acquired, a strong memory, quick wit, and solid judgment, pleasant in his conversation, a steady friend, and a good christian."

A funeral sermon was also published on the occasion of his death by Rev. James Allen, in which he gives him an excellent character.

Rev. Ebenezer White, A.M., son of Deacon Benjamin and Margaret (Weld) White, was born March 29, 1713; graduate Harvard College, 1733; ordained minister at Norton, Mass. (now Mansfield), Feb. 23, 1737; died Feb. 18, 1761.

Jonathan Winchester, A.M., son of Henry and Frances Winchester, born April 21, 1717; ordained at Ashburnham, Mass., April 23, 1760; died Nov. 27, 1767, aged fifty years.

Henry Sewall, son of Samuel and Rebecca (Dudley) Sewall, born March 8, 1720; Harvard College, 1738; a farmer and justice of the peace; died May 29, 1771, aged fifty-one.

John Druce, A.M., son of John and Elizabeth (Bishop) Druce, born July 13, 1709; Harvard College, 1738; became a physician and settled in Wrentham, Mass., and had a family.

Charles Gleason, A.M., son of William and Thankful (Trowbridge) Gleason, born Dec. 29, 1718; graduate Harvard College, 1738; ordained at Dudley, Mass., Oct. 31, 1744; died May 7, 1790, aged seventy-two.

James Allen, son of Rev. James and Mehetable (Shepard) Allen, the first minister of Brookline, born Sept. 20, 1723; Harvard College, 1741; died in December, 1749, aged twenty-six.

Benjamin White, A.M., son of Maj. Edward and Hannah (Wiswall) White, born Oct. 5, 1724; Harvard College, 1744; a farmer in Brookline, justice of the peace, and for many years represented the town in the General Court; afterwards a member of the Governor's Council; he died May 8, 1790.

Isaac Gardner, A.M., son of Isaac and Susanna (Heath) Gardner, born May 9, 1726; Harvard College, 1747; a farmer in Brookline, justice of the peace; killed by the British troops while on his return from Lexington on the memorable 19th of April, 1775.

Hull Sewall, A.M., son of Henry and Ann (White) Sewall, born April 9, 1744; Harvard College, 1761; died Nov. 27, 1767.

Samuel Sewall, A.M., son of Henry and Ann (White) Sewall, and grandson of Chief Justice Sewall, born Dec. 31, 1745; lived single, a counselor-at-law, in Boston; became a refugee from his country, proscribed in the banishment act of 1778, and passed the remainder of his life in Bristol, England, where he died, May 6, 1811, aged sixty-six years.

His estate in Brookline, inherited in right of his mother, was forfeited by law, and afterwards purchased by the late Mr. John Heath.

William Aspinwall, A.M., M.D., son of Lieut. Thomas and Joanna (Gardner) Aspinwall, born May 23, 1743; Harvard College, 1764; was a physician in his native town, besides a successful public man, often filling positions of confidence, as representative, senator, and councilor; he died April 16, 1823, aged thirty.

Isaac Winchester, son of Isaac and Mary Winchester, born Aug. 5, 1743; Harvard College, 1764; died in the Continental army.

Henry Sewall, A.M., son of Henry and Ann (White) Sewall, born Jan. 19, 1749; Harvard College, 1768; died Oct. 1772, aged twenty-four.

John Goddard, A.M., son of John and Sarah (Brewer) Goddard, born Nov. 12, 1756; Harvard College, 1777; a merchant in Portsmouth, N. H., and also a senator and representative in the New Hampshire Legislature; he died Dec. 18, 1829.

Elisha Gardner, son of Elisha and Eunice (Searle) Gardner, born Dec. 27, 1766; Harvard College, 1786; engaged in mercantile pursuits; died in Savannah, Ga.

Caleb Child, son of — Child, born March 13, 1760; Harvard College, 1787; he was a physician.

Joseph Jackson, son of Rev. Joseph and Hannah (Avery) Jackson, the fourth minister of Brookline, born Oct. 27, 1767; graduate Harvard College, 1787; died Aug. 19, 1790, while pursuing his medical studies at Portsmouth, N. H.

William Aspinwall, M.D., son of Dr. William and Susanna (Gardner) Aspinwall, born in 1784; Harvard College, 1804; a physician; died, while practicing his profession in his native town, April 7, 1818, aged thirty-four.

Col. Thomas Aspinwall, A.M., son of Dr. William and Susanna (Gardner) Aspinwall, born May 23, 1786; Harvard College, 1804; lawyer in Boston; colonel in the army in war of 1812; lost an arm in an engagement on Lake Erie; was consul at London for years; died Aug. 20, 1876.

Rev. Samuel Clark, A.M., son of Deacon Samuel and Mary (Sharpe) Clark, born July 8, 1782; Harvard College, 1805; ordained at Burlington, Vt., April 19, 1810; resigned on account of ill health; died May 2, 1827, aged forty-five.

Isaac Sparhawk Gardner, A.M., son of Gen. Isaac Sparhawk Gardner and Mary (Sparhawk) Gardner, born April 9, 1785; Harvard College, 1805; teacher; went to Georgetown, D. C., and thence to Frankfort, Ky.

Samuel Jackson Gardner, A.M., son of Caleb and Mary (Jackson) Gardner, born July 9, 1788; Harvard College, 1807; a lawyer, residing in New York City; died July, 1864, aged seventy-six.

John Tappan Pierce, A.M., son of Rev. John and Lucy (Tappan) Pierce, born Dec. 14, 1811; Harvard College, 1831; ordained as an evangelist Sept. 15, 1836.

William Penniman, son of Elisha and Sybil (Allen) Penniman, born —; Harvard College; died while contemplating the study of divinity, aged twenty-two, Feb. 13, 1832.

Nathaniel Bowditch Ingersoll, A.B., son of Nathaniel and — Ingersoll, born —; Harvard College, 1834; died a youth of promise, May 31, 1836, aged twenty-two.

William Parsons Atkinson, A.M., son of Amos and Anna Greenleaf (Sawyer) Atkinson, born Aug. 12, 1820; was a teacher; Harvard College, 1838; professor in Institute of Technology, Boston.

Edward Augustus Wild, A.B., M.D., son of Dr. Charles and Mary Joanna (Rhodes) Wild, born Nov. 25, 1825; Harvard College, 1844; a physician in successful practice in his native town till the war of the Rebellion, 1861; he entered the army as captain, and retired as brigadier-general in the United States service. (See Military Record elsewhere.)

GRADUATES OF BROWN UNIVERSITY.—Luther Metcalf Harris, M.D., son of John and Mary (Niles) Harris, born May 7, 1789; 1811 studied medicine in Roxbury with Dr. Lemuel Le Baron; commenced practice at Fort Independence in 1814; removed to Orford, N. H., in March, 1815; removed from thence to Jamaica Plain in 1820, where he was successfully engaged in his profession till his death. He was also the author of the "Harris Family Genealogy."

Rev. William Leverett, A.M., son of William and Lydia (Fuller) Leverett, born Jan. 25, 1800; graduate Brown University, 1824; settled pastor of Dudley Street Baptist Church, Roxbury, June, 1825; resigned July, 1839; installed pastor of Second Baptist Church, East Cambridge, Oct. 4, 1840. and resigned in 1849; after a short pastorate at New England Village, Grafton, failing health compelled him to retire from the ministry.

Washington Leverett, A.M., son of William and Lydia (Fuller) Leverett, born Dec. 19, 1805; Brown University, 1832; became a professor in Shurtleff College, Upper Alton, Ill.

Warren Leverett, A.M., son of William and Lydia (Fuller) Leverett; graduate Brown University, 1832; twin-brother of Washington above named; professor in the same college.

George Griggs, A.M., LL.B., Harvard, son of Joshua and Lydia Fuller (Leverett) Griggs, born —; graduated at Brown University, 1837; an attorney and counselor in Boston and Brookline.

James Andem, A.B., son of Moses Andem; graduated at Brown University, 1845; ordained pastor of Baptist Church, Dighton, Mass., Nov. 13, 1845; pastor at North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Jan. 10, 1850.

Augustine Shurtleff, A.M., son of Dr. Samuel Atwood and Eliza (Carleton) Shurtleff, of Brookline, born Aug. 24, 1846; fitted for college under the instruction of Rev. Dr. William H. Shailer; entered Brown University, 1842; graduated, 1846; studied medicine with his father, and in the Tremont Medical School, Boston, and Harvard Medical College, two years, New York Medical University, one year; received the degree of M.D. from Harvard, 1849; in 1850 attended medical lectures in Paris and visited the French hospitals; opened a medical office in Boston for a few months, and then removed to Brookline, his present residence.

Hezekiah Shailer, son of Smith and Lucinda (Shailer) Shailer, was born in Haddam, Conn.; fitted for college with Rev. Dr. Shailer; graduated at Brown University, 1846; immediately chosen teacher of the high school in Brookline; taught six years; afterwards engaged in the book business as a partner of Sheldon & Co., in New York; killed by lightning at Haddam, Conn., July 9, 1878.

GRADUATE OF THE COLLEGE OF NEW JERSEY, PRINCETON, N. J.—Caleb White, son of Benjamin and Sarah (Aspinwall) White, born March 10, 1741; graduate Princeton, N. J., 1762; died Dec. 16, 1770, aged thirty years.

A List of Students prepared wholly or in part for College at the Brookline High School.—Bacon, Horace, graduate Harvard College, 1868; merchant in New York.

Baker, Edward Wild, graduate Harvard College, 1882.

Beard, Amherst W., entered Harvard College, 1871.

Benton, Edward A. R., graduate Harvard College, 1875; entered Brown University, 1870; afterwards Ph.D.; geologist; resides in Newton.

Bixby, Charles Lee, graduate Harvard College, 1861; merchant in Boston; resides in Newton.

Bixby, William Herbert, West Point, 1870; instructor at West Point.

Bowditch, James H., graduate Harvard College, 1869; landscape gardener.

Bradbury, Charles Brooks, graduate Harvard College, 1858; teacher in New York.

Brett, Henry, graduate Harvard College, 1869; civil engineer; resides in Calumet, Mich.

Briggs, Frederic M., graduate Harvard College, 1879; physician in Boston.

Bush, Franklin Leonard, graduate Harvard College, 1864; Episcopal clergyman.

Cabot, Franklin, entered Harvard College, 1877.

Chandler, Alfred Dupont, graduate Harvard College, 1868; lawyer in Boston; chairman of Board of Selectmen, Brookline, 1884.

Chandler, Sumner C., entered Harvard College, 1871; lawyer in Boston.

Chapin, Horace Dwight, graduate Harvard College, 1871; lawyer in Boston.

Chase, Henry Lincoln, graduate Harvard College, 1882.

Chase, William Leverett, graduate Harvard College, 1876; merchant in Boston.

Clark, George Clinton, Amherst College, 1858; merchant in Chicago; became professor in a college in Chicago and president of education in that city.

Cobb, Albert Wheelwright, graduate Harvard College, 1872; lawyer in Chicago.

Creesy, Franklin L., graduate Harvard College, 1882; student in law school.

Cutler, Arthur Trufant, graduate Harvard College, 1871; merchant.

Cutler, Herbert Dunning, graduate Harvard College, 1869.

Deane, Henry Ware, graduate Harvard College, 1869; was a teacher in Boston; died 1875.

Dow, Edward Scott, graduate Harvard College, 1883; student in Harvard Medical School.

Edgerly, John H. W., graduate Harvard College, 1883.

Fay, Clement Kelsey, graduate Harvard College, 1867; lawyer in Boston.

Ferris, Edward Mortimer, graduate Harvard College, 1874.

Ferris, Lynde R., graduate Harvard College, 1883.

Geddes, James, Jr., graduate Harvard College, 1880.

Gooding, Alfred S., graduate Harvard College, 1877; minister in Brunswick, Me.

Goodnough, Benjamin F., graduate Harvard College, 1883; A.B.

Goodnough, Zanthus Henry, graduate Harvard College, 1882.

Henry, Bertram Curtis, entered Harvard College, 1882.

Hoar, David Blakely, graduate Harvard College, 1876; lawyer in Boston.

Hobbs, Marland Cogswell, entered Harvard College, 1881.

Homer, William Bradford, entered Amherst College, 1863; graduated at Military Academy, West Point.

Howe, Archibald Murray, graduate Harvard College, 1869; lawyer in Boston, residence in Cambridge.

Joyce, George Frederick, Jr., graduate Harvard College, 1881; teacher.

Kirby, Frederic W., entered Harvard College, 1868; architect in Boston.

Lincoln, Albert L., Harvard College, 1872; lawyer in Boston; special justice of police court in Brookline.

Lincoln, James Otis, graduate Harvard College, 1873.

Lincoln, Roland Crocker, graduate Harvard College, 1865; lawyer in Boston.

Long, Joseph Mansfield, entered Harvard College, 1881.

Loring, Robert P., graduate Amherst College, 1874; physician; now student of theology at Newton.

Mahan, James Francis, entered Harvard College, 1879.

Marston, Edward Chandler, entered Harvard College, 1881.

Mason, Allan Gregory, entered Harvard College, 1882.

Mason, John Whiting, graduate Harvard College with highest honors, 1882, and is now student at law.

Morse, James Herbert, graduate Harvard College, 1863; teacher in New York.

Parsons, Theophilus, graduate Harvard College, 1870; manufacturer.

Poor, Henry William, graduate Harvard College, 1865; merchant in New York.

Reed, Chester Allyn, graduate Harvard College, 1881.

Ritchie, John, graduate Harvard College, 1861; manufacturer of philosophical apparatus.

Robinson, James Arthur, entered Harvard College, 1877; physician in Taunton.

Shurtleff, Carlton Atwood, graduate Harvard College, 1861; medical cadet in army at Vicksburg; died, 1864.

Smith, Walter Bugbee, graduate Harvard College, 1870; mechanical engineer.

Soule, Charles Carroll, graduate Harvard College, 1862; major in army, afterwards in business in St. Louis, now publisher and bookseller in Boston.

Soule, Richard Herman, graduate Harvard College, 1870; mechanical engineer.

Stearns, John Joseph, Boston University, 1881; teacher.

Stoddard, John Lawson, graduate Williams College, 1872; studied divinity at Yale College, now public lecturer, and resides in Brookline.

Stone, Milton J., entered Harvard College, 1881.

Slyck, Van, Henry Switz, entered Harvard College, 1877.

Taylor, William H., Yale College, 1878; resides in New Mexico.

Turner, Nathaniel Dana, entered Harvard College, 1857.

Waldo, Charles Sidney, graduate Brown University, 1874.

Waldo, Clarence H., entered Brown University, 1875.

Wallace, William, Jr., entered Harvard College, 1879.

Ward, Langdon Lauriston, graduate Amherst College, 1879.

Warren, William Ross, graduate Harvard College, 1883; in business in New York.

Wellman, Franklin Lewis, graduate Harvard College, 1876; lawyer in New York.

Wellman, Henry Cleveland, graduate Harvard College, 1865; died, 1866.

Wells, Benjamin, graduate Harvard College, 1876; teacher in Providence, R. I.

Wetmore, Sidney, graduate Harvard College, 1877; lawyer in Boston.

White, William Howard, graduate Harvard College, 1880; lawyer.

Williams, Charles A., graduate Harvard College, 1872; lawyer in Boston.

Williams, Edward Tufts, graduate Harvard College, 1865; physician in Boston.

Williams, Harold, graduate Harvard College, 1875; physician in Boston.

Williams, Moses, Jr., graduate Harvard College, 1868; lawyer in Boston.

Wilson, William Griggs, graduate Harvard College, 1862; lawyer in New York.

Withington, Charles Francis, graduate Harvard College, 1874; teacher; now physician in Boston.

Wrightington, Stewart, entered Harvard College, 1884.

Students who were in the School of Technology from the Brookline High School.—Lincoln, Edwin H., civil engineer in Boston.

Aspinwall, Thomas, civil engineer in Boston.

Fisher, William B.

Haseltine, William, with Boston and Bangor Steam-boat Company, Boston.

Gooding, Charles S., mechanical engineer in Boston.

Cobb, Henry Ives, architect in Chicago.

Getchell, Alice M.

Pierce, Dean.

Bowditch, Fred C., conveyancer in Boston.

Harris, Charles A.

Wellman, Willard A.

Wilder, Burt G., professor in Cornell University.

LIST OF PERSONS ENGAGED AS SOLDIERS FROM THE TOWN OF BROOKLINE IN THE LATE REBELLION.

Gen. Edward A. Wild.

Lieut. Wm. L. Candler.

Lieut. Chas. L. Chandler.

Joseph W. Funk.

Charles D. Cates.

Lyman C. Stephens.

Wentworth Wilson.

Julius A. Phelps.

Charles McIntosh.

Benjamin F. Baxter.

Lewis G. Getchell.

Wm. Henry Trowbridge.

John C. Withington.

George H. Stone.

Alonzo B. Langley.

Joseph Turner.

Luther H. Gilman.

Mark B. Mulvey.

George W. Funk.

J. Frank Getchell.

George A. Bailey.

John E. Kelley.

Fergus B. Turner.

Charles B. McCausland.

Charles Townsend.

Timothy Goulding.

William J. Bell.

Clarence H. Thayer.

John R. Caswell.

Charles A. Dwyre.

Michael P. Mulrey.

Daniel W. Simpson.

Herbert S. Barlow.

William Gregory.

William Hughes.

James Gaffney.

John T. Robinson.

Francis Doyle.

Francis H. McIntosh.

John Lynch.

John J. O'Connell.

Michael Gaffney.

William Bowes.

James C. Withington.

Augustus Waterman.

Frank Howe.

Patrick Readon.

John Wilson.

Edward Stevens.

John Young.

John Malone.

John Cosgrove.

Wilder Dwight.

Freeman Fernald.

Malcolm G. Kittredge.

Charles O. Hallett.

John A. Pratt.

William H. Ela.

John Murphy.

Charles A. Moor.

Daniel H. Purrington.

Richard Leahy.

Henry Learnard.

James O'Brien.

Theodore Hanley.

Thomas Dillon.

Michael Lynch.

James Kent Stone.

H. V. D. Stone.

John Lawton.

Bernard Kaiser.

Charles E. Maynard.

Maurice L. Cooley.

Orrin W. Bosworth.

Julius Pauzlafl.

Fritz Goetz.

Charles Roser.

Frank J. Cleves.

Andrew J. Moore.

Daniel Hill.

Joseph Sayward.

James Welch.

Francis Shattuck.

Augustus Mitchell.

Martin Heinlein.

Andrew Heinlein.

Paschal Barrill, Jr.

B. F. Whitehouse.

John McGettrick.

Charles F. Fernald.

John E. Farrington.

Martin Dailey.

William Fogerty.

John McGowan.

George Johnson.

Miles Murphy.

Robert Murray.

Benjamin F. Cartret.

Edward F. Allen.

James Daley (2d).

Augustus N. Sampson.

George E. Bates.

Albert B. Whiting.

John Cusick.

Edgar James Hobson.

Henry Bell.

Robert Bowes.

Charles F. Neal.

Horace E. Smith.

Warren Handy.

John E. Kelly.

Francis McNamara.

Benjamin F. Hanaford.

Charles E. Griswold.

Charles H. Perry.

James P. Stearns.

Horace P. Williams.

Thomas G. Warren.

Edward Perry.

Arthur Kemp.

Michael McGrath.

Alonzo Bowman.

Michael Cauty.

Michael Campbell.

Timothy Kennedy.

John Sweeney.

William Sullivan.

James A. Fisher.

Bartholomew Cusick.

Frederick Hutchings.

Eliphalet F. Winter.

A. W. Morse.

George E. Archer.

James A. Dale.

William E. Richardson.

Benjamin B. Edmands.

Henry H. Fuller.

John E. H. Chase.

Joseph H. Dwyer.

George W. Babb.

George H. Bacon.

Albert A. Pope.

Stephen W. Adams.

James H. Pike.

Edward L. Sargent.

Robert Murphy.

James S. Arthur.

Charles J. Worthen.

Henry H. Shedd.

David J. Mixer.

Otis A. Foster.

John W. Seward.

Edmund Russell.

William H. White.

Maurice Haley.

Robert W. Bruce.

Horace H. Goodwin.

William H. Douglas.

James O. Joslyn.

Casper Crowningshield.

Louis Cabot.

William H. Bartlett.

James W. Sinclair.

Amasa D. Bacon.

Luther L. Esterbrook.

John C. Frost.

Augustus S. Alden.

Lewis R. Allard.

Oscar F. Glidden.

William G. Rollins.

Simeon G. Richardson.

Edward H. Church.

Edwin T. Atwood.

Lyman W. Temple.

Otis N. Harrington.

Frederic F. Brown.

William H. Starkweather.

Stephen H. Johnson.

Asa L. Gowell.

Samuel Abell.

Daniel D. Adams.

Benjamin E. Corlew.

William H. Fitzpatrick.

Charles E. Pierce.

John T. Goodwin.

Daniel Webster Atkinson.

Henry L. Wheelock.

Willard Y. Gross.

Henry Orentt.

Mears Orentt.

Hiram P. Ring.

Llewellyn Ham.

Charles G. Colbath.

John C. Wilkins.

William Dwight, Jr.

Charles T. Dwight.

Howard Dwight.

Nicholas Eagan.

Charles Manny.

William Nichols, surgeon.

George M. Rollins.

George G. Stoddard.

Charles E. Rollins.

J. Nelson Bogman.

Frank L. Boyden.

William C. Richardson.

Gershom C. Winsor.

Sidney Heath.

James H. Robinson.

Henry B. Scudder.

Eustis C. Hubbard.

Frank H. Scudder.

George A. Higgins.

Frank Fitz.

E. Clifford Walker.

John Burnham.

William T. Eustis.

Frederic Dexter.

Alfred Winsor, Jr.

George A. Slack.

Edward B. Richardson.

Joseph H. Wellman.

S. W. Richardson.

George H. Adams.

Otis T. Morrill.

Edward C. Cabot.

John Leonard.

Albert R. Howe.

Charles C. Soule.

William F. Hall.

Jeremiah McCarty.

Thomas Britt.

William Johnson.
 George B. Chamberlain.
 George F. Dearborn.
 William L. Wellman.
 William H. Batson.
 A. Cowan.
 H. G. Porter.
 Osavius Verney.
 John Ayres.
 Joshua W. Carter.
 J. H. Chamberlain.
 John W. Clark.
 W. Gould.
 Edward W. Griggs.
 Nathaniel P. Harris.
 William McCarthy.
 Mark W. Sheafe, Jr.
 Warren Simons.
 Daniel P. Sawyer.
 William H. Warren.
 Charles T. Chandler.
 Charles L. Perry.
 John H. Whitney.
 Charles H. Whitney.
 John C. Woodward.
 Horace E. Whitfield.
 George Pope.
 G. O. Fessenden.
 Charles A. Wilkinson.
 Thomas L. Smith.
 Julius Kuhlrig.
 Jacob Miller.
 Benjamin F. Higgins.
 John S. O'Brien.
 Thomas Maloney.
 R. B. T. Dowdaney.
 William H. Steele.
 Harry Hazellhurst.
 Isaac N. Bridge.
 Robert G. Bridge.
 C. M. Schafer.
 Emil Dupont.
 Luther J. Nason.
 Charles B. Spencer.
 Joseph H. Wellman.
 William Johnson.
 Daniel Sweeney.
 William F. Robinson.
 Frank Bryant.
 William H. Bradford.
 Pierce E. Penniman.
 Isaac F. Lobdell.
 George Cook.
 Henry A. Ferrie.
 H. A. Morrill.
 Diomes Rosaline.
 Trustworthy L. Moulton.
 William Ragin.
 E. H. Johnson.
 John P. Treat.
 James Kingsmill.
 James Hamilton.
 S. F. Douglas.
 James Sherman.
 George Brown.
 John Saunders.

Edward Harris.
 Charles Raynold.
 Albert McDonald.
 Joseph Dykes.
 Charles Boston.
 Patrick Carey.
 Lewis Osley.
 Frank Seaverns.
 George Perry.
 John C. Baker.
 E. V. Noyes.
 Learned Purcell.
 John Keenan.
 James M. Richardson.
 T. W. Warren.
 John Allen.
 Henry Bacon.
 Lewis Henry Ballard.
 Sidney Barstow.
 Edmund D. Barton.
 Thomas Bell.
 Oliver C. Bixby.
 Benjamin M. Bond.
 John Brown.
 John H. Brotherson.
 William B. Butterfield.
 Thomas Carroll.
 Mathew Casey.
 Augustus Chapman.
 Moses M. Chase.
 Thomas Cleary.
 Alexander H. Clapp, Jr.
 Elbridge G. Collins.
 William Collins.
 William B. Cowan.
 James H. Crowell.
 Thomas Cusiek.
 William Dalton.
 James Davenport.
 George Dimond.
 Walter Calvin Dinmock.
 William Driscoll.
 Michael Flannery.
 John Fizzell.
 Patrick Gallagher.
 William Gallagher.
 James H. Gartside.
 Charles H. Granville.
 Charles H. Godkin.
 Robert Gray.
 Alex. Francis Green.
 Cornelius R. Guptill.
 John Hagenah.
 William Haley.
 John C. Hardy.
 David Harris.
 George W. Harris.
 James W. Harvey.
 George A. Higgins.
 Charles H. Hollis.
 Joseph Hopkins.
 David Howe, Jr.
 Henry Jenkins.
 Jeremiah Kellogg.
 Albert Lanyninder.
 Thomas Logan.

Sewall C. Maynard.
 Edward Maloney.
 Daniel McAllister.
 Thomas McCabe.
 John McClellan.
 Edward McClinchy.
 Onslow McLaughlin.
 Nelson McNonagle.
 Patrick Moriarty.
 James Merrill.
 Alfred Mitchell.
 Owen O. Flynn.
 Charley Olsen.
 Lewis C. Oulman.
 James Penderghast.
 Edward S. Perry.
 Henry R. Peterson.
 Joseph P. Pond, Jr.
 Thomas Powers.
 John Quinlan.
 Samuel S. Reed.
 James Henry Rice.
 James Rice.
 Henry F. Ross.

William Samuels.
 William B. Seymoure.
 Alfred E. Smart.
 Asa W. Smith.
 John Snow.
 John Sylva.
 James Tarby, Jr.
 Matthew Towle.
 Jeremiah Toomey.
 Eugene C. Walker.
 James T. Walsh.
 Patrick Ward.
 Charles F. Webster.
 Thomas Whalen.
 Samuel White.
 Burnham C. Clark.
 Horace W. Chandler.
 Isaiah S. Coombs.
 Joseph Cole.
 Thomas Devine.
 Richard Harrington.
 T. E. Richardson.
 John Saunders.
 Edward N. Selfridge.

Col. Theodore Lyman was on Gen. Meade's staff.

Carlton A. Shurtleff, medical cadet.

Edward S. Philbrick was employed by the government at Port Royal, S. C.

Memorial to the Memory of our Patriotic Dead.

—The list of names as they appear on the tablets is printed below :

HENRY ALBERS.

32d Mass. Inf. Died March 30, 1865, Washington, D. C., of wounds received at Petersburg, Va.

DANIEL W. ATKINSON.

10th Mass. Battery. Killed Oct. 27, 1864, Hatcher's Run, Va.

JOSEPH BAINS.

U. S. Navy: Steamer Moccasin. Died Feb. 2, 1865.

GEORGE BAKER.

32d Mass. Inf. Died on the march in Virginia, Sept. 11, 1862.

HERBERT S. BARLOW.

1st Mass. Inf. Killed accidentally Jan. 31, 1862, Budd's Ferry, Md.

PASCHAL BARRELL, Jr.

2d Mass. Inf. Died of wounds, May 12, 1863, received at Chancellorsville, Va.

OLIVER C. BIXBY.

58th Mass. Inf. Killed July 30, 1864, Petersburg, Va.

J. NELSON BOGMAN.

3d R. I. Artillery. Died.

ROBERT BOWES.

17th Mass. Inf. Drowned May 10, 1862, Newberne, N. C.

JOSEPH BURKE.

59th Mass. Inf. Killed May 12, 1864, Spottsylvania, Va.

GEORGE C. BURRILL.

1st Lieut. 59th Mass. Inf. Killed May 8, 1864, The Wilderness, Va.

CHARLES L. CHANDLER.

Lieut.-Col. 57th Mass. Killed May 24, 1864, North Anna River, Va.

MOSES M. CHASE.

Corp. Co. G, 2d Mass. Heavy Artillery. Died in Andersonville Prison Sept. 13, 1864.

JOHN W. CLARK.

1st Mass. Battery. Died Oct. 4, 1862, Bakersville, Md.

THOMAS CLEARY.

56th Mass. Inf. Died April 13, 1864, Annapolis, Md.

ELBRIDGE G. COLLINS.

2d Mass. Heavy Art. Died Sept. 14, 1864, Andersonville, Ga.

GEORGE COLLINS.

Co. B, 2d Mass. Infantry. Died March 26, 1865, at Goldsboro', N. C.

JOHN B. CUSICK.

28th Mass. Inf. Killed June 16, 1864, Petersburg, Va.

JAMES A. DALE.

Corp. 33d Mass. Inf. Died July 1, 1864, of wounds received May 15, 1864, at Resaca, Ga.

THOMAS DILLON.

2d Mass. Inf. Killed Sept. 17, 1862, Antietam, Md.

HOWARD DWIGHT.

Capt. 4th Missouri Cav. Killed May 4th, 1863, near Bayou Boeuf, La.

WILDER DWIGHT.

Lieut.-Col. 2d Mass. Inf. Died Sept. 19, 1862, of wounds received at Antietam, Md.

HENRY P. EDGAR.

U. S. Navy. Died in hospital, Jan. 28, 1864.

CHARLES FREEMAN FERNALD.

Co. H, 2d Mass. Inf. Died May 3, 1863.

JAMES M. FOSS.

Sergt. 59th Mass. Inf. Died Nov. 5, 1864, New York City.

ELISHA T. FRENCH.

Corp. Co. G, 2d Mass. Heavy Art. Died a prisoner in Florence, October, 1864.

JOSEPH W. FUNK.

11th Mass. Inf. Died Oct. 16, 1864, Washington, D. C.

J. FRANK GETCHELL.

Corp. 1st Mass. Inf. Died Feb. 3, 1863, Falmouth, Va.

LOUIS G. GETCHELL.

1st Mass. Inf. Killed June 25, 1862, Fair Oaks, Va.

CHARLES H. GODKIN.

2d Mass. Heavy Art. Died Oct. 3, 1864, Andersonville, Ga.

HORACE H. GOODWIN.

1st Mass. Cav. Died Feb. 3, 1864, Washington, D. C.

CHARLES E. GRISWOLD.

Col. 56th Mass. Inf. Killed May 6, 1864, The Wilderness, Va.

OTIS N. HARRINGTON.

1st Sergt. 10th Mass. Battery. Died July 30, 1863, Washington, D. C.

NATHANIEL P. HARRIS.

Sergt. 45th Mass. Inf. Died June 19, 1863, Newberne, N. C.

JOHN HAYMON.

56th Mass. Inf. Killed July 30, 1864, Petersburg, Va.

FRANCIS G. HOLMES.

U. S. Navy, Steamer Tuscombina. Died of wounds May 18, 1863.

TIMOTHY KENNEDY.

28th Mass. Inf. Killed Dec. 13, 1862, Fredericksburg, Va.

JOHN KILROY.

Corp. 28th Mass. Inf. Died June 14, 1862, Hilton Head, S. C.

WILLIAM H. KINNEY.

U. S. Navy, Steamer Benton. Killed in action, April 29, 1863.

MALCOLM G. KITTRIDGE.

2d Mass. Inf. Killed May 3, 1863, Chancellorsville, Va.

FREDERICK KNIBBS.

58th Mass. Inf. Died May 24, 1864, Fredericksburg, Va., of wounds received —.

SAMUEL G. LAMSON.

Paymaster's Clerk, U. S. A. Died Aug. 4, 1863, on Steamer Ruth.

JOHN LEE.

5th Mass. Cav. Died June 21, 1865, on Steamer Ashland.

WILLIAM LYNCH.

Corp. 28th Mass. Inf. Died of wounds Jan. 3, 1863.

JAMES McCALEY.

59th Mass. Inf. Died May 29, 1864, Arlington Heights, Va.

EDWARD MALONEY.

56th Mass. Inf. Died June 13, 1864, City Point, Va.

JOHN MEAD.

16th Mass. Battery. Died Jan. 28, 1865, New Brunswick, Va.

OTIS S. MERRILL.

44th Mass. Inf. Died March 2, 1863, Newberne, N. C.

JAMES MILES.

2d Mass. Cav. Killed Feb. 22, 1864, Drainsville, Va.

PATRICK MORIARTY.

56th Mass. Inf. Died Oct. 14, 1864, Danville, Va.

MICHAEL MORRISSY.

U. S. Navy: Steamer W. G. Anderson. Died Dec. 14, 1861.

ABEL W. MORSE.

32d Mass. Inf. Killed June 3, 1864, Bethesda Church, Va.

ROBERT S. MURRAY.

Corp. 12th Mass. Inf. Killed Sept. 17, 1862, Antietam, Md.

JEREMIAH O'BRIEN.

24th Mass. Inf. Killed May 16, 1864, Drury's Bluff, Va.

MICHAEL O'NEIL.

30th Mass. Inf. Killed July 13, 1863, Donaldsonville, La.

JULIUS A. PHELPS.

1st Mass. Inf. Killed June 30, 1862, Glendale, Va.

SAMUEL S. REED.

2d Mass. Heavy Art. Died Sept. 8, 1864, Andersonville, Ga.

CHARLES E. ROLLINS.

44th Mass. Inf. Died Nov. 2, 1862, Little Creek, N. C.

HENRY L. ROSS.

56th Mass. Inf. Killed May 6, 1864, The Wilderness, Va.

CARLETON A. SHURTLEFF.

Medical Cadet. Invalided at the Siege of Vicksburg, Miss. Died June 26, 1864, Brookline.

GEORGE T. STEARNS.

22d Mass. Inf. Died July 5, 1864, Washington, D. C., of wounds received in The Wilderness, Va.

HENRY V. D. STONE.

2d Lieut. 2d Mass. Inf. Killed July 3, 1863, Gettysburg, Pa.

JOHN GORHAM THAYER.

Capt. 1st Mass. Cav. Died Dec. 28, 1864, Sacramento, Cal.

WILLIAM H. TROWBRIDGE.

1st Mass. Inf. Died July 6, 1862, Malvern Hill, Va.

JOSEPH W. TURNER.

1st Mass. Inf. Died June 21, 1862, Fair Oaks, Va.

THOMAS G. WARREN.

22d Mass. Inf. Killed June 18, 1864, Petersburg, Va.

AUGUSTUS WATERMAN.

1st Mass. Inf. Died Feb. 12, 1865, Searsport, Me.

CHARLES F. WEBSTER.

Co. G, 2d Mass. Heavy Artillery. Missing in action, April 20, 1864.

HENRY W. WELLS.

Ensign U. S. Navy. Lost at sea, Dec. 31, 1864.

THOMAS WHALEN.

22d Mass. Inf. Killed May 10, 1864, Laurel Hill, Va.

CHARLES H. WHEELWRIGHT.

Surgeon U. S. Navy. Died July 30, 1862, Pilot Town, La.

RICHARD H. WYETH.

3d Mass. Cav. Died while a prisoner, 1864.

The following-named persons, residents of the town of Brookline, were engaged in the United States naval service :

John S. G. Aspinwall, assistant engineer.

Charles L. Bixby, coast survey.

—— Danforth.

Joseph F. Green, captain.

William H. Gilson.

Winslow L. Hallett.

Frederic Hutchers.

Stephen Longfellow, coast survey.

Patrick Mitchell.

John O'Dea.

Charles B. Pine.

Thomas O. Selfridge, captain.

Thomas O. Selfridge, Jr., lieutenant.

George G. Stoddard, lieutenant of marines.

George Treadwell.

Henry W. Wells, master's mate.

Richard Soule.

Terrance Gallagher.

Patrick Linney.

Sailors in the United States Navy credited to Brookline—1861 to 1865.

Ashton, George E.

Antonio, George.

Armitage, Thomas B.

Ayer, Edward H.

Anderson, John.

Adams, William W.

Altham, George.

Borden, Nathaniel A.

Blake, Samuel.

Byron, William E.

Brown, John E.

Bliss, Frederick.

Barrett, Richard.

Berry, James T.

Boyden, John.

Burk, John.

Byrnes, James.

Bains, Joseph.

Burns, Patrick.

Baring, James.

Butler, Winthrop.

Bruce, W. G.

Brigham, Frank W.

Brickett, George F.

Belmano, F. C.

Bigelow, B. F.

Blackmer, John.

Burleigh, Daniel C.

Castono, Admirian.

Cage, Henry.

Cloth, William P.

Cross, Richard.

Coffin, Benjamin A.

Chase, James W.

Curran, Daniel.

Came, Lewis.

Clancy, Paul.

Conner, John C.

Cutter, Sebastian.

Carr, George W.

Cloutman, Henry.

Coburn, George M.

Cunningham, Michael.

Callahan, Thomas.

Callahan, John.

Curtis, Frank.

Cunningham, Thomas A.

Campbell, William H.

Corrie, Robert.

Colby, Edward P.

Callahan, E. J.

Downey, Jeremiah.

Devoe, Cornelius.

Doyle, Cornelius.

Dunn, James.

Dunn, James T.

Daley, Timothy.

Dailey, John.

Donald, David.

Eldridge, Joshua H.

Ewer, George W.

Edgar, Henry P.

Evans, George.

Ellis, Francis E.

Edwards, Henry D.

Edwards, Shubale P.

Fallon, Michael.

Franklin, Benjamin.

Faber, Henry D.

Fisher, Erastus E.

Faber, John W.

Fitzgerald, Florence.

Frisbee, John B.

Fay, John.

Fisher, William.

Franklin, David B.

Fenner, Erastus L.

Flynn, Patrick.

Flug, Rufus A.

Fernands, Mans.

Fisney, Thomas.

Fay, Thomas L.

Gillispee, William.

Gruce, William.

Gross, Amasa J.

Griswold, John N.

Gordon, Henry.

Gould, Charles H.

Garvin, William.

Hartford, Hiram E.

Heher, Patrick.

Holmes, Francis G.

Holbrook, William.

Hartigan, David B.

Hogan, Michael.

Harris, William.

Hart, Daniel.

Harlow, Michael.

Hazen, Edward L.

Holland, Jeremiah.

Harrington, John.

Ignases, Raphael.

Jordan, William.

Johnson, John.

Joyce, Thomas.

Kinney, William H.

Kavill, Henry.

Keene, Patrick.

Kruger, Henry J.

Lehey, Thomas.

Landrigan, William.

Mahoney, Timothy.

Millett, William.

Manwarring, Wilson.

Mahon, John.

Myron, Henry.

Morrissey, Mike.

Merrill, Marcellus R.

Martin, John.

McDermot, Patrick.

McCann, Thomas.

McGrath, Daniel.

Mullen, Thomas.

McDonald, James.

McElhone, Hugh.

Moore, Samuel.

Nolan, John.

Newell, Michael.

Neil, John.

Nash, Peter.

Nolan, John.

Nolan, John.

O'Sullivan, Thomas.

Pike, Walter.

Pinkham, Thomas H.

Quinlan, Michael.

Quirk, William.

Rogers, John.

Russell, Brightman.

Sullivan, Michael.

Stephens, Peter E.

Sterling, Hiram.

Stickney, John S. R.

Stephens, Joel L.

Swarez, Manual.

Sampson, Edward.

Sullivan, Daniel.

Sullivan, Jeremiah.

Sullivan, John.

Spencer, Charles E.

Smith, James W.

Sullivan, Jeremiah.

Sheean, Dennis.

Smith, John.

Sheldon, George.

Trask, Moses H.

Tucker, Hiram.

Thorner, William.

Todd, Joseph.

Treadwell, Frank.

Traynor, Alfred.

Todd, Samuel.

Venton, Henry.

Wood, Samuel.

Wornell, Jeremiah.

Wright, James.

Waltz, Jacob.

Williams, Charles.

Williamson, Anthony W.

Whitney, Patrick.

Welsh, Michael.

Watson, Joseph.

West, William C.

Wilson, John.

Watson, James.

Williams, George.

Walton, John.

LIST OF SELECTMEN.

From the Incorporation of the Town of Brookline, Mass., to the Present Time.

Lieut. Thomas Gardner, 1703, '07, '11, '12.

Samuel Aspinwall, 1706, '07, '11, '12, '14, '15, '16, '17, '18.

John Winchester, 1706, '07, '08, '09, '10, '11, '16, '25, '26, '33, '37,

Benjamin White, 1706, '17, '18, '27, '28, '29, '30, '31, '32.

Thomas Stedman, 1707, '08, '09, '10, '13, '16, '18.

Samuel Sewell, 1706, '08, '09, '10, '12, '14, '15.

Erosamond Drew, 1713.

Josiah Winchester, 1713, '14, '17.

John Seaver, 1715, '18, '37.

Joseph Gardner, 1719, '20.

- Lieut. Henry Winchester, 1719, '20, '21, '22, '23, '24, '25, '36, '40.
- Capt. Caleb Gardner, 1719, '20, '21, '22, '25, '27, '28, '29, '30, '31.
- James Griggs, 1721, '26.
- Peter Boylston, 1722, '23, '24.
- Samuel White, 1723, '24, '25, '34, '35, '36, '39, '40, '41, '42, '43, '44, '45, '46, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '52, '53, '56, '57.
- Isaac Gardner, 1725, '33, '37, '45, '46, '47.
- Capt. Robert Sharp, 1726, '27, '28, '29, '32, '34, '35, '38, '39, '47, '48, '49.
- Deacon Thomas Cotton, 1730.
- Abraham Woodward, 1731, '34, '35, '43, '50, '51, '54, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59.
- Elhanan Winchester, 1731, '32.
- Capt. Edward White, 1733, '36, '40, '42, '43, '47, '52, '53.
- Samuel Clark, 1733, '36.
- Joshua Child, 1733.
- William Gleason, 1738, '39.
- Capt. Benjamin Gardner, 1738, '55, '56.
- Col. Thomas Aspinwall, 1738, '41, '42, '44, '45, '46, '47, '48, '49, '58, '76, '79, '85.
- Nathaniel Seaver, 1738.
- William Davis, 1741.
- Dr. Zabdiel Boylston, 1744.
- Deacon Ebenezer Davis, 1750, '51, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '85, '86, '91, '92.
- Henry Sewall, 1752, '53, '60, '61.
- Jonathan Winchester, 1754, '55, '56, '57.
- Nehemiah Davis, 1754, '59.
- Deacon Joseph White, 1756, '58.
- Jeremy Gridley, 1760, '61, '67.
- John Harris, Jr., 1760, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '94, '95.
- Isaac Gardner, Jr., 1760, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '71, '72, '73, '85, '86.
- Capt. Benjamin White, 1762, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '78, '79, '81, '82.
- Capt. Robert Sharp, Jr., 1762, '63, '64, '65, '66.
- Maj. Moses White, 1765, '78, '79, '83, '84, '87, '88, '89, '90.
- Capt. John Goddard, 1767, '68, '69, '74, '76, '78, '80, '81, '82, '85, '86, '93.
- Thomas Griggs, 1768, '69, '75, '76.
- Elisha Gardner, 1769, '77.
- Isaac Winchester, 1770.
- Isaac Child, 1770, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76.
- Maj. William Thompson, 1777, '80.
- Capt. Timothy Corey, 1777, '93, '94, '95.
- Elhanan Winchester, 1778.
- Capt. Samuel Craft, 1778, '79, '87, '88, '89, '90, '99, 1800, '01, '02, '03, '04, '05, '06, '07, '08, '09.
- Stephen Sharp, 1779, '83, '84, '93, '96, '97, '98, '99, 1800, '01, '02, '03, '04, '05, '06, '07, '08, '09, '10, '11, '12, '13.
- Capt. William Campbell, 1780, '81, '82.
- Caleb Craft, 1783, '84, '91, '92.
- Daniel Dana, 1785.
- Deacon Samuel Clark, 1787, '88, '89, '90, '99, 1800, '01, '02, '03, '04, '05, '06, '07, '08, '09.
- Isaac S. Gardner, 1791, '92, '96, '97, '98, 1814, '15, '16, '17.
- Nathaniel Winchester, 1794, '95.
- Capt. Joseph Goddard, 1796, '97, '98, 1805, '11, '12, '13, '14, '15, '16, '17.
- Deacon John Robinson, 1805, '06, '07, '08, '10, '11, '12, '13, '14, '15, '16, '17, '18, '19, '20, '21, '22, '23, '24, '25, '26, '27, '28, '29, '30, '31, '32, '33, '34.
- Eliphalet Spurr, 1807, '08, '10.
- Nathaniel Murdock, 1818, '19, '20, '21, '22, '23, '24.
- Oliver Whyte, 1818, '19, '20, '21, '22, '23, '24, '25, '26, '27, '28, '29, '30.
- Ebenezer Heath, 1825, '26, '27, '28, '29.
- James Leeds, 1830, '31.
- John Hayden, 1831, '32, '34.
- Charles Stearns, Jr., 1832, '33, '34, '35, '36, '37, '38, '39, '40, '41.
- John Thayer, 1833.
- Daniel Sanderson, 1835, '36, '37.
- Abijah W. Goddard, 1835, '36, '37.
- Reubin Hunting, 1838.
- John W. Bass, 1838, '39.
- James Robinson, 1839, '40, '41.
- Benjamin B. Davis, 1840, '41.
- Daniel Sanderson, 1842, '43, '44, '45, '47.
- David Coolidge, 1842, '43, '44.
- Thomas Griggs, 1842, '43, '44.
- Marshal Stearns, 1845, '46, '49, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66.
- James Bartlett, 1845, '46, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '53, '54, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69.
- Hugh M. Sanborn, 1846, '47, '48.
- Bela Stoddard, 1848.
- Samuel Craft, 1849.
- Jerathmeel Davenport, 1850, '51, '52, '53.
- William Dearborn, 1850, '51, '52.
- David S. Coolidge, 1852, '53, '54.
- John C. Abbott, 1854.
- Howard S. Williams, 1855, '56, '57, '58, '59.¹
- Willard A. Humphrey, 1858, '59.
- Thomas Parsons, 1858, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '74, '75.
- Edward R. Seccomb, 1860, '61, '62.
- Nathaniel G. Chapin, 1860, '61, '62, '63.
- William J. Griggs, 1863, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70.
- Edward S. Philbrick, 1864, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69.
- Horace James, 1867, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82.
- Charles D. Head, 1870, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75.
- Augustus Whittemore, 1870.
- William Aspinwall, 1871, '72.
- Charles K. Kirby, 1871, '72, '73, '74, '75.
- James W. Edgerly, 1871, '72, '73, '78.
- Daniel D. Brodhead, 1873.
- Austin W. Benton, 1874, '75.
- William I. Bowditch, 1876, '77, '78.²
- James M. Codman, 1876, '77.
- Francis W. Lawrence, 1876, '77, '78, '79, '82, '83, '84.
- Marshall Russell, 1876, '77.
- Oliver Whyte, 1877, '78, '79, '80, '81, '83, '84.
- Moses Williams, Jr., 1879.
- Rufus G. F. Candage, 1879, '80, '81.
- Charles H. Drew, 1880, '81, '82, '83.
- Roland C. Lincoln, 1880, '81.
- William D. Coolidge, 1882.
- Nathaniel Lyford, 1882.
- Charles F. Spaulding, 1883.
- John K. Rogers, 1883, '84.
- Alfred D. Chandler, 1884.
- James B. Hand, 1884.

¹ Voted to have five selectmen in 1858, which has been the custom of the town to the present time.

² In 1876 the selectmen were overseers of the poor, surveyors of highways, a special board of health having been elected.

In 1877 the selectmen, surveyors of highways, and board of health were one board.

ASSESSORS.

From the Incorporation of the Town of Brookline, Mass., to the Present Time.

Samuel Aspinwall, 1706.
Joseph Gardner, 1706.
John Winchester, Sr., 1706, '07.
Lieut. Thomas Gardner, 1707.
Ensign Benjamin White, 1707.

We find no record of any election of assessors for the town between 1707 and 1712. In that year the "Selectmen were authorized and appointed to Assess on the property," and from 1712 to 1737 the selectmen performed the duties of that office.

Capt. Robert Sharp, 1738.
Benjamin Gardner, 1738, '43.
Thomas Aspinwall, 1738.
Selectmen elected assessors, 1739, '40, '41, '42.
Ebenezer Davis, 1743, '44, '47, '48, '53, '92.
Nathaniel Seaver, 1743, '44, '47, '48, '53.
Samuel Craft, 1747, '48.
William Davis, 1753.

Selectmen elected assessors, 1749, '50, '51, '52, '54, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84. (See List of Selectmen for names.)

No election of assessors in the following years, viz.: 1785, '86, '87, '88, '89, '90, '91, '92, '93, '94, '95.

Selectmen elected assessors, 1796, '97, '98, '99, 1800, '01, '02, '03, '04, '05, '06, '07, '08, '09, '10, '11, '12, '13, '14, '15, '16, '17, '18, '19, '20, '21, '22, '23, '24, '25, '26, '27, '28, '29, '30, '31, '32, '33, '34, '35, '36, '37, '38, '39, '40, '41.

Since 1796 up to 1856, the selectmen were elected to serve as assessors. From the last date they were annually elected, separately.

Charles Stearns, Jr., 1842, '43, '44, '45, '46, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '53.

Samuel Philbrick, 1842.

Seth T. Thayer, 1842.

Abijah W. Goddard, 1843, '49.

Timothy Corey, 1843, '44.

Isaac Cook, 1844, '45, '46.

Jesse Bird, 1845, '46.

Thomas Griggs, 1847, '48, '49, '50, '51.

Royal McIntosh, 1847, '48.

John N. Turner, 1850, '51, '60, '61, '62.

William I. Bowditch, 1852, '70.

A. H. Newell, 1852.

William A. Humphrey, 1852, '53, '54, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59.

Augustus W. Seamans, 1853, '54.

James Robinson, 1854.

Jerathmeel Davenport, 1855, '56, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63.

Frederic J. Williams, 1855, '56, '57.

William H. Jameson,¹ 1855, '56, '57.

Thomas B. Hall,¹ 1855, '56, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78.

George Craft, 1855, '56, '57.

William B. Towne, 1863, '64, '65, '66, '67.

Albert W. Smith, 1864, '65, '66.

Austin W. Benton, 1867, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72.

Marshal Stearns, 1868, '69.

William Aspinwall, 1871.

William Lincoln, 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84.

¹ During the years 1855, '56, '57, these men were assistant assessors only.

Frederic W. Prescott, 1873, '74, '75, '76, '77.

Rufus G. F. Candage, 1873, '84.

J. Anson Guild, 1878, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84.

William D. Coolidge, 1879, '80, '81, '82, '83. Nominated, but died before election (1884).

TOWN CLERKS.

From the Date of Incorporation.

Josiah Winchester, Sr., 1706, '07, '10, '13.

Samuel Sewall, 1708, '09, '12, '14, '26.

Thomas Stedman, 1711.

John Seaver, 1715, '16, '17, '18.

Edward White, 1719, '20, '21, '22, '23, '24, '25.

Samuel White, 1727, '28, '29, '30, '31, '32, '33, '34, '35, '36, '37, '38, '39, '40, '41, '42, '43, '44, '45.

Henry Sewall, 1746.

Ebenezer Davis, 1747, '48, '49, '51.

Henry Davis, 1750.

Jonathan Winchester, 1752, '53, '54, '55, '56, '57.

Isaac Gardner, Jr., 1758, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75.

Stephen Sharp, 1776, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84, '85, '86, '87, '88, '89, '90, '91, '92, '93, '94, '95, '96, '97, '98, '99, 1800, '01, '02, '03, '04, '05, '06, '07, '08, '09, '10, '11, '12, '13.

Oliver Whyte, 1814, '15, '16, '17, '18, '19, '20, '21, '22, '23, '24, '25, '26, '27, '28, '29, '30, '31, '32, '33, '34, '35, '36, '37, '38, '39, '40, '41.

Otis Withington, 1842, '43, '44, '45.

Artemas Newell, 1846, '47, '48, '49.

William Aspinwall, 1850, '51.

Benjamin F. Baker, 1852, '53, '54, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84.

Much of the time previous to 1849 the town clerk held the office of treasurer, as may be seen by comparing list of names.

TREASURERS OF THE TOWN OF BROOKLINE.

From the Date of Incorporation.

Samuel Sewall, Jr., 1707, '08, '09, '10, '11, '12, '14, '15, '18, '26.

Josiah Winchester, 1713, '16.

Joseph Goddard, 1717.

Edward White, 1719, '20, '21, '22, '23, '24, '25.

Samuel White, 1727, '28, '29, '30, '31, '32, '33, '34, '35, '36, '37, '38, '39, '40, '41, '42, '43, '44, '45.

Henry Sewall, 1746.

Ebenezer Davis, 1747, '48, '49, '51, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72.

Henry Davis, 1750.

Jonathan Winchester, 1752, '53, '54, '55, '56, '57.

Isaac Gardner, Jr., 1758, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '70.

Benjamin White, 1773, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79.

Maj. William Thompson, 1780.

Dr. William Aspinwall, 1781, '82, '83, '84, '85, '86, '87, '88, '89, '90.

Stephen Sharp, 1791, '92, '93, '94, '95, '96, '97, '98, '99, 1800, '01, '02, '03, '04, '05, '06, '07, '08, '09, '10, '11, '12, '13.

Ebenezer Heath, 1814, '15, '16, '17, '18, '19, '20, '21, '22, '23, '24, '25, '26, '27, '28.

Oliver Whyte, 1829, '30, '31, '32, '33, '34, '35, '36, '37.

Artemas Newell, 1838, '39, '40, '41, '42, '43, '44, '45, '46, '47.

Stephen S. C. Jones, 1848.

Moses Withington, 1849, '50, '51, '52, '53, '54, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84.

NAMES OF MODERATORS OF THE ANNUAL TOWN-MEETINGS.

From the Incorporation of the Town to the Present Time, with the Date of the Meeting.

March	4, 1706.	In these years the name of the presiding officer is not recorded.
"	3, 1707.
"	7, 1708-9.
"	6, 1709-10.
"	5, 1710-11.
"	3, 1712.
"	2, 1713.
"	1, 1714.
"	21, 1715.
"	12, 1716.
"	18, 1717.
March	3, 1718. Josiah Winchester, Sr.
"	2, 1719. Edward White.
"	9, 1720. " "
"	6, 1721. " "
"	5, 1722. " "
"	4, 1723. " "
"	1, 1724. " "
"	1, 1725. " "
"	7, 1726. Samuel Sewell, Jr.
"	6, 1727. " "
"	4, 1728. Samuel White.
"	3, 1729. " "
"	2, 1730. " "
"	1, 1731. Capt. Caleb Gardner.
"	6, 1732. Capt. Edward White.
"	5, 1733. Samuel White.
"	4, 1734. " "
"	3, 1735. " "
"	1, 1736. " "
"	7, 1737. " "
"	6, 1738. " "
"	5, 1739. " "
"	3, 1740. " "
"	2, 1741. " "
"	1, 1742. " "
"	7, 1743. Maj. White.
"	5, 1744. Samuel White.
"	4, 1745. " "
"	3, 1746. " "
"	2, 1747. " "
"	7, 1748. " "
"	6, 1749. " "
"	5, 1750. " "
"	11, 1751. " "
"	2, 1752. " "
"	5, 1753. " "
"	4, 1754. Jonathan Winchester.
"	3, 1755. " "
"	1, 1756. Samuel White.
"	7, 1757. " "
"	6, 1758. Edward White.
"	1759. Jeremiah Gridley.
"	3, 1760. " "
"	2, 1761. " "
"	22, 1762. Ebenezer Davis.
"	7, 1763. Jeremiah Gridley.
"	5, 1764. Ebenezer Davis.
"	4, 1765. " "
"	3, 1766. Jeremiah Gridley.
"	2, 1767. " "

March	7, 1768. Ebenezer Davis.
"	6, 1769. William Hyslop.
"	5, 1770. Capt. Benjamin White.
"	4, 1771. " " "
"	2, 1772. " " "
"	1, 1773. " " "
"	7, 1774. " " "
"	6, 1775. " " "
"	11, 1776. Stephen Sharp.
"	17, 1777. William Thompson.
"	2, 1778. Hon. Benjamin White.
"	29, 1779. John Goddard.
"	6, 1780. Col. Thomas Aspinwall.
"	5, 1781. Benjamin White.
"	21, 1782. " "
"	3, 1783. John Goddard.
"	8, 1784. Capt. William Campbell.
"	7, 1785. Deacon Elisha Gardner.
"	6, 1786. John Goddard.
"	19, 1787. " "
"	17, 1788. Col. Thomas Aspinwall.
"	16, 1789. John Goddard.
"	15, 1790. Col. Thomas Aspinwall.
"	14, 1791. John Goddard.
"	5, 1792. " "
"	4, 1793. " "
"	3, 1794. " "
"	9, 1795. Isaac S. Gardner.
"	14, 1796. Hon. William Aspinwall.
"	6, 1797. " "
"	12, 1798. Stephen Sharp.
"	4, 1799. " "
"	10, 1800. " "
"	9, 1801. " "
"	1, 1802. " "
"	14, 1803. " "
"	12, 1804. " "
"	11, 1805. " "
"	10, 1806. " "
"	9, 1807. " "
"	14, 1808. " "
"	6, 1809. " "
"	12, 1810. " "
"	11, 1811. " "
"	9, 1812. " "
"	8, 1813. " "
"	14, 1814. Isaac S. Gardner.
"	6, 1815. " "
"	4, 1816. " "
"	3, 1817. " "
"	2, 1818. " "
"	1, 1819. Deacon John Robinson.
"	6, 1820. " " "
"	5, 1821. " " "
"	4, 1822. " " "
"	3, 1823. " " "
"	1, 1824. " " "
"	7, 1825. " " "
"	6, 1826. " " "
"	5, 1827. " " "
"	3, 1828. " " "
"	2, 1829. " " "
"	1, 1830. " " "
"	7, 1831. " " "
"	5, 1832. " " "
"	3, 1833. " " "

March	3, 1834.	Deacon John Robinson.
"	2, 1835.	" " "
"	7, 1836.	" " "
"	6, 1837.	" " "
"	5, 1838.	" " "
"	4, 1839.	" Thomas Griggs.
"	2, 1840.	" " "
"	1, 1841.	" " "
"	7, 1842.	" Abijah W. Goddard.
"	4, 1843.	" " "
"	4, 1844.	" Daniel Sanderson.
"	3, 1845.	" " "
"	2, 1846.	" " "
"	1, 1847.	Marshal Stearns.
"	6, 1848.	James Bartlett.
"	5, 1849.	George F. Homer.
"	4, 1850.	William I. Bowditch.
"	10, 1851.	" " "
"	8, 1852.	" " "
"	14, 1853.	John Howe.
"	20, 1854.	William I. Bowditch.
"	19, 1855.	" " "
"	17, 1856.	" " "
"	16, 1857.	" " "
"	22, 1858.	Theophilus P. Chandler.
"	29, 1859.	William I. Bowditch.
"	26, 1860.	" " "
"	25, 1861.	James Murray Howe.
"	24, 1862.	" " "
"	23, 1863.	William I. Bowditch.
"	21, 1864.	George F. Homer.
"	20, 1865.	" " "
"	19, 1866.	" " "
"	18, 1867.	William I. Bowditch.
"	23, 1868.	" " "
"	22, 1869.	" " "
"	28, 1870.	" " "
"	27, 1871.	George F. Homer.
"	25, 1872.	Charles H. Drew.
"	31, 1873.	" " "
"	24, 1874.	" " "
"	22, 1875.	" " "
"	20, 1876.	William I. Bowditch.
"	27, 1877.	" " "
"	26, 1878.	William Aspinwall.
"	25, 1879.	Charles H. Drew.
"	30, 1880.	William I. Bowditch.
"	14, 1881.	George M. Towle.
"	6, 1882.	Rufus G. F. Candage.
"	5, 1883.	" " "
Feb.	15, 1884.	Moses Williams.

Brookline Representatives.—Forty-one men have been chosen representatives from Brookline. The first was in 1709, the last in 1883,—a period of one hundred and seventy-five years inclusive. There appears to be thirty-six years in that period when no representative was chosen, either because the law did not require it, or because there was no choice during those years when a majority vote was required, or because the town could not afford it, when by law representatives were paid by the town, or because of other reasons not of record or not now apparent.

Stephen Sharp was elected representative fourteen times, thirteen in succession, between 1800 and 1813. Deacon John Robinson, the tanner, was elected thirteen times between 1819 and 1834. He was also a selectman for thirty years. The four Whites—Edward, Samuel, and Benjamin Sr. and Jr.—served altogether twenty-nine years.

Of Dr. William Aspinwall, who was nine times elected our representative, between 1790 and 1800, Mr. Winthrop, in his town hall address, said, "No name of his period—in Brookline history, certainly—has been more honored, or more worthy of being honored, not always the same thing, than that of the late Dr. William Aspinwall, so long an eminent physician of the town, and who, while devoted to the duties of his profession and to the interests of his native place, found time to serve the State with distinction as a member successively of both branches of the Legislature and of the Executive Council." Dr. Aspinwall died April 16, 1823, at the age of eighty.

Elections were in April, May, or June until the year 1832, when the time was changed to November.

In 1714 the town put it on record that it was actually too poor to send a representative. Now (1883) the single item of the annual interest on the town debt is nearly sufficient to pay for two-thirds of the whole body of representatives,—two hundred and forty in number. In 1714 Brookline staggered "upon Acc't of their building a Meeting House and the great charges thereof." At present the average annual expenditure of money in Brookline since 1870 has been $472,144. Brookline, with only eight thousand people, now requires more money annually than the city of Boston did in 1822 with over forty thousand inhabitants, the sum spent that year in Boston being only $249,170.

Brookline has a taxed capital of $25,000,000. It pays a larger State tax than all Barnstable, Dukes, and Nantucket Counties combined, more than all Hampshire County with its twenty-three towns, more than all Franklin County with its twenty-six towns, and more than either one of the cities of Salem, Lynn, Somerville, or Taunton. Where the interests of so much property are involved Brookline now owes it to itself and the commonwealth to select its representatives with care.

In very early times the compensation was what the town chose to vote, each town being obliged to pay its own representative. In 1710 Brookline voted three shillings a day to John Winchester for sixty-four days' service.

It appears by Senate document No. 11, 1879, that for a considerable period prior to 1858 the compensation of each legislator was determined by itself, and from 1830 to 1857 inclusive it had uniformly been at the rate of two dollars for each day's attendance, with mileage at the rate of one dollar for every five miles' travel, one way, once in each session. In 1858 an act was passed fixing compensation at three hundred dollars for the regular session, with mileage at the same rate as above; and this law remained in force until 1865, when it was repealed without the substitution of any other provision, and from that time to 1871 each Legislature fixed its own compensation. In 1866 it was four dollars per day, and from 1867 to 1870 inclusive five dollars per day, with mileage as above stated. In 1871 the compensation was fixed at seven hundred and fifty dollars, with mileage as above, and so remained until 1876. In 1875 it was provided that mileage should consist in the actual expenses paid for travel, once in each session, each way. In 1876 the compensation was reduced to six hundred and fifty dollars, and at present by the public statutes it is five hundred dollars for each member of the Senate and House, and one dollar for every five miles' travel from his place of abode, once in each session.

LIST OF REPRESENTATIVES TO GENERAL COURT.

John Winchester, 1709, '10.

Josiah Winchester, 1711, '13, '17.

Samuel Sewall, Jr., 1712.

Lieut. Thomas Gardner, 1718.

1714, May 17. "Voted. In that upon Deliberation the Inhabitants Declined sending a Representative upon the Acc't of their Building a Meeting House and the Great charges thereof for such a Poor Little Town. We the Inhabitants do desire and pray this Hon'd House would Excuse us this year."

1714, Nov. 29. "Att a Town Meeting, Legally Warned, To choose a Representative. The Inhabitants Declined sending one. Desiring still further to be Excused by the Great and General Court."

1715, May 16. "Att a Town Meeting Legally Warned, Voted that the inhabitants decline sending a representative this year by reason of the charge that will arise upon building ye meeting house."

1716, May 8. "Att a meeting of the inhabitants of Brooklyn Legaly Warned, the inhabitants Decline choosing a Representative."

No record for 1719.

No record for 1720.

Edward White, 1721, '22, '23, '24, '26, '41, '42, '47.

No record for 1725.

Samuel White, 1727, '29, '30, '35, '36, '37, '39, '43, '44, '49.

No record, 1728.

Benjamin White, 1731.

No record, 1732, '33.

Voted not to send, 1731.

No record, 1738.

Voted not to send, 1740.

No record, 1745.

Voted not to send, 1746, '48, '50, '51, '52, '53, '54, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66.

Jeremiah Gridley, 1755, '56, '57, '67.

Capt. Benjamin White, 1768, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '81, '83.

Deacon Ebenezer Davis, 1769.

John Goddard, 1776, '84, '85, '86, '87, '88, '89, '92.

Elhanan Winchester, 1777.

Col. Thomas Aspinwall, 1778, '79, '80.

Voted not to send, 1782, '93.

Dr. William Aspinwall, 1790, '91, '94, '95, '96, '97, '98, '99.

Stephen Sharp, 1800, '01, '02, '03, '04, '05, '06, '07, '08, '09, '10, '11, '12.

Isaac S. Gardner, 1813, '14, '15, '16, '17, '18.

Deacon John Robinson, 1819, '20, '21, '22, '23, '24, '25, '26, '27, '30, '31, '32, '33.

Deacon Joshua C. Clark, 1828, '29.

Voted not to send, 1834.

David R. Griggs, 1835.

Deacon Thomas Griggs, 1836, '37, '38.

No choice, 1839.

Henry J. Oliver, 1840.

Voted not to send, 1841.

Deacon Thomas Kendall, 1842, '43, '44.

No choice, 1845, '46.

John Howe, 1847, '48.

Marshal Stearns, 1849.

William Aspinwall, 1850, '51.

Willard A. Humphrey, 1852, '53.

David Wilder, Jr., 1854.

John N. Turner, 1855.

Abijah W. Goddard, 1856, '68.

Thomas Parsons, 1857, '58, '59, '61, '62, '67.

Edward R. Seccomb, 1860.

James Bartlett, 1863, '64.

John W. Candler, 1865.

George F. Homer, 1866.

Alanson W. Beard, 1869, '70.

Austin W. Benton, 1871, '72.

Moses Williams, Jr., 1873, '74, '75.

Edward I. Thomas, 1876, '77, '78, '79, '80.

Rufus G. F. Candage, 1881, '82, '83.

Benjamin F. Baker, 1884.

TRUSTEES OF BROOKLINE PUBLIC LIBRARY, FROM 1857 TO 1883.

Thomas Parsons, 1857, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.

Rev. F. H. Hedge, 1857, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63.

Amos A. Lawrence, 1857, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62.

William I. Bowditch, 1857, '58, '59, '60, '61, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72.

Benjamin F. Baker, 1857, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '80, '81, '82, '83.

James Bartlett, 1857.

Marshall Stearns, 1857.

Edward A. Dana, 1857, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63.

T. P. Chandler, 1857, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66.

John N. Turner, 1857, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63.

James M. Howe, 1857, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62.

Edward Atkinson, 1857.

George F. Homer, 1858, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75.

William Aspinwall, 1858, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.

James A. Dupee, 1858, '62.

E. C. Emerson, 1859, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69.

William A. Wellman, 1859, '60, '61, '62, '63.

Charles U. Cotting, 1863, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70.
 Rev. J. L. Diman, 1863, '64.
 William D. Philbrick, 1863, '64, '65, '66.
 John W. Candler, 1864, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73.
 Rev. William Lamson, 1864, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76.
 J. H. Shedd, 1864, '65.
 Charles D. Head, 1866, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.
 John C. Abbott, 1867, '68, '69, '70.
 Dr. Augustine Shurtleff, 1869, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.
 Edward C. Cabot, 1870, '71, '72, '73, '74.
 Dr. Robert Amory, 1871, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77.
 R. G. F. Candage, 1871, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.
 Robert S. Davis, 1873, '74, '75.
 George M. Towle, 1874, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.
 James M. Codman, 1875, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.
 Alfred D. Chandler, 1875, '76, '77.
 Charles H. Drew, 1876, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.
 John Wells, 1876.
 Clement K. Fay, 1876, '77, '78.
 Rev. Howard N. Brown, 1877, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.
 Henry V. Poor, 1877, '78, '79.
 Henry M. Whitney, 1878, '79.
 James P. Farley, Jr., 1878, '79, '80.
 Thomas H. Talbot, 1880.
 Dr. T. E. Francis, 1881, '82, '83.
 William B. Haseltine, 1881, '82, '83.

TABLE OF VALUATION, EXPENDITURES, RATE OF TAXATION, AND DEBT OF THE TOWN OF BROOKLINE, FROM FEB. 1, 1847, TO FEB. 1, 1883, INCLUSIVE.

DATE.	Expenditures for the Year Ending Feb. 1.	Debt, Feb. 1.	Total Valuation, May 1.	Rate of Tax on $1000.
1847.....	$9,335.14	$2,156.43	$3,909,200	$2.30
1848.....	10,189.22	6,333.68	4,708,800	1.85
1849.....	10,570.06	6,163.76	5,385,600	2.00
1850.....	10,977.41	5,163.76	5,382,000	2.10
1851.....	12,956.13	3,163.76	5,945,600	2.30
1852.....	28,653.14	13,163.76	6,419,320	2.50
1853.....	21,626.55	12,500.00	7,185,600	2.50
1854.....	22,417.54	15,160.40	8,414,170	3.80
1855.....	59,284.29	43,500.00	8,776,500	4.50
1856.....	47,432.06	41,500.00	9,302,000	3.90
1857.....	52,869.03	50,500.00	9,569,310	5.30
1858.....	71,261.71	61,700.00	9,217,300	5.00
1859.....	48,827.25	57,700.00	10,320,900	5.80
1860.....	66,709.96	60,200.00	10,799,800	5.50
1861.....	61,665.54	53,200.00	10,910,100	6.50
1862.....	62,807.54	48,200.00	10,702,600	6.20
1863.....	122,362.22	88,200.00	11,005,200	10.00
1864.....	182,143.03	101,905.96	9,667,800	10.00
1865.....	163,548.75	124,655.96	10,185,800	10.00
1866.....	164,645.57	104,405.96	10,175,800	10.00
1867.....	129,007.02	77,655.96	13,801,200	8.00
1868.....	151,894.97	79,205.96	14,870,700	6.20
1869.....	175,856.11	98,505.96	16,313,700	9.00
1870.....	242,084.91	155,405.96	18,948,300	7.50
1871.....	317,087.83	245,800.00	20,870,700	9.70
1872.....	473,843.18	473,800.00	29,413,914	8.70
1873.....	453,660.31	581,800.00	28,476,000	11.50
1874.....	591,360.49	816,704.16	27,940,200	11.50
1875.....	985,605.65 ¹	1,346,958.00	27,809,100	11.60
1876.....	569,192.86 ¹	1,395,350.00	27,497,000	12.20
1877.....	389,455.91 ¹	1,368,350.00	24,968,690	12.50
1878.....	502,451.51 ^{1 2}	1,468,350.00	24,944,000	12.50
1879.....	436,463.37 ^{1 2}	1,444,350.00	22,586,300	12.10
1880.....	474,882.79 ¹	1,451,350.00	22,493,900	12.60
1881.....	403,412.99 ¹	1,442,554.66	22,869,700	12.00
1882.....	396,189.53	1,439,550.00	23,723,300	10.80
1883.....	414,328.86	1,360,850.00	24,842,800	12.30
1884.....	482,793.95	1,318,950.00	25,822,900	11.50

¹ Of which, for water in 1875, $391,547.48; debt, $400,000. 1876, $82,777.52; debt, $475,000. 1877, $16,576.22; debt, $500,000. 1878, $19,270.51; debt, $500,000. 1879, $9,314.99. 1880, debt, $543,000. 1881, debt, $41,000.

² For sewers in 1878, $140,282.35; debt, $125,000. 1879, $19,963.79.

Longevity in Brookline.—Without considering the mortality returns of Brookline as compared with those of other municipalities in the State, to be found in town reports and daily papers from time to time, some statistics are here given on longevity, as shown in the advanced years attained by more than three hundred and fifty persons who have died in Brookline at the age of seventy-five years and over. The table given below, which is the most complete known, has just been compiled from the First Parish records, from the town records, from tablets and tombstones, and from private sources of information.

Sir Henry Holland, appointed physician in ordinary to the queen of England in 1852, writing on the "practical question how vitality may best be maintained and prolonged into old age," observes, that "we must look mainly to four general conditions, which may be said to include all that is most essential to the fulfillment of this problem. These are: (1) Air—as belonging to respiration; (2) Aliment; (3) Exercise of the body; (4) Exercise of the mental functions."

We have hardly space to examine how far one or more of Sir Henry's conditions served to prolong the lives of the several persons whose names are here given, nor do we know. The venerable Mrs. Mace, who heads the list as a centenarian, lived on School Street, in the house where Mr. P. W. Pierce now resides; she was the mother-in-law of Alexander H. Clapp, the village postmaster in President Franklin Pierce's administration. She died of influenza. It is odd that the borders of the brook from Harvard Street, by School Street to Park Street and so on, which at the lower end are now of a doubtful sanitary condition, should be the places where several of the oldest people have lived and died, such as Mrs. Mace, at the age of one hundred years; Deacon John Robinson, at the age of ninety-one years, who was a selectman for thirty years, from 1805 to 1835, and nine times our representative; Mr. William Rice, at the age of ninety-one years; Mrs. Esther P. Chandler, at the age of ninety years; and among the living, Deacon Thomas Griggs, who was three times our representative, in 1836–38, now in his ninety-sixth year, and the oldest person in town. Miss Anna Dana, who has outranked all our spinsters in point of longevity, passed most of her life in a building which once stood between the present public library and Mr. John Gibbs' house. Her great age may illustrate Dr. Holland's first condition, that of "air—as belonging to respiration;" for she is said to have kept her attic window, above the stairway, open at all seasons for forty years. When ninety the window was nailed down against her will. When ninety-two she died.

The number of instances of extreme longevity in the lower lands of Brookline seems remarkable. But the condition of these lowlands is changing with the growth of population. Many citizens can now remember the baptismal immersements in Muddy River not far from the present Downer Street settlement, where the thought of such a rite nowadays causes a shudder.

Vigorous out-of-door exercise aided longevity with many. Capt. Robert Sharp's activity cost him his life when he fell from a load of hay in July, 1765, at the age of seventy-eight. He was a prominent citizen and a large land-owner.

Negro servants, of whom there were many, died at a good age, such as Caesar, at eighty, in 1792, and Dinah, at seventy-five, in 1803.

Women in Brookline, as in many other places, have outlived the men. The list given below includes three hundred and fifty-four persons, two hundred and ten women and one hundred and forty-four men, or sixty-six more women than men, who died in this town at the age of seventy-five or over. Between the ages of ninety and one hundred there are twenty-five women and only eight men, or over three times as many women as men. Married women have outlived single women nine to one.

Some persons on the list have lived but a short time in Brookline, having come to the town late in life. On the other hand, many who have lived in Brookline to an advanced age, and whose names may be expected, have, for various reasons, moved away in their declining years, and their deaths are recorded elsewhere.

It is common to say of a person who dies, for instance, between seventy-nine and eighty years of age, that such a one is eighty; and many whose ages are here given in years only, were undoubtedly some days or months younger than stated.

Our local records are not, and never have been, complete; the printed forms vary with different generations, and are still deficient in omitting the husband's name of a deceased wife or widow. The town records make no pretensions to fullness prior to 1845. The First Parish records have no entry of deaths before 1761. The tombstones in the old cemetery appear to begin about 1721. It is said that in very early times citizens of Brookline were buried in the Roxbury cemetery on Washington Street, at the corner of Eustis Street. Under these circumstances the names of many persons who survived the age of seventy-five years cannot be obtained.

The list is arranged according to ages, and where two or more are of the same age, then chronologically. Errors undoubtedly exist; any one who has ever attempted such a compilation will understand this.

We are not aware that any person seriously doubts the salubrity of the air or the general healthfulness of Brookline, but here is a record, now for the first time revealed, which is as significant as it is interesting in support of the fact.

The population of the town is, for comparison, important.

By the Colonial Census, in 1776, it was.....	502
" United States Census, in 1790, it was.	484
" " " " 1800, "	605
" " " " 1810, "	784
" " " " 1820, "	900
" " " " 1830, "	1043
" " " " 1840, "	1365
" " " " 1850, "	2516
" " " " 1860, "	5164
" " " " 1870, "	6650
" " " " 1880, "	8053

LIST OF PERSONS DECEASED IN BROOKLINE AT SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS OF AGE AND UPWARDS, FROM THE EARLIEST RECORDED TIMES TO SEPT. 15, 1883.

Age.	Name.	Date of Death.
y. m. d.
100- 1-18	Reuel, w. of Abram Mace.....	Dec. 31, 1850
97- 4- 3	Mrs. Elizabeth [Duncan] Carter....	Oct. 3, 1864
97	Mr. ——— Vaughn.....	Feb. 27, 1775
96	Elizabeth [Nyhen] w. of Daniel Driscoll.....	Feb. 8, 1874
96	Mrs. Ellen [Nyhen] Culinan.....	May 25, 1876
95-11-28	Samuel Townsend.....	March 2, 1877
95- 7- 6	Benjamin Goddard.....	Oct. 26, 1861
94	Sarah, w. of Benjamin White	Sept. 11, 1801
94	Mrs. Mary [Cavanagh] Flannigan.....	Sept. 7, 1833
93- 5	Charles Stearns.....	Feb. 16, 1864
93- 8-28	Mrs. Hannah B. [Friend] Plimpton.....	Oct. 9, 1873
93- 0-19	Mrs. Ann [Shaban] Wilson.....	Nov. 23, 1870
92- 1- 6	Elizabeth, w. of Timothy Corey....	Nov. 18, 1837
92- 1-	Miss Anna Dana.....	Feb. 9, 1847
92	Thankful, w. of Benjamin White....	Nov. 17, 1836
92	Mary, w. of Caleb G. Gardner.....	Oct. 10, 1851
92	Catherine [Brown] w. of Benjamin Goddard.....	April 1, 1881
91-11- 6	Mrs. Catherine [Drawny] Lavery....	July 26, 1871
91-10-14	Moses Hadley.....	Feb. 5, 1872
91- 6	John Robinson.....	Jan. 13, 1855
91- 3-18	William Rice.....	Feb. 27, 1879
91- 3-16	Eliza, w. of Oliver Whyte.....	March 17, 1871
91- 3	Mrs. Joanna Downes Jordan.....	Jan. 7, 1882
90- 9-10	Lucy, w. of David R. Griggs.....	April 20, 1883
90- 7- 2	Sarah, w. of Deacon Thomas Kendall.....	June 13, 1870
90- 3-12	Dr. Walter Channing.....	July 27, 1876
90- 3-10	Bulah, w. of Samuel Griggs.....	Aug. 21, 1847
90- 2-25	Eliza [Babeock] w. of Capt. Ingersoll.....	May 9, 1870
90- 1-13	Lois, w. of John Warren.....	Feb. 4, 1878
90- 0-23	Esther [Parsons] w. of Peleg Chandler.....	Feb. 10, 1865
90	Ann, w. of Samuel White.....	Feb. 12, 1774
90	Mrs. Catherine [Moran] McLauthlin.....	July 5, 1878
90	Mrs. Ann L. [Prince] Jewett.....	July 11, 1881
89-10	Jane, w. of Capt. Isaac Cook.....	Dec. 24, 1873
89- 8-17	Sybil, w. of Elisha Penniman.....	Aug. 7, 1875
89- 7- 5	William P. Page.....	Oct. 23, 1878
89	Mrs. Ruth Adams.....	Nov. 19, 1762
89	Joshua Stedman.....	Dec. 11, 1762
89	Mrs. Craft ["Mother of Deacon Davis"].....	Jan. 13, 1763

Age.	Name.	Date of Death.	Age.	Name.	Date of Death.
y. m. d.			y. m. d.
89	Mrs. Rebecca Child.....	Nov. 26, 1802	83- 8-10	Samuel Goddard.....	March 13, 1871
89	Mrs. Caleb Craft.....	Aug. 2, 1838	83- 6-18	Benjamin B. Davis.....	Aug. 22, 1877
88- 7- 5	James M. Blaney.....	March 31, 1880	83- 4-20	Mrs. Sarah Cheney.....	Dec. 21, 1880
88- 6- 6	Mrs. Sally B. [Clark] Nickerson.....	March 16, 1868	83- 4	Frederick Cabot.....	June 16, 1869
88- 2	John Dillon.....	May 14, 1881	83- 0- 2	Miss Elizabeth Bowditch Martin.....	May 10, 1875
88- 1- 5	Thompson Thayer.....	March 7, 1861	83	Erosman Drue.....	June —, 1735
88	Miss Mary Boylston.....	Oct. 1, 1815	83	Daniel Harris.....	Dec. 15, 1723
88	Thomas Lee.....	Dec. 14, 1867	83	Isaac Gardner.....	March 11, 1767
88	Miss Mary Stanton.....	July 16, 1878	83	Mary Russell, w. of Geo. Searle.....	April 3, 1836
87-11-25	Mrs. Mary [Rohan] Donlan.....	Dec. 21, 1882	83	Elizabeth, w. of Luther Thayer.....	Jan. 16, 1853
87- 9-13	Lucy [Stearns] w. of Elijah Corey.....	May 4, 1874	83	George Thompson.....	March 9, 1855
87- 9	Mrs. Sarah [Coburn] Whitney.....	April 28, 1870	83	Abigail, w. of Samuel Woodward.....	May 20, 1855
87- 8- 7	David Coolidge.....	Nov. 30, 1876	83	Thomas Shed.....	Oct. 2, 1881
87- 7	Mrs. Henrietta D'Aubert.....	Sept. 14, 1874	83	John Reardon.....	May 10, 1883
87- 5	Joseph Hunnewell.....	March 29, 1875	82-11	Mrs. Hannah [Brough] Wallace.....	May 10, 1881
87- 3	Cornelius Donovan.....	March 9, 1871	82-10- 2	Mrs. Rhoda [Hunting] Seaverns.....	Feb. 18, 1863
87- 2-14	Mrs. Doreas [Gardner] Arnold.....	May 7, 1871	82- 9- 1	Mrs. Elizabeth [Ashby] Putnam.....	Dec. 2, 1870
87	Dr. Zabdiel Boylston, F.R.S.....	March 1, 1766	82- 7-14	Mrs. Fannie [Linnell] Taylor.....	Aug. 27, 1875
87	Abigail, w. of Timothy Harris.....	Sept. 9, 1767	82- 7	Mrs. Sarah Goodnough.....	Feb. 3, 1845
87	Mrs. Abraham Woodward.....	June 27, 1771	82- 6	Miss Susan Heath.....	March 24, 1878
87	Mrs. Thomas Woodward.....	April —, 1779	82- 5	Mrs. Sarah H. [Power] Johnson.....	May 22, 1860
87	John Harris.....	Feb. 3, 1796	82- 4	Mrs. Mary B. Blaney.....	Sept. 15, 1874
87	Mrs. Ireland.....	April 17, 1796	82- 3	Mrs. Mary M. [Lovell] Loring.....	Feb. 23, 1878
87	Mrs. Sarah Brown.....	Feb. 17, 1825	82	Ebenezer Sargent.....	Sept. 21, 1771
87	Patrick McLaughlin.....	Nov. 13, 1881	82	Abigail [Woodward] w. of Ephraim Wilson.....	Feb. 17, 1792
86- 2-16	Theophilus R. Marvin.....	May 9, 1882	82	Widow Wood.....	Jan. 4, 1798
86- 2	Mrs. Mary [Lewis] Caswell.....	June 4, 1874	82	Ann, w. of Benjamin French.....	Oct. 10, 1849
86- 0-26	Mehitable M. [Dawes] w. of Samuel Goddard.....	Sept. 27, 1882	82	Daniel Perry.....	Oct. 27, 1853
86	Frances, w. of Henry Winchester.....	Nov. 21, 1765	82	Nancy F., wife of Charles Stearns.....	Aug. 4, 1855
86	Mrs. John Harris.....	Sept. 10, 1774	82	Mrs. Abigail Tolman.....	Dec. 7, 1858
86	Elizabeth, w. of Capt. Samuel Partridge.....	Jan. 6, 1814	82	Mrs. Mary [McKinnon] McMillen.....	June 6, 1881
86	Rachel, w. of Roswell Clapp.....	June 16, 1854	82	Mrs. Abby A. [Beale] Quinney.....	Oct. 1, 1882
86	Mrs. Tabitha [Kidder] Laughton.....	April 23, 1859	81-11	Peter Hazeltine Green.....	Oct. 19, 1862
86	Daniel McCarthy.....	Dec. 8, 1870	81-11	Mrs. Caroline [Adams] Cook.....	June 30, 1883
86	John S. Wright.....	June 29, 1874	81-10- 8	Miss Sarah S. Gardner.....	April 20, 1879
86	Mrs. Hannah Horan.....	Jan. 17, 1876	81- 9- 1	Mrs. Rebecca [Mann] Newell.....	Feb. 4, 1867
86	John Murphy.....	Nov. 5, 1880	81- 8	Miss Harriet Etheridge.....	June 4, 1873
86	Mrs. Margaret Boyle.....	July 25, 1883	81- 6-15	Deborah, w. of Benjamin Seaver.....	April 26, 1851
85-11- 8	Mrs. Nancy [Jackson] Webster.....	March 12, 1861	81- 6	Miss Eunice James.....	May 12, 1862
85-10-23	Mrs. Susannah [Bradford] Parker.....	Feb. 11, 1881	81- 4-10	Mrs. Hannah [Dotan] Burrill.....	Aug. 10, 1870
85-10-15	John Goddard.....	April 13, 1816	81- 4	Mrs. Elizabeth C. [Jones] Reynolds.....	Feb. 15, 1879
85-10-15	Hannah [Seaver] w. of John Goddard.....	May 31, 1821	81- 3	Susannah [Stone] wife of Jabez Fisher.....	Jan. 8, 1875
85-10	Parley Bogman.....	June 12, 1867	81- 2	Miss Ann E. Heath.....	May 15, 1878
85-10	Mrs. Elizabeth [McGuigon] McGrath.....	Sept. 1, 1879	81	Deacon Samuel Clark.....	May 7, 1766
85- 7-25	Capt. Joseph Goddard.....	Dec. 10, 1846	81	Solomon Hill.....	July 19, 1792
85- 6- 6	Elijah Corey.....	May 13, 1859	81	John Harris.....	Dec. 15, 1831
85- 6	Peter Banner.....	July 5, 1835	81	Patty, w. of Benjamin Hill.....	April 10, 1847
85- 4-14	Charles Goddard.....	Jan. 29, 1883	81	Miss Molly Jackson.....	March 22, 1847
85- 3	Capt. Isaac Cook.....	March 20, 1865	81	Robert Johnson.....	Nov. 30, 1849
85- 2-24	Mrs. Mehitable [Bigelow] Adams.....	Nov. 11, 1877	81	Lydia, w. of Nathaniel Murdock.....	Sept. 24, 1850
85	John Seaver.....	Dec. 12, 1756	81	Thomas Kendall.....	Oct. 16, 1850
85	Jerusha, wife of Dr. Zabdiel Boylston.....	April 15, 1764	81	Lucy, w. of Joseph White.....	March 15, 1856
85	Mrs. Major Edward White.....	Dec. 31, 1780	81	Thomas Dooley.....	Dec. 17, 1868
85	William Hyslop.....	Aug. 11, 1796	81	Mrs. Mary Ann [Dudley] Brackett.....	April 9, 1877
85	Abraham Jackson.....	Jan. 15, 1807	81	Calvin Knowlton.....	Jan. 30, 1878
85	Mrs. Hannah Lopes.....	July 9, 1847	81	Mrs. Ann Mitchell.....	Dec. 28, 1880
85	Simon McMabon.....	Jan. 22, 1882	81	Mrs. Sarah P. A. [Rust] Jones.....	July 6, 1883
84-10-20	Charles Stearns.....	Oct. 24, 1879	81-11-25	Patience, w. of Enos Withington.....	April 13, 1853
84-10	Miss Eliza Murdock.....	Oct. 8, 1880	80-10-25	Mrs. Elizabeth [Richards] Kendrick.....	Nov. 5, 1861
84- 7-15	Mrs. Betsy [Bennett] Fuller.....	July 15, 1859	80- 9-24	Joshua Childs Clark.....	July 4, 1861
84- 4-22	Eliza [Eliot] w. of Benjamin Guild.....	Jan. 24, 1874	80- 9-21	Mrs. Eunice Stedman.....	March 13, 1835
84- 3-21	Gustavus Black.....	Jan. 22, 1881	80- 9-21	Jacob Home.....	March 23, 1869
84- 3-16	Miss Mary Ann Rice.....	April 19, 1870	80- 7-17	Mrs. Sarah [Warren] Spalding.....	Jan. 25, 1877
84	Mrs. ——— Griggs.....	Nov. 8, 1767	80- 7- 4	Dr. Samuel A. Shurtleff.....	Feb. 11, 1873
84	Mrs. Esther Harris.....	Nov. 6, 1801	80- 4-19	Mrs. Sally [Root] Van Slyk.....	May 7, 1878
84	Caleb Craft.....	Jan. 8, 1826	80- 2-21	William Hieborn.....	Sept. 26, 1880
84	William N. Roads.....	Feb. 16, 1853	80- 1-21	Mrs. Mary [Bartlett] Clark.....	May 17, 1873
84	Samuel J. Prescott.....	Feb. 7, 1857	80- 1- 2	Peter Richardson.....	March 15, 1878
84	James Mitchell.....	April 14, 1879	80- 1	Mrs. Mercy [Rose] Newell.....	March 2, 1875
84	Luke Mooney.....	Jan. 10, 1883	80- 0-23	Joseph V. Bacon.....	May 5, 1867
83-11-17	Hannah [Heath] w. of John Howe.....	April 3, 1883	80	John Ackers.....	Jan. 16, 1712
83-11	Henry Lincoln.....	May 11, 1882	80	Susannah, w. of Robert Sharp.....	Jan. 4, 1770
83- 9-27	Susan [Wheelwright] w. of John Candler.....	Aug. 23, 1882	80	John Ellis.....	Dec. 26, 1770
83- 9-12	Mrs. Susan G. H. [Griggs] Jackson.....	Nov. 10, 1873	80	Jenny, servant of Isaac Winchester.....	Jan. 5, 1771
83- 9	David R. Griggs.....	March 5, 1870	80	Miss Betsy Chamberlain.....	Dec. 26, 1778
			80	Cesar.....	March 26, 1792
			80	Frank O'Neil.....	Nov. 5, 1792
			80	Widow Mary Jackson.....	Oct. 21, 1810
			80	Sarah Williams—at Mr. Heath's.....	Oct. 1, 1811

Age.	Name.	Date of Death.	Age.	Name.	Date of Death.
y. m. d.			y. m. d.
80	William Aspinwall, M.D.	April 16, 1823	77	Susannah, w. of Isaac Gardner	Aug. 18, 1768
80	Thaddeus Jackson	Oct. 12, 1832	77	Mrs. Elizabeth Boylston	Aug. 19, 1776
80	Mrs. Adam Babcock	May 15, 1838	77	Margaret [Williams], w. of Thomas Griggs	Sept. 11, 1800
80	Miss Prudence Heath	March 9, 1839	77	Lucy, widow of Col. Thomas Aspinwall	June 15, 1815
80	Ebenezer Heath	Feb. 26, 1845	77	Capt. Adam Babcock	Sept. 24, 1817
80	Samuel G. Perkins, Esq. [on his birthday]	May 24, 1847	77	Mrs. Mary Dennie	Sept. 7, 1819
80	Thomas Waldron Sumner	May 29, 1849	77	Martha, w. of Josiah Woodward	Dec. 25, 1840
80	Thomas Holden	Nov. 28, 1849	77	Rebecca, wife of Daniel Perry	Nov. 15, 1851
80	Lucy, w. of James Holden	Feb. 2, 1851	77	John Moreland	March 21, 1856
80	Lydia, w. of Nathaniel Wright	Sept. 18, 1854	77	Mrs. Mary Tolman	June 6, 1865
80	Mrs. Hannah Murray	Nov. 19, 1856	77	Mrs. Rhoda B. [Lardbee] Powers	Dec. 8, 1871
80	Lucy, widow of Dr. John Pierce	Feb. 12, 1858	77	Mrs. Ellen [Abern] Dwyer	Jan. 1, 1880
80	Job Plympton	April 13, 1863	76-10-17	Francis Fisher	Aug. 1, 1871
80	Mrs. Mary A. Briggs	March 12, 1864	76-10-9	Harrison Fay	July 1, 1882
80	Mrs. Margaret Elliott	July 15, 1865	76-10-5	Mrs. Mercy [Philbrick] Pettingill	April 1, 1863
80	Mrs. Ruth [Greene] Bailey	March 7, 1867	76-8-14	Hannah, wife of Studley Sampson	Nov. 29, 1848
80	Mrs. Mary [Power] Clancy	Oct. 12, 1868	76-8-10	Miss Sarah Kitteredge	Jan. 6, 1871
80	Miss Catherine Campbell	May 13, 1876	76-7-1	Caleb Craft	July 11, 1860
80	Mrs. Margaret Doyle	Dec. 14, 1877	76-4	Miss Eliza Gardner	Nov. 26, 1870
80	Mrs. Rosanna [Killain] Malone	Jan. 4, 1878	76-3-28	Hon. Seth Ames	Aug. 15, 1881
80	Mrs. Mary Flynn	May 2, 1881	76-3-24	Mrs. Maria H. [Salt] Loughton	Jan. 16, 1883
79-7	William T. Eustis	May 5, 1874	76-3-21	Augustus A. Hayes	June 21, 1882
79-6-24	William Clark Tyler	March 22, 1882	76-2	Mrs. Susannah [Johnstone] Matheson	Sept. 4, 1876
79-6	Mrs. Mary [Gardner] Corey	March 3, 1862	76-1-10	John Pierce, D.D.	Aug. 24, 1849
79-6	Mrs. Lucy G. Dawes	March 3, 1877	76-0-5	Samuel J. Gardner	July 14, 1864
79-4-21	Mrs. Jane [Walker] Sumner	Aug. 24, 1880	76	Edward Devotion	Nov. 7, 1744
79-3	Mrs. Phebe [Caswell] Long	Nov. 18, 1869	76	Capt. John Winchester	Sept. 27, 1751
79-1-13	Mrs. Mary [Holmes] Churchill	June 26, 1883	76	Samuel White	April 9, 1760
79-1-3	Elisha Stone	Dec. 22, 1867	76	Susannah, wife of Isaac Gardner	Aug. 18, 1768
79	Sarah, w. of John Seaver	March 20, 1747	76	Major Edward White	May 29, 1769
79	Mrs. Samuel Sewall	April 14, 1761	76	Thomas Aspinwall	June 1, 1774
79	Mrs. Capt. Robert Sharp	Jan. 4, 1770	76	Mrs. Samuel Clark	June 9, 1775
79	Mary, w. of Nehemiah Davis	June 19, 1786	76	William Ackers	Oct. 9, 1794
79	Joshua Boylston	Nov. 1, 1804	76	Daniel Dana	Sept. 23, 1803
79	Susanna, w. of Joseph Davenport	May 27, 1841	76	Mrs. Jonas Raymond	Oct. 16, 1809
79	Elizabeth H., w. of Ebenezer Thayer	Dec. 14, 1852	76	Jonathan Dana	Dec. 21, 1812
79	Mrs. Mary [Moore] Francis	April 16, 1864	76	Mrs. Samuel Clark	April 14, 1829
79	Robert Murray	Sept. 21, 1868	76	William Ackers	July 14, 1841
78-10	Lewis Slack	Jan. 11, 1883	76	Mehitable, w. of William Ackers	Dec. 23, 1843
78-9-16	Miss Eliza Ann Guild	Jan. 24, 1868	76	John Hayden	July 15, 1844
78-9	Samuel Cabot	Sept. 3, 1863	76	Sarah, w. of Thomas Kenrick	Sept. 23, 1845
78-8-19	Mrs. Catherine [Davis] Lee	July 2, 1870	76	Mary, w. of John Irving	March 31, 1848
78-8-12	Benjamin Willis	July 28, 1870	76	Joseph White	March 2, 1850
78-7-3	Mrs. Polly [Chamberlain] Johnson	Aug. 23, 1877	76	Mary w. of Josiah Warren	March 21, 1853
78-6-28	Mrs. Sarah [Richardson] Crafts	Nov. 22, 1861	76	Mrs. Pauline Whitney	June 13, 1857
78-6-20	Mrs. Lucy [Smith] Babcock	Feb. 14, 1877	76	Mary [Jackson] w. of Henry Lee	June 1, 1860
78-6	Edward A. Williams	Sept. 11, 1871	76	Eliza Buckminster, w. of Thomas Lee	June 22, 1864
78-5-23	Nathan Hale	Feb. 8, 1863	76	William Appleton	May 31, 1864
78-3-30	Mrs. Margaret [Spurr] Williams	Sept. 1, 1876	76	George Babcock	Jan. 5, 1868
78-3-17	Ezekiel Sawin	Dec. 13, 1870	76	Mrs. Ellen Mahan	Dec. 2, 1868
78-3-14	Mrs. Sarah [Boyle] Nesbit	Nov. 2, 1867	76	Mrs. Caleb Clark	May 22, 1871
78-2-23	Mrs. Lucy Bird	Oct. 28, 1879	76	Anna Greenleaf, w. of Amos Atkinson	Sept. 29, 1871
78-2-13	Thomas Celfe	April 28, 1863	75-11-11	Thomas Curry	May 25, 1880
78-0-27	George W. Perrin	Nov. 21, 1867	75-9	Reuben Smith	Jan. 20, 1861
78-0-27	Mrs. Persis [Hutchins] Hurd	Aug. 12, 1879	75-8-5	Nehemiah Merritt	Dec. 31, 1871
78-0-16	Benjamin Bruce	May 19, 1881	75-8-2	Jonathan Stodder	March 2, 1866
78	Capt. Robt. Sharp—Fall from a load of hay	July 18, 1765	75-6-8	Stephen P. Webb	Dec. 28, 1879
78	Gulliver Winchester's mother	May 4, 1768	75-6	Moses Jones	Feb. 9, 1862
78	Nehemiah Davis	Jan. 5, 1785	75-5-24	John G. Tappan	Aug. 29, 1883
78	Rev. Jonathan Hyde	June 4, 1787	75-5-5	William Dwight	Sept. 20, 1880
78	Kate, w. of Cuffy Hill [servants of Madam Samuel White]	Nov. 8, 1792	75-4-17	Mrs. Mary W. Bramhall	Dec. 30, 1878
78	Elijah Child	July 14, 1825	75-4-10	Warren White	April 30, 1866
78	Mrs. Jacob Hervey	April 11, 1826	75-4	Henry Upham	April 25, 1875
78	Mary Jackson	Jan. 2, 1841	75-3	James Beatty	Sept. 7, 1882
78	Elizabeth Saunders, w. of Jacob Eustis	Jan. 4, 1847	75-2-8	Mrs. Isabella [Porter] Homes	July 3, 1863
78	Mrs. Thomas Perkins	Sept. 11, 1848	75-2	Mrs. Experience [Jackson] Woodward	April 30, 1864
78	Mrs. Honora [Curley] Moran	Nov. 27, 1863	75-00-15	John Howe	April 1, 1867
78	Mrs. Catherine [Hassett] Hickey	Feb. 3, 1870	75	Josiah Winchester	Feb. 22, 1728
77-8-16	Mrs. Mary Jane [Fourquet] Jenkins	Jan. 7, 1861	75	Mrs. Elhanan Winchester	March 27, 1768
77-8-5	Daniel Worthley	Aug. 12, 1875	75	Thomas Woodward	Dec. 30, 1768
77-7-13	Augustus Aspinwall	July 27, 1865	75	Deacon Joseph White	Aug. 19, 1777
77-7	Eliza, w. of Dr. Samuel A. Shurtleff	May 31, 1878	75	Dinah, Negro servant of Caleb Craft	April 20, 1803
77-6	Mrs. Pnab [Hayden] Johnson	Aug. 12, 1856	75	Jacob Eustis	Aug. 22, 1834
77-6	Sylvanus Bramhall	Sept. 11, 1876	75	Abigail Center	Dec. 10, 1841
77-4-16	Mrs. Lucinda [Barrett] Edgerly	Oct. 12, 1876	75	Mehitable, w. of William Ackers	Dec. 23, 1813
77-2-17	Miss Susannah Gardner	Nov. 23, 1877	75	Mrs. Jane [Gilbert] DePeyster	Oct. 28, 1869
77	Miss Prudence Savage	May 20, 1762
77	Isaac Child	Sept. 12, 1765

Age. y. m. d.	Name.	Date of Death.
75	Mrs. Sarah Kerrigan.....	March 31, 1871
75	Thomas Chamberlain.....	June 16, 1873
75	Mrs. Mary Daly.....	Nov. 10, 1873
75	Mrs. Ellen [Donahue] McCarthy.....	April 26, 1875
75	John Truesdale.....	Jan. 6, 1882
75	Edward Ryan.....	April 10, 1882

[Brookline Chronicle.]

LIST OF DEATHS FROM 1760 TO JAN. 1, 1806.

1760.....	4	1783.....	3
1761.....	7	1784.....	4
1762.....	8	1785.....	4
1763.....	3	1786.....	6
1764.....	8	1787.....	3
1765.....	8	1788.....	4
1766.....	8	1789.....	6
1767.....	14	1790.....	4
1768.....	11	1791.....	3
1769.....	10	1792.....	10
1770.....	7	1793.....	7
1771.....	12	1794.....	4
1772.....	13	1795.....	3
1773.....	5	1796.....	11
1774.....	11	1797.....	2
1775.....	20	1798.....	2
1776.....	16	1799.....	6
1777.....	10	1800.....	5
1778.....	13	1801.....	8
1779.....	4	1802.....	13
1780.....	7	1803.....	9
1781.....	5	1804.....	9
1782.....	4	1805.....	7
Under 2 years.....	57	Between 50 and 60.....	19
Between 2 and 10.....	29	“ 60 and 70.....	35
“ 10 and 20.....	14	“ 70 and 80.....	46
“ 20 and 30.....	39	“ 80 and 90.....	19
“ 30 and 40.....	23	“ 90 and 100.....	3
“ 40 and 50.....	29	Ages not mentioned.....	24

One was killed in battle; 138 died of disease. Previous to 1805, about one-sixth died of consumption, which was the prevailing disorder. The average number of deaths has been about 15 in every two years, or 7 one year and 8 the next, alternately. Of the number specified above, precisely one-half lived beyond 40 years of age, one-quarter lived to the age of 70 years, and 1 in 10 lived to the age of 80 years.

MUDDY RIVER RATE FOR 1674.

	s.	Town.
John White, senior.....	13	14
John Winchester, senior.....	7	7
Isaac Stedman.....	3	3
Richard Woolfor.....	3	3
Goodman Druse.....	4	4
Edward Kibbie.....	3	3
Henry Stevens.....	8	8
Clement Corbin.....	3	3
John Sharpe.....	6	6
Peter Aspinwall.....	6	6
Thomas Gardiner, sen ^r	16	16
James Pemberton.....	8	8
Andrew Gardiner.....	3	3
Tho Gardiner, Jun ^r	3	3
Jno White, Junior.....	4	4
Jos White.....	3	3
Jno Acres gone.....	3	3
Sam Duncan.....	3	3
Ed Devotion.....	8	8
Jno Parker.....	4	4
Thomas Woodward.....	3	3
Nathaniel Wilson (gone).....	0	...
Tho Stedman.....	3	3
Ben Child.....	4	4
Robert Harris.....	4	4
Jno Harris.....	3	3
Timothy Harris.....	2	2

Derman Maroone.....
John Euans.....	3	3
Joseph Davis.....	3	3
Roger Adams (gon).....	0	...
Henry Segar.....	3	3
Tho Boylston.....	4	4
Jno Clark.....	3	3
Jno Winchester, Jun.....	3	3
Simon Gates.....	3	6
Jno Druse.....	3	3
Sam Ruggles (gon).....	0	...
W ^m Davis.....	2	2
G. Hamond.....	2	2
John Alexander.....	2	2
Nathaniel Stedman.....	3	3
Uriah Clarke newly come.....
Roseoman drew.....	2	2

Ye namse of ye inhabitants of muddi river taken yis. 21 of August, 1674, as yey are ratable for age

John Whit senior, and a serv^t.

Jamse Clarke senior

Edward Milse

Benjamin Whit living with his father.

John Ackars

Nathaniel Stidman

Timothy harris at his owne hand

Erassaman Drue at his owne hand

Daniel Harris with his father

Jamse Clarke junior, servant to Thomas gardiner senior

Robart grundi servant to Peeter Aspinwall

Ephrim Child with his father

Rodgars Addams at his owne hand

Joseph Pemberton servant to Thomas gardiner, Junior.

John Clarke with his father,

Josias Winchester with his father

Joseph ——— servant to thomas gardiner, senior,

John Hudson, servant to Thomas gardiner, junior

John Semison servant to Andru gardiner

John Corbin, with his father

Thomas Milse servant to Jamse Pemberton.

William Peacock servant to Jamse Pemberton

William Willis servant to Joseph Whit.

Obediah Wheatton servant to thomas gardiner, senior

John Clarke living at bucmasters (?) farme

Simon Gatse at Mester Scottose farme.

Isaac Wilson servant to John whit, Junior.

John Case servant to Thomas gardiner senior.

OWNERS OF DWELLING-HOUSES IN BROOKLINE, 1740.

Solomon Hill.	Capt. Benjamin Gardner.
Capt. John Winchester.	Joshua Stedman.
Samuel Sewall.	Ebenezer Kenrick.
William Gleason.	Nathaniel Hill.
Capt. Robert Sharp.	John Druse.
— Clark.	Abraham Chamberlain.
Thomas Aspinwall.	Abraham Woodward.
Deacon Thomas Cotton.	Hugh Scott.
Major Edward White.	James Griggs.
John Ellis.	William Davis.
Nathaniel Shepard.	John Harris.
Capt. Samuel Croft.	Isaac Child.
Isaac Winchester.	Joshua Child.
Rev. James Allen.	Timothy Harris.
Deacon Samuel Clark.	John Harris.
Nathaniel Gardner.	Daniel Harris.
Solomon Gardner.	John Newell.
Dr. Zabdiel Boylston.	Andrew Allard.
Nathaniel Seaver.	John Woodward.
William Ackers.	Christopher Dyer.
Isaac Gardner.	Thomas Woodward.
John Seaver.	Nehemiah Davis.
Samuel White.	John Goddard.
Joseph White.	Henry Winchester.
Deacon Benjamin White.	Elhanan Winchester.
Joseph Adams.	John Seaver, Jr.
Nathaniel Stedman.	Dudley Boylston.
Ebenezer Sargeant.

The Revolution.—One of the most important and interesting periods in American history, one in which the several towns acted a conspicuous part. They were the nurseries of the great Provincial Legislature, and it is not too much to say they were equal to the day and circumstances. The citizens of Brookline, whether we judge of the individual or of their acts as recorded, were certainly not lacking in patriotism.

The records of the town during the Revolution are full of resolves and votes that render their action worthy of perpetuity.

Of the causes by which England lost her colonies and America gained her independence sufficient has been published, so that we need only refer to records, the first of which is dated Dec. 15, 1767. A town-meeting had recently been held in the town of Boston, at which a resolution was passed to abstain from all (foreign) "superfluities," copies of which were forwarded to all the towns in New England.

The articles considered as superfluous were tea, glass, paper, and painters' colors, on which had been placed an impost duty on all brought into the colonies, which gave great dissatisfaction, amounting to indignation throughout the country. A tax had been placed on tea of three pence per pound, and the following is the first action by Brookline on the memorable acts of the British Parliament:

"Decem'r 15th, 1767. At A Meeting of the Freeholders & other Inhabitants of the Town of Brooklyn Legally Assembled at the Meeting-house on Tuesday ye 15th of Decemb'r, 1767

"Voted Isaac Gardner Esq'r Chosen Moderator

"Voted Unanimously That this Town will take all prudent and Legal Measures to promote Industry, Oeconimy & Manufactures in this Province & in any of the British American Colonies and will likewise take all Legal Measures to Discourage the Use of European Superfluities.

"Voted To Choose Five Persons Viz William Hyslop Esq'r Capt. Benjam. White Isaac Gardner Esq'r Mr. John Goddard and Mr. Samuel Aspinwall be a Committee to prepare a form for Subscription against Receiving of those European Superfluities and make Report at the Adjournment of this Meeting.

"Voted To Adjourn this Meeting to Tuesday the twenty-Ninth Day of Decem'r at two, o'Clock, afternoon, at which the report of the committee 'being Red,' Samuel Aspinwall, William Ackers, and John Goddard were chosen to view the report to the Freeholders and other Inhabitants, in order for them to signe if they think proper."

At a town-meeting held in Boston, Nov. 2, 1772, upon motion of Samuel Adams, it was voted, "That a committee of Correspondence be appointed, to consist of Twenty one persons, to state the rights of the colonies and of this province in particular, as men, as Christians, and as subjects; to communicate and publish the same to the several towns in this province and to the world, as the sense of this town, with the infringments and violations thereof that have been, or from time to time may be made: also requesting of each town a free communication of their sentiments on this subject."

This letter from the Boston Committee of Correspondence called upon the several towns to "stand firm as one man," and expressed a confidence, that regarding themselves, and the rising generation, they would not suffer them "to doze, or sit supinely indifferent, on the brink of destruction, while the iron hand of oppression was daily tearing the choicest fruit from the fair tree of liberty." This was the beginning of that internal organization by committees of correspondence that spread through the towns and the colonies, and constituted the first stage of the American Revolution.

In response to the above-mentioned action of Boston, a town-meeting was soon after held in Brookline, with the following result:

"Decem'r ye 11th 1772. Voted William Hyslop Esq'r Chosen Moderator

"To Choose a Committee to take under Consideration, the Violations & Infringments of the Rights of the Colonists & of this Province in particular; and make Report at the Adjournment of Said Meeting

"Voted To Choose 7 Persons for the Above Said purpose Viz. William Hyslop Esq'r, Isaac Gardner Esq'r, Deacon Ebenezer Davis Capt. Benja'n White Mr. Isaac Child Mr. John Goddard & Mr. John Harris

"Voted That the foregoing Committee be a Standing Committee of Communication & correspond with the Town of Boston & any other Towns on the Subject of our Present Difficulties

"Voted That the a foregoing Committee gives Instructions to their Representative Respecting the Violation of the Rights of this Province

"Decem'r ye 28th 1772 William Hyslop Esq'r Chosen Moderator

"The Town after Receiving the Report of Sd Committee, at Sd Adjournment the Following Votes were passed by the Town unanimously at as full a meeting as Usual Viz.

"It. Voted that the Rights of the Colonists, and this Province in particular as men as Chrystians, & as Subjects, as Set forth in the Said Votes & Proceedings of the Town of Boston, are in the Opinion of this Town well Stated & appear to be founded on ye Laus of Nature Divine Revelation, the British Constitution, and the Charter of this Province

"2d. Voted that the Infringment & Violation of those Rights, as also Set forth therein are in the Opinion of this Town great Grievances which this People have for years past been burdened with, and for the Redress of which Petitions & Remonstrances have been made but hitherto in Vain

"3d. Voted The Raising a Revenue within this Province by an assumed Power in the Brittische House of Commons, to give and grant our Money without our Consent & appropriating the Money so Raised for the Support of the Government of the Province and the Payment of the Charges of the Administration of Justice therein so repugnant to the first Principles of a free Constitution and the obvious meaning & Spirit of the Royal Charter of this Province

"4th. Voted that an Establishment for the Support of the Govonor of the Province, and the Judges of the Superior Court,

&c. (if the latter be already made as we have Just reason to apprehend) to be paid out the Monies raised as aforesaid, independent of the free Gifts and Grants of the Commons of this Province are in the Opinion of this Town leading and alarming Steps towards rendering the whole executive Power independent, of the People, and setting up an despotic Government in the Province.

"5th. Voted that the Representative of this Town be and hereby is instructed to exert his utmost Powers and Abilities in the General Assembly with constant Perseverance in promoting such Measures there as will speedily and effectually to Remove these and other intolerable Grievances enumerated in the aforesaid Votes and Proceedings of the Town of Boston.

"6th. Voted that the Freeholders and Inhabitants of the Town of Boston in thus clearly stating our Rights, and holding up so many of our Grievances in one View, have done an acceptable Service to this Town and Province and that the sincere & hearty Thanks of this Town be hereby given to them therefore "7th. Voted, that there be Committee now Chosen to Write to the Committee of Correspondence in Boston and communicate to them a true attested Copy of the foregoing Votes, and also further correspond with said Committee of Boston or any other Towns if they shall think it needful.

"then the Town made choice of the following Gentlemen for the purpose aforesaid, Viz William Hyslop Esq'r Isaac Gardner Esq'r Deacon Ebenezer Davis Capt. Benjamin White Messieurs Isaac Child John Goddard & John Harris.

"Attest. Isaac Gardner Town Cler."

The following is a copy of a letter written to the committee at Boston :

"To the Committee of Communication & Correspondence at Boston.

"BROOKLYN January 4, 1773

"Gentlemen,

"The Freeholders and other Inhabitants of this Town at a meeting Legally assembled upon the 28th of Decem'r last by adjournment, having duly considered a Letter from the Town of Boston, directed to the Select Men of this Town, accompanied with a State of the Rights of the Colonies, and of this Province in particular, as also a List of the Infringements of their Rights to be communicated to this Town, take this Opportunity to Return you our hearty and unfeigned Thanks which was Voted by said Town; for the early Care that you took in clearly and Truly Stating our Rights and Priviledges and making manifest the many and glaring Violations and Infringements there of, which if not speedily prevented must inevitably ruin the Constitution of this Province as Settled by the Charter granted by King William and Queen Mary of glorious Memory, and also that this Town think themselves happy in being always ready to add their Mite to wards with-Standing any arbitrary despotick Measures that are or may be carried on to overthrow the Constitution and deprive us of all our invaluable Rights and Priviledges which are & ought to be as dear or dearer then Life it selfe.

"We have inclosed you a Copy of the Votes and Proceedings of the Town so far as we have gone. May he that ruleth in the Kingdom of Men direct all our Counsels, & grant Success to all our Lawful Endeavors, that are or may be taken for the Preservation of the civil & religious Rights & Priviledges, of the Colonies & of this Province in particular. So as that we the Children of so worthy Progenitors may be enabled to transmit to our Children those invaluable Rights & Priviledges, as we had them transmitted to us. they were many times in Trouble on various Accounts, and in their affliction they cried to God, and he delivered them; and if we their Children follow their Example, may depend upon the same Success they had: which God grant may be the Case with us in our Present Difficulties.

"We wish all Prosperity to the Town of Boston and may unerring Wisdom direct all her Consultations and Counsels.

"We are with Great Respect, Gentlemen,

"Your Friends and Servants,

"In the common Cause of our Country,

"William Hyslop per Order

"Attest Isaac Gardner Town Clerk

"Nov'r ye 26th 1773 Voted Capt. Banja White Chosen Moderator

"Voted To Chose a Committee

"Voted That the Committee of Correspondence of this Town be the Committee with the Addition of Four other Gentlemen Viz Major Wm. Thompson Capt. Elisha Gardner. Capt. Thos. Aspinwall & Leut. John Heath are desired to git all the Intelligence from the Committee of Corrspondence of the Town of Boston Respecting the Landing & Sale of the East India Company's Tea and make Report to the Town at the Adjournment

"Voted That this Meeting be Adjourn'd to Decemb'r ye 1t at 3 Cloek P. M.

"At A meeting of the Freeholders & other Inhabitants of the Town of Brooklyn on Adjournment from Nov'r ye 26th to Decem'r ye 1st following & then meet, and "Voted that the Town Clerk Transmit a Copy of ye Resolves to the Committee of correspondence for thee Town of Boston

"At a Meeting of the Inhabitants of the Town of Brooklyn from Friday the 26th To Monday the 29th of Nov'r To consider what was propper for this Town to do, relative to the large Quantitys of Tea belonging to the India Company, hourly expected to arrive in this Province, Subject to any American Duty

"1t. The Town came unanimously into the following Resolves Viz. That the Act of the British Parliament imposing a Duty on Tea, payable in America, for the Express purpose of raising a Revenue, is unconstitutional, has a direct Tendency to bring the Americans into Slavery, and is therefore an Intolerable Grievance.

"2ly. That this Grievance which has been so Justly complained of by the Americans, so far from being redressed, is greatly aggravated by another Act, passed in the last Sessions of Parliament for Benifit and Relief of the India Company, permitting them to Export their Teas to America or Forring Parts, free of all custom and Dutyes usually paid in Great Britian, but Subject to the Duty payable in America; thus have the Parliament discovered the most glaring Partialty in making one & the Same Act to opperate for the Ease & Convenience of a Few of the most opulent Subjects in Britian, on the one hand, and for the Oppressions of Millions of Freeborn & moast loyal Inhabitants of Amerien, on the other.

"3ly. That the last mentioned Act, can be considered no otherwise than as Subtle Plan of the Ministry to ensnare and enslave the Americans, and that whoever shall be instrumental in carrying the Same into Execution, is in the Judgement of this Towne, an inevitable Enemy to this Country

"4ly. That Richard Clark & Son, and Thomas & Elisha Hutchinsons of Boston (who brought themselvas into Contempt by their Conduct in the Non Importation Time) and the other Persons appointed Consignees of the India Company's Teas in Boston, have by their repeated Refusal to Resign their Appointment and send Back the Said Teas manifested to the full conviction of this Town—their utter Disregard to the interest and welfare of this their native Country, to which Such unfeeling Wretches are a Disgrace and have discovered the most Sordid

Attachment to their private Interest, and have incurred the highest Displeasure of the good People of this Province in general, & of the Inhabitants of this Towne in particular who are determined to afford them not the Least Favour or Protection now that they are become Fugitives from the Just Resentment of their affronted Townsmen

"5ly. That we fully approve of the Proceedings, & Resolutions of the Town of Boston on this Alarming Occasion and while we see them Earnestly consenting for the general Liberty of America, Should we fold our Armes & Calmly look on we should be Justly chargeable with the most shameful Supineness & criminal Neglect—therefore Resolved.

"6ly. That this Town are ready to afforde all the Assistance in our Power to the Town of Boston, and will hartily unite with them and the Other Towns in this Province to oppose and frustrate this most detestable and dangerous Tea Scheem and every other that shall Appear to us to be Subversive of the Rights and Liberties of America, and consequently dishonorably to the Crown and Dignity of our Sovereign Lord the King.

"7ly. That whoever shall hereafter presume to import any Teas into this Province while Subject to the Odius Duty Shall be considered and treated by this Town as an Enemy to his Country.

"A True Copy Attest Isaac Gardner T. Clerk

"July ye 29th 1774 At A meeting of the Freeholders & other Inhabitants of the Town of Brooklyn Legally Assembled

"Voted. That this Town will unite with the other Towns in this Province in every rational and Justifiable measure to recover and maintain our invaded rights and will come into Such Commercial Agreement, as may be Recommended by the General Congress

"Voted That this Meeting be Adjourned to Octo'r ye 11th, at Five of the Clock in the Afternoon."

At this time the non-importation agreements which had been made in the colonies and rigidly observed, especially that relating to tea, began to affect the commercial interests of Great Britain, and, as a method of punishment to the colonies, the East India Company were permitted to export its teas free of all duties in England; thus enabling them to reduce the price of the same in the colonies, on which a duty must be paid. A firm resolution was adopted by the committee that the tea should be sent back to England. On the 28th of November, 1774, the ship "Dartmouth," with tea on board, arrived in Boston, and soon two other ships having as cargo the forbidden commodity. The tea fever ran high, and the Committees of Correspondence not succeeding in sending it back, determined it should not be landed. Accordingly, after all attempts had failed, a party of people disguised as Indians proceeded to the dock where the vessels lay, and in a short time three hundred and forty-two chests were broken open and their contents emptied into Boston harbor. This was the crisis of the Revolution, and it was boldly met, all the towns in the vicinity of Boston bearing an important part. Hutchinson says it "was the boldest stroke which had yet been struck in America."

Brookline was one of the five towns whose committees were summoned by Samuel Adams to meet at Faneuil Hall at a mass-meeting on the 29th November, viz.: Cambridge, Brookline, Roxbury, Charlestown, and Dorchester. A convention had been held at Col. Doty's, in Stoughton, on Tuesday, the 16th of August, 1774, to consult what measures were proper to be taken by the people of the county at this most important and alarming crisis of our public affairs, but as some of the towns had not appointed delegates, it was thought best to adjourn and give further notice to those towns not represented. This was called a "County Congress," and to show contempt for the "Act of Parliament touching town-meetings." The meeting adjourned to meet at Dedham on the 6th of September. The towns now comprised in Norfolk County since 1793 then belonged in Suffolk County, including Hingham, now in Plymouth County, numbering nineteen. This meeting was held at Richard Woodward's tavern, on High Street, in Dedham, opposite the monumental stone in the court-house yard, and on the spot where Fisher Ames, who was then sixteen years of age, was born; and it seems as though the dream of Nathaniel Ames, his father, was about to be realized, "when the celestial light, directed by the finger of God, should disperse the shades of darkness, and the face of nature reflect the progress of science and the arts in their pathway hence to the western ocean." At this convention a large committee was chosen to mature the business, after which they adjourned to meet again at the house of Daniel Vose, in Milton, where on the 9th of September, 1774, Gen. Warren reported to the Convention the famous "Suffolk Resolves" which he drafted, and which, Frothingham says, "set government at defiance; and Congress, by approving these resolutions, virtually raised the standard of rebellion, and set the colonies in hostile array against the parent State." At the Continental Congress, held at Philadelphia Sept. 4, 1774, the approval of these resolves was the first business in which they engaged, and became the basis of their future action.

This was an exciting time; the cause was the nation's; all eyes were directed to Boston; a hostile fleet was in her harbor; British troops paraded her streets; the common was dotted with tents of an army; cannon were placed in the most commanding positions. Her port was closed, commerce was paralyzed, stores were shut, and many had been reduced from affluence to poverty; but notwithstanding all this the "Sons of Liberty" knew no despair, they bade the citizens of the beleaguered town—

"Be not dismayed
Though tyrants now oppress,

Though fleets and troops invade,
You soon will have redress!
The resolution of the brave
Will injured Massachusetts save."

"Sept. ye 1st 1774. At A Meeting of the Freeholders & other inhabitants of the Town of Brookline Mett

"Voted Major William Thompson Chosen Moderator

"Voted To Choose five Persons as Delegates to Appear and Act in behalf of Said Town at a County Convention for Suffolk, to be held at Deadham, the 6th Day of this Instant September; or at any other Convention to which they may be invited.

"The Gent'm Committee are as follows Viz. Major William Thompson Capt. Benj'n White Isaac Gardner Esq'r John Goddard & Capt. Thomas Aspinwall

"Voted To Choose five Gentlemen as a Committee Viz. Mr. John Goddard Capt. Benjamin White Major William Thompson Mr. Isaac Child & Capt. Elisha Gardner, to Examine into the State of Said Town as to There Military preparations for War, in case of a Sudden attack from our Enemies, and make Report at the Adjournment of this Meeting

"Voted Whether Saide Town will indemnify and save Harmless any Town officers who shall incur any Penalty by refusing to comply with any Requisitions made to them in consequence of the New Acts & Regulations intended to be obtruded on this Province, and it Past in the Affirmative to indemnify & save Harmless any Town Officer or Officers

"Voted To Adjourn this Meeting to the Eight Day of Sept'r Instant at five of the Clock P. M."

"Sept'r ye 27th 1774 At A Meeting of the Freeholders & other Inhabitants of the Town of Brooklyn Legally meet by adjour

"Voted Isaac Gardner Esq'r Chosen Moderator

"Voted Capt. Benjamin White chosen Representative

"Voted To Choose three Persons to draw up Instructions for Their Representative Viz Doctor William Aspinwall Major William Thompson & Mr. John Goddard The Instructions are as follows Viz: Capt. Benjamin White, The Town of Brooklyn having Chosen you to Represent them in a general Assembly to be convened at Salem on Wednesday 5th Day of October next, think it necessary to give you the following instructions Viz.

"That you firmly adhere to the Charter of the Province and that you Acknowledge no other persons as Counsellors for this province but those who were elected by the General Court in May last, that you reject & disclaime all those who assume to Act as Counsellors by mandamus and that in your Representative Capacity you do nothing that can be construed in the least as an acknowledgment of the validity of the late oppressive Acts of Parliament—and as we expect A faithful Adherence to the Charter & Constitution of the Province will soon procure the Dissolution of the House of Representatives we hereby empower you to meet the Deligates from the other Towns in the Province at a provincial Congress to be held at Concord or else where on Tuesday ye 11th of October and in behalf of this Town to act & unite with them in all such measures as shall appeare to you to have a tendency to promote the welfare of this Province and to recover & secure the Just Rights and Liberties of America."

"Voted That the Town do approve of the a foregoing Instructions and that the Town Clerk do deliver an attested Copy of the Same to the Representative

"Voted To Choose two Delegates Viz Major Wm. Thompson and Mr. John Goddard to attend in the Provincial Congress, to be held at Concord on the Second Tuesday of October next in conjunction with the Representative of Said Town, we hereby empower you to meet the Delegates from the other Towns in the Province and in behalf of this Town to act & unite with them in all Such Measures as shall Appeare to you to have a tendency to promote the Welfare of this Province and to recover & Secure the Just Rights & Liberties of America."

A meeting was held in Philadelphia, Sept. 4, 1774, in which all the colonies were represented, in which the famous "Bill of Rights" and other resolutions were passed, and the following meeting was called, that the citizens of Brookline might give their approval and indorsement of the same:

"Nov'r ye 17th 1774 Voted, To see whether the Town Approve of the Measures that are come into by the Continental Congress and will abide by the same, and it passed in the Affirmative Unanimously.

"May ye 20th, 1775 Voted to Elect one person as a Delegate to meet the Provincial Congress, Appointed to be held at Watertown on wednesday ye 31th of this Inst. may & so from time to time for & During ye term of six Months

"Voted that Capt Benja'n White meet ye Congress as Above mentioned.

"Dec ye 21th 1775. Mr. Goddard in ye Chair

"Voted as an acknowledgment to the Army for thair Good Services, that Each and Every officer & Soldier Belonging to this Town, who has served in ye Continental Army shall be Excused from paying his Poll Tax as Residents of this Town for this Present Year, and that the assessors be Directed not to Assess the Same Upon Sd Officers and Soldiers, but upon the Estates of the Inhabitants in General.

"Jan. 31th 1776 Mr. Isaac Child Chosen moderator

"Maj'r Wm. Thompson Chosen Clerk for the meeting

"Voted that this Town will Raise ten men toward, Reinforcing the Continental army. Conformable with the Resolution of the General Assembly Dated Jan. 19th 1776

"Voted that as an Encouragement to Such of the Inhab- of this Town as shall inlist themselves to Reinforce the Continental Army for two, months, and to Enable them to Equip themselves fully for said Service, this Town will Allow and pay to Each man So Enlisting the Sum of forty Shillings. Lawful money upon his producing a Certificate that he has Joined the army and passed muster, and also, that he is provided with a Good fire arm, Blanket, Bayonet and Cartridge Box. Agreeable to the printed form of the Enlistments.

"Voted that Colo. Aspinwall Capt. Timothy Cory and Mr. Samuel Craft be a Committee to Enlist Ten of the Inhabitants of this Town for the above Sd Service, and in Case that Number of Inhabitants, Should not Enlist, then to agree with any other persons on the Easiest Terms they Can, not to exceed the allowance of forty Shillings Each man.

"March 11th 1776 Lieu. John Heath Lieu. Caleb Croft and Capt. Timothy Cory. Chosen a Committee of Correspondence Inspection and Safety for ye Ensuing Year.

"Voted that this meeting be Adjourned without Day.

"Attest Stephen Sharp Town Clerk"

"May 20th 1776 Voted to Elect and Depute one person to Serve for and Represent Sd Town in the General Assembly of this Colony the Ensuing Year.

"Mr. John Goddard Chosen to Serve for and Represent Sd Town in Sd Great and General Assembly.

"Voted to advise the Person, Chosen to Represent this Town in the next General Court, that if the Hon. Congress Should, for the Safety of the American Colonies, Declare them Independent of the Kingdom of Great Briton, that we Sd Inhabitants will Solemnly Engage with our Lives and fortune to Support them in the measure,

"Attest, Stephen Sharp Town Clerk"

"July ye 9th 1776 Att a Meeting of the Inhabitants of Brookline Legally meet

"Mr. John Goddard Chosen Moderator.

"Voted that Six pounds Six Shillings and Eight pence be Gir'n to Each able Bodied Man that will Enlist into the Canadian Service in addition to the Bounty of Seven pounds that is already Granted by the General Court

"Voted That Capt. White Leiut Craft and Leiut. White be a Committee to go to the Several parts of the Town to see what men may be Rais'd for the Cannadian Service, and Report

"Voted that this meeting be adjourn'd to ye 11th of July

"July ye 11th Voted that a further Sum be given to Each man that will Engage in the above mentioned Service, So as to make the above Mentioned Sum 50. Dollars Each man

"Voted that Mr. Aaron Child Col. Thomas Aspinwall, Mr. Nath'l Seaver, Mr. John Coburn and Major William Thompson, be a Committee to hire men to Enlist for the above Service.

"Voted that the Selectmen be a Committee to hire money for the above mentioned purpos

"Voted that this Meeting be adjourn'd to the Day and hour, that the Commanding officer Shall call the whole militia of this Town together

"at an Adjournment Thursday July 18th 1776 Maj'r Wm. Thompson chosen moderator, Mr. Goddard being absent by Sickness

"Voted that this Town will give Five pounds more in addition to the Bounty Voted at a former meeting, to Every Man who Shall Enlist into the Cannada Service

"Voted that the Men Called for from this Town be Draughted with Liberty to take the Bounty or pay the Fine

"Voted that this meeting be Dissolved

"Sept'r ye 23d 1776—At a Meeting of the Inhabitants of Brooklyn

"Mr. John Goddard Chosen moderator

"Voted to Raise a Sum of money to hire the Quoto of men which this Town is now call'd upon to Raise

"Voted—that four pound pr month over and above the Continental pay be paid to Each man that Shall Engage in the Present Service agreeable to a Late act of the General Court

"At a Legally meeting of ye Inhabitants of Brooklyn Nov. 26th 1776.

"The Hon'ble Benjamin White Esqr. was Chosen moderator

"The Act of ye General Assembly for Enlisting or compelling a Quarter part of ye Inhabitants (as therein described) to be in readiness to march at a minutes Warning, to reinforce ye Continen-Army, in any of ye united States, and to Serve therein for ye term of three months, being read, and a motion made to appoint a Committee to consider and report forthwith what method is advisable for this Town to take in order to Encourage this Towns Qouto of Men, to Enlist in ye Sd Service Mr. John Goddard, Col. Thomas aspinwall, and Maj'r William Thompson was chosen a Committee for that purpose, who having withdrawn and deliberated an there charge, reported by recommending to ye Town to pass ye following Vote: if approved—to wit

"Voted, 'That Every able Bodied Man belonging to this Town who shall Enlist for ye present reinforcement to ye Continental army, Shall as an Encouragement, receive from this Town, three pounds per month, in addition to ye wages Allowed by ye General Assembly, from ye time of marching to ye time of discharge, provided they should march and join the Continental Army, Either at or near New York or Ticonderoga and if this Encouragement should not induce the Number of men this Town is to furnish—to Enlist by next Thursday Evening, those Orders of Men Authorized to appoint this Towns Quota, for that service may proceed to Draw that Quota, agreeable to Act of Assembly, that one half of ye money now voted be paid ye men at marching and ye other half on there return and that ye money for this purpose be hired by ye Select Men, and that ye Assessors be Empowered to Assess ye same, in ye same manner other Assessments are made in this Town, at ye next assessment'

"The above Vote having been read, and proposed passed in ye Affermative—and ye Meeting Dissolved"

"Feb. ye 18th 1777. Mr. John Goddard Chosen Moderator

"Voted Unanimously that this Town will Give Twenty four pounds L m. y. over and above ye Bounty offered by the Continent and this State, to Every able Bodied man who Shall seasonably Enlist for this Towns Quota into ye Continental army During ye War or for ye Space of Three years the money to be paid upon Each mans producing a Certificat of having passed muster

"Voted that Maj'r William Thompson, Mr. John Heath & Mr. Thomas Griggs be a Committee to hire ye money in behalf of ye Town for ye above purpose and to apply ye same to ye use afore Sd as soon as may be needful and to be accountable to ye Town for ye same

"Monday May 26th 1777 The Inhabitants of this Town having considered the Resolve of the last Assembly of 5th May, recommending to the several Towns, to instruct their Representatives, in one Body with the Council, to form a new Constitution of Government. Voted that they do not give their Assent that the Representatives and Council should form a Constitution but Recommend that a Convention should be appointed by the People for that express Purpose, and that only, as soon as practicable"

Elhanan Winchester was chosen representative.

"Voted that the Sum of Fifteen pounds fifteen shillings be paid out of the Town Treasury, to Captain Thomas White, which Sum he advanced and paid as Bounty to three men, namely James Woods, Samuel Marian, and Gershon Hide, who enlisted for this Town's Quota of Militia, and lately marched to the Aid of Rhode Island State.

"Upon the Question, whether this Town will allow and pay a Gratuity to John Spear, Caleb Garder, Silas Winchester & William Davis, who enlisted without Bounty and continued in the Army untill the disbanding thereof in December last, voted in the negative

"The Committee appointed 18th of February last, to pay the Bounty of Twenty Four-pounds granted by the Town to each Man who should enlist, for this Town's Quota, into the Continental Army, reported that by an order of the Selectmen. (dated 27th March last) they received of the Town Treasurer, the Sum of Three hundred & eighty four pounds which they paid to Col: James Wesson by order of Sixteen Men who enlisted into his Regiment. namely, Jeremiah Clark, George Dunlap, Elijah Mills, Charles Winchester, Lambert Smith, Ezekiel Crane, Henry Tucker, Christopher Higby, Hugh McKorone, Oliver Yan, John Burton, John Sinclair, John Hambleton, Nathaniel Rose, John Butler, and Stephen Eldridge The said Committee also laid before the Town the Order signed by those men, with Col. Wesson's Certificate that they had enlisted for this Town and passed Muster, also his Receipt for said Sum; Whereupon it was voted that said Committee had performed their duty, and that they be discharged of the aforesaid Sum of three hundred and Eighty four pounds.

"Upon motion, voted that the Thanks of this Town be given to Col. James Wesson, for the good Service he has rendered the Town by enlisting the aforementioned Sixteen Men for this town, and that the sum of Six Pounds be paid him as a further acknowledgement for that Service."

"Friday August 15th 1777. Mr. John Goddard was chosen Moderator

"On a motion made, voted that a Committee be appointed to Enlist eight men, for this Towns proportion of Militia ordered to reinforce the Northern Army to serve till the end of November next

"Voted that the Committee consist of Five Persons

"Voted that Capt. Thomas White, Lieut: Caleb Craft, Mr Moses White Col: Thomas Aspinwall & Mr. Samuel Croft serve on this Committee

"Voted that it be left to the Discretion of said Committee to promise such Bounty to encourage eight men to engage in the aforementioned Service, as they shall judge reasonable and proper, and that the Town will abide by and fulfill the Agreement of Said Committee

"Voted that the Committee make Report of their doings at the adjournment of this meeting

"Voted that this meeting be adjourned to Monday next the 18th of August at 5 o'Clock afternoon—and was accordingly adjourned"

"Monday August 18 1777 The Committee reported that they had enlisted eight Men to serve in the northern Army to the End of November next namely John Mc. Ilvaine, William Davis, John Speer, Benjamin Winchester, John White, Joseph Caswall, William Mc. Ilvaine and Joseph Brown, or Silas Winchester in the room of Joseph Brown, upon the promise of paying Thirty Pounds Bounty to each man whereupon.

"Voted that the Town accept the report of the Committee

"Voted, that the Sum of Two hundred and forty pounds be hired for the purpose of paying the aforesaid Bounty, and that the Selectmen be empowered to hire the same in behalf of the Town, and to pay the same into the Hands of the Committee for the above purpose, as soon as requisite

"Voted that the Selectmen be empowered to hire the further Sum of Fifteen pounds, to procure Canteens for those eight men, and to pay the Subsistence of two pence per mile for their Travel to the Army

"Voted that this Meeting be dissolved

"Attest William Thompson Town Clerk"

"Monday November 10: 1777 Mr. John Goddard chosen Moderator

"Voted that the Town will allow and pay Seventy nine pounds four shillings, which Sum was paid by the Militia Officers of this Town as Bounty to Four Men who enlisted to Serve on the late Secret Expedition.

"Voted that this Town desire and direct Mr. Elhanan Winchester their representative to promote an Enquiry into the Causes of the failure of the late secret Expedition"

"Thursday February 12. 1778 Mr. John Goddard was nominated & voted. Moderator.

"Voted that Lieut Caleb Craft, Lieut Abram Jackson, and Mr. Stephen Sharp be a Committee to hire on the most reasonable Terms they can, at the Charge of the Town, those three Militia Men who are now ordered from this Town to do military Duty in the Town of Boston for three months—also that the same Committee be authorized and empowered, in the same manner to hire whatever men may, by lawful Authority, be ordered upon Military Duty from this Town, hereafter untill the further order of the Town, and that the Committee be allowed a reasonable Reward for their Service"

"Monday March 2. 1778 The hon'ble Benjamin White Esqr. was chosen Moderator.

"Voted that Doctor William Aspinwall Mr. Joshua Boylston, Mr. Eleazer Baker, Mr. Robert Sharp and Mr. Joshua Winship be a Committee to hire any men that may be ordered from this Town, upon military Duty on the most reasonable Terms they can, whenever they may be called for; The Committee to be allowed a reasonable Consideration for their Service

"Committee of Correspondence &c a. William Thompson, Mr. Isaac Child, Capt. Timothy Corey, Mr. Elisha Gardner, and Mr. Stephen Sharp, were chosen to be a Committee of Correspondence Inspection and Safety for the year ensuing"

"Monday April 27. 1778 Major William Thompson was Chosen Moderator.

"In Compliance with a recommendation of the Committees of Fourteen Towns in the County of Suffolk and Two Towns in the County of Middlesex met in Conference at Dedham on Tuesday the 14th day of April Current

"Voted the Major William Thompson, Mr. Nehemiah Davis, and Mr. Isaac Child be a Committee in Behalf of this Town, to proceed to Dedham to meet the Committees of other Towns who may assemble there tomorrow at nine o'Clock, to confer and consult together, upon the Form of Government lately offered to the People of this State for their approbation or disapprobation, and maturely to consider and advise whether the Same is Calculated to Promote, in the best manner attainable, the true and Lasting Happiness of the People of this State, and to secure to them and their Posterity those Just Rights Liberties and privileges which as a Free People they are entitled to and by the favor of providence have so happy an opportunity of affecting, also to consider and advise upon any other matter or thing that may concern this Town, County, or State and to report the result of their Deliberations, to this Town at the adjournment of this Meeting or at the next Town Meeting"

"Brookline Thursday May 21. 1778 Col. Thomas Aspinwall was Chosen to Represent this Town in the General Court for the Ensuing Year

"Maj'r William Thompson was then Chosen moderator of this meeting.

"Voted that Maj'r William Thompson, Col. Thomas Aspinwall and Stephen Sharp be a Committee to attain an account of all the charge this Town has ben at in paying Bountys or Extraordinary Wages to those persons who have engaged and Served or may serve, for this Town as Soldiers in the Continental army, Expeditions & Guards

"Upon reading and considering the proposed new form of Government: Voted that the same is not calculated and adapted, to promote and secure in the best manner attainable, the True and lasting Happiness and Freedom of the People of this State that it is essential to a Constitution designed for that most important and desirable End, that a full and express declaration of the Rights of the People, be made a part thereof, and that the Powers of Rulers Should be accurately definend and properly Limited; that as the Form Proposed is almost totally deficient in those respects and imperfect and intricate in many parts, it ought therefore to be rejected, and this Meeting consisting of forty five voters do unanimously and absolutely reject the same

"Then the Meeting was dissolved

"Attest Stephen Sharp Town Clerk."

"Thursday May 13th 1779 Voted to accept the committee's report. Chosen Last Town meeting to examine the claims of Such persons as had done Extra military Duty & had no consideration made

"Voted that Capt. Thomas White Lieut. Daniel White Mr. E. Kitchen Wolcott Mr. Ebenezer Davis & Mr. Jonathan Dana be a committee to hire Soldiers until the next Town meeting."

"Wednesday June 30th 1779. Mr. John Goddard was chosen moderator

"Voted that Capt. Timothy Corey Mr. John Goddard, Mr. Isaac Child Maj'r Will'm Thompson & Mr. Abijah Child be a Committee to hire the number of men the Town is now Call'd upon to raise

"Voted that the Selectmen procure Such a sum of money as Said Committee Shall find necessary in order to hire Sd Soldiers and that the Town Treasurer give his Obligation in behalf of the Town for ye Same

"Capt'n John Goddard was Chosen to meet a proposed Convention of Deligates from the Several Committees of Correspondence & c. in this State at Concord on Wednesday the 14th of July next for the purpose of Carrying into Effect the attempt of Appreciating our money—then the Meeting was adjourn'd without Day

"Attest Stephen Sharp Town Clerk."

"Brookline Tuesday August 3d 1779 Capt'n John Goddard was Chosen Moderator

"A Copy of the Proceedings of the Convention at Concord being read Voted—That wee approve of the Resolutions of the Convention at Concord, on the 14th of July last, & that wee will Take Suitable measures to carry the Same into Execution

"Upon motion made Col. Thos. Aspinwall Mr. Isaac Child, Maj'r Wm. Thompson, Capt'n Wm. Campbell & Capt'n John Goddard, were Chosen a Committee, to regulate the prices of Such articles as are not mentioned in the Proceedings of Said Convention

"Maj'r Wm. Thompson was Chosen to represent Said Town in a Convention at Cambridge on the first day of Sept'r next for the Sole Purpose of forming a new Constitution

"Voted that this meeting be Adjourn'd to Monday the 9th Inst at four a Clock in the Afternoon"

"Monday August 9th 1779 Capt John Goddard was chosen to Represent the Town in the Convention at Concord on the first Wednesday in October next

"Voted that this meeting be adjourn'd to monday the 23d Inst. at four a Clock in the afternoon—and was adjourned accordingly"

"Monday August 23d 1779 Voted that it be left with the Committee to affix the Prices of Such articles as are not mentioned in the Proceedings of the Convention at Concord, til after the County Convention at Watertown"

"Monday Octo'r 11th 1779 Col Thom's Aspinwall Chosen Mode'r Voted that this meeting be adjourn'd to Jonathan Dana's where being meet, Voted that Maj'r Wm. Thompson, Mr. Isaac Child, Dea. Elisha Gardner, Capt'n Wm. Campbell, & Mr. John Heath be a Committee to hire the number of men the Town is now Call'd upon to Raise to Reinforce the Continental Army for three months

"then the meeting was adjourned without Day"

"Monday May 15th 1780 At a legal Meeting of the Inhabitants of the Town of Brookline at the Meeting House—the Selectmen moderators.

"The Constitution, or form of Government Agreed upon by the Dalegates of the People of the State of Massachusetts Bay, being read, the Meeting was adjourn'd till two o Clock in the afternoon, then being Meet

"Then the form of Government was taken under Consideration and Assented to as far as the 10th article in Chapter 2d Sect'n 1st Except the following Articles, Viz. the third Article in the Bill of rites Assented to by thirty nine Voters, Eight dissented proposing this amendment, that Every Estate in the Town Should bear an equal Proportion of the Charges that arise in Maintaining the Congregational Minister in that Town where the Estate Lays

"The 2d Article in Chapter 2d Sect'n 1st Assented to by twelve, Twenty one for this with this Amendment, Dealing the word Christian and Puting in Protestants

"Chapt'r 2d Sect 1st—13th Article Assented to provided the Salaries be not Established while the present War and Scarcity Lasts—because it would require at least a Double Sum for an Honorable Support in Such Times as the Present to what would be necessary in Times of Peace and Plenty and no Provision is made for lessening any Salarys once Established, therefore til the return of Peace and Plenty as before the War, the Salarys Ought to be granted yearly—the grants to be made among the first acts of the Gen'l Court Every year

"Then the Meeting was adjourn'd til to morrow Morning at Eight OClock in this Place

"Attest Stephen Sharp Town Clerk"

"Tuesday May 16th 1780. Capt. John Goddard Moderator.

"Then the Remaining part of the form of Government which has not been Considered was taken Under consideration and Assented to Except the 1st 7th and 10th Articles in Chapt'r 6th to which the following Alterations were proposed. Viz twelve Voters for the 1st Article as it Stands, twenty one for Dealing the word Christian and putting in Protestant—twenty six Voters Accept the 10th Article as it Stands four do not Accept it.

"7th Article Assented to with this Alteration, Dealing the word twelve and putting in three, and that Only in time of War, Rebellion or Invasion

"Then Col. Thom's Aspinwall, Mr. Caleb Croft, Mr. John Harris Jun'r Mr. Nehem'r Davis, and Mr. Edward Kitchen Wolcott, were Chosen a Committee to take under Consideration and determine what method Shall be taken to Ascertain the Quantity and Value of the land in Said Town, in order to a more Equatable Assessment thereof, and make report at the next meeting

"Voted that this meeting be adjourn'd to Wednesday Sennet at eight a Clock in the Morning at this Place

"Attest Stephen Sharp Town Clerk."

"Brookline June 5th 1780. Capt. John Goddard Moderator

"Voted that the Town approve of the Proceedings of the Committee of Correspondence Inspection and Safty respecting the Petition of Mr. John Green to the Gen'l Assembly to attain possession of the forfeited Estate of Henry Holton, and that the Town Confirm and approve the reasons and objections the said Committee offred Said Assembly against the Granting of Said Greens Petition.

"Also Voted that the Representative of this Town in the Gen. Court be directed to oppose the Grant of Said Estate, or any part of it to said Green in Consideration of his acct. of Services for the Kings Custom Houses—and that the Committee of Correspond'e be desired to take Such further Steps as they Shall Judge proper in the name and behalf of the Town to prevent the said Green's Obtaining possession of Said Estate, or any part of it

"Voted that such Persons as have any Papers relative to Soldiers Milage Travelling Fees & c. Due to the Town, are Desired to Deliv'r Said papers to the Commtee appointed to Collect said Milage money

"Voted that all persons that are Posse'd of any Papers that are Necessary to the Committees making a report of the Debt and Credit of the Town be Desired to Deliver Said papers to the Committee appointed for that Purpose"

"Brookline July 3d 1780. Maj'r Wm. Thompson was chosen Moderator.

"Voted that Doct'r Aspinwall, Mr. Gulliver Winchester and Deac'n Gardner, be a Committee to go round the Town to see who will Advance Money for the purpose of hiring men for Military Service, and Receive the same and Deliver it to the Treasurer, and that those persons who adv'ce more than thare proportionable part be allowed Interest for the Same.

"Voted that this Meeting be adjourn'd to next Thursday Six o Clock afternoon at Mr. Jonathan Dana's."

"Thursday July 13th 1780 Maj'r William Thompson Chosen Moderator

"Voted that Capt White be desired to Issue his Warrant to warn the Training Band and alarm list to meet to Morrow afternoon at five a Clock in this place in order to raise the Remainder of the Town's Quota of Men by draft if they cannot be Raised any other way be fore that time and that Notice be given that such persons as shall not attend the meeting be the first Drafted

"Voted that this meeting be adjourn'd til to Morrow afternoon at five a Clock in this place"

"Friday July 14th 1780. Maj'r William Thompson Moderator.

"Voted that a Committee be chosen to go round among the People in the present meeting to see who will advance money for the purpose of hiring Meen—Voted that Doct'r Aspinwall & Dea. Gardner serve on Said Committee,—Voted that Col. Aspinwall Capt. White and Mr. Ackers be a Committee to go round among the People present to see if any Inclino' to Ingage to serve as soldiers for the Town "Voted that this meeting be adjourn'd to Mr. Bakers immediately where being met.

"Voted that the Town will not give more than fifteen Hundred pounds pr. Man for the Militia which are Call'd for for three months provided the Town holds the State pay, and thirteen hundred Pounds if the Soldiers holds the States Pay. and that the Committee do not give that sum after next tuesday, and that Mr. Gulliver Winchester, Deac'n Gardner, and Doct'r Aspinwall, be a Committee to hire Sd men in room of the former Committee for that purpose who Decline to Serve in that office

"Voted that the Thanks of the Town be given to miss Mary Boylston for three Silver Dollars given by her for the Incouragement of Such Men as Shall Ingage to serve as Soldiers for the Town

"Voted that this Meeting be adjourn'd til next Tuesday Evening seven a Clock at the School House"

"Fryday Sept'r 29th 1780 Col. Thomas Aspinwall Chosen Moderator.

"Voted that the Sum of Eighteen Thousand Eight Hundred and forty one pounds be raised by a tax on Polls, Real and Personal Estates of the Inhabitants of this Town, and Non resident Possessors for the Purpose of Purchasing Supplys for the Army and that the surplus (if any bee) bee applied as the Town shall hereafter Direct

"Voted that said sum be Assessed, Collected, and paid into the Hands of the Town Treasurer by the 20th of Octo'r next"

"December 26th 1780. Capt'n William Campbell Chosen Moderator.

"Voted that Mr. William Ackers, Mr. Abijah Child and Mr. Isaac Gardner be a Committee to Ingage the Men this Town is call'd upon to raise, to fill up the Continental Army on the most Reasonable terms they can, and report at the next Town Meeting

"Voted that the sum of twenty five Thousand pounds be raised for the purpose of procuring the Quantity of Beef this Town is Call'd upon to Supply the Army with"

"Thursday Jan'y 4th 1781. Maj'r William Thompson Moderator.

"Voted that every Town Inhabitant be authorized to hire any Soldiers to serve for three Years or during the War for this Towns Quota for the Continental Army—and that Every Inhabitant that shall procure a man shall be allowed four Dollars for his Trouble, and that the Town will pay each Soldier who shall engage in that Service as much more than the Publick pay as to make up his Wages to six pounds pr Month during the Time he shall continue in actual Service and that each Soldier be paid sixty Dollars in advance towards his Wages, and shall also be paid whatever shall be due to him from the Town at the end of every six Months, and if not paid within twenty Days after application by themselves or agents then to be allowed ten percent Interest from the Time of application til paid"

"Brookline Monday Jan'y 8th 1781. Maj'r William Thompson Moderator

"Voted that Col. Thom's Aspinwall, Mr. Moses White, Mr. Sam'l Croft, Mr. Caleb Croft, Mr. Isaac Child, Mr. Joshua Boylston, Capt. Timothy Corey, Mr. Caleb Gardner Mr. Nath'l Seaver and Mr. Ebenezer Davis, be a committee for the purpose of hiring this Towns Quota of men into the Continental Service."

"Monday March 5th 1781 Benjamin White Esq'r being chosen Moderator,

"Voted to adjourn this meeting til half after two o clock this afternoon in this place—being Meet according to adjournment—Voted that the Tax for hiring Soldiers into the Continental Army, be paid in paper Money at the rate of Seventy five paper Dollars for one Silver Dollar, and that the Treasurer be desired to Exchange the same for hard Money if needed.

"Voted that Mr. Samuel Croft be desired to take care of the Stock of Arms and ammunition or any other article or articles that belong to this Town."

"Wednesd'y March 14th 1781. Benj'n White Esq'r being Moderator

"Voted that the Vote pas'd the 3d day of Jan'y last Respecting hiring Soldiers into the Continental Army for three years, be Reconsidered, and that the Committee be desired to procure the men on the best terms they can"

"June 29th 1781. Mr. John Goddard Chosen Moderator

"Voted that the Sum of Six Hundred Silver Dollars be Assessed on Polls, Real and Personal Estates. of the Inhabitants of this Town, and Non resident Possessors, for the purpose of Purchasing this Towns Quota of Beef for the Continental army, agreeable to a Resolve of the General Court of the 22d Inst

"Voted that Mr. Moses White, Mr. John Coburn, and Mr. Ebenezer Davis be a Committee to purches Said Beef"

"July 3d 1781. Voted, Esq'r White chosen Moderator

"Voted that the Town Indemnify and clear the Select Men from all charge that may arise by Reason of their not proceeding to Draught a Man out of each Delinquent Class, agreeable to order of Court of the 16th June last.

"Voted that all charges that have arisen or may arise in procuring this Towns Quota of Men to serve in the Continental Army for three years, be Assessed on the Town in the same manner other Town Charges are assessed, provided the Delinquent Classes procure their Deficient Men by the thirteenth Day of July Current.

"Then the Meeting was Dissolv'd

"Attest Stephen Sharp Town Clerk"

"July 17th 1781. Doct'r William Aspinwall chosen Moderator,

"Voted that the Inhabitants of the Town be Classed in Eight Classes in order to procure Eight Men to go to Rhode Island and West point that Each Class be oblig'd to procure one Man and pay him, each one in proportion as shall be determined by the Assessors, and that the Assessors be directed to Assess each Class such a Sum to pay said Man as the Majority of the Class shall Desire—and that one Class be not allowed to hire a man out of any other Class before the twenty second Instant, unless Said Class has Procured a man, and if it shall hereafter appear that any one or more Classes, do not procure a Man and thereby Incur a Penalty, that Said Class shall be excus'd from paying more than the highest price given for any of the Men, if they make it appear to the Satisfaction of the Town that they have Collected their Money in proper Season, and taken Suitable pains to procure Said Man, and whatever Class shall first procure a Man to go to Rhode island and Inform Benj'n White Esq'r thereof, shall have the benefit of Said man for their Class"

"Monday June 17th 1782. Mr. John Goddard Moderator

"Voted that Mr. E. Kitchen Wolcott, Mr. Joshua Boylston and Mr. Robert Sharp be a Committee to make a further inquiry into the accounts of the Committee for Purchasing Beef for the Army for the year 1781, and Report there on at the next Town Meeting"

"Monday July 8th 1782. Hon. Benj'm White Esq'r Moderator,

"The Vote being put, to see if the Town will take any other Method, to raise five Men to Serve three years in the Continental Army, besides Classing the Inhabitants as Directed by a Res'lv of the General Court of the 1st Day of March last

"Voted in the Negative

"Then the Meeting was adjourn'd without Day

"Attest Stephen Sharp Town Clerk"

"Sept'r 26th 1782 Hon'ble Benj'n White Esq'r Chosen Moderator. Voted to hire five Men now called for to go to Nan-tasket,—Voted that Mr. Nath'el Winchester Deac'n Gardner and Mr. Daniel White, be a committee to hire Said men on the most reasonable terms they can, and that the Town relieve said Men in six weeks from the time of Inlistment, if they desire it,—Voted to Indemnify the Selectmen from all charges that may arise by reason of their not proceeding to draught said men agreeable to the Militia Law"

"Friday January 12. 1787 Capt'n Moses White chosen Moderator

"Capt'n Moses White. Lieut. Sam'l Croft, and Col. Thom's Aspinwall were chosen a Committee to hire Eleven men to serve as Soldiers for this Town, and to Remain in Publick Service 30. Days from the 23d Inst,—upon the most Reasonable terms they can—Mr. John Heath Mr. Nath. Winchester and Mr. Benja. White were Chosen a Committee to hire a Sum of money in behalf of the town for the purpose of hiring Sd Men—then this meeting was adjourn'd to Tuesday Evening next at Six a Clock at the Grammar School house"

"January 16th 1787 Inst Capt. Moses White Moderator—Voted that the Committee Viz Mr. John Heath Mr. Nath. Winchester, and Mr. Benjamin White, who were chosen a Committee the 12th Inst to hire money to Raise Soldiers be impowered & they be hereby impowered, to hire the Sum of Forty pounds for Sd Purpose and that the Town Treas'r be Directed to give his Obligation in behalf of the Town for Sd Sum. Likewise that Sd Sum be Assessed with the next Town Rate—then it was Voted that this meeting be adjourn'd to next Thursday Evening at Six a Clock in this place, and was adjourn'd accordingly

"Attest Stephen Sharp Town Clerk"

"Monday March 19th 1787 Voted, that the Town Treasurer be Directed, and he is hereby Directed, to pay the Soldiers that went for this Town to the Western Expedition, Out of the first money he Receives"

"December 10th, 1787, The Rev'd Joseph Jackson was chosen a Delegate to Represent this Town in a Conven- of Delegates from the Towns in this state at the state house in Boston, on the Second Wednesday of Jan. next, for the purpose of taking under consideration the Form of Government for ye United States"

LIST OF MEN WHO TOOK PART IN THE REVOLUTION FROM THE TOWN OF BROOKLINE.

"A MUSTER ROLE of the Company, under the Command of Captain Timothy Corey, in Col. Baldwins Regiment to the first of August, 1775.

Timothy Corey.....	Brookline...	April 26	97	Capt.
Thomas Cummings.....	Needham...	May 1	92	1st lieutenant.
Jonas Johnson.....	Brookline...	April 26	97	2d lieutenant.
Jacob Whitney.....	Roxbury....	"	97	Sergt.
John Carle.....	Dedham....	"	97	"
Ezekiel Crane.....	Brookline...	"	97	"
Samuel Draper.....	Newtown...	"	96	"
Adam Thorp.....	Dedham....	"	97	Corporal.
John Blundin.....	Roxbury....	"	97	"
Andrew Lewis.....	Dedham....	"	97	"
Abner Whitney.....	Newtown...	"	97	"
Winter Boston.....	Roxbury....	May 1	92	Drummer.
Edward French.....	Stoton.....	May 28	65	Fifer.
John Alger.....	Brookline...	April 26	97	Private.
James Beamis.....	Sudbury....	"	97	"
John Broadrick.....	Brookline...	"	97	"
Timothy Child.....	Newtown...	"	97	"
Thomas Champney.....	Brookline...	"	97	"
Daniel Coolidge.....	Roxbury....	"	97	"
William Davis.....	Brookline...	"	97	"
George Dunlap.....	"	"	97	"
John Fenelley.....	"	"	97	"
Thomas Fisk.....	Newtown...	May 8	85	"
Caleb Gardner.....	Brookline...	April 26	97	"
James Greley.....	Roxbury....	May 9	84	"
Stephen Whitney.....	Newtown...	April 26	97	"
Joseph Wilkinson.....	Dedham....	"	"	"
Thomas Seaver.....	Roxbury....	May 12	59	"
John Green.....	Brookline...	May 30	63	"
Thaddeus Hide.....	"	April 26	97	"
Abner Hoit.....	"	"	97	"
Aaron Jackson.....	Newtown...	May 2	91	"
Enoch Jackson.....	"	"	91	"
Jonas Jackson.....	"	"	91	"
William Jackson.....	"	May 17	76	"
William King.....	Brookline...	April 26	97	"
Samuel Lewis.....	Roxbury....	April 27	96	"
Timothy Lewis.....	"	"	96	"
John McIlvaine.....	Brookline...	April 26	97	"
Elijah Mills.....	"	"	97	"
Phillip Marchant.....	"	May 6	87	"
Jesse Jackson.....	Newtown...	May 17	76	"
Samuel Merean.....	Brookline...	April 26	97	"
Edward Merean.....	Newtown...	May 6	87	"
David Nutting.....	Brookline...	April 26	97	"
Ephraim Payson.....	"	"	97	"
Elnathan Pope.....	Plainfield...	"	97	"
Jacob Reed.....	Brookline...	May 1	92	"
John Spear.....	"	April 26	97	"
John Smith.....	"	May 1	92	"
Jeremiah Smith.....	"	"	92	"
Lambert Smith.....	"	"	92	"
Uriah Snow.....	Woburn.....	May 9	84	"
Ezra Tilden.....	Stoton.....	May 18	75	"
Timothy Whitney.....	Newtown...	April 26	97	"
Peter Walker.....	Roxbury....	May 1	92	"
Isaac Winchester.....	Brookline...	"	92	"
Charles Winchester.....	"	"	92	"
Silas Winchester.....	"	April 26	97	"
Ephraim Whitney.....	Newtown...	"	97	"

"In Council, Feb. y^e 1776. Read & allowed & order^d That a warrant be drawn on y^e Treas^r for £287. 12/ in full of this date.

"PEREZ MORTON,

"Dpy Secy."

"A Muster Roll of the Militia Company in Brookline who marched against the Ministerial Troops on y^e 19th April, under y^e command of Capt Thomas White in Col William Heaths Regiment, and their time of service to y^e 12th day of May.

Capt Thomas White.	Serg ^t Samuel Griggs.
1st Lieut Caleb Craft.	Corp ^l Caleb Gardner.*
2d Lieut Dan ^l White.	" John Harris Jr.
Serg ^t Moses White.	" Daniel Dana Jr
" Abijah Child.	Fifer Isaac Gardner
" Timothy Corey.*	Drum'r Benj Larnard.

Privates.

John Alger.*	Enoch Fisk.
Jonathan Baly.	Benj Gardner.
Eben'r Bartlett.	Elijah Gardner.
John Blandin.*	John Griggs.
Joshua Boylston.	Joseph Griggs.
John Broaddrick.*	Joel Hagar.
Joseph Brown.	Just Harrington.
Thomas Champney.*	Michael Harris.
Aaron Child.	Phin Hammond.
Daniel Child.	John Heath.
Isaac Child.	Amos Hide.
Phinehas Child.	Thaddeus Hide.
Samuel Child.	Abner Hoyt.*
Solomon Child.	Abrah ^m Jackson.
Samuel Clark.	Thad Jackson.
John Coburn.	Jonas Johnson.
Samuel Coburn.	Moses Johnson.
James Coolidge.	Jonathan Jones.
Benjamin Cox.	William King.*
William Cox.	Barnabas Manard.
Samuel Craft.	Jonathan Marbel.
Ezekiel Crane.*	John McAlvain.*
Joseph Dana.	Nath ^l Meariam.
Ebenezer Davis Jr.	Samuel Meriam.*
Samuel Davis.*	Elijah Mill.*
William Davis.*	David Nutting.*
Thaddeus Dean.	David Ocinton.
George Dunlop.*	Ephraim Payson.*
John Fineey.*	John Sampson.

Jacob Sharpe.
Robert Sharpe.
Stephen Sharpe.
Nathaniel Seaver.
John Spear.*
Benj Stratton.
Gideon Tower.
Archibald Wares.
David Whitecomb.
Benjamin White Jr.
Edward White.
Samuel White.
David Winchester.

James Winchester.
Nath^l Winchester.
Sam^l Winchester.
Silas Winchester.*
Amos Winship.
Joshua Winship.
Royal Wood.
Josh Woodward.
Jon^a Warner.
Esq^r White's "Peter"
" Gardner's "Adam"
Joshua Boylston's "Prince"

This company served twenty-three days, ending May 12th, and then returned home. Those having a star opposite their names, after serving seven days, enlisted in the Continental army.

"PAY ROLL for a Party of Militia Commanded by Lieut Caleb Craft, Dorchester Heights from July 4th to the 28th Inclusive, 1778, Belonging in Col. Macintoshes regiment.

Caleb Crafts.....	July 4.	July 28.	25
Eleaz ^r Graves.....	" 6.	" 18.	13
William Gridley.....	" 5.	" 28.	24
Edmund Weld.....	" 4.	" 18.	15
William Lewis.....	" 4.	" 18.	15
Bowers Dorr.....		" 18.	15
Benjamin Badanah.....		" 28.	25
Fisher Leathbrig.....			25
Asa Jackson.....			25
John Whitecomb.....			25
Ephraim Mann.....	July 5.		24
William Mann.....	" 5.		24
Joseph Williams.....			24
Stephen Knight.....			24
Benjamin Baxter.....	July 7.	July 18.	12
John Wiswell.....	" 9.	" 28.	20
Joseph Gore.....	" 9.	" 28.	20
Elnathan Whitney.....	" 9.	" 18.	10
Ebenezer Weld.....		" 18.	10
Ebenezer Scott.....		" 28.	20
Samuel Cotter.....		" 18.	10
Jacob Cummins.....	July 10.	" 24.	15
Asa Payson.....	" 10.	" 18.	9
James G.....	" 10.	" 18.	9
William Sharp.....	" 10.	" 28.	17

A Return of the men in the Continental Army for the Town of Brookline.

NAMES.	Town.	Enlisted.	Captains.	Colonels.	Time.	State.
Jeremiah Clark.....	Brookline.	Brookline.	Pettengill.	James Wesson.	Three Years.	Massachusetts.
George Dunlap.....	"	"	Cogswell.	"	"	"
Elijah Mills.....	"	"	Childs.	"	"	"
Charles Winchester.....	"	"	"	"	"	"
Lambert Smith.....	"	"	"	"	"	"
Ezekiel Crane.....	"	"	"	"	"	"
Henry Tucker.....	"	"	Cogswell.	"	"	"
Oliver Yan.....	"	"	Pettengill.	"	"	"
John Burton.....	"	"	"	"	"	"
John Sinclair.....	"	"	Cogswell.	"	"	"
John Hamilton.....	"	"	Pettengill.	"	"	"
Christopher Higbee.....	"	"	"	"	"	"
Hugh McKown.....	"	"	"	"	"	"
Nathaniel Rose.....	"	"	"	"	"	"
John Butler.....	"	"	"	"	"	"
Stephen Eldridge.....	"	"	"	"	"	"

" John Blundin, in ye Light Horse Company.
" Thomas Champney, in ye Train Company.
" Thomas Bushel, in Col. Henry Jacksons Regiment.
" Jonn Phenesy, in Col. Bailey's, Capt. McField's Regiment.
" Peter Solomon, goeth for Princeton.

[Names of companies encamped at] "Sewells Point," Brookline, in 1775:
" Capt. Timothy Corey's Company, Col. Loammi Baldwins Regiment, Sept. 27, 1775.
" Capt. Thomas Cogswells Company, Col. Loammi Baldwins Regiment, Sept. 27, 1775.

"Capt. Joseph Pettengills Company, Col. Loammi Baldwins Regiment, Sept. 27, 1775.

"Capt. Thomas Mighills Company, Col. Loammi Baldwins Regiment, Sept. 27, 1775.

"Capt. Ezra Badlams Company, Col. Gridleys regiment.

"Men enlisted from Brookline in the army, 1781:

"Ebenezer Dean, May 18, 1781.

"Josiah Jordan, Apr 19, 1781.

"Jacob Harvey, Apr 23, 1781.

"Nathaniel Blanchard, June 30, 1781.

"Asaph Bisbee, July 16, 1781.

"Noah Sturtevant, July 16, 1781.

"Joseph Wright, July 16, 1781.

"Joseph Morrill, Aug. 4, 1781.

"Josiah Ladd, Aug. 17, 1781.

NAMES.	Date of Enlistment.	Date of Discharge.	Miles of Travel.	Months and Days.	Amount of Wages.
Benjamin Morse.....	July 16.	January 16.	220	6 11	£12 14s. 8d.
Josiah Jordan.....	July 1.	December 25.	220	6 6	12 8 0
Thomas Ryan.....	May 10.	November 10.	220	6 11	12 14 8
Abel Adams.....	June 8.	December 8.	220	6 11	12 14 8
Increase Davis.....	June 8.	December 6.	220	6 9	12 12 8
Lemuel King.....	June 11.	December 11.	220	6 11	12 14 8
Jacob Harvey.....	July 31.	December 15.	220	4 26	9 14 8
					£88 13s. 4d.

"B. WHITE, } Selectmen
 "JOHN GODDARD, } of
 "W. CAMPBELL, } Brookline.

"The original sworn to before

"STEPHEN SHARP, Town Clerk."

Beginning of the Present Century.—Up to the latter part of the last century, or the commencement of the present, the people of the town were dependent upon the products of their land, and were of the thrifty sort of farmers. About that time a new order of things commenced; the attractions of the place drew many people from the large and thickly-populated towns, who were desirous to retire from the noise and bustle of active commercial life and to seek a home in the country, for this was then a good specimen of a country town. The elegant native forest-trees, the elevated lands, the rich soil, the nearness to the seat of government, and many other advantages, soon attracted the attention of wealthy people of other localities. Among the first, if not the first, of this class was Hon. Stephen Higginson, a native of Salem, a leader in the politics of Massachusetts, and a merchant of Boston, who purchased thirteen acres of land, formerly used by Ebenezer Richards for a sheep-pasture, for the sum of one hundred and twenty dollars an acre, upon which he erected an elegant dwelling-house. This locality is an elevated and beautiful spot, commanding a fine view of Boston and the many islands, while near at hand, as if to lend a charm to the scene, are the placid waters of the old Boston Reservoir, of irregular elliptical shape, the surface water covering twenty-two and one-half acres, and containing one hundred million gallons. This land is on the heights near Warren and Heath Streets; it was afterwards owned and occupied by Dr. John C. Warren, who did much to beautify the same. A portion of this land was sold to William Appleton, Esq., M.C., who was formerly president of the Boston branch of the United States Bank, also of the Massachusetts General Hospital and Provident Institution of Savings, etc. Mr. Henry Upham afterwards occupied Mr. Appleton's place, and the Warren mansion has since been occupied by George Bacon, and now by Augustus Lowell, Esq. Following the above-named Higginson were the families of Hon. Jonathan Mason, M.C., a student of President John Adams, counselor-at-law, member of the State Legislature, and member of the Governor's Council, who purchased the farm of Moses White on Heath Street. Benjamin Guild, Esq., next purchased the house, and afterwards sold the same to Gen. Theodore Lyman, the well-known founder of the Farm School at Westborough, who pulled down the old house and erected the present mansion, now owned by his son, Hon. Theodore Lyman, member of Congress from this district.

Next in order, and near to the estate of Dr. Warren, was the residence of Hon. George Cabot, M.C., who was Secretary of the Navy under Washington, afterwards president of the Boston branch of the United States Bank. He was a retired sea-captain. Stephen Higginson, Jr., succeeded Mr. Cabot in this home, who sold to Capt. Adam Babcock, afterwards purchased by the late Samuel Goddard. The land owned and occupied by John L. Gardner, Esq., was part of this estate, and was sold to Mr. Gardner by Capt. Ingersoll, a son-in-law of Capt. Babcock. Opposite to the estates of Messrs. Appleton and Warren, on Warren Street, was the old-time mansion of the late

Col. Thomas H. Perkins, who was formerly president of the Boston branch of the United States Bank, member of the State Senate, active in establishing the Massachusetts General and the Insane Hospitals, contributing eight thousand dollars to its funds, and was a patron of the Blind Asylum, for whom it was named; also of the Mercantile Library Association and Boston Athenæum. Adjoining this estate, on the west, was the residence of the late Samuel Cabot, built in 1806, which gave way but a few years since to the present mansion of William Gray, another of Boston's merchants. Did our space permit we might, with equal justice, mention a long list of persons eminent in the various walks of professional and mercantile life. Prominent among whom were John E. Thayer, Nathaniel I. Bowditch, Richard Sullivan, Samuel G. Perkins, Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, James S. Amory, Thomas C. Amory, Amos A. Lawrence, William R. Lawrence, George B. Blake, Ignatius Sargent, William Dwight, David Sears, Barthold Schelesinger, Edward C. Wilson, William I. Bowditch, William Aspinwall, Samuel Goddard, Thomas Parsons, Eben Wright, John W. Candler, and many others.

While among those who have held or do now own large estates in various portions of the town may be mentioned Benjamin White, Ebenezer Francis, Amos A. Lawrence, William R. Lawrence, David Sears, Charles Stearns, Marshal Stearns, Charles H. Stearns, William Stearns, Thomas Griggs, Timothy Corey, Elijah Corey, Abijah W. Goddard, William Aspinwall, Col. Thomas Aspinwall, George Babcock, James Leeds, Ebenezer Davis, George B. Blake, Ignatius Sargent, William I. Bowditch, Moses Jones, William Dearborn, and others.

At a later date than the above the names of White, Griggs, Lawrence, Stearns, Goddard, Corey, Withington, Thayer, Davis, Sargent, Sharp, Craft, Coolidge, Sears, Perkins, Cabot, and others, appear as among the largest land-owners of the town. The Winchesters, Aspinwalls, Buckminsters, Gardners, and Whites were perhaps the largest and the oldest land-owners. The earliest settlers were agriculturists, their first business being to clear the primitive forests and prepare the land for the first crops. They were men of great physical powers, resolution, and stability of purpose, and applied their energies of body to clearing and improving their township, and if we may judge of the results of their efforts, they were faithful to their calling. The nearness to the capital of the State made it the natural locality for the raising of produce of all kinds; a great opportunity was presented to grow and increase in wealth, as well as to improve their land, and this was brought about by hard labor and strict frugality, which lent its aid in the work.

There was a ready demand for all kinds of vegetables and fruit, large and small, and this town contributed largely to supply the want.

The Town as it Is.—Of the present aspect of the town, with all the various changes since the commencement of this century, much has been said and published, some of which are well worth noticing. The learned and well-known editor of Winthrop's Journal pronounced Brookline to be the most beautiful village in New England. For local scenery, rich cultivated fields and gardens, and green-house productions, for continually increasing costliness and taste in its public and private buildings, the praises of this town resound far and wide, and this is but the echo of the sentiments generally expressed by persons of taste and observation.

On a hot summer's day many years since, a seaman's preacher, after regaling himself in a beautiful grove behind the First Church, in the course of his sermon said, "I know not, my friends, how you can help being Christians, for you already live in paradise."

In the summer of 1860, when the Prince of Wales was on a visit to this country, among the many receptions given him was that of the city of Boston. The Prince alighted at the Cottage Farm Station in Longwood, where he was received by the city government. When he arrived at the station previous to seating himself in the carriage provided for him, he took a look at the surroundings of the town, and exclaimed in the writer's presence, "Of all the country he had passed through, none had reminded him so much of the scenery of Old England as that around here."

A modern poet, in the "Poet's Tribute" in 1840 contributes the following lines:

"I have revisited thy sylvan scenes,
Brookline! in this the summer of my day.
Again have reveled in thy lovely vales,
And feasted vision on thy glorious hills;
As once I reveled, feasted, in the spring:
Of careless, happy boyhood. And I've bowed
Again within thy temple, and have heard,
As though time's footfall had these years been hushed,
Thy patriarch pastor's lips, like dew, distill
Gentle instruction. And the same is he,
As to young love and reverence he was,
My cheerful friend, benevolent, and good.
The same thy hills and dells, those skies the same
Of rich October; such as only bend
Over New England; and the same gray walls,
Reared in New England's infancy, are those Which charmed imagination. Thou art fair
And beautiful as ever. Fancy deems
Thy sweet retreat excused the common doom

L. H. Everts, Engraver, Philadelphia.

RESIDENCE OF AMOS A. LAWRENCE,
BROOKLINE, MASS.

Caused by the fall, as if the Architect
Were willing, by such specimen, to show
What Eden, in its primal beauty, was."

"I think that no one will dispute that Brookline was for a long time pre-eminent in the little cordon of towns which have so long constituted the exquisite environs of Boston, embossing it with a rich and varied margin of lawn and lake and meadow and wooded hill-side, and encircling its old 'plain neck,' as William Wood called it, in his 'New England Prospect,' with an unfading wreath of bloom and verdure. I think no one will dispute her claim to have given the earliest celebrity to those environs for rural culture and beauty. Visitors from other countries, or from other States, carried home with them a deeper impression of the charms of this spot and its surroundings than of any other region in New England; and when the well-to-do Bostonian, before there were any railroads or steamers to whirl him off to Scotland or the Alps, or even to Newport, or Saratoga, or Niagara, for his summer vacation, desired to get a breath of pure air, or a glimpse of green fields, or a scent of fresh flowers, by an afternoon's drive, the horse's head was turned first, and last, and almost all the time, towards Brookline, by the way, perhaps, of Pine Bank¹ and Jamaica Pond. Nature had done much, but cultivation and taste had hardly done less, in producing this result. Nowhere did Horticulture find earlier or more successful votaries than here. Nowhere could there be sought and found more exquisite flowers or more delicious fruits, in season or out of season, in the open air or under glass. Nor was experimental Agriculture without its early and devoted followers here. Meantime there was an elegant and distinguished hospitality to be enjoyed in Brookline homes, then filled by men of large acquaintance and of larger hearts, to say nothing of accomplished and beautiful women, to complete the attraction.

"I do not forget that there were individual instances of the same sort of homes in Dorchester or Milton, in Roxbury or Jamaica Plain or Dedham, in Brighton or Watertown or Waltham. Still less do I forget that almost all these places have been catching up with Brookline—perhaps outstripping her—in all these particulars; and that both Horticulture and Agriculture may now look elsewhere for more than one of their highest illustrations and their most conspicuous disciples. I speak of half a century sometime closed, during a part of which, certainly, Brookline enjoyed a prestige for culture and beauty, which might almost have entitled her to that appellation of 'a Peculiar' for which her old inhabitants petitioned.

"Let me not be thought too much disposed to narrow the limits either of time or space within which the special graces and attractions of the town were to be witnessed. But I have sometimes thought that there was a little circle of our territory, from which had emanated, in successive years, as many good influences and examples, in the way of philanthropy and beneficence, of kindness and hospitality, and of every refined culture which pertains to rural enjoyment or improvement,—the culture of the field and of the garden, of the manners and of the human heart,—as from any spot of equal circumference on any part of the globe. Within or around that little circle have lived men of wide distinction in every walk of life, some of whose names are associated with the foremost places of the State or the Nation."—Hon. Robert C. Winthrop.

Longwood.—In the northeasterly portion of the town of Brookline (now thickly dotted with elegant villas and handsomely laid-out grounds, with walks and borders of grass) was a tract of land containing three hundred and fifty acres which once belonged to the estate of John Hull, the "mint-master," and afterwards came by inheritance to Chief Justice Samuel Sewall, who married a daughter of Mr. Hull. This was well known as "Sewall's Farm." These lands embraced the territory between Aspinwall's and Sharp's land, on the south, to Pleasant Street, on the north, and from Harvard Street, on the west, to Charles River.

Previous to the building of the mill-dam, in 1821, there was no public road leading to what is now called "Longwood" and "Cottage Farm." The name of Longwood was given to this section on account of the long line of beautiful woods on the rolling ridges of land which extended from Charles River nearly to Brookline Village. In 1850 Beacon Street was built through this land, which was chiefly owned by Messrs. Lawrence and Sears. Up to that date, in order to pass through this vicinity, it was necessary to enter where is now "Cottage Farm Bridge," going towards "Hall's Pond," at the end of Essex Street; then, taking down some bars, one could ride or drive over the cart-paths, which ran very much in the same direction as the roads do now, to the Aspinwall house, near St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The Sears land lies west of the Cottage Farm, and is beautifully situated and laid out. When the mill-dam was completed, several enterprising merchants of Boston, thinking that land in Brookline would be greatly enhanced in value, bought farms adjacent to the new avenue in Brookline and Roxbury containing about five hundred acres. Prominent among these purchasers were the Thorndikes, David Sears, and Ebenezer Francis, but, as the new thoroughfare was a toll turnpike, there was not that demand for land that there was in many other places. About thirty years since one of the owners, David Sears, began to improve his lands by laying out streets, setting out trees, and building houses on both sides of the river. In 1820, Ebenezer Francis purchased two farms which had previously belonged to the Sewall estate. One contained about sixty acres, known as "Cottage Farm," the other was designated "Maplewood Farm." "Cottage Farm" was purchased by Messrs. Amos A. Lawrence, Esq., and Dr. William R. Lawrence in 1850, who erected residences on the same, which they now occupy. The name of "Cottage" as applied to the farm above was derived from the fact that the estate now owned by Dr. William R. Lawrence had on it the "Sewall" house. It was a small old-fashioned gambrel-roof structure, built about 1689. It was torn down, together with two barns, to make room for a modern residence, in 1851. The ground from this farm to Brookline Village was mostly in grass.

¹ The residence of James Perkins.

There are several historical associations connected with this part of the town. At Cottage Farm Station, in the Revolution, was a very extensive fort, known as Sewall's Fort, which commanded Charles River. Col. Thomas Aspinwall was the commander of the fort. This was nearly quadrangular, and was stronger than many of the other forts of the American army, having six guns, and had accommodations for more troops than most any other during the siege of Boston. Col. Thomas Aspinwall had the command of the Sewall Fort during the Revolution. The building of the mill-dam, and afterwards the cutting through for the Boston and Albany Railroad, nearly destroyed these works, though a portion remained till 1852.

Col. Prescott's headquarters were at the Walcott house, now occupied by Charles H. Stearns. Walcott took sides with the colonies, while the Sewalls did not.

On the south side of Muddy River, near St. Mary's Street, was a three-gun battery, one of a line of batteries surrounding Boston in the siege. It was on the land now owned and occupied by Amos A. Lawrence, Esq., and where that elegant grove of trees now stand, that Col. Prescott's regiment had its headquarters, also a Rhode Island regiment, after the battle of Bunker Hill. Here they remained until the evacuation of Boston by the British, about nine months afterwards. On the land of Mr. Lawrence, when he purchased his estate, were the ovens used by the occupants of Sewall's Fort, which were long since removed. The well which supplied the army with water is at the entrance of the drive-way, on Dearborn's lumber wharf.

This and the other objects of Revolutionary interest were pointed out to the late Judge William Prescott (the father of William H. Prescott, the historian), by his father, the colonel, not many years after the war; and later, when Mr. Ebenezer Francis owned these farms, Judge Prescott went with him and pointed out these localities, and Mr. Francis (whose father was the first general officer killed in the Revolutionary war) took such an interest in these things that he went over the ground with Mr. Amos A. Lawrence, after he had sold the land to him and his brother in 1850.

On the grounds of Amos A. Lawrence stands an old and very large pear-tree, the date (1689) of which is inferred from the fact that it bears the button-pear which is mentioned by Judge Sewall in his diary as having been planted in his garden in Boston; besides, it bears evidence of great age. There were two of these trees in 1850, one of which was destroyed by a gale about twenty years later.

The Boylston Place.—One of the most interesting spots in Brookline is the Boylston place. On it stands a large, old-fashioned wooden house on Boylston Street,¹ opposite the westerly end of the reservoir, now owned by Henry Lee, Esq., which was known for many years as the old "Boylston" house, afterwards, for many years, as the "Hyslop" place. It is one of the most interesting historical places in the town.

Thomas Boylston came to this country from England, and settled in Watertown in 1635. His son Thomas, born in that town in 1644, became a surgeon. He took an active part in the Narragansett war. He married Mary Gardner, of Muddy River, in 1665, and settled upon the place which we are describing, and from that time forward the Boylstons were identified with Brookline. There were twelve children of this marriage. His son Peter inherited the homestead. One of the daughters (Susanna) married John Adams, of Braintree, and was the mother of John Adams, second President of the United States. The second child of Dr. Thomas Boylston was the eminent Dr. Zabdiel Boylston, born in 1680, who acquired wide celebrity, and at first a most unenviable one, by the introduction of inoculation for the smallpox. His memoir has been written, and is full of interest. The smallpox was making fearful ravages in Boston in 1721, when the Rev. Cotton Mather communicated to Dr. Boylston an account of the transactions of the Royal Society respecting inoculation as practiced in Turkey. Instead of allowing the disease to be taken in its natural way, the chances being that more than one-sixth of the patients would die, the matter was forestalled by preparing the system for it by medical treatment, and then scarifying the skin and applying the virus under a nutshell. Under inoculation it was seldom that a patient lost his life. The practice was not even begun in England when Cotton Mather suggested it to Dr. Boylston for experiment. He introduced the subject to the attention of other physicians in Boston and vicinity, and was met with violent opposition; the medical men, both in this country and in England, taking the ground that it was a crime, which came under the classification of poisoning, while the clergy preached against it, and wrote pamphlets, arguing that the smallpox was a judgment from God for the sins of the people, and that to try to check its sway would only "provoke him the more."

¹ This street was named in honor of the Boylston family.

"BOYLSTON PLACE,"
PROPERTY OF HENRY LEE,
BROOKLINE, MASS.

Geo. R. Johnson Del.

A sermon was preached by a Rev. Mr. Massey, in 1722, against "The Dangerous and Sinful Practice of Inoculation," from the text, "So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord and smote Job with sore boils from the sole of his foot until his crown," from whence he argued that the Devil was the first inoculator and Job his first patient. Some fifty years afterwards an epigram appeared in the Monthly Miscellany on this sage opinion of the Rev. Mr. Massey, as follows:

"We're told by one of the black robe
The Devil inoculated Job :
Suppose 'tis true, what he does tell,
Pray neighbors, did not Job do well?"

The inhabitants of Boston and vicinity became so excited that men patrolled the streets with halters in search of the doctor, threatening to hang him to the nearest tree. The doctor was secreted fourteen days in his own house in a hiding-place known only to his wife. During this time the house was repeatedly searched for him by day and by night without success. One evening a hand-grenade was dashed through the parlor window where his wife and children were sitting. Fortunately, the fuse was knocked off against a piece of furniture and the family escaped death.

The doctor could only visit his patients in the night and in disguise. Yet notwithstanding all this violence he was brave enough to persevere with his experiments, being sanguine of success. He inoculated his own child and two servants, and though they all had the disease mildly and recovered, the authorities of Boston summoned him before them to answer for his practice. He underwent repeated examinations, and received insults and threats. During the year, however, he inoculated two hundred and eighty-six persons of all ages, from infancy to old age, of whom only six died, while of five thousand seven hundred and fifty-nine who took it in the natural way during the same period, eight hundred and forty-four died. The success of the practice was established, but the opposition did not cease. During this time the doctor was in correspondence with the court physician in England, Sir Hans Sloane, and was invited to visit London. This invitation he accepted, and on his arrival he was treated with great attention and was made a "Fellow of the Royal Society," the first American thus honored. He remained in England a year and a half and then returned.

As he grew somewhat infirm with years, he retired from his profession, which had kept him much in Boston, and devoted himself to his farm in Brookline, which he bought of his brother Peter, and on which he built the present house. He was greatly interested and very successful in improving the breed of various domestic animals, especially horses, for which his farm became celebrated. He often broke the animals himself, being a fine horseman. His biographer speaks of him as having been seen in Boston, after he was eighty-four years of age, riding a fine colt he was breaking. He lived to see inoculation universally practiced. This custom prevailed till it was superseded by vaccination as practiced by Dr. Waterhouse in Cambridge, and Dr. Aspinwall in Brookline. He died at the age of eighty-seven, and was buried in Brookline Cemetery. His epitaph is said to be a just and appropriate one:

"Sacred to the memory of Zabdiel Boylston, Esq., and F.R.S., who first introduced the practice of inoculation into America. Through a life of extensive benevolence, he was always faithful to his word, just in his dealings, affable in his manners, and after a long sickness, in which he was exemplary for his patience and resignation to his Maker, he quitted this mortal life in a just expectation of a happy immortality, March 1st, 1766."

It is said that Dr. Boylston in his will bequeathed his house and farm to the town as a home for the poor on certain conditions, to which one of his relatives was expected to accede, but this not being complied with, the town missed the donation.

From Dudley Boylston, a brother of the doctor, who married Susanna Gardner, descended the first wife of the late Deacon Joshua C. Clark. Her daughters are the last of this old family in Brookline. From Thomas, another brother, descended Thomas, who died in London, a wealthy merchant, who made bequests to the city of Boston. His sister, Mary, married a Hallowell. One of her sons became an admiral (Sir Benjamin Hallowell) of the British navy. Another of her sons, preferring the family name of his mother to that of his father, changed his name to Ward Nicholas Boylston. He became a merchant of London, acquired great wealth, and was distinguished for his liberality. He returned to his native place and lived for several years in Roxbury, and afterwards in Princeton.

He gave large bequests to many charitable enterprises, and munificent donations to Harvard College and the Boylston Medical Society and Library.

Thomas Boylston, the son of another brother, settled in School Street, Boston, and was identified with Brattle Street Church. He endowed a professorship at Harvard College. He dictated his executors to purchase the homestead of his ancestors in Brookline and convey the same to the First Church in this town, on condition that the church officers would allow his nephew, Joshua Boylston, to live upon the place, for which he should pay a rent of ten pounds annually to the church. The estate was to be entailed in the male line from this heir in the same way from generation to generation, and failing the heir who should have the right to live upon it, it should go to the church. But the property was in the hands of Mr. William Hyslop, who had bought it of the doctor's heirs, and the Brookline Church never received the intended bequest, neither did Joshua Boylston ever have a male heir, and with him the family name became extinct in Brookline.

Mr. William Hyslop, the purchaser of the Boylston house, was a native of Scotland. He came to this country in his youth, and began business as a peddler of dry goods, which he carried from house to house in a pack upon his back. He was very successful in this humble beginning, and having invested money in goods at a fortunate time and way, he was able to enter the dry-goods trade still more extensively, and became very wealthy.

He had a son of the same name, the one mentioned as having lived for some years in the house now occupied by Mr. Chapin, a son David, and one daughter, Elizabeth, who became the wife of Governor Increase Sumner.

There was a Scotch Presbyterian clergyman with whom Mr. Hyslop was acquainted in the old country, who emigrated to Massachusetts with twenty or more of his parishioners, and settled in Worcester. His name was Abererombie. After a residence for some time in Worcester, Mr. Abererombie removed with his people to a more congenial situation on the Pelham hills. When this good man could number eleven "olive plants round about his table," he was suddenly left a widower. The youngest had been named Mehitable, for Mrs. Hyslop, and when the little girl was six years of age Mr. Hyslop adopted her as his own, and she remained in his family till her marriage. Mr. Hyslop's business called him occasionally to Europe, and on his return at one time he brought with him a slab, or pier table, which was supported by a pair of large spread-eagles, the claws of which each clasped a round ball. It was placed between the parlor windows. This was a highly ornamental piece of furniture for those days, and as such was much admired and prized. When the Revolutionary war broke out, Mr. Hyslop was in Europe, and the contingencies of the war were such that he could not return till it was over without imperiling his life. While the British troops occupied Boston a great alarm was one day created in the upper part of Brookline by a man, who rode up the old road furiously on horseback, telling all whom he met that the British troops were at the church green. This was at the green in front of the church on Roxbury Hill, but the people of the upper part of this town naturally enough supposed that the Brookline church green was meant, and great was the terror that ensued. The first impulse was to flee for safety, the second to carry off something valuable, but like distracted people at a fire, who throw mirrors out of the windows and carry mattresses carefully downstairs, they seized upon anything but what the British would have taken had they come.

The table with the spread-eagles was hurriedly wrenched from the wall and laboriously carried up into the woods, which then covered the whole hill back of the house, and there buried by the servants. The little adopted daughter was not to be outdone by the rest of the family, and she secured a new pair of red bellows which hung beside the fireplace, and never let them go during the flight and the temporary absence.

Colonial troops were afterwards quartered in the house, and the family took refuge in Medfield from the fortunes of war. When a return was safe and the buried eagles were dug up for restoration to their proper place, one was broken. It was mended and the table replaced, being fastened to the wall with nails instead of screws, thus making the thing legally a part of the house, and not a movable article. Not many years ago the eagles were claimed by Governor Sumner's descendants as a part of their inheritance, but it was shown that they were a part of the house, and the demand was not allowed. They remained there at the last accounts, and are an appropriate adornment for the ancient and curious house. Mr. Hyslop returned after the war was over, and died in 1796, aged eighty-five years.

His son David inherited the homestead. This singular man is well remembered by many persons now living. He was lame, of uncouth figure, and such excessive homeliness of countenance as is seldom seen, amounting almost to hideousness. He also had an impediment in his speech, or rather never learned to speak plainly, always articulating his words like a little child, and the order of his mind being below the average, he never acquired much education. But he inherited great wealth, and this consideration in the eyes of many counterbalanced all his defects.

"O what a world of vile, ill-favored faults

Look handsome in three hundred pounds a year."

He found a wife notwithstanding his personal peculiarities, was left a widower, and when quite advanced in years married a lovely young girl of great personal beauty, who was sacrificed to her father's ambition for wealth. Mr. Hyslop was not a bad man, however, but his singularities were a source of annoyance or amusement to all with whom he had any dealings. He had a strange aversion to music of all kinds, and especially to the instruments used at church and the anthems so much practiced in those times, and which he always called "tantrums." He would not attend church on Thanksgiving-days, on account of the "tantrums" which formed a prominent part of the service. Soon after the old gentleman brought his young bride to Brookline a bassoon was added to the orchestra at church by Capt. Robert Davis, who played well. Mrs. Hyslop lingered one Sunday after service to hear the choir practice a little, while her husband went out for his horse. As soon as he was ready, however, he made his appearance at the church door, and beckoning to his wife, he called out loudly in his broken speech, "Jane! come! come along! Don't 'tay there to hear the bagpipe."

It was his custom to make a long prayer every morning before breakfast, at which every member of the household was requested to be present. He always prayed with his eyes open, and the consequence was that material things and spiritual were apt to get decidedly mixed. On one occasion, while thus praying, he happened to see through the open door into the kitchen a monkey which he kept making free with the sausages which had been set frying before the morning worship began. Pausing in the prayer, he interpolated a direction to "Hetty" that the sausages should be protected, and went on with his prayer without the slightest perception of anything ludicrous in the situation. His remark must have had a peculiar effect on those who had not observed the performance in the kitchen.

In the third story of the house at the southwesterly corner was a small room, which was dark and only accessible through another room, and not easily noticed. (Perhaps this was where Dr. Boylston was secreted from his enemies.)

This room Mr. Hyslop called his "iron 'tudy," and it was the only study he ever made use of. In this he hoarded up all the old iron he could collect on the premises, and quantities of other things useful and useless. The key he always carried with him. Articles of daily domestic use would disappear. Inquiries and search would be of no avail. After weeks or months perhaps, the proposal often before made, that he should look in his "iron 'tudy" for the missing article, would result in the restoration of it, as composedly returned as if no inconvenience had arisen from its absence.

Anything on the place, from a silver spoon to a bread-trough, a rake or a halter, would be liable to spend a season in the "iron 'tudy." His peculiar ideas were also evinced in the management of his fruit. The place abounded in choice fruit, especially peaches, plums, and cherries. These he could not use, would not sell, and did not give away. Bushels upon bushels of the finest fruit lay and perished under the trees every year.

There were two daughters and one son by this marriage, and both the former died in childhood. The son, who was a fine lad, lived till within a few days of his twenty-first birthday.

While John Adams was President of the United States he came to Brookline, and was the guest of Hon. Jonathan Mason, who lived on what is now Col. Lyman's place. While there he spoke of the last time he had passed along that road as riding on horseback carrying his mother on a pillion behind him.

He never lost his interest in this home of his ancestors, and in 1821, when he was very aged and so infirm that he was unable to walk without assistance, he expressed a wish to visit once more the old place where his mother was born, and where his grandparents had lived and died.

Accordingly, Mr. Hyslop made a dinner-party, and invited the venerable ex-President, Governor Brooks, Gen. Sumner, and other distinguished guests. It was a grand affair, and passed off with great éclat, but there was something pathetic in the sight of the almost helpless old man, supported by his grandson, going feebly about the place and taking a last look of scenes once so familiar to his boyhood.

The following letter from the elder John Adams, President of the United States, to his cousin gives a fine description of the surroundings of the old mansion on the occasion of his visit:

"MONTEZILLO, September 16th, 1820.

"MY DEAR COUSIN BOYLSTON:

"O that I had the talent at description of a Homer, a Milton, or a Walter Scott. I would give you a picture of all that I have visited, with more pleasure than I should Mount Irea or Montecello.

"Mr. David Hyslop has been importuning me for seven years to dine with him in Brookline. I have always declined till last Wednesday; when taking my grandson George Washington Adams, for my guide and aide de camp, I went to visit the original habitation of the Boylstons—where my mother was born, and where she carried me frequently in my infancy, and where I used to sport among the fine cherries and Peaches and Plums and Pears as well as among the flowers and roses on that fertile spot or garden. It is more than seventy years since I set my feet upon that hill. Indeed my mother seemed to have an aversion to visiting or thinking of it after her father sold it to his brother Dr. Zebdial Boylston, and removed into Boston. There are ancient trees Elms and Button-woods some of which I seem to remember; but I have inherited the feelings of my mother.

The weather was very fine and I know not that I ever passed a pleasanter day; I ascended the Hill which is exuberantly fertile to the very top where there is a handsome summer house to the roof of which I mounted where are convenient seats and sufficient railing from whence your Wachusett is plainly seen; and even your own mansion House was visible through a prospect glass, at least George imagined he descried it. On that elevation my imagination was exalted almost to extasy, a prospect nearly as vast as that from Wachusett opened all around me. Land and sea conspired together to produce an assemblage of beauties. The grand city of Boston and the Town of Charlestown; The Castle the Islands, the Rivers the Ponds of Water, the Orchards and the Groves were scattered in such profusion over this great scene that I was lost in admiration of its variety. And to add to its sublimity in my estimation Whites Hill was full in view, the seat of my Great Grandfather and the Birth place of my Grandmother; All these lands have passed into the hands of other families and other names. I said to Mr. Hyslop, 'If I was worth money enough on the face of the whole earth I would buy it of you.' Your uncle Nicholas was well born, he had a soul bien née, but Thomas had not; otherwise he would certainly have purchased it and given it to you. We had a very agreeable Company at dinner; very good cheer and very pleasant sociability. But there I took my final farewell of Boylston and Whites Hill. My Grandfather and Grandmother were desirous that my Father should purchase it when it was sold to Dr. Boylston, and my mother was very desirous that he would. But my Father was a very cautious man—had a great aversion to being in debt, and although my Grandfather was willing to take his bond for the purchase, and wanted only the interest of the money, my Father was afraid he should not be able to accomplish and fulfil so large an engagement. And now I fear the estate has departed from the name and the blood forever, unless you will purchase it, and give it to your son or grandson.

"Thus much for family vanity and family mortification—Now for Politics and Legislation. I hope you will attend the Convention and come up to Montezillo and talk with me and I with you about Plato and Solon and Lyeurgus. I shall rejoice to see the name of Boylston among the members of that Convention, as that alone will be sufficient to preserve it.

"George who bears his honours meekly, is now humbly employed in writing this letter for "Your affectionate Cousin,

(Signed)

"JOHN ADAMS."

Mr. Hyslop died in 1822 at the age of sixty-seven, and thus ended the Hyslop name.

His widow married again, her second husband being Mr. John Hayden. There were no children. She survived her husband, and at her death the Hyslop wealth, which comprised much real estate in Roxbury and Chelsea, as well as the place in Brookline, went to the heirs of Elizabeth Hyslop, and by them the homestead was sold to Henry Lee, Esq.

War of 1812.—During the war of 1812, or the second war with Great Britain, Brookline did her part in furnishing her proportion of men for active service. A company was sent from this town, of which the following is a muster roll:

Mens names who were detached, Sept. 18, 1814, by order of Col Joseph Dudley, for the defence of the State.

Lieutenant, Robert S. Davis; Ensign, Thomas Griggs; Sergeant, Daniel Pierce; Fifer, Thomas Chubbuck.

Privates.

David Smith.
Thomas Farnsworth.
Charles Stearns, Jr.
Joshua Loring.
Joseph Goddard.
James Holden.
James Whidney.
Edward Hall.
Artemas Fairbanks.
Charles Leavitt.
Nathaniel Talbot.
William Atwood.
William M. Tennant.

John Graves.
George Morse.
Samuel Townsend.
Jonathan S. Ayres.
Samuel Williams.
Amasa Jackson.
William Otis.
John Warren.
Joseph Whitney.
John Vose.
David Colby.
Eli Hunter.
George Richardson.

This company was located at Fort Independence. Timothy Corey was captain of this company. There was but little to do except guard duty, and nothing of special interest to mention in connection with their duties. There were others enlisted in the government service at this time from this town of which we have no data. There is one, however, worthy of special notice, who did valiant service at Lake Erie and lost an arm. The particulars can be better described in the following letter, showing the patriotism of our late esteemed fellow-townsmen, Col. Thomas Aspinwall:

"WILLIAMSVILLE, N. Y.,

"11 MILES FROM BUFF^o,

"Oct. 1, 1814.

"MY DEAR FATHER,—

"You must excuse my silence since I have been on this frontier. I arrived the last of July, and immediately repaired to Fort Erie, and assumed the command of Gen^l Scott's brigade, which I continued to command until a few weeks since, when Gen^l Miller was placed in command of it. I superintended its operations on the 15 Aug., when the fort was stormed, and had the pleasure of seeing the whole of it perform its duty most gallantly, and essentially contribute to the glorious result of that contest, which, with a loss of about 80 in killed, wounded, and missing on our part, diminished the force of the enemy about 1300 men. Such was the consequence of their madness in presuming on our ignorance of the art of war. From the 5th of August our Camp was bombarded and cannonaded incessantly. On the 13th & 14th they threw about 800 or 1000 shot and shells upon us each day, and, having succeeded in exploding a small and almost empty magazine, on the evening of the 14th were induced to attack in four columns next morning at 2. The night was wet and dark, and the soil, being of clay, made it difficult for us to keep up to our new works. Three of their columns only came near us, and two of those were engaged by my brigade and the artillery of the adjacent works. This cannonade and bombardment was continued until the 17 Sept., so as to keep us all continually employed in labor. We were also harassed by continued alarms at night, so that for six weeks I seldom got more than 3 or four hours' daily repose, and never undressed or even pulled off my boots except to wash myself and change my clothes. My tent was often struck by fragments of shells and by musket-balls from their shrapnells, and the tents almost in a range with mine and their batteries often perforated by cannon-balls, that I thought myself preserved only by a special protection. I had during this period hardly time to write a line to Louisa, and, had her health been firm, I should not have done that. The enemy continued to receive reinforcements, and to strengthen and multiply their batteries, until they had four ready to play on us. The Gen^l had learned that their defences were open on their right flank, although they supposed a swampy, perplexed wood was a sure protection against us on that flank. He caused to be cut thro' part of the wood a road communicating with an old concealed overgrown cross road leading toward the right and rear of their batteries. He had ascertained that their main camp was two miles back, and the path from it narrow, obstructed, and muddy, so that they could not send in season to support the light brigade of 1500, that was stationed at the batteries, in case it was suddenly attacked. About 1500 of our militia, with the riflemen, volunteers, and 23 Reg^t, were in the forenoon of the 17th cautiously pushed on through the new road, and Miller's brigade (late Scott's), of which my Reg^t composed the van, was, unperceived by the enemy, introduced into a deep ravine between the fort and the front of their lines, ready to storm their batteries the moment the signal announced our troops to have gained their rear. The Gen^l at last, just as a heavy shower of rain had ceased, ordered us to march. We started immediately, and passed through the wood, driving in their sharp shooters, sentries, and guards, until I had arrived within 20 paces of their breastworks, where, as I was passing along the front of the first platoon to give it a concerted direction to the right, I received a musket-shot above the elbow of the left arm, which completely carried away about an inch and a half of the bone. I, of course, had no further part in the active duty of that day, which terminated in our complete success, except as to one of their four batteries. Their cannon, mortars, and howitzers were spiked, the carriages cut to pieces, their large magazine, containing upward of a 1000 24-lb. cartridges and several barrels of powder, destroyed entirely, excepting 500 cartridges let off. They lost, according to the repeated accounts of several of their soldiers, who deserted at different periods since the action, 1182 men, of whom we have 385, including 12 officers, 2 of whom are majors, and should have had upwards of 500 had not several bodies of prisoners been entrusted to militia officers, who followed, contrary to express directions, the only route they knew,—the circuitous new road by which they came,—and were taken with their prisoners by the enemy. The surprise would have been complete had not a drunken Lieut., late of the regular army, with a body of militia, raised an Indian yell three minutes before he got in sight of the enemy. This gave them notice to prepare, and corrected their mistake in supposing our men, whom they had partially seen, to be the English coming to relieve them in the tour of duties at the batteries. The conflict was the hardest, and the fight, during the time it lasted, the most furious and desperate, that has occurred this war. The soldiers climbed, guns in hand, over the tops of the block-houses, bayonetting all that opposed them, and rushed in half platoons into redoubts defended by companies. Two soldiers attacked a block-house, which, to their surprise, they found defended by a german major and his party. The Major's party rose, ordered them to surrender, and the Major told a soldier to take them to the rear, to which at that moment he turned his head, and discovered there an advancing party of our men. 'Gentlemen,' said he, in broken English, to the two soldiers, 'I surrender. Your are at libertee, & I am your prisoner,' and with the greatest good humor gave up his sword, and ordered his party to lay down their arms. So much terrified and astonished at our boldness were the English that it is reported by deserters that Gen^l De Watteville exclaimed to Gen^l Drummond that they were surrounded and must surrender. In two days after the battle not an Englishman was near us. They raised the siege, and precipitately decamped in the night, just at our tatio. We sent out some parties to harass them, and compelled them to burn a magazine of stores some distance down the Niagara river, and have since taken a dragoon piequet of 8 or 10 men.

"I shall be able to begin to travel home slowly in about 10 days, and shall, with the blessing of God, soon see you all. After being wounded I walked back to my tent, and in about an hour had only one arm, a circumstance which does not afflict me, my dear father, and must not you. But let us both thank God that he has so formed us that you have lived almost all your life happy & respectable, notwithstanding the loss of an eye, and I may spend the remainder of my life in the same manner with the loss of a limb, of all the most conveniently spared. I have been so blest hitherto that it would be the deepest sin to murmur against this dispensation of Providence. My bodily pain has been what you have always known to be usual in such cases, and no more. The Dr. Lovell says it will make a very good stump. Give my love, my dear father, to all my friends, brothers and sisters, and believe me still your affectionate son.

THOMAS.

"I write with some difficulty because the paper moves under my pen, as I have no left hand to steady it."

"Punch Bowl" Tavern.—The changes in the appearance of our town, especially in the thickly settled portions of it, have been so great within a few years past as almost to perplex former residents who return to it, and as many inhabitants now living here can remember still greater changes, it has been suggested that some description of the town in the earlier part of the present century, and some account of the progress of its subsequent changes, might be interesting to many of the present residents.

On the 26th of the Eighth month, 1640, a bridge was ordered to be built at Muddy River. "Mr. Colbourne, our brother Elliott, and our brother Peter Oliver were appointed to See the Same donne." This was probably the first highway leading into this section of country and the first road to Boston. From that time to the time of building the mill-dam the present Washington Street was the only road to Boston in this direction, the heavy teaming from the country towns west of us came through Brookline. There was an immense amount of travel of this kind, as there were no railroads then in existence, and thus the ancient "Punch Bowl" Tavern was a necessity of the times; here all the teams stopped for "refreshment for man and beast," and this old building as a nucleus gathered around itself the village which took its name. Even to this day this place is remembered by old men in New Hampshire, Vermont, and the back towns of this State as "the Punch Bowl Village."

The original house, built long before the war of the Revolution, was a two-story hipped-roof house, to which, as increasing patronage made it necessary, the proprietor made additions from time to time, by purchasing old houses in Boston and vicinity and removing them hither. The result was in the aggregate a curious medley of old rooms of all sorts and sizes, connected together in a nondescript manner, and presenting an architectural style which, if we might apply a geological term to it, we should call a conglomerate.

This old tavern and its outbuildings occupied all the space on the street, from the brick blacksmith-shop near the corner of Pearl Street to the provision-store of Brown Brothers. It was of a yellowish color, and had a seat running along the front under an overhanging porch, or rather projection of a part of the second story, where loungers congregated to discuss the news of the day. In front of it and near each end was a large elm-tree; under the westerly one stood a pump. This tree and pump remained until within a few years, the other was long ago destroyed. The ancient sign, suspended from a high, red post, gave a name to the tavern and the village, and swung its hospitable invitation creaking in the wind for probably nearly a hundred years. The design was a huge bowl and ladle overhung by a lemon-tree, resplendent with fruit, some of which lay around the bowl, as if fallen from the tree.

Here the selectmen of the town used to have an annual supper, and on one of these occasions the old building came near being destroyed by fire. They had sat round the table smoking, after the repast, and probably dropped fire upon the table-cloth, which was gathered up and thrust into a closet by a servant. Soon after retiring the family were wakened by the smell of smoke, and flames arising from the closet burst through to the chamber overhead, where the landlord's children slept. The frightened children rushed out in their night-clothes to the neighbors' houses; the night was bitterly cold, and the ground covered with ice, and but for the landlord's promptness and presence of mind the whole establishment would have been speedily reduced to ashes. Without stopping to put on a single garment, just as he sprang from his bed, he gave the alarm and seized a bucket of swill, which he dashed upon the burning mass in the closet, closed the doors carefully after him, and brought water from the pump, directed the labor of others who came with their buckets, and put the fire out and saved the building, though the flames actually reached the attic. There was at that time an engine in the village, kept in a house which stood in what was the front yard of the Oliver Whyte estate. It was owned by Brookline and Roxbury in common, as the south side of the street from Village Lane to the creek below Pond Avenue was then a part of Roxbury. The extent of the patronage of the old "Punch Bowl" may be roughly estimated from the fact that it was common for a row of teams to occupy the side of the street above and below the tavern, from what is now Harrison place, to the gas-works, in a continuous line, while the men and horses were being fed and rested.

The mill-dam, the bridges, and the opening of the Worcester Railroad at last took all the business away from the old "Punch Bowl." It was bought by Mr. Isaac Thayer about 1830 and torn down. Much of the material was of solid oak, and was used in building nine houses which he erected on the site of the old buildings.

The old house owned by the Gas Company, situated on the corner of Brookline Avenue and Washington Street, where the Gas Company's office now stands, was kept as a tavern for several years with the sign of the "Punch Bowl," but it had little except local patronage, and that of the lowest sort, and was finally given up.

Police Court.—Under the old law, previous to 1857, justices of the peace had jurisdiction of criminal cases. About that time there was a law for the designation of a certain number of persons out of the justices of each county as trial justices for the trial of criminal cases.

As justices of the peace, William Aspinwall and Artemas Newell were the principal ones. Those who have held the appointment of trial justices were William Aspinwall, Edwin Grover, Charles E. Abbott, William B. Towne, Bradford Kingman, and Charles H. Drew.

In May, 1882, the General Court authorized a Police Court to be established in Brookline, for civil and criminal business. The first court held was in a room at the police station. Soon after this the county of Norfolk fitted apartments for the use of the court, consisting of a commodious court-room and a room for the justices, containing a library, and having connection with the police department, so that the facilities of doing business are now as complete as any to be found in the county. The new apartments were used for the first time Sept. 1, 1882. The justices are Charles H. Drew, justice; Charles F. Perkins and Albert L. Lincoln, special justices; appointed in May, 1882.

Masonic.—Beth-Horan Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons. Although many brethren of the Masonic order affiliated with the lodges in Boston and Roxbury, and were residents of Brookline previous to 1870, it was not till that year that a lodge was established here. The following persons petitioned for a charter: William Aspinwall, George F. Homer, Benjamin F. Baker, James W. Edgerly, R. G. F. Candage, Benjamin B. Davis, Charles K. Kirby, Nathaniel C. Towle, George M. Towle, Charles

O. Foster, Cyrus W. Ruggles, William K. Melcher, Charles H. Drew, John W. Candler, Charles W. Cotting, and George J. Fisher. The first Master was George F. Homer. The name of the lodge was adopted in commemoration of the cities of Beth-Horan rebuilt by King Solomon. The first lodge-room was in Lyceum Hall building, but after a few years that was found inadequate, and the lodge fitted up commodious apartments in the brick block at the corner of Harvard and School Streets, which it still occupies. This lodge is in a prosperous condition, and its Masters have been as follows: George F. Homer, Benjamin F. Baker, James W. Edgerly, R. G. F. Candage, John Emory Hoar, and Dr. Thomas W. Clement.

The Grand Army of the Republic have an organization in this town under the name of Charles L. Chandler¹ Post, No. 143. The post was organized, the date of the charter was Jan. 24, 1871. The following are the charter members: George P. Richardson, Milton J. Stone, James Sinclair, Willard Y. Gross, George W. Funk, Leo Bertsch, Bradford P. Cook, Arthur Kemp, John McAndrews, Francis H. McIntosh, John P. Loftus, Horace N. Fisher, William Bowes, W. W. O'Connell, Fergus B. Turner, Samuel D. Edwards.

Royal Arcanum.—Sagamore Council, No. 181, was organized in Brookline, Mass., Oct. 19, 1878. Charter members,—R. G. F. Candage, Benjamin F. Baker, David B. Van Slyek, M.D., Thomas T. Robinson, George E. Everett, T. W. Clements, James W. Edgerly, Charles A. Bowditch, Jos. G. Stearns, A. G. Sanborn, David Bentley, George F. Brown, Ira B. Cushing, M.D., George W. Stearns, Fergus B. Turner, Francis H. Bacou, Charles B. Farnum, J. H. Boody, William S. Cutter.

Knights of Honor.—Brookline Lodge, No. 459, instituted Feb. 8, 1877. Charter members,—C. H. Hackett, R. K. Sawyer, W. S. Brown, James Harrison, R. D. Mills, E. S. Milliken, G. T. Defrees, A. E. James, E. W. Packard, W. M. Bellows, Solomon Burt, W. H. M. Bellows. The officers for 1884 are as follows: P. D., J. H. Allen; D., M. F. Kenrick; V. D., J. F. Hutchins; A. D., C. H. Wilson; Chapl., W. M. Bellows; Rep., E. W. Packard; Fin. Rep., A. E. Kenrick; Treas., E. N. Gutterson; G., A. E. James; Guard, E. G. Brooks; Sent., L. S. Lyon.

American Legion of Honor.—Corey Hill Council, No. 33. Charter members,—Levi Doran, Alfred Kenrick, Jr., William S. Brown, Alfred B. Tyrell, J. H. Boody, George L. Newcomb, A. McCullough, Andrew Noland, Thomas T. Robinson, F. M. Bond, Charles E. Rogers, E. W. Packard, A. G. Sanborn, E. N. Gutterson, C. W. Morse, and David B. Van Slyek.

Sons of Temperance.—Pierce Division, No. 86. Instituted March 27, 1861; charter surrendered in 1884.

Brookline Savings-Bank (incorporated Feb. 24, 1871).—The first regular meeting of this institution was held on the 20th of April, 1871, for organization. Amos A. Lawrence, president; Charles U. Cotting, Alanson W. Beard, and Edward Atkinson, vice-presidents; William A. Wellman, George F. Fabyan, Alfred Kenrick, Jr., Martin Kingman, Austin W. Benton, Charles H. Stearns, Phillip Duffy, William I. Bowditch, Charles D. Head, John W. Candler, Moses Williams, Jr., trustees. The business commenced in the building owned by John Gibbs, corner of Washington and School Streets. It is now in "Colonnade Block," on Washington Street. The present officers are William H. Lincoln, president; William E. Lincoln, secretary and treasurer.

The Press of Brookline.—Bradford Kingman was the pioneer in the newspaper enterprise in Brookline. His paper was entitled the Brookline Transcript. The first number was dated Oct. 15, 1870, and ended with May 31, 1873. The file of this paper contains a great number of historical articles, under the titles of "Recollections of Brookline," "Historical Sketches," and "Brookline as it was." Those under the last title numbered nearly one hundred, which were the basis of a work afterwards published in a volume and sold by subscription entitled "Historical Sketches of Brookline."

The next attempt to sustain a paper was July 4, 1873, when the Independent was started. This was published by a club having a special object, and run but a short time. Dr. N. C. Towle was a manager.

The Brookline Chronicle commenced May 9, 1874, by W. H. Hutcheson. Wing & Arthur purchased the same July 10, 1875. Arthur sold to Murray M. Wing, Nov. 4, 1876. Wing sold to Charles M. Vincent, Jan. 27, 1877.

Feb. 1, 1878, Alexander S. Arthur purchased the paper, and published it till July 1, 1879, when Charles A. W. Spencer became a partner, under the firm-name of Arthur & Spencer, who continued together until May 14, 1881, when Mr. Spencer purchased Mr. Arthur's interest, and became sole proprietor to Jan. 1, 1883. At that time Eliot F. Soule was admitted partner, who continued to Nov. 1, 1883. Mr. Spencer has since that date been editor and proprietor.

On the 1st day of January, 1881, the paper was changed to a quarto and the word Brookline left out of the title. It is a fine-looking and well-patronized paper. Mr. Spencer has a completely furnished printing-office for publishing and printing his paper, as well as for book and job printing.

¹ This post was named in honor of one of Brookline's earliest patriots in the Rebellion of 1861.

Libraries.—In the year 1825 a few individuals were associated together for the purpose of procuring a library of books for mutual improvement. They were organized with Rev. Dr. John Pierce as president; Deacon Otis Withington, secretary; Oliver Whyte, librarian; and Deacon John Robinson, treasurer, with a board of trustees. Rules and regulations were adopted Dec. 27, 1825. The terms were five dollars per year the first two years, and two dollars per year after that time. The library was kept in the house of the librarian, and was open for delivery of books on the first and third Saturdays of each month, from three to four o'clock P.M. The books were at one time kept in the shoe-store of James Leeds, nearly opposite to the present hook-and-ladder house on Washington Street.

In 1827 a printed catalogue was issued for the use of members, which contained twelve pages of matter, and the titles of between two hundred and fifty and three hundred volumes. This may be said to have been the first library in the town.

In 1865 there was a collection of works on agriculture in the town, owned by about eighty subscribers, which had been deposited with the town library in the original apartments at the town hall. There were one hundred and seventy-three volumes in an elegant black-walnut case, and the association was known as the Brookline Agricultural Library. During the year above named the proprietors presented the case and contents, as above stated, to the town, and the same forms a portion of the agricultural department in the Public Library.

Brookline is believed to have been the first town in the commonwealth to avail itself of the general statute authorizing cities and towns to raise and appropriate money for founding and maintaining public libraries. At the annual town-meeting, held March 16, 1857, the subject was introduced under an article in the warrant, and referred to a committee, consisting of Edward A. Dana, Abijah W. Goddard, Samuel Philbrick, George F. Homer, and Charles Follen. This committee reported at the adjourned town-meeting, March 30, 1857, and upon their recommendation the town promptly voted to establish a public library, and appropriated for its foundation and commencement the sum of nine hundred and thirty-four dollars, being the rate of twenty-five cents per ratable poll. These sums were all that could be legally raised by taxation for this purpose. A suitable place was provided, and arrangements were made so that the Public Library was opened for the delivery of books to the citizens of the town Dec. 2, 1857, in a single room in the town hall, which was afterwards increased to four rooms; but having outgrown their limits, measures were taken to provide better accommodations, which resulted in the erection of the present building devoted to library uses in 1867.

Land was purchased of Messrs. Henry Collins, Charles Chase, and John Gibbs on Washington Street. The entire lot, containing sixty-five thousand feet, was graded, fenced, and provided with avenues and suitable walks, making it very attractive. The building was completed in 1869, and, with the furniture and furnishing, cost about forty-five thousand dollars. The architect was Louis Weissbein, Esq., of Boston, and the contractors for the work were as follows: mason-work was done by Horace James; carpenter-work, by Nathaniel Lyford; freestone trimmings, etc., by E. F. Meany; granite, by Frederick & Field; cellar, by James Driscoll; painting, by Benjamin F. Baker; gas-fixtures, by M. W. Pierce & Co.; heating apparatus and tinning, by Kenrick Brothers.

The library hall has a capacity for fifty thousand volumes, a commodious reading-room, librarian's room, trustees' hall, committee-room, and six other rooms, with accommodations for all the working departments of a successful public library for the present and for a long time to come. These rooms were opened to the public Oct. 13, 1869, and the delivery of books commenced on the 18th of the same month.

From that date to the present the library has been a marked success. The first librarian was Mr. John Emory Hoar, who took a great interest in the institution from the commencement. Since the 1st of December, 1871, the library has been under the charge of Miss Mary A. Bean, who brought to the office of librarian qualifications which it is the lot of but a few to possess, in the thorough knowledge of books and literature generally and an extensive experience in the cataloguing of books, which is now an art requiring hard study, experience, and talent to insure success. Under the supervision of Miss Bean and her two assistants, the Misses Wood and Lanman, the library bids fair to be among the leading institutions of its size in the country.

As the growth of the library has been somewhat rapid, increasing at the rate of one thousand volumes or more per year, we append a table showing the number of volumes and the circulation from its commencement to the present time.

Table showing Statistics of Growth and Circulation, from Dec. 2, 1857, to Feb. 1, 1884.

Report.	Year.	No. of Vols.	Circulation.
Established	1857	1,000
1st	1858	2,138	2,000
2d	1859	2,856	10,108
3d	1860	4,118	11,000*
4th	1861	5,751	11,619
5th	1862	5,360	14,022
6th	1863	6,239	15,005
7th	1864	6,817	17,575
8th	1865	7,520	19,206
9th	1866	8,502	19,793
10th	1867	9,026	19,103
11th	1868	9,687	18,011
12th	1869	10,500	18,144
13th	1870	12,000	22,381
14th	1871	13,552	33,393
15th	1872	14,448	17,389†
16th	1873	15,593	37,105
17th	1874	16,669	50,120
18th	1875	17,893	37,949‡
19th	1876	19,323	42,427
20th	1877	20,282	45,619
21st	1878	21,416	50,427
22d	1879	22,925	44,736¼
23d	1880	24,018	50,435
24th	1881	25,181	44,585
25th	1882	26,158	45,565
26th	1883	27,089	48,852
27th	1884	28,062	50,608

* Librarian's report says, "A little less than 11,000 vols. have been delivered."

† Library closed several months in summer for rearrangement. The above figures date from the reopening, Sept. 11, 1872.

‡ Change in town by-laws, requiring reports to be returned Feb. 15, cut short the library year.

¼ Library closed two months for examination and cleaning of books.

While the success has been so marked in the past, and the influence that has gone out from the establishment of such an institution has been so great, the citizens of the town are to be congratulated upon the acquisition of such high privileges as they now enjoy.

In this connection we cannot fail to notice and duly appreciate the great liberality that has been shown towards the library enterprise from its beginning. The reports and records show that there has never been a year in its history when books and pamphlets have not been generously and freely bestowed.

The following gifts of money have been given to the library, viz.:

John S. Wright, in June, 1861, $100.

James M. Howe, in February, 1863, $100.

Mrs. Samuel Philbrick, May, 1864, $1000.

Abijah W. Goddard, July, 1869, $100.

John L. Gardner, January, 1871, $10,000.

John L. Gardner, November, 1873, $1000.

The will of Martin L. Hall gives "to the town of Brookline five thousand dollars for the benefit of the town library, to be placed on interest, and such interest forever applied to the increase of said library by the purchase of books of standard value."

Numerous smaller sums of money, varying from ten to fifty dollars, amounting to several hundred dollars, were contributed during the early years of the library.

One of the leading features in the library, and a valuable portion, is the reading-room, where may be found magazines and periodicals and many newspapers readily accessible, in what has been named "Gardner Hall." Much of the success of this institution is due to the character and management of the board of trustees, who are selected with reference to their fitness for the duties of such institutions, persons of culture, education, and good taste,—the requisites for good managers,—some of whom devote a large portion of their time to its interests.

Town Hall.—The necessity of a new town hall, to meet the growth and increasing demands of our people, had become so apparent, that at the annual town-meeting of the citizens, held on the 28th of March, 1870, a committee was appointed to consider the subject, and to report in regard to the same at the adjourned town-meeting. The committee, at their first meeting, without previous conference, found themselves a unit in favor of the immediate erection of a tasteful, commodious, and substantial edifice for this purpose. The committee were also impressed with the fact that the town was seriously deficient in those social advantages which would be derived from the possession of such a building. Their report was accepted, and the same persons were constituted a building committee, viz.: William A. Wellman, Charles U. Cotting, John C. Abbott, Charles W. Seudder, William Aspinwall, Augustine Shurtleff, William K. Melcher, William Lincoln, and Martin P. Kennard. The town appropriated the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, and placed the same at the disposal of the committee, who were authorized to issue the bonds of the town, payable in twenty years. At a subsequent meeting fifty thousand dollars were added to the appropriation, for which sums the bonds were negotiated at six per cent., at their par value, and a sinking fund has been provided for their redemption.

The first duty of the committee was to invite plans and sketches, with the understanding that the author of the accepted design should be employed as the architect. All were requested to sign their designs with a motto, and inclose their names in an envelope, to remain until the choice was made. Sixteen designs were offered, and after very careful study and consideration the one with a red seal was chosen, and disclosed the name of the author to be S. J. F. Thayer, Esq., of Boston. The contract for the masonry was taken by Messrs. Adams & Barstow, of Boston; and for the carpenter-work by our townsman, Mr. William K. Melcher. The corner-stone of the building was laid, in the presence of the town officers, May 23, 1871.

The structure is upon the site of the old town hall, which was removed to Prospect Street. This is the third hall the inhabitants have built for town purposes. The first was dedicated Jan. 1, 1825, a small stone building, afterwards used for the high school, and now standing on Walnut Street, near the First Church. The second was opened on the 14th October, 1845, twenty years after the first; and the late venerable Dr. Pierce, in his address on the occasion, remarked, "The progressive improvements of modern times render it not improbable that, when this beautiful fabric shall grow old, it may give place to an edifice which shall as far exceed this as the present is superior to the rude structures of former times."

In style, this structure is a secular Gothic, well fitted for a building designed for municipal uses. The principal façade has three entrances, divided by polished granite columns with carved capitals, the whole being covered with an arch resting upon solid abutments, and forming above the entrance a large window, which is divided by granite mullions. Above this window, and nearly in the centre of the front, is an arcade inclosing several windows, which are separated by short granite shafts. Still higher is the cornice, ornate in character, and somewhat above the general level. The centre of the front rises to a height of one hundred feet, being higher than any other portion of the structure. The roof is slated in green, red, and purple, in ornamental style. The building is three stories in height, and constructed of rose-colored granite from Dedham, and trimmed with light-gray hammered granite from Blue Hill, Me., having a massive base of the same material, while the body is quarry-faced. The ground-floor is a rectangle, ninety feet in width by one hundred and thirty-six feet in length, each side being recessed ten feet, and fifty-six feet of the centre front projecting, giving an extreme width of ninety feet, and extreme length of one hundred and forty-six feet. The first floor is seven and one-half feet above the grade of the location, and is divided into corridors, offices, and a hall. Entering by the main door-way, we pass through the vestibule, thirty-nine feet long by thirty in width, with a tile floor. In this vestibule, and on either side of the entrance, are the staircases leading to the second story. Beyond this is a corridor fifteen feet in width, extending back half the length of the building, where it meets another corridor running at right angles with it, and giving an entrance on Prospect Street, through a carriage-porch. On either side of the main corridor are three rooms, twenty-three feet width, for the use of the town officers. At the rear of the main corridor is the lower hall, in the rear of the building, which will seat between five and six hundred persons, and is designed for political and other meetings, which do not require the larger hall. Ascending the broad staircases, we enter this hall, which is sixty-five and one-half wide by ninety-two and one-half feet in length; and it will seat between twelve and fourteen hundred persons. Its form is an elongated octagon. The walls are thirty-seven feet in height, the ceilings extend into the roof sixteen feet, giving in the centre a height of fifty-three feet. The decorations and windows were done by McPherson & McDonald, of Boston. The main vestibule is decorated in a style like to the hall, and is lighted by a large window, in which are placed the coat of arms of the United States and of the State, both in medallion. The building is heated by indirect radiation of steam, under the direction of T. S. Clogston, of Boston.

The character of the work is completed in the spirit of the liberality of the town.

An able address was delivered on the occasion of the dedication of this hall by Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, which has been published in pamphlet form.

At the conclusion of Mr. Winthrop's address, the following original ode, written by Miss Harriet F. Woods, written for the occasion, was sung by the Choral Club:

"ODE.

"Written for the occasion by Miss Harriet F. Woods.

"Beneath this noble roof we stand,
Where skill has reared these massive walls,
And beauty from our Father's hand
Streams in where'er the sunlight falls.

"Here, as the years shall come and go,
Proud Eloquence with lofty strain
Shall set the listening heart aglow,
And nerve to noble deeds again.

"Here Music, tuned to fine accord,
From voices yet unborn, shall ring;
And grand, triumphant strains be poured
From brazen throat and vibrant string.

"Here may the rich man and the poor
Combine to wield the ballot's might;
Contend for truth which shall endure,
And cancel every wrong with right.

"Long may our town's unsullied name
Our fair and proud possession be,
And none but honest patriots claim
The honors of the brave and free."

Thomas Wigg

STATISTICAL ACCOUNT

Of the Industry and Products of the Town of Brookline for the year ending April 1, 1845.

2600 pairs of ladies' yarn hose, valued at.....	$1,200.00
Saddles and harness manufactured.....	525.00
Wagons, sleighs, and other vehicles.....	4,000.00
Cabinet-ware manufactured.....	300.00
3400 hides tanned, value of leather.....	17,300.00
Capital employed in tanneries.....	24,000.00
612 pairs of boots and 210 pairs of shoes, valued at	3,520.00
163 cords of firewood, prepared for market.....	1,059.50
270 horses, valued at.....	20,400.00
63 pairs of oxen @ $85 per pair.....	5,355.00
256 cows, valued @ $25 each.....	6,400.00
362 swine.....	5,430.00
1225 bushels of Indian corn.....	857.50
2036 bushels of rye.....	1,425.20
136 bushels of barley.....	84.40
30,869 bushels of potatoes.....	12,347.60
1789 tons of hay.....	25,046.00
1508 pounds of butter.....	271.44
1070 pounds of honey.....	214.00
1233 barrels of string beans @ $1.50.....	1,834.50
2560 barrels of green peas @ $2.00.....	5,120.00
2288 barrels of cucumbers @ 1.00.....	2,283.00
2074 barrels of beets @ $1.25.....	2,592.50
1674 barrels of onions @ $1.25.....	2,092.50
1222 barrels of parsnips @ 1.25.....	1,527.50
5220 barrels of green corn @ $1.00.....	5,220.00
1995 bushels of tomatoes @ 50 cents.....	997.50
15,880 bushels of turnips @ $1.00.....	2,646.67
296 tons of squashes @ $15.....	4,440.00
14½ tons of peppers @ $60.....	847.50
204 tons of carrots @ $8.....	1,632.00
255,650 cabbages @ 3 cents.....	7,669.50
Celery and horse-radish valued at.....	2,917.00
Early salads and greens valued at.....	4,255.00
Melons of different varieties.....	2,437.00
Asparagus.....	2,214.00
Shell beans and other small articles.....	575.00

FRUITS.

15,913 barrels of apples, valued at $1.25.....	$19,891.25
691 barrels of pears.....	2,784.00
134 bushels of peaches @ $2.....	268.00
222 bushels of plums @ $3.....	666.00
1539 bushels of cherries @ $2.50.....	2,847.50
475 bushels of currants @ $2.....	950.00
250 bushels of quinces @ $2.....	500.00
12,309 boxes of strawberries @ 20 cents.....	2,461.80
4956 boxes of raspberries @ 25 cents.....	1,239.00
12,470 pounds of grapes @ 50 cents.....	6,235.00
110 tons of rye straw @ $10.....	1,100.00
1044 barrels of cider @ $1.....	1,044.00
93,440 gallons of milk.....	15,573.33

Total..... $212,635.69

CENSUS OF 1875.

Dwelling-houses.....	1095	Population.....	6675
Dwellings occupied.....	1065	Rateable polls.....	1720
Dwellings unoccupied.....	30	Legal voters.....	1247
Families.....	1338	Naturalized voters.....	432
Males.....	2962	Aliens.....	315
Females.....	3713

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

THOMAS GRIGGS.

Deacon Thomas Griggs, the son and fourth child of Samuel and Beulah (Hammond) Griggs, was born in Brookline, Mass., April 5, 1788, and is the sixth in descent from his paternal ancestor in the following line: Thomas (4), Ichabod (3), Joseph (2), Thomas (1).

We first find Thomas (1) an early inhabitant of Roxbury in 1639, whose wife was Mary, who died that year, leaving two sons, John and Joseph, and a daughter, who died in 1645 at the age of twelve years. He married, second, Mary Green, Aug. 26, 1640. He died after a lingering sickness May 23, 1646. The inventory of his estate was made the 25th of the third month, 1646. He had an allotment of two parcels of land at Muddy River previous to 1639.

Joseph, the youngest son of Thomas and Mary Griggs, came from England; born about 1625; became a member of the church in Roxbury June 20, 1653; freeman, May 18, 1653; married Mary, daughter of Griffin Crafts, of Roxbury. She died June 30, 1653. He then married Hannah, daughter of Samuel and Anna Davis, Nov. 8, 1654, and had eight children, viz.: (1) Samuel (born 1656, died 1657), (2) Mary (born 1657, died young), (3) Hannah (born 1659), (4) Joseph (born 1661), (5) Benjamin (born 1668), who removed to Connecticut, (6) Joanna (born 1672), (7) Ichabod (born Sept. 27, 1675), (8) Mary (born 1682). The mother died Jan. 9, 1683.

This family resided in what was known as "Roxbury Precinct," or "Punch Bowl Village." The father died Feb. 10, 1714/15, aged ninety years. He joined with his brother in conveying land to Hugh Thomas Feb. 16, 1652,—land in Roxbury. He and his wife conveyed to John Hull land in that part of Muddy River called the "Common Field." Also land sold to George (Basto) Barstow, Feb. 23, 1699, in "Boston Fields," bordering on land of Edward and John Devotion, the well-known early settlers.

Mr. Griggs being an early resident of Muddy River, and being perfectly familiar with all the estates in and around his home and Roxbury, was once called upon to settle a dispute in reference to a division fence that used to run from about where "Chapel" Station now is, and so along the edge of the upper land, where was formerly a road leading to "Sewall's Fort." We give it as we find it, in the following deposition, dated Jan. 21, 1709 (Suffolk Records 24, p. 279):

"Jos. Griggs, of Roxbury, aged about 85 years, testifieth and saith that about three score years since he settled at Muddy River, now called Brooklyne, and has lived there and at Roxbury ever since, and in all that time has been very well acquainted with that tract of land, now in farms and propriety's, viz., Capt. Sewall, the late Deacon Elliotts, Devotions, Clarks, and others lying in Muddy River aforesaid, which was commonly called a common field butting on the salt marishes. As to the fence, or enclosure of said common field this deponent very well remembers that those persons that owned the upland were at the whole and sole charge of the outside range of fence the marish owners refusing to pay any part of the charge, and at a meeting of the upland and marish owners about forty years since the marish-men representing their design to fence the marish from the upland, desired the upland owners to do their proportion, but the upland owners utterly refused it for the reason above mentioned and told the marish owners that if they would fence out the marish they must do it at their own cost, and this depon^t has never known or understood that the upland owners ever bore any proportion of the charge of fencing off the marish, but that they did at all times maintain the outside range of fence, and the marish-men were at the charge of fencing the parish from the upland.

"JOSEPH GRIGGS, Jan. 21, 1709."

Mr. Griggs' name is also attached to a memorial with forty others, inhabitants of Roxbury, headed by the autograph of their pastor, Rev. John Eliot, addressed as Christian patriots to the honored Governor and the Deputy Governor, together with the rest of the honored magistrates and House of Deputies of Massachusetts, requesting and encouraging the General Court to stand fast in upholding the franchises of the people, and the liberties of the churches of that colony, then menaced by its enemies, and by the recently restored monarchy of England. He was a deputy to the General Court or representative of Roxbury in 1681, and selectman of that town in 1677, 1680, 1683, 1687, and 1688.

As a member of that board he was active and efficient in procuring a grant of land from the Legislature to establish the town of New Roxbury, now the town of Woodstock, Conn. At the date of the grant, in October, 1683, it formed a part of Massachusetts.

He was a grand-juryman in 1689. He was joint owner in a grist-mill previous to 1739, and sold to Joseph Belknap, who proceeded to use the water-privilege in such a manner as to damage the citizens of Brookline and Roxbury, in neglecting to do as much grinding as was necessary for home consumption. Accordingly, application was made to the selectmen, who had control of the same, that they should in future be limited in the amount of water to be drawn from their fountain-head.

We have seen that Mr. Griggs enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his fellow-citizens, and was often intrusted with the management of public affairs to a greater or less extent throughout a long and useful life, and died in a ripe old age.

Ichabod, the great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, and Margaret, his wife, had nine children, viz.: (1) Hannah, 1702; (2) Samuel, 1704; (3) Elizabeth, 1705; (4) Joseph, 1708; (5) Esther, 1710; (6) Sarah, 1712; (7) Nathan, 1714; (8) Thomas, 1715/16; (9) Ichabod, 1718.

Thomas, the eighth child of Ichabod and Margaret, was born Feb. 25, 1715/16; married Margaret Williams, of Roxbury, Sept. 1, 1743, and had ten children, viz.:

(1) Sarah, 1744; (2) Elizabeth, 1745; (3) Moses, 1747; (4) Thomas, 1750; (5) Samuel, 1753; (6) John, 1756; (7) Joseph, 1760; (8) Joshua, 1763; (9) Sarah, 1765; (10) Nathaniel, 1770. Thomas, the father, settled in the lower parish of Roxbury, now a part of Brookline. He was a cordwainer, built a house and worked for many years at his trade, in what is known as the "Downer House," which he built. He afterwards sold this estate and purchased the one now owned and occupied by the late Deacon David Coolidge, on Harvard Street. On this farm he passed the remainder of his days, and where he died July 7, 1782. Moses, the father of the late David R. Griggs, settled in the edge of Brighton. Thomas removed to Sutton, Mass.

Samuel Griggs, son of Thomas and Margaret; born Dec. 23, 1753; married Beulah, daughter of Daniel and Lucy Jones (Hammond), of Newton, Mass., Dec. 7, 1780, and had nine children, viz.: (1) Joseph, 1781; married Sarah Fuller, of Needham; (2) Samuel, 1784; married, first, Caroline Bacon, second, Abigail Saurin; (3) William Jones, 1786; died Oct. 24, 1804; (4) Thomas, 1788; married Harriet Fuller, of Needham; (5) Susanna, 1790; married, first, Deacon Aaron Hayden, of Eastport, Me., second, Ephraim Jackson, of Newton; (6) Lucy, 1792; married David R. Griggs; (7) John, 1794; married Sarah Williams; (8) Stephen, 1796; married Caroline Fish; he was drowned at Rockport, Mass., Aug. 16, 1850; (9) Margaret Williams, 1800; married Henry Wood, of Boston. The father died Jan. 16, 1814, aged sixty years. The mother died Aug. 21, 1847, aged ninety.

Samuel Griggs settled on the homestead, which has from the earliest days been in the Griggs family. It was purchased of Capt. John Winchester, and was where his nine children were born. A grandson of his, William Jones Griggs, now owns and occupies the farm, which is under a high state of cultivation. Joshua, the father of George Griggs, Esq., resided on the Deacon David Coolidge farm. He had eight children. Nathaniel married Joanna Aspinwall, and settled in Brighton.

Deacon Thomas Griggs, son of Samuel and Beulah (Hammond) Griggs, married Harriet, daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Broad) Fuller, of Needham, Mass., Feb. 9, 1819, and had seven children,—

1. Caroline Griggs, Jan. 27, 1820; married David Sullivan Coolidge Jan. 6, 1841, and had—i., Henry Coolidge, Jan. 6, 1842; married Hattie Russell, of Watertown; ii., Walter Coolidge, Feb. 23, 1844; married Georgie Robinson, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; iii., Harriet Coolidge, Feb. 20, 1847; iv., Ellen Coolidge, Feb. 9, 1850.

2. William Jones Griggs, June 6, 1821; married Mary Eaton Gipson, of Boston, Jan. 14, 1864, and had four children,—i., Mary Ellen Griggs, May 5, 1866; ii., Sarah Louisa Griggs, March 18, 1868; iii., Lucy Anna Griggs, Jan. 13, 1870; iv., Walter Allan Griggs, Feb. 25, 1871.

3. Mary Jane Griggs, Sept. 18, 1822; married Hezekiah Shailer, of Haddam, Conn., Aug. 10, 1847, and had,—i., Emma Jane Shailer, Aug. 13, 1848; died in New York, May 11, 1864; ii., William Griggs Shailer, Dec. 24, 1850; iii., Cora Louisa Shailer, Aug. 3, 1862. Mr. Shailer died July 9, 1878.

4. Ellen Griggs, May 5, 1824; married Charles Jewett Saxe, of Highgate, Vt., born March 24, 1814; married Feb. 22, 1853; children,—i., Charles Jewett Saxe, born Feb. 21, 1855, died July 11, 1862; ii., William Arthur Saxe, May 3, 1857; iii., Thomas Edward Saxe, July 6, 1860; iv., John Walter Saxe, Dec. 2, 1863; v., James Alfred Saxe, Dec. 2, 1863; vi., Mary Ellen Saxe, Dec. 17, 1865. Mr. Saxe, the father, died Oct. 1, 1867, at Troy, N. Y.

5. Thomas Baldwin Griggs, May 1, 1826; married Ann Elizabeth Stearns, Dec. 11, 1851, and have five children,—i., Annie Beulah Griggs, July 27, 1853; ii., Margaret Wood Griggs, May 15, 1855; iii., Sarah Louise Griggs, born March 22, 1861, died Aug. 31, 1867; iv., Thomas Griggs, Dec. 13, 1863; v., Harriet Fuller Griggs, Nov. 21, 1867.

6. Amanda Griggs, May 26, 1828; married Hezekiah Smith Chase, of Boston, Dec. 30, 1858; children,—i., Hezekiah Chase, June 11, 1861; ii., Marion Chase, March 2, 1869.

7. Francis Henry Griggs, Nov. 14, 1834; married Candace Watson, of Liberty, Ind., Oct. 8, 1861; children,—i., Elizabeth Hasselman Griggs, April 22, 1866; ii., Thomas Watson Griggs, Feb. 14, 1875. Mr. Griggs is a banker, and resides in Davenport, Iowa.

The wife of Deacon Thomas Griggs died Aug. 13, 1867, aged seventy years, twenty-six days.

Mr. Griggs is a fine specimen of the good old English stock, of an active, enterprising, and industrious race. Having been born in a time when the means of acquiring anything more than a common education were exceedingly limited, his time was mostly occupied in promoting the interests of his father's farm, which consisted of the usual early rising, plenty of work, and no play kind of a boy's early life in the country. He has ever followed the life of a farmer, in which he has been successful, and now in his extreme old age attends personally to conducting the affairs on his land. He became possessed of the old homestead of his father, which consisted of forty acres or more of land, which extended from Harvard Street to the top of Corey Hill, by purchasing the interest of the other heirs to the estate. At one time he was the owner of over one hundred acres of land, including the land extending from his residence to Coolidge's store. At the time of his ownership of Corey Hill, the north side was covered with a large growth of "savins," or cedar-trees (Juniperus Virginiana), which he caused to be removed, and the land prepared for cultivation. Mr. Griggs also cleared the lowland in the rear of his present residence on Washington Street, from Park Street to land of the late Deacon John Robinson. This land consisted of alders, barberry-bushes, and every other kind of swamp bushes, where now may be seen the most fertile land in Brookline.

The early boyhood of Deacon Griggs was quite uneventful. The school privileges of his day consisted of four months in the winter season, interspersed in summer with agricultural employment. He early acquired habits of industry, was earnest and honest, calm and deliberate, in all matters of judgment, of a quiet and retiring disposition, unassuming in his deportment, never sought to be conspicuous. In politics he was a Whig and Republican, firm and unwavering in his convictions of duty, never seeking public office, but has merited and often enjoyed the confidence of his fellow-citizens. He has been selectman, assessor, moderator of town-meetings, member of the school board, and representative to the General Court. During the war of 1812 he commanded a company at Fort Independence, in Boston Harbor, doing good service. (See roll.)

He has ever been a law-abiding citizen, a valued friend and neighbor. When he arrived at the age of twenty-six his father died, leaving a widow and several children. Upon Thomas devolved the duty of conducting the large farm. Five years later the subject of this sketch assumed the duties of married life, by bringing to the family circle an estimable lady, one who was his companion and life for forty-eight years, who became the mother of seven children, most of whom are now living. There are also twenty-two grandchildren living. Mrs. Griggs was a most estimable and valued lady, a very devoted mother, a member of the Baptist Church, in which she was ever actively interested, and was always doing good when an opportunity presented itself.

In 1810, Mr. Griggs commenced attending the First Baptist Church in Newton, Rev. Joseph Grafton pastor; was baptized and united with this church in December, 1817. During that month he, with twenty-two others, removed their church relation to Cambridgeport, Mass., for the purpose of constituting a Baptist Church in that place. He remained there, under the preaching of Rev. Bela Jacobs, for four years. In March, 1821, he, with others, helped to constitute the First Baptist Church in Roxbury, uniting with the Boston Baptist Association. Here he was appointed deacon, and remained worshiping with them for seven years, under the ministry of Rev. Joseph Eliot for three years, and Rev. William Leverett for four years. In 1828 he, with three others, feeling desirous to have a church nearer home, took measures to introduce church worship in Brookline. On the 5th day of June, 1828, a Baptist Church was constituted in Brookline, principally under the influence of Mr. Griggs, assisted by Elijah and Timothy Corey. Mr. Griggs was one of its first deacons, and has continued in that office for forty-six years, an honest and worthy church officer.

We are happy to record the fact which appears from his whole course of life, that of the deep religious principle, firmly implanted within him, of doing good; the sacrifice made by him in riding six or more miles to attend church, and assist in organizing others that they might also receive similar benefits.

In 1834, Mr. Griggs erected the house where his son, Deacon Thomas B. Griggs, resides, and occupied the same for about twelve years, when he removed to his present residence on Washington Street, where he purchased five acres of land in 1844, and built his house in 1847.

When we consider that Mr. Griggs has been troubled with rheumatism for fifty years, it is wonderful to witness the activity with which he daily moves about on his farm, looking after its interest with the ardor of a much younger person.

Mr. Griggs is an amiable, pleasant, warm-hearted, kind old gentleman, blessed with a cheerful disposition, and is surrounded by many affectionate children and grandchildren, and is passing his later years with honor and happiness. He resides on one of the principal thoroughfares of the town. Financially he has been a success, promptly meeting his engagements, running no bills, paying every one promptly. He has a very accurate and strong memory, reciting things that happened seventy-five years since as though of the past year. His impressions of events which occurred about 1800 have been readily given to the writer (who has had much occasion to refer to him for historical data), and are always clearly and fairly stated. In money matters always exact, giving and receiving just what was right. In short, he has done his work well, never shrank from duty, and his labors have been crowned with success.

Those who have witnessed his prompt and steady attendance on church worship on the Sabbath-day, at the age of ninety-six, riding in his carriage regularly, have only wished him a much longer life, and a happy one for years to come.

"The thought of death has no shadow of gloom to him, for he knows the end of his journey is high."

DR. CHARLES WILD.

Dr. Charles Wild, the subject of this notice, was the son of Abraham and Susanna (Pitman) Wild, of Boston. He was born Jan. 15, 1795. His father was of good old English stock, and his descendants have done no discredit to the name. In early days he attended such common schools as the times afforded; fitted for college at the Latin school in Boston (where he received a Franklin medal in 1805), and entered Harvard College in 1811, graduating in the memorable class of 1814, of whom William H. Prescott, the historian, President Walker, of Harvard College, Hon. Pliny Merrick, the late justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, and other equally prominent men, were members. He received the degrees of A.M. and M.D. in 1817. He studied medicine in the Harvard Medical College in Boston.

Soon after graduating, on the 10th of April, 1818, he came to Brookline, for the purpose of practicing his profession, and was an inmate of the family of Mrs. Croft, on Washington Street. He very soon became well known, entered upon an extensive patronage, which he continued for upwards of forty years, enjoying the confidence of his fellow-citizens in an eminent degree. At the time of his starting in life, Dr. William Aspinwall, then the popular physician of the town, was gradually giving up his professional labor, and a son of his (of the same name) had died, thus leaving the field almost wholly to himself. In a short time Mrs. Croft, the lady with whom he boarded, gave him about two acres of land on the south side of Washington Street, on which he immediately erected a dwelling-house, the same now standing, which he sold to Deacon William Lincoln, and later owned by Stephen D. Bennett, Esq., adjoining the Blake place on the west, and the Craft estate on the east. He married at the age of twenty-four years, and became a valued citizen, a public-spirited man, interested in the welfare of the community. He was an active member of Rev. Dr. Pierce's church, a regular attendant on his ministry, and a member of the choir, and before the organ was used in that church he played the flute. The doctor was one of the old school for more than twenty years of his life, a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, 1828. Those who had occasion to require the services of a physician can remember well his tall, well-formed figure, his firm tread, the deep guttural voice which seemed to come from cavernous depths, and the look of those eyes from behind his spectacles while he mixed those powders in a tablespoon. When we think of the amount of calomel, jalap, and rhubarb, picra, ipecac, and antimony which the people of past times have taken, no wonder that so many have been added to the number of those who have filled our cemeteries. In the visits of the doctor, after he had prescribed for the patient, if there were any children in the family, he would amuse them by catching flies and telling them droll stories and playing with them. The doctor was of a kind and sympathetic nature, a good counselor. His curious speeches and odd ways seldom gave offense to any one, and his warm-hearted cheerfulness was better than medicine to dispel the blues. Always enjoying the ludicrous side of life, when he had anything he considered too good to lose, he would give the benefit of it to his friends. On entering a house he had a breezy way of stamping off the snow or dust, making noise enough for three persons, then, throwing his overcoat aside and his muffler that he wore around his neck, he would let his saddlebags to the floor with an earnestness that indicated business. The salutations of the doctor on leaving a house were as unique as his entrance, and were often of the following description: "Now, if you can't sleep well, and don't know what to do, you can amuse yourself with taking an emetic."

Charles Wild.

While the doctor never sought public office, he was often called to fill public positions for several years; was a member of the school committee of this town, and often presided at public meetings. For a great while he was the principal justice of the peace of the time. Having early joined the Masonic fraternity, he became an enthusiastic and active member, and was a leader in the Washington Lodge located in Roxbury.

In 1839 the doctor's attention was drawn to Hahnemann's new system of medical practice, then first heard of in America, and he was ready to give it a fair trial, and at length became a firm believer in its truth and efficacy, and had a wonderful faculty in carrying others along with him in his new field. He overcame the old prejudices, and met with wonderful success in his practice.

The second meeting of the physicians who were the pioneers in the new system of homœopathy was held at the house of Dr. Wild on the 16th of February, 1841, when the constitution and by-laws of the Massachusetts Homœopathic Fraternity were adopted, and he at one time was the president of the same. Soon after the doctor had begun his new treatment, Miss Amanda M. Corey, afterwards the wife of James M. Edmond, who had been a patient of his, then a school-girl, very bright and original, wrote the following lines, which were always very amusing to the doctor:

ILLI, CUI CARMINA APPLICENT.¹

A son of Esculapius comes,
I hear his chariot wheels;
The very sound my soul benumbs,
A shiver o'er me steals.
Ye muses, aid me if you can,
Ye sundry settled bills,
In self-defense to sing the man
Of gallipots and pills!

Ye classic bards of olden days,
My vacant soul inspire;
Ye smiling ghosts of comic lays,
Awake my sleeping lyre.
Desert your graves in winding-sheets,
Diseases, fierce and grim;
Ye aches and pains your dark retreats
Forsake, and sing of him.

Ye memories of departed pills,
Of bitter powders too,
Support my shrinking soul that fills
With horror at the view.
Ye spirits all of tuneful rhyme,
Where'er ye chance to be,
Come, mount Parnassus' heights sublime,
And sweep the lyre for me.

Come, sing the Homœopathic knight;
Describe him, as he comes
To kindly give the aching wight
A dose of sugar-plums!
Who banishes disease and woe,
And contradicts the song,
"Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long."

Come, sing capacious pockets crammed
With roots the fields supply,
That in the sounding mortar jammed,
Diseases stern defy.
The names that on his vials wrote,
In goodly rows appear,
That choke the rude, contracted throat,
And stun the vulgar ear.

But most of all, his awful eyes
That pierce my very soul;
That scan my feelings as they rise,
And penetrate the whole.
For eyes and "specs" together, strike
The very seat of life;
And scare my timid spirit, like
A — keen-edged carving-knife!

¹ To him to whom the song applies.

But, lo! his steed is at the gate,
 And he is at the door:
 Be steady now, my whirling pate,
 Ye shaking nerves, give o'er.
 He doffs the frightful rubber coat
 That darkly shrouds his form,
 And, fastened tight beneath his throat,
 Defies and scares the storm.

He leaves his cap and gloves below,
 Arise, my longest hairs!
 For now, with solemn step and slow,
 I hear him on the stairs.
 Two ponderous volumes in his hands
 This second Galen brings,
 And by the couch of sickness stands
 A man of mighty things.

And now he reads those mystic books,
 Enlighteners of disease,
 And grasps his patient's wrist, and looks
 Profound as Socrates.
 Prescribes a dose, then lifts his eyes
 And fastens them on me;
 My blood runs cold, my spirit dies,
 So terrible is he!

Ye pitying muses, one and all,
 That e'er on mortals smiled,
 O teach me how to break the thrall,
 The spell of ———.
 And if the task of serving you
 Apollo e'er assigns,
 It shall be hers, life's journey through,
 Who perpetrates these lines.

Dr. Wild married Mary Joanna Rhodes, of North Providence, R. I., Dec. 29, 1819.

Children.—1. Charles William Wild, born June 10, 1822, married Mary Araminta Scales, of San Francisco, Cal.

2. Susanna Seraphina Wild, born Dec. 17, 1823, married George Augustus Wood, of Philadelphia, Pa., March 22, 1843.

3. Edward Augustus Wild, born Nov. 25, 1825, married Frances Ellen, daughter of John Whiting and Marian (Dix) Sullivan, of Boston, June 12, 1855; no children.

4. Laura Matilda Wild, born Jan. 23, 1828, married Rev. Joseph H. Phipps, of Framingham, Mass., Jan. 1, 1849; resides at Kingston, Mass.

5. Mary Heath Wild, born May 6, 1829, married Edward Jarvis Cushing, of North Providence, R. I., May 22, 1850.

6. Catherine Wheaton Wild, born July 26, 1832.

7. Emily Caroline Wild, born July 14, 1834, died Sept. 18, 1835.

8. Walter Henry Wild, born June 19, 1836, married Helen M. Conkling, of Springfield, Mass., 1866. Capt. Walter H. Wild, A.D.C. and A.A.I.Gen., enlisted in the First Rhode Island Battery (three months' service) April 21, 1861; time expired July 21, 1861, but continued in service till August 3d; re-enlisted in a battery which was afterwards incorporated in the Third Rhode Island Heavy Artillery, Feb. 22, 1862; was discharged to accept promotion as second lieutenant in Gen. Ullman's brigade (colored troops) Feb. 23, 1863, and mustered in as such March 7, 1863; promoted to first lieutenant in Fifty-fourth Massachusetts (colored) Volunteers Feb. 23, 1863; appointed aide-de-camp on Gen. Edward A. Wild's staff May 14, 1863; promoted to captain of Second North Carolina Colored Volunteers (afterwards the Thirty-sixth United States Colored Volunteers) Aug. 14, 1863, and continued as A.D.C. on Gen. Wild's staff; detailed as A.A.I.Gen. Dec. 25, 1863.

9. Lydia Greene Wild, born May 27, 1840, died Aug. 6, 1840.

Dr. Wild died at North Providence, R. I., Feb. 3, 1864.

GEN. EDWARD A. WILD.

Gen. Edward A. Wild was the son of Dr. Charles and Mary Joanna (Rhodes) Wild, of Brookline, Mass. He was born Nov. 25, 1825. After the usual advantages in the schools of his native village and the classical school in the town, he fitted for college under the private instruction of Dr. Samuel Rogers, of Roxbury; entered Harvard College in 1840; graduated in 1844, receiving the degree of A.B. in due course; A.M., in 1847; studied medicine with his father and in the office of Dr. A. E. Coting, of Roxbury, and at Harvard Medical School, in Boston, also at Jefferson College, Philadelphia, Pa., where he received the degree of M.D. in 1846; commenced practice in 1847, in Brookline, and became a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, May 23, 1850, and was the orator at their annual meeting in 1859. Oct. 1, 1848, he went to Paris to study and visit the hospitals of that city. While there he started on a pedestrianizing tour through Italy and Switzerland. Italy at that time was torn with a threefold war: Rome was contending against Naples; then came the invasion and occupation of Rome (which had then been temporarily a republic), while the North of Italy was in active turmoil and strife against the Austrians. At the Romano-Neapolitan frontier he was arrested and closely searched by the troops on both sides of the line, each taking him for a spy for the opposite side.

At Terracina he was taken before Garibaldi, then in command, who very quickly discerned his true character and liberated him. At Forli, in the Romagna, he was arrested as an Austrian spy, mobbed and roughly maltreated, and had a fortunate escape with his life. On Lake Garda he was arrested at midnight as a robber, and up the river Po seized as a deserter from the Austrian army, and had many other exciting adventures, some neither safe nor agreeable. The experience he met with during this excursion gave him the first ideas of the horrors of war, and an opportunity to witness the devastation of, and the destructive effects of, battles and bombardments. He returned to Brookline Jan. 1, 1850, and resumed the practice of his profession, which he continued till June 12, 1855, when he married and sailed direct for Constantinople, and immediately tendered his services in aid of the Turkish army, and received a commission as surgeon of artillery (Hekimbashi), with the rank and pay of lieutenant-colonel, and assumed the name of "Kholoussy Bey."

Eduard A. Wild.

In the course of his professional duties he visited the ports of Samsoun-Sinoub (Sinope), Trebizond, Batoum, Redout Kaleh (Kemhal), Sokhoum, Kaleh. He was attached to the army corps of Omer Pasha, commander-in-chief of the Turkish forces in the field, and passed the winter near Sokhoum, in the foot-hills of the Caucasus, occupying the hospital buildings captured from the Russians. After peace was arranged, he continued in charge of extensive military hospitals for months at Trebizond, where were gathered the numerous sick and disabled, the residuum of the war. On leaving the service, in addition to the war medal (Sefer Nishani) he received from the Sultan Abdul Medjid the decoration of the Medjidieh, with its accompanying Berat (diploma), together with an autograph letter from Omer Pasha recommending him for that high honor. This was Dr. Wild's wedding tour, so that in company with his wife he visited Trebizond and the banks of the Bosphorus, and, after a long sojourn in Constantinople, the Gulf of Nikomedia (Isnikmid), the islands in the Marmora (Prinkipo), and the Troad. Returning homeward he visited Greece and the Isles of the Archipelago, and stayed at Malta—where he was initiated into Freemasonry, taking three degrees in St. John's Lodge—Malli, Sicily, and a long time in Italy in 1857.

Immediately upon his arrival home he resumed the practice of his profession, in which he was successful, and was fast growing in popularity, and gave to the public the benefits of an extensive experience in the military hospitals, as well as the more complete study of medicine in the hospitals of Paris. For ten years prior to the commencement of the Rebellion, Dr.

Wild having a natural fondness for military drill, had been an active member of the Boston Independent Corps of Cadets, and during that time never missed a single drill. When the demand came from the government for men to assist in protecting our country from the assaults on the liberties of the people, the doctor was not only fully prepared himself, but he commenced to prepare others for actual service in the field. Dr. Wild was a highly-intelligent person, and had long foreseen that something of the nature of a struggle must ensue, and had a full appreciation of the magnitude of the war then impending. A full company was raised, of men mostly from Brookline and Jamaica Plain, through the instrumentality of Dr. Wild, who was commissioned as captain of the same by Governor Andrew on the 22d of May, 1861. This company formed a part of the First Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers, and entitled Company A, being the first regiment of the three years' troops to go to the seat of war. After being engaged in the battles of Bull Run and Williamsburg, and several lesser combats, including the siege of Yorktown, he was permanently disabled by a bullet at the battle of Seven Pines, on the field of Fair Oaks, Va., June 25, 1862. Returning to Massachusetts, he was placed in command of a camp of recruits at Lynnfield. While in camp he was promoted by regular grades to colonel of the Thirty-fifth Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers, Aug. 20, 1862, and two days after he proceeded with his regiment to Washington, his arm still disabled and in a sling, and in three weeks was in front of the enemy, in Gen. Burnside's corps, at the battle of South Mountain, where he lost his left arm, amputated at the shoulder-joint. On that day, and three days later, his new regiment distinguished itself by their steady, determined bravery, worthy of veteran troops.

When partially recovered from the loss of his arm, the colonel returned to Massachusetts, Dec. 1, 1862, where, while recovering from his wounds, he assisted Governor Andrew in organizing colored troops, the pioneer work in that line. On the 24th of April, 1863, he was appointed by President Lincoln a brigadier-general of volunteers, and soon after proceeded to North Carolina, where he raised a brigade of colored troops from among the fugitive slaves in that department, having his headquarters at Newberne. While here he gave much time and labor to the care and permanent provision of the colored families, by colonizing them. On the 30th of July the general took a large number of raw colored troops to South Carolina, where they did valuable and valiant service in the siege of Charleston. Three months later, leaving his troops at Charleston, he returned to his recruiting work at Newberne, N. C., also in Virginia. Jan. 18, 1864, Gen. Wild was placed in command of the district of Norfolk and Portsmouth, which besides his military labors involved large civil duties in the government of those two cities, filled as they were with a hostile population. On the opening of the spring campaign, in May, 1864, he joined the Army of the James, in command of his colored troops, where he continued, participating in the siege operations against Petersburg and Richmond until their fall. During the last three months he was in command of a division, containing three brigades of infantry, beside cavalry and artillery, heavy and light. This being a portion of the Twenty-fifth Army Corps, composed wholly of colored troops.

On the 3d of April, 1865, he went into Richmond as "Jeff Davis" went out. Some of the slaves originally recruited by the general being the first infantry to enter those "sacred precincts."

After the close of the warlike operations, he served in the Freedmen's Bureau in Georgia, and was finally mustered out of the United States service, Jan. 15, 1866. The general finding himself too much crippled to return to the practice of his former profession, he turned his attention to mining, in which he is still engaged. His experience and travels embrace the fields of Nevada, California, Utah, Colorado, and Lake Superior (Canada side).

It is no more than due to Gen. Wild to state that when he first enlisted into the army he enjoyed the highest esteem and confidence of all who were acquainted with him in his Massachusetts home. Particularly did he enjoy the confidence of Gov. Andrew, who was a warm personal friend during the Rebellion. When he entered the service he had been engaged in the Turkish army, and his experience there was of great value to him at home. Of an impulsive nature, fired with patriotism and intense enthusiasm, he gave his entire powers into the service. His record fully confirms the statements made, and we want no better illustration of his bravery than that at Wilson's Wharf, on James River, Va. While in command of an important outpost at the above locality he was surrounded by a greatly superior force of cavalry under the command of Maj.-Gen. Fitz-Hugh Lee, and was summoned to surrender, but he replied in the following brief manner: "We will try it," and after a desperate fight his trusty negroes beat off the enemy.

The following is the demand:

"May 24, 1864.

"By command of Maj.-Gen. Fitz-Hugh Lee, I am sent to demand the surrender of the Federal troops at Wilson's Wharf.

He (Gen. Lee) thinks he has troops enough to carry the position. Should they surrender, they will be turned over to the authorities at Richmond, and treated as prisoners of war. Should they refuse, Gen. Lee will not be responsible for the consequences.

"Very respectfully your obt. servant,

"R. J. MASON, Major & A. T. G.

"To BRIG.-GENERAL WILD, Commanding Federal Troops."

The reply of Gen. Wild was in the following laconic manner:

"We will try it.

"ED^d. A. WILD, Brig.-Gen. Vols."

Indorsed on the back of the demand, and returned to Gen. Lee. And "try it they did, with the Union army victorious, saving an important position to the "Army of the James."

Not only was Gen. Wild a good and brave soldier, but the example to his men was of the best. Prominent among his many good qualities was that of enforcing principles of abstinence from the use of intoxicating liquor. In this he set an example by his own entire disuse of liquor of any kind. During his whole service in the United States army he never touched any intoxicants, even to a glass of cider or lager beer.

Finally, those who remember Gen. Wild as a citizen regard him as one of integrity, and a manly, good man. Those to whom his words of comfort and cheer in the hours of sickness have done so much, remember him with the kindest affection. While those under whose care they were as soldiers in the army, all unite to speak of him in the kindest terms as a brave and good officer.

ELBRIDGE WASON.

The subject of this sketch is a descendant in the fourth generation from James Wason, who was born in the parish of Bellemanus, County of Antrim, Ireland, in 1711. He married at Portsmouth, N. H., Hannah Caldwell, Nov. 30, 1736, by whom he had seven children,—James, Samuel, Thomas, Betsy, Nancy, Isabel, and Sarah.

Lieut. Thomas Wason, son of James and Hannah Wason, married Mary, daughter of Robert Boyd, of Londonderry, N. H., Dec. 1, 1772, and had eight children,—James, Mary, Thomas Boyd, James, Robert, Sarah, Thomas Boyd, and Hannah.

Deacon Robert Wason, son of Lieut. Thomas and Mary Wason, married Nancy, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Batchelder) Batchelder, Dec. 26, 1808, and had nine children, viz.: Elbridge, Louisa, Hiram, Nancy, Mary, Robert Boyd, Adeline, Caroline, and George Austin.

Ellbridge Wason

Elbridge Wason, son of Deacon Robert and Nancy Wason, married Mary (born June 30, 1809), daughter of Samuel and Mary (Gardner) Stickney, of Boston, April 21, 1851. She died Aug. 15, 1863. He married, second, Mary Isabella (born May 30, 1835), daughter of Hon. Leonard and Mary Isabella (Dickey) Chase, of Milford, N. H., May 17, 1865, and have Mary Isabella Wason, born Jan. 11, 1867, and Leonard Chase Wason, born Aug. 5, 1868.

Mr. Wason was born in New Boston, N. H., Sept. 26, 1809. He was the eldest of nine children, all of whom lived to become useful members in society. His early days were spent in his native town in contributing his share of manual labor upon his father's farm. Here it was, under the care of kind parents, with an early religious training, that he developed that strong character for manliness and integrity which has ever characterized his more matured years. His advantages for school education were such as the life of a country farmer usually affords. A brief attendance in the village school of his native town, supplemented by a course of study at Derry Academy, prepared him for the higher privilege of teaching school in Windham, and afterwards in Amherst, N. H. In December, 1831, being desirous of seeing something of life outside of his native village, he visited Boston, where he remained for a short time, and while there he was induced to embark in business. On the 8th of March, 1832, he removed to Boston, and immediately entered upon the duties of clerk and salesman in the wholesale West India goods store of the well-known firm of Pierce & Goodnow, at 29 South Market Street. At the end of one and a half years the firm was dissolved, but he continued with Mr. Goodnow for the term of five years, at the expiration of which time he entered into partnership with his cousin, William Wason, on Blackstone Street, where he remained till August, 1837. On the first day of September of that year a new partnership was formed with Henry Peirce, under the firm-name of Wason & Peirce, wholesale grocers, at 61 Chatham Street. At the end of eighteen months Mr. Rufus Clement, of New London, N. H., was admitted a partner in the business, under the firm-name of Wason, Peirce & Co. Mr. Clement retired from the firm April 1, 1848. Soon after this, Robert Boyd Wason, a brother of the senior partner, was admitted to the firm. George A. Wadley, who had for a long time been book-keeper for the firm, was a partner for about ten years, retiring on the 1st day of January, 1865. At this time Henry E. Peirce, son of Mr. Henry Peirce, became partner, the firm-name remaining the same through the various changes. The present members are Elbridge Wason, Henry Peirce, and Robert Boyd Wason, who are still actively engaged in the same business, and in the store where they began in 1837. Commencing business at a season when the country was laboring under a severe financial depression, the success of this firm has been remarkable, and is largely due to the promptness with which everything has been done, the meeting every obligation, and conducting business in honesty, and with the manly purpose of dealing justly with all people. A truly remarkable example of the integrity of Boston's best merchants worthy of emulation. In politics Mr. Wason has ever been of the Whig and Republican order, a firm and stanch supporter of the government, and a firm believer in a liberal orthodox religion, and is a member of the church under the pastoral care of Rev. Reuben Thomas, Ph.D.

Although Mr. Wason has for a long time been away from the scenes of his early boyhood, he has ever been attached to his native town, and still holds the same in kind remembrance. He came to Brookline in August, 1858, and purchased the estate at the corner of Harvard Street and Alton Place, where he now resides. He was one of the principal movers and contributors in the erection of the new and elegant stone temple near his residence, known as Harvard Church, and has served as a member of the Prudential Committee of the same. In his private life he is domestic in his habits, fond of home, of a social temperament, gentlemanly in his deportment and intercourse with the public.

HENRY PEIRCE.

Henry Peirce was born in Waltham, Mass., Oct. 2, 1807. His first ancestor in this country was John Peirce, who came from Norwich, Norfolk County, England, a short time prior to his admission as freeman of Watertown, Mass., which admission bears date 1637/8. This John Peirce was born probably in 1586, as he was forty-nine years old at the time he applied for permission to "pass into Boston, New England, to inhabit."

John's son, Anthony, who preceded his father to America by a few years, was born in 1609, and was admitted freeman of Watertown, Sept. 3, 1634. The date of his arrival in this country was 1630, presumably with the company of Sir Richard Saltonstall.

The father of Henry Peirce was named William. He was educated at the common schools, and was a farmer and stone-mason. He was a private and corporal for three years in the Revolutionary war. He was but fifteen years of age when the war broke out, and was stationed during his term of service among other places at Cambridge, West Point, and Philadelphia. He underwent in common with others many hardships, and was honorably discharged, receiving for many years a pension. He was a patriotic, liberal-minded man, honorable in all his engagements, loved and respected by all. He died in Waltham, Sept. 4, 1825, aged sixty-five.

Henry's mother was Phebe Manning, born Nov. 10, 1766, died Oct. 13, 1851. She resided with her parents in Charlestown at the time of the battle of Bunker Hill, and was among those who fled for safety from their burning homes. She was then nine years old, and often in after-years told the story of her flight. She used to relate that, being ready to drop with fatigue, she exclaimed, "If they kill us, let 'em kill us, for I can't go any farther."

No man could have a better mother than had Henry Peirce. She had a firm and independent mind, full of probity and self-reliance. She gave her years to her large family, and lived to see her sons grow up to regard her with veneration.

Henry married, Jan. 21, 1833, Louisa Adeline Bayley. She was born in Rumney, N. H., March 1, 1807; died in Brookline, Mass., March 22, 1879. She was the daughter of Simon and Salina (Ramsay) Bayley, and descended from Richard Bayley, of Rowley, Mass., the first of his name in this country. They had four children,—1. Henry, born Oct. 25, 1833; died Nov. 30, 1833. 2. Henry Edgar, born April 13, 1835; died Aug. 26, 1881; married, Dec. 3, 1863, Ann Eliza Holt. 3. William Oliver, born Sept. 4, 1837; unmarried. 4. Helen Louisa, born Feb. 21, 1843; died April 6, 1855.

The subject of this sketch is widely known as a business man. The old church-going freeholders of his race in early times had not in all their line a more perfect representative of stanch, steadfast, manly integrity than he. His education was of the common school. His knowledge has been gained and his character formed in the conflicts of the world of business. He began his labors with George Murdock, a grocer of his native town. For seven years he performed the duties of his place. In 1828 he went to Lowell, a town then rising in importance, and engaged in the baking business. There for nearly nine years as partner in an enterprising and successful firm he exercised his abilities and industry. He came to Boston in 1837, entered into partnership with Elbridge Wason, and began business as a wholesale grocer at 61 Chatham Street, where he has remained to the present time (1884). For nearly fifty years Henry Peirce has kept the even tenor of his way. Not exempt from losses, at times large, nor from all the countless stringencies and struggles incident to the prosecution of a widely-extended business, he has always met his engagements, fulfilled every obligation, and wherever known has met with that confidence and respect which purity of life and honesty of purpose must ever inspire. He removed his residence from Charles Street to Brookline in 1860, where he now lives filled with good will towards all honest men, content to claim only for himself the merit that belongs to good intentions and manly effort. His numerous friends hope he may live long to enjoy that competence he has so fairly and honorably earned.

Before closing this sketch it may be well for all who read these lines to reflect how large a volume might be made in recording the career of a man like Henry Peirce, who is only a type of the straightforward, high-minded Boston merchant. Such as he labor not for wealth alone, nor for business reputation. They have not the hope of the brilliant prizes of public life to sustain them in their struggles through the dark days of business adversity. More or less consciously they work because they feel it to be a duty. They have too much self-respect to waste their time in frivolous pursuits. Long after they have obtained a pecuniary independence they labor on, feeling that the world must somehow be better for their labor. And what burdens such men bear! Who that has not experienced can fitly portray them? Sneered at often by those they help the most, they rally in times of distress and give the fruits of their toil to lift the world to a higher plane, knowing that the approval of the "still small voice" must be their sole reward.

THOMAS PARSONS.

Thomas Parsons was born in Boston, Mass., July 25, 1816. He was the son of Charles Chauncy and Judith (Parsons) Parsons. His grandfather was Chief Justice Theophilus Parsons, of Newburyport, Mass., who married Elizabeth Greenleaf. The mother of Thomas Parsons was the daughter of Capt. Thomas and Judith (Kinsman) Parsons.

In 1850, Mr. Parsons purchased the estate known as the "Cabot Farm" and "Amory Place," upon which was an old house, which he removed in 1852, and erected a house upon the same site, where he now

Henry P. Price

Thomas Parsons

resides most of the time, passing the summer months in Mattapoisett, his residence running to the water's edge.

The subject of this sketch is a lineal descendant, on both his father and mother's side, from Rev. John Robinson, of Leyden. As an heirloom he has a side-board in his possession brought over to this country by a son of the Rev. John Robinson. Mr. Parsons was educated in the common schools of Boston, and fitted for college in the Public Latin School of Boston; entered Harvard College at the age of fourteen years, but owing to ill health was obliged to leave with only a partial course. He then entered the counting-room of Benjamin Rich & Son, East India merchants, where he served his term of apprenticeship, and then entered into business with his father, who was a merchant and owner of freighting ships, where he remained till 1865. He is at present interested in many corporations. He is president and director of the "Lyman Mill," at Holyoke, Mass. He became a resident of Brookline in 1848, and has always taken a great interest in the welfare of the town. He has been selectman for sixteen years, many years chairman, member of the school committee the same number of years, acting as chairman of the same. He was an original member of the "Brookline Public Library," and is now one of the trustees. Most of the time he has been president of the same. He represented the town in the Legislature for six years, serving on the Finance Committee five years. He was a member of the Committee on the Revision of the Revised Statutes in 1859, on the Valuation Committee in 1860. Appointed on the Board of Prison Commissioners by Governor Rice, and again by Governor Talbot, and chairman of the same for six years. In 1854 he was appointed as justice of the peace.

In 1847 he married Martha Watson, daughter of Henry P. and Charlotte (Bicknell) Franklin. Mr. Franklin was a merchant and wealthy manufacturer in Providence. The children of Mr. Parsons are Elizabeth, Theophilus (a graduate of Harvard College, 1870, now engaged in manufacturing in Holyoke, Mass.), Charlotte, and Lucy.

THE DAVIS FAMILY OF BROOKLINE.

BY W. E. WEBSTER.

The New England progenitor of this family was William Davis, who came from Wales in his early youth and settled in Roxbury, where he was married three times. He was a member of the Apostle Eliot's church, as were his wives and most of his children. He died Dec. 9, 1683, and was buried on the 11th, as appears by John Eliot's record, in the possession of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society; the date is erroneously given as the 22d December in the Report of the Record Commissioners of Boston.

His grandson, Ebenezer Davis, a blacksmith, made large purchases of lands in various places and settled upon the Brookline property, which he purchased in 1746 of Thomas Cotton, of Windham, Conn., for £4500. This estate of ninety-five acres was separately described in three lots, and embraced the principal portion of what is now the village of Brookline.

Ebenezer Davis died in 1776; his will was probated March 4th of the same year. Although he had disposed of considerable real estate, what he left is worth recording, as his inventory indicates the value of lands in this county at that period:

"House, Land and one half the other Buildings on Easterly side of Cambridge Road and the Hill pasture on the Northerly side of said road, appraised at.....	£1660
House, Land &c lying southwardly and adjoining Watertown Road, with one half the buildings on the other side of the Road, the House excepted.....	1222
Four and a half acres salt-marsh.....	45
Four acres of salt marsh in the Great Marsh....	40
Thirty Eight Acres of land bought of Mary Winchester.....	550
A tract of Land in Troublesome Swamp (so-called).....	60
A House, Farm and other buildings in Roxbury.....	1000
A Wood-lot in Roxbury.....	112
Two Acres Salt Marsh in Roxbury.....	20
A Wood-lot in Needham.....	66 13s. 4d.
A wood lot in Newton bought of John Hammond.....	175
Another in ditto. Three & one half Acres.....	52 10s.
A Farm in Newton under the improvement of Mr. Joseph White.....	400
A House, Land and other buildings in the Town of Waltham under the Improvement of Mr. Matthias Collins.....	306 13s. 4d.
Total Real Estate, value.....	£5709 16s. 8d.

Two items of his personal estate were, "A Silver Tankard, valued at £18 13s. 4d. and Six Hives of Bees, valued at £3 15s."

This tankard is still in the possession of the family (the bees are not). On the curve of the handle, in accordance with the custom of the olden time, appear the husband's and wife's initials with that of the family, thus, E + S, meaning Ebenezer and Sarah Davis. It bears the stamp of "J. Hurd," the famous goldsmith of Boston, whose daughter married Mr. Walley, and was the grandmother of Wendell Phillips. A son, Nathaniel Hurd, succeeded his father; he also struck his stamp upon it, simply the word "Hurd." He was an artist of great taste in heraldic engraving, and by a mistake not uncommon at that time, engraved another family's armorial bearings upon this tankard,—that of the Davisons, instead of the Davis family of Carmathan, Wales. An impression of the Davis family seal is upon the will of Ichabod Davis, in registry of deeds in Suffolk County, A.D. 1754,—he was son of the original immigrant, whose will has been lost,—this was observed by J. C. J. Brown, of the Committee on Heraldry of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, while making an examination of the heraldry on wills in Suffolk Probate Court.

D

Ebenezer Davis' will was quite long, and very particular in relation to the division and distribution of the estate, and very regardful of all his descendants. His daughters, Hannah, Sarah, and Elizabeth, were the wives respectively of Matthias Collins, Joseph White, and Joseph Craft. In a codicil he gives his "Negro man Sambo his freedom."

To Ebenezer Davis, his grandson,—who was the grandfather of the subject of this sketch,—he gave the first item on the inventory, until his sister Sarah was twenty-one years of age, when she was to have two hundred pounds; and the real estate was to be equally divided between brother and sister; but Eben and Benjamin, another grandson, were to have the woodlands in Cambridge, Brookline, Newton, and Needham. The distribution to other children and grandchildren is not specified here, as this refers only to the line of Robert Sharp Davis.

A great-grandson of the Ebenezer Davis who settled in Brookline was named Robert Sharp Davis. This Robert Sharp had the following-named children, a brief sketch of whom will here be given: Samuel Craft, Robert Sharp, Phineas Stearns, Sarah, and Lucy.

Samuel Craft Davis was born in Brookline, Feb. 18, 1809, and died in Boston, Oct. 15, 1882. In 1834, Mr. Davis went to St. Louis, where he established the well-known dry-goods importing and jobbing house of Samuel C. Davis & Co., in which he remained the senior partner until his death. He was an industrious and sagacious man, and eminently successful merchant. In 1840, Mr. Davis married Caroline Tilden, of Brookline, by whom he had the following children: Samuel Craft, a lawyer, born March 10, 1842; died Oct. 10, 1874; John Tilden, born Sept. 13, 1844; now a partner in the house of S. C. Davis & Co.; also one son and one daughter who died in infancy. Samuel Craft Davis, Jr., married Sarah Shurtleff Shaw, of Boston, June 19, 1866; John Tilden Davis married Maria Jane Filley, Feb. 20, 1867.

Robert Sharp Davis, whose portrait accompanies this sketch, was born in Brookline, Jan. 1, 1811, and died in the same town, Feb. 23, 1875. About the year 1825, Mr. Davis entered the employment of the well-known publishing firm of Crocker & Brewster, of Boston, a firm which remained the same, both in style and partners, for more than half a century. After remaining a few years with Crocker & Brewster, he became a partner in the firm of Lincoln, Edmands & Co., and in 1835 succeeded them. From that time he carried on the business of publishing school-books in Boston with uninterrupted success until his death,—a period of forty years lacking a few days. Among his most prominent publications were the mathematical works of the eminent author, Benjamin Greenleaf, books which are believed to have been in more universal use than any similar works ever published. In 1837, Mr. Davis married Mary Shannon, of Portsmouth, N. H., by whom he had the following children: Mary Shannon (Mrs. W. E. Webster), Lucy Stearns, Sarah Comstock, Laura Wood (Mrs. T. R. Shewell), Caroline Elizabeth, and Langdon Shannon, who married Hélène Bartlett O'Leary, Nov. 9, 1880.

Phineas Stearns Davis (named for his great-grandfather, who was one of the famous Boston tea-party) was born in Brookline. For many years he was connected in business with his brother Robert. He was an active member of the militia for more than twenty years, holding various commissions, including that of brigadier-general. At the breaking out of the war for the suppression of the Southern Rebellion, Gen. Davis, after serving several months upon a commission for the examination of candidates for positions in the military service, accepted the command of the Thirty-ninth Regiment, in which position he served with distinction until July 11, 1864, when he was killed by a rebel shell in front of Petersburg, Va. He was a brave and patriotic man and an accomplished officer. April 26, 1847, he married Elizabeth Lambert, by whom he had the following-named children: Nannie Sophia, Charles Lambert, Elizabeth Lambert (Mrs. A. J. Ward), and Agnes Andrews.

Sarah Davis was born in Brookline, Sept. 24, 1812; married Rev. Grover Smith Comstock, June 24, 1834; had the following children: Lucy D., Oliver C. (who was killed in the war for the Union), Robert Stearns, and Grover Samuel. Mrs. Comstock went to Burnah as a missionary and died there.

Lucy Stearns Davis was born in Brookline, Jan. 26, 1816; married Daniel H. Rogers, Sept. 21, 1843; had the following children: Sarah C., Clara Lavinia, Elizabeth S., Mary D.

The Davis family are descended in a maternal line from Robert Sharp, a youth of twenty, who came from England in the ship "Abigail," in 1635.

Robert S. Davis.

Gen. B. B. Blake

Robert Sharp stopped a while at Braintree, then at Rehoboth, and in 1650, with Peter Aspinwall, he purchased the large farm of William Colburn, at Muddy River. By his wife Abigail he had one son, John, born March 12, 1643, and two daughters, Abigail and Mary. John married Martha, daughter of Robert Vose, of Dorchester (Milton). John was a valiant soldier in King Philip's war, and was killed in the Sudbury fight, while lieutenant in Capt. Wadsworth's company, in April, 1676. His widow married Joseph Buckminster, from whom the distinguished persons of that name were descended. John Sharp had a son Robert, who perished in an expedition against the Indians in Canada. This Robert had a son Robert, who was a thrifty man, and became a large landholder in Brookline. He died in 1765, leaving a son, Robert, and four daughters. The fourth Robert married Sarah Payson, of Roxbury, by whom he had ten children, and from one of these children (Lucy), who married into the Davis family, was descended Robert Sharp Davis, the subject of this sketch.

BRADFORD KINGMAN.

Bradford Kingman is the son of Josiah Washburn and Mary (Packard) Kingman; was born in that portion of the town of North Bridgewater (now Brockton) called "Campello," Jan. 5, 1831; came to Brookline, May 1, 1856. He is a lineal descendant in the seventh generation from Henry Kingman, an early settler of Weymouth, Mass., who came from Weymouth, England, in 1635. After the usual course of study in the common schools of his native village he attended the Adelpian Academy, under the charge of Messrs. Silas L. & L. F. C. Loomis, in the central village, and afterwards in the Williston Seminary at East Hampton, Mass. Studied law with Lyman Mason, Esq., of Boston; attended lectures of the late Professor Emery Washburn, at Harvard College; and was admitted to the Suffolk bar in Boston April 21, 1863. Appointed justice of the peace by Governor Andrew, Jan. 22, 1864; and was trial justice for criminal cases for Norfolk County several years, notary public for the same county, and is now an attorney- and counselor-at-law, resident of Brookline. He is also commissioner of deeds for several New England and Western States.

In addition to the duties pertaining to the legal profession, Mr. Kingman has given much attention to the study of local history. In 1866 he published a "History of North Bridgewater, Massachusetts," pp. 696, and is engaged in preparing a "History of Brookline," soon to be published. He is also a frequent contributor to magazines and newspapers. In October, 1870, he started the first newspaper ever published in the town of Brookline, known as the Brookline Transcript, of which he was the editor and proprietor for over two years. Among his contributions are the "Memoir of the Late Deacon Lewis Bradford," of Plympton, Mass., "History of Andover," published in the "History of Essex County," also "History of North Andover" in the same work.

Mr. Kingman married Susan Bradford, daughter of Capt. Thomas and Susanna (Bradford) Ellis, of Plympton, Mass., Jan. 1, 1852, a direct descendant of Governor William Bradford, of Plymouth, Mass., in the eighth generation. They had one daughter, Carrie Parker, born July 15, 1858; died Sept. 18, 1859.

GEORGE BATY BLAKE.

The branch of the Blake family from which the subject of this sketch descended was first established in New England in the person of William Blake (a near relative of the famous English admiral, Robert Blake), who landed at Nantasket, May 30, 1630, and soon after fixed his residence at Dorchester, Mass., in that part now called Milton.

George Baty Blake, the youngest of nine children of John Welland and Abigail (Jones) Blake, was born at Brattleborough, Vt., May 19, 1808.

His grandfather, Joseph Blake (born Feb. 5, 1739; died July 21, 1818), was a lieutenant in the army at an early age, and saw some service at Crown Point. He married for his first wife Deborah, daughter of Samuel Smith, a physician of Sandwich, Mass., her mother, Bethiah Chipman, being reported by tradition to be a direct descendant of John Carver, the first Governor of Plymouth Colony.

His father, John Welland Blake, Esq., a lawyer by profession, was one of the early settlers at Brattleborough, having established his residence there in 1790. He was one of the first postmasters in this place, represented the town in the State Legislature, and was at one time a large owner of real estate in the vicinity.

He married, May 24, 1790, Abigail, daughter of Judge Daniel Jones, of Hinsdale, N. H. She died Dec. 14, 1808, within a few months after George's birth, and his father Oct. 27, 1818.

George, thus early left an orphan, was nursed and cared for during his infancy in the family of Maj. Stephen Greenleaf, a highly-respected citizen in the West Village of Brattleborough, and in after-years he held the memory of this estimable man and his family in grateful remembrance.

Subsequently he lived at the homestead until the age of thirteen. His eldest sister, Anna Sophia, who, in 1814, married Henry Cabot, son of Hon. George Cabot, of Boston, had charge of the household during George's childhood, until her removal to Boston upon her marriage, and there lived until her death, in 1845. Mrs. Cabot is well remembered in Boston society of the time for her personal charms and winning social graces.

After the death of his father, George was for a few years particularly under the charge of his brother, John Rice Blake. These brothers long survived the other children, and were for twenty years or more partners in the banking business, which George undertook about the year 1850, in Boston, and to which the energies of the remaining years of his life were chiefly given.

Although George's father had been at one time a man of considerable wealth for the period, at his death the family were left quite poor, so that when Mr. Dickerman, a dry-goods dealer from Boston, who chanced to see George, then a lad of thirteen, in Brattleborough, offered him a place in his store, the family gladly availed themselves of the offer, and the boy went to Boston.

He lived at first with his sister, Mrs. Cabot, in High Street, Boston, and for two or three years received from his brother John and this sister fifty dollars a year, which was the only pecuniary help he ever received.

He was in Mr. Dickerman's employ a few years, and went thence to his brother-in-law, Edward Clarke, of the firm of Edward Clarke & Co., dry-goods importers, and before he was twenty-one years of age Mr. Clarke took him into the firm as partner, and he went at once to England to buy goods. From this time, in 1828, he was constantly going to England and the continent of Europe in the pursuance of his business, making many acquaintances and some lifelong friendships.

Among others, he thus became acquainted with the late George Peabody, at that time a buyer of dry-goods for his Baltimore firm, and afterward long resident in London, with whom Mr. Blake continued in warm relations of friendship until Mr. Peabody's death, and for several years their respective firms had extensive business relations.

May 24, 1833, Mr. Blake married his cousin, Anna Hull, daughter of Joshua Blake, of Boston, a prominent and successful merchant, doing business with the Mediterranean ports. They were married at her father's house in Winthrop Place, by the Rev. F. W. P. Greenwood, of King's Chapel, at which church Mr. Blake then, and during his whole life, attended service, acting for several years as vestryman, and always taking a deep and lively interest in the church and its several clergymen.

During his earlier visits in England, Mr. Blake made the acquaintance of Richard Cobden, the distinguished English statesman, then, about the year 1835, partner in a cotton-printing establishment near Manchester, where he had built up a prosperous business. Mr. Blake at this time bought goods of Mr. Cobden, and had a great admiration for the qualities which later won him such distinction as a legislator and political economist.

Mr. Blake gave full adherence to Mr. Cobden's free-trade views, and was always of the opinion that for any country customs duties were only to be justified by the need of revenue. He recognized, however, for the United States that reform in this direction, in justice to large vested interests, must be somewhat gradual; but he looked confidently to absolute free trade as the true policy for all nations, and he believed that, under such a free interchange of commodities, the United States would soon become cotton manufacturers for the world.

Mr. Blake had nine children, of whom the first two died in infancy, and the seventh, Henry Jones Blake, died Oct. 11, 1880. He served as lieutenant in the United States navy during the war of the Rebellion, and had an excellent record in the important engagements in which he participated.

The youngest son, John Welland Blake, bearing the name of his paternal grandfather, died in 1861, aged nearly fifteen years.

The other children, three sons and two daughters, are still surviving in the year 1884, and all the sons were for years partners in their father's firms in Boston, New York, and London.

This business is still continued by the sons and their associates, selected by Mr. Blake, essentially as established by him.

Mr. Blake, after leaving the firm of Edward Clarke & Co., formed a copartnership for the importation of dry-goods with Mr. William Almy, under the firm-name of Almy, Blake & Co., and during this time, and subsequently, he continued his frequent passages to Europe, having crossed the Atlantic upwards of eighty times during his life.

He next formed a copartnership with the late David Nevins and Edward H. R. Lyman, under the firm-name of George B. Blake & Co., also importers of dry-goods. Mr. Lyman still survives, being a resident of Brooklyn, N. Y., and has recently retired from active business after a long and most successful mercantile career in connection with the well-known firm of Messrs. A. A. Low & Brothers, of New York, in the China trade.

About the year 1846, Mr. Blake's health, which had always been delicate, failing him, he was obliged to retire from active business, and in the spring of 1847 he bought an estate in Brookline, near Boston, where he resided during the remainder of his life, excepting the winters of the last few years; these were passed at his home in Boston.

During this three or four years' interval in his active business career, Mr. Blake became a director in the Boston and Worcester Railroad Company, and took a most active interest in the affairs of that corporation, giving much of his time and energy to the development of its growing business. He was one of the very earliest to favor and promote the joining of this railroad with the Western Railroad.

The first steps taken by this corporation towards a rail connection with East Boston were chiefly instigated by Mr. Blake, at a time when few foresaw the prospective growth of the export trade from the West, which his sagacity enabled him to anticipate.

The construction of the Brookline Branch of the Boston and Worcester Railroad was also largely due to his energy and foresight.

In 1850, Mr. Blake associated himself with Mr. Addison Gilmore, president of the Western (now Boston and Albany) Railroad, and Mr. George Cabot Ward, son of Thomas G. Ward, Boston agent of Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., of London, for the prosecution of a foreign and domestic banking business. The firm-name was Gilmore, Blake & Ward. Mr. Gilmore dying very suddenly shortly after this firm was established, the name was changed to Blake, Ward & Co., and later to Blake, Howe & Co.

At this time his brother, John Rice Blake, came from Brattleborough and joined him as a partner, the firm-name being later changed to Blake Brothers & Co., the three eldest sons joining as partners about the year 1860.

One of the leading aims of Mr. Blake throughout his business career was to advance in every possible way the commercial interests of Boston. He was largely instrumental in securing and maintaining the regular visits of the Cunard steamers to that port.

During the civil war he was always most warmly interested in the preservation of the Union, and actively aided, both with his purse and by personal service, the Sanitary Commission and other organizations for the relief and welfare of the soldiers.

Originally a Whig in politics, and voting for Henry Clay in the Presidential election, Mr. Blake early sympathized in the views of Garrison, Sumner, and the others who looked upon African slavery in the United States as a barbarism.

With many other law-abiding citizens of Massachusetts, his sense of justice was shocked by the enforcement of the fugitive-slave law in Boston in returning Anthony Burns to servitude. He endeavored to prevent this, by offering, through a friend, to buy Burns of his owner, who then refused to sell his property at any price.

When the State of Massachusetts was rapidly forwarding troops for the suppression of the Rebellion, and was incurring a large debt for bounties and other war expenses, the money market had become exceedingly active, so that the State, for providing money on their notes having a few months to run, paid as high as twelve per cent. per annum.

At this time it became necessary for funding its indebtedness that the State should promptly secure some three or four millions of dollars. This was finally done by a sale to Mr. Blake's firm, by Governor Andrew and his Council, of three millions of dollars of five per cent. sterling bonds, and Mr. Blake was appointed by the State authorities agent for the State, with authority to domiciliate the loan with either of several London banking firms selected by him, foremost among whom were the Messrs. Baring and Rothschild.

Mr. Blake went at once to London on this mission, but found the time most unfavorable for such negotiations, the Bank of England having suddenly advanced the rate of interest to ten per cent. He, however, finally succeeded in making arrangements with the Messrs. Baring, through whom the loan was successfully negotiated.

Mr. Blake always felt that the deserved high credit of Massachusetts was largely due to the high integrity and strong sense of Governor Andrew, in insisting upon gold for the payment of both principal and interest of the funded debt of the State throughout the general suspension of specie payments in the United States during the Rebellion.

Possessed of a character of unswerving integrity, Mr. Blake stood as an example of the highest commercial honor, and the many young men whom he educated during his long business career all testify to the warm interest which he took in lending a helping hand to those who needed his assistance.

Devoted and affectionate in his family, it was perhaps in the home circle that his character appeared to best advantage, and those who were in the habit of meeting him there will ever cherish the pleasant memories of his sprightly humor and friendly interest.

Reverent and devout by temperament, he was a regular attendant upon religious services, and, although he never identified himself with the church by active membership, his whole life testified to his sincere and earnest belief in the truths of Christianity.

Mr. Blake died at his residence in Brookline, Aug. 6, 1875, his death resulting from an attack of paralysis at his office in Boston two days previous. He was interred in the family burial-lot at Mount Auburn Cemetery.

His wife died two years before, June 7, 1873, at the Brookline home.

EXTRACTS FROM OBITUARY NOTICES PUBLISHED IN THE BOSTON NEWSPAPERS.

Boston Globe, Aug. 7, 1875.

"GEORGE BATY BLAKE.

"The announcement of the death of George Baty Blake, the senior member of the firm of Blake Brothers & Co., bankers, will cause a wide-spread feeling of sorrow in the business and social circles of Boston. It is not often that we are called upon to record the death of a Boston merchant who has quietly and unostentatiously promoted the substantial interests of this city in the effective manner which was characteristic of Mr. Blake. . . . George Baty Blake was a strong man, one whose clearly-defined individuality and indomitable will would have made his power, nerve, and brain felt in any walk in life which he might have chosen.

"In both the dry-goods trade and the banking business he was very successful, although through nearly his whole life he labored with the disadvantage of a physical infirmity which would have paralyzed the efforts of men with a weaker will or a less active brain.

"What he has done for Boston can hardly be summed up in a few words or particularized in any special manner, since one of the leading aims of his life has always been to advance her interests. He was early a director in the Boston and Albany Railroad, where his ripe judgment and eminent business qualities were utilized to advance the interests of the road and of Boston. He was also largely instrumental in securing the regular visits of the European steamers to this port, and in numerous ways used his utmost influence to promote Boston's welfare.

"During the darkest days of the war Mr. Blake never lost courage, but remained firm in his conviction and hope that the Union would be preserved intact, and he was, in those trying times, ever self-sacrificing, patriotic, and generous in upholding the cause he believed in so thoroughly.

"Mr. Blake was a man of the strictest integrity, was upright in all his dealings with men of all classes, and gentlemen who have dealt with and associated with him more or less for a quarter of a century, or more, speak in the highest terms of his business capacity and fidelity to principle, fairness, and justice.

" . . . Boston has certainly lost in Mr. Blake one of her most positive, self-reliant, and enterprising business men,—one who achieved where many others failed, and one whose integrity, industry, and perseverance may well be copied by the younger business men of this city who are coming into the places he and others like him are vacating as the weeks, months, and years pass on."

Boston Daily Advertiser, Aug. 11, 1875.

"The recent removal by death of Mr. George Baty Blake from business circles will turn back the memories of many men over the last fifty years of the commercial history of Boston.

"The youngest of nine children of a highly respectable family in Brattleborough, Vt., he came to Boston in 1821, with nothing but his own exertions to depend upon.

"Amid the numerous temptations which a city life offers to young men, he kept himself pure and his moral character free from reproach.

"His aspirations were high, and were aided by an innate refinement which distinguished him through life. His manners and bearing were always those of a gentleman, and nothing coarse or vulgar ever found favor with him.

"Probably there is no society in the world where the English language is spoken in which Mr. Blake would not have borne himself with credit.

"Of his commercial sagacity there is no need to speak. In the long course of his business career he never failed to meet his engagements promptly, and during the years in which he acted as director of the Boston and Worcester Railroad his judgment, energy, and decision were such as to command the respect of his associates in an unusual degree.

"Mr. Blake delighted to select young men, to give them a chance of advancement and to feel that they owed their success to him.

"During an acquaintance of nearly thirty years, of which seventeen were passed in close and daily intercourse, the writer of this notice never received from him a harsh or unkind word.

"To his inferiors in station he was uniformly kind and courteous, a fact to which many attached dependants can bear witness.

"In his family relations he was affectionate almost without limit, and as a father at once indulgent and firm.

"Without theological bigotry, Mr. Blake was decidedly a religious man. His attendance at church was regular, and quite as much from pleasure as duty. He has often been heard to speak with emotion of sermons which especially pleased him. His reverence for sacred things, though unostentatious, was real, and any man who acted from conscientious motives was sure of respectful treatment from him.

"He professed to be, and we believe was, governed by a sense of responsibility to a higher power.

"We are quite sure that his descendants will attach less value to the pecuniary inheritance which devolves upon them than to the memory which they can thus cherish and hold in honor."

JEREMIAH GRIDLEY.

Jeremiah Gridley, or "Jeremy," as he was familiarly known, or "Uncle Jerry," was born in Roxbury about 1703, and was a brother of Col. Richard Gridley, the famous engineer during the Revolutionary war. It has been a source of dispute as to where he died. Tudor, in his life of Otis, says he was a Boston inhabitant and died there. Dr. Eliot, in his biography, says he died in Boston, and further, "that his legal knowledge was unquestionable," and adds that "he died poor because he despised wealth."

The records of the town of Brookline say he died there Sept. 10, 1767, aged sixty-four years. He was a graduate of Harvard College, 1725. In 1731, he became editor of the Rehearsal, a weekly newspaper published in Boston. He was also engaged as an assistant in the grammar school in that town. He studied theology and became a preacher of the gospel; afterwards studied law, and became one of the most distinguished lawyers of his day. He had a very accurate and extensive knowledge of his profession, of great ability, an easy and graceful writer, and was fully imbued with the spirit of classical literature. He had a very extensive and well-selected library of classical works, and was familiar with their contents. He acquired a great reputation in his profession, and is now alluded to as the "Webster of his day." He had a powerful, clear, and discriminating mind. As a speaker, he was exceedingly rough, ungraceful, hesitating in his manner, but energetic and impressive in his peculiarly emphatic use of language, and when addressing the court his manner is said to have been rather magisterial than otherwise.

R. A. F. Candage

The records of Brookline bear witness of the frequency with which her citizens called him into positions of trust and importance, and from 1755 to the year of his death he was often moderator of their town-meetings, and was their representative to the General Court in 1755-57 and 1767. He was elected selectman and assessor in 1760-61 and 1767. He was also one of the committee having in charge the Edward Devotion fund, left for the schools of the town of Brookline.

In 1742 he was chosen attorney-general of the province for one year, and in 1767 he was appointed to the same office by the Governor and Council.

Besides his civil offices, he was a colonel in the First Massachusetts Militia, which included Brookline.

In 1743 the American Magazine and Historical Chronicle was started, and it is said Mr. Gridley was the editor.

His eminence in his profession rendered his office a favorite place of resort for students, and some of the most distinguished lawyers in Massachusetts received their professional education under his instruction, among whom may be mentioned Chief Justice Pratt, James Otis, Oxenbridge Thacher, and William Cushing.

Mr. Gridley was ranked with the Whig party of that day, but having argued the cause of Writs of Assistance, he lost the confidence of his political friends.

John Adams was presented to the court at Boston for admission to the bar, and, on the motion of Mr. Gridley and his recommendation, he was admitted.

Mr. Gridley was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, having been a Master in the First Lodge, May 11, 1748, and its Grand Master Oct. 11, 1754.

Mr. Gridley was a man of fine social qualities, and beloved by all those connected with him by social or domestic ties.

CAPT. RUFUS GEORGE FREDERICK CANDAGE.

Capt. Rufus George Frederick Candage, the subject of this sketch, was the son of Samuel Roundy and Phebe Weir (Parker) Candage, born in Blue Hill, Me., July 28, 1826. The name of Candage was originally "Cavendish," and later "Candish," and now Candage. Among the early settlers of Massachusetts we find John Candage a ship-carpenter and landed proprietor at Charlestown, Mass., in 1660, afterwards at Marblehead, Salem, and Lynn, in all of which towns this name appears. At Marblehead, Mass., in 1691, Thomas Candage was engaged in the fishery business. All of this name are descendants of the early name of Cavendish, of good old English blood. In 1766, James Candage, Jr., first settled in Blue Hill, Me. His father, James, and wife, Elizabeth, soon followed, in 1769, and took up his residence at that place.

James, Jr., was born May 9, 1753; married Hannah (born Aug. 4, 1753), daughter of John Roundy, who also settled at Blue Hill in 1762. He died in 1818; she died in March, 1851. He, with Joseph Wood, and their families, all of Beverly, Mass., became the first white settlers of Blue Hill. The children of James, Jr., and Hannah (Roundy) Candage were: (1) Elizabeth, born Sept. 16, 1775; (2) Gideon, born March 17, 1778, died Oct. 26, 1782; (3) Samuel Roundy, born Jan. 15, 1781; Phebe Weir Parker; (4) Gideon, born Aug. 18, 1783; (5) Sarah, born Jan. 4, 1786; (6) James, born April 30, 1788, died Aug. 1, 1798; (7) Azor, born April 8, 1791; (8) John, born Dec. 21, 1793, died Dec. 20, 1798.

Samuel Roundy Candage, the father of Capt. Candage, married, Feb. 29, 1816, Phebe Weir, daughter of Simeon and Mary (Perkins) Parker, and granddaughter of Hon. Oliver Parker, of Castine, Me., a judge of the Court of Common Pleas from 1800 to 1815, who was a native of Worcester, Mass., 1728.

The children of this marriage were: (1) Simeon Parker, born Nov. 21, 1816, died Dec. 31, 1842; lost at sea; (2) John Walker, born March 15, 1818, died April 20, 1822; (3) James Roundy, born April 8, 1819, died at Fortune Island, one of the Bahamas,

Nov. 14, 1856; (4) Samuel Parker Brooks, born Jan. 25, 1821, died Sept. 1, 1826; (5) Robert Parker, born Oct. 26, 1822, died Jan. 30, 1878; (6) Dorothy Perkins, born Feb. 16, 1825, died Aug. 28, 1826; (7) Rufus George Frederick, born July 28, 1826; (8) Samuel Franklin, born Jan. 21, 1828, died May 7, 1863, at Honolulu, Sandwich Islands; (9) John Brooks, born June 24, 1829, died July 23, 1870, at Australia; (10) Mary Perkins, born Aug. 12, 1831, died Sept. 4, 1831; (11) Hannah Roundy, born Aug. 12, 1831, died Sept. 4, 1831; (12) Charles Edward, born April 20, 1833, died April 14, 1862, at Honolulu, Sandwich Islands. The father died Dec. 23, 1852. The mother died Oct. 2, 1850.

Of this large family, the subject of this notice is the only one living. Seven of these children grew to manhood, and became commanders of vessels in the merchant service. Capt. R. G. F. Candage married, first, Elizabeth Augusta, born Jan. 17, 1829, daughter of Elijah, Jr., and Mary (Richards) Corey, of Brookline, Mass., May 1, 1853. The wife died Nov. 18, 1871. He married, second, Ella M., daughter of Benjamin and Sarah K. (Hall) White, of Revere, Mass., May 22, 1873. Children: (1) George Frederick Candage, born May 25, 1874; (2) Ella Augusta Candage, born Nov. 1, 1875; (3) Phebe Teresa Candage, born Oct. 12, 1877; (4) Robert Brook Candage, born Dec. 23, 1878; (5) Sarah Hall Candage, born Dec. 25, 1880, deceased; (6) Sarah Caroline Candage, born Feb. 2, 1882.

Capt. Candage passed the first twelve years of his life on his father's farm and in tending the saw-mill near by, attending school three months in the summer and two or three months in the winter. Upon arriving at the age of twelve, his father requiring his services in the mill and on the farm, he had to content himself with three months' schooling in the year for five years, to which were added two terms in the Blue Hill Academy, and that completed his early education. His father having been a mariner in his early life, and all his older brothers following the sea, he chose the same occupation, and determined on seeing the world. When he arrived at eighteen he started on his career for life as a mariner, sailing between Boston and ports of Maine, and gradually going farther from home, all along the whole coast of the United States, visiting all the principal ports. We soon find our young friend engaging in longer voyages, and to foreign countries, and in course of time his old friends built a vessel for him, a brig, named the "Equator." It was while at home at this time that his mother died quite suddenly. The first voyage of our young captain was from Blue Hill to Boston, with a cargo of paving-blocks. This was at the age of twenty-four. From thence he commenced on foreign voyages, the first being to Valparaiso, Chili, Jan. 18, 1851.

He has made three voyages around the world; eight voyages round Cape Horn to the westward, and five to the eastward, making thirteen times both ways that he has doubled that cape. He has made several voyages to San Francisco, three to Callao and the Chinchas, three to China, two to Australia, three to India, etc. In all he has sailed over three hundred thousand miles of ocean.

The following vessels are some he has sailed in: Sloops, "Fame," "Pink," and "Credit;" schooners, "Passamaquoddy," "Edward," "Zodiac," and "Zulette;" half-brigs, "Curaçoa," "Delhi," "Tavella," and "Equator;" square-rigged brig, "Pioneer;" bark, "Chesapeake;" ships, "Kentucky," "Java," "Iowa," "Hoogly," "Wizard," "Jamestown," "Electric Spark," and "National Eagle."

The ports visited and voyages made by Capt. Candage during his quarter of a century of sea-life are as follows:

Ports in Maine.—Blue Hill, Orland, Calais, Eastport, East Thomaston, St. George, Boothbay, Portland, etc., and Portsmouth, N. H.

Ports in Massachusetts.—Gloucester, Salem, Danvers, Beverly, Boston.

Other Ports in United States.—New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Alexandria, Va., Hampton Roads, Norfolk, Charleston, S. C., Mobile, and New Orleans, and Sisal, in Yucatan.

Ports in the West Indies.—Bermuda, St. Martin, Cardenas, Cuba, Kingston, Falmouth, and Montego Bay, Jamaica.

Mediterranean Ports.—Gibraltar, Malaga, Port Mahon.

European Ports.—Cork, Liverpool, London, Leith, Newcastle, Shields, Glasgow, etc., Cherbourg, and Havre.

South American Ports.—Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Valparaiso, Callao, and Chinha Islands, Pisco.

Northwest Coast of America.—San Francisco, Port Townsend, Port Ludlow, and Port Gamble, Puget Sound.

Oceanica.—Sandwich Island, Baker's Island, and in Australia, Adelaide and Melbourne.

China.—Shanghai, Tsung-Ming, Woo-Sung, Hong-Kong, Whampoa, Canton.

India.—Angie, Java, Calcutta, and Bombay.

Many of these ports were visited several times. The last voyage made at sea as commander was in the ship "National Eagle," of which he was part owner, arriving in Boston from Liverpool, England, in May, 1867. He gave up seafaring life and became a resident of Brookline, June 1, 1867, where he now resides.

Capt. Candage has frequently been elected to fill offices of trust and responsibility, and still holds several public positions. He was elected a member of Doric Lodge, F. and A. M., New York City, 1853; member of American Shipmasters' Association, 1861; Boston Marine Society, 1867; president of the same, 1883. The same year was treasurer of Boston Fire-Brick and Clay Retort Manufacturing Company. In 1873 elected president of the same; 1868, marine inspector of the "Record of American and Foreign Shipping." The same year appointed marine inspector by the Boston Board of Marine Underwriters; held that office ten years. In 1871 chosen member of the school committee of Brookline for five years (three years chairman); also trustee of Public Library. In 1872 elected assessor of town of Brookline, and declined. In 1876, one of the managers of Boston Port and Seaman's Aid Society; resigned in 1883. In 1877 was elected a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society; regent of the Sagamore Council, Royal Arcanum, of Brookline. In 1880-82, selectman of Brookline. In 1881, treasurer of Boston Seaman's Bethel Relief Society, and president of Boston Terra Cotta Company; president of Massachusetts Safety Fund Association. In 1882-83, representative to the General Court from Brookline; was on Committee on Harbors and Public Lands, and Committee on Rules. In December, 1882, he was appointed surveyor for the Bureau Veritas of Paris, France, for district of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. In January, 1883, the last official act of Governor Long was to appoint Capt. Candage a justice of the peace; 1883, president of the Boston Marine Society.

He has always been interested in matters of public improvements, and in the general welfare of the community, having often presided as moderator of town-meetings, chairman of the Republican town committee for eight years, and being a member of the Republican State Central Committee from Second Norfolk District, beside delegate to many State, Congressional, county, councillor, and senatorial conventions.

In 1877-79 he was W. M. of Beth-Horan Lodge of F. and A. M., of Brookline, and since that time Chaplain. Being a member of the Baptist Church, he has held several offices in the same. He is now a member of the Thursday Literary Club. For seven years he has been a director of the Franklin Fire Insurance Company of Boston. In March, 1884, he was elected assessor of the town of Brookline.

COL. THOMAS ASPINWALL.

Col. Thomas Aspinwall, the son of Dr. William and Susanna (Gardner) Aspinwall, was born on the old "Aspinwall homestead," in Brookline, Mass.,—which has been in that family since 1650,—May 23, 1786. He received his early education at the common schools of that town, and fitted for college at Leicester Academy. He entered Harvard College as a sophomore in 1801, in the same class with his brother, Dr. William Aspinwall, Jr., who became a physician, but died when a young man, in 1818. He took his degree of A.B. in 1804, and received the high honor of Latin salutatory at commencement. Three years later he delivered the Latin oration on receiving the degree of A.M. Immediately upon graduating he entered the law-office of William Sullivan, Esq., in Boston, and in due time was admitted to the Suffolk bar, and became the law partner of Mr. Sullivan.

It was about this time he became a member of the "Independent Cadets" of Boston. This corps was in constant training, as war had been threatened long before 1812. Immediately after Madison's war proclamation was issued, Col. Aspinwall, who was then adjutant with the rank of captain, applied for a commission in the army of the United States, and was soon appointed a major of the Ninth Regiment of Infantry, which he was largely instrumental in recruiting and in its efficiency of training exercise. With this regiment he entered the service, and served his country manfully, faithfully, and gallantly. He was in several actions. He was at Sackett's Harbor in 1813, and for his bravery there he was brevetted lieutenant-colonel. On the 10th of August, 1814, when the British assaulted Fort Erie, Col. Aspinwall commanded "Scott's Brigade," and on the memorable 17th of September following he led Miller's column at the storming of the British intrenchments. It was on this occasion that he lost his left arm.

The volunteers of the year 1813 from what are now the four Bridgewater, Easton, Stoughton, Canton, and Sharon, all enlisted in Col. Aspinwall's regiment, and whenever any of the soldiers talked over the matters of the battles of that year and Col. Aspinwall's name was mentioned, their countenances would brighten, and all bore ample testimony to his bravery as a soldier and to his great ability as an officer. He outlived all the soldiers in his command.

It is said that at the battle of Sackett's Harbor the British troops were veterans, and that, knowing Col. Aspinwall's regiment and the other regiments were new levies, they determined to frighten them from their position taken in some new log barracks in an open space near the town, and for that purpose the British troops marched up to the new levies and made desperate efforts to dislodge them, and the battle was fought for more than an hour by a portion of both armies discharging their muskets in each other's faces. During this action neither Col. Aspinwall nor his men budged an inch. The stentorian voice of their leader could be heard encouraging his men amid the roar of musketry almost in his face and eyes.

Peace was soon after declared, the army was reduced, but Col. Aspinwall was tendered a permanent position; but considering the life of a soldier in time of peace an indolent life, and the only service being on the frontier, he decided to retire to active civil life. He therefore resigned his commission and returned to the practice of his profession.

Soon after he had re-established himself he was appointed consul and agent of claims at London, in June, 1815, and immediately entered upon the duties of that consulate January 1st following. He continued to perform the duties of that office with exemplary fidelity and to the acceptance of all whose duties required his agency, until the 2d day of August, 1853, when President Franklin Pierce called him home without assigning any reason, but which really was to make room for one of his political friends. During the interval of time in which he was in office it was pleasant to mark the universal respect and cordial good will which existed towards him.

In 1854 he returned to America and took up his residence in Boston, where he resided till his death. Previous to his leaving London, Messrs. Baring Brothers & Company, George Peabody, Nathan Meyer, Rothschild & Sons, and thirty-three other firms and individuals presented Col. Aspinwall a token of their regard and respect in an elegant service of plate, accompanied by the following letter:

"DEAR SIR,—Having been informed that you are about to return to your native country, we cannot allow you to depart without offering you the expression of our sincere esteem and regard; and we avail ourselves of the occasion to tender you our best thanks for your uniform courtesy and kindness in all our intercourse with you during a long period, in which you have filled the important post of consul-general in this city.

"You have administered the arduous duties of your office with dignity, ability, and integrity unimpeached; you have lent a willing and patient attention to appeals for relief in all cases of distress, granting freely your counsel and your money, inviting others to aid you when needful. Wishing to mark our sense of your merits and of the efficiency with which you have discharged your duties by some lasting memorial, we request your acceptance of a service of plate; and permit us at the same time to offer our best wishes for the future health and happiness of yourself and of your family.

"LONDON, December, 1853."

Col. Aspinwall was not only a venerable patriot and learned in military science, but was well versed in the history of the country, and was always ready to communicate his information to others. He was an active and useful member of the Massachusetts Historical Society, having been elected a corresponding member during his residence in London, in July, 1833, and soon after his return home, in 1855, he was chosen a resident member. At the time of his death he had been connected with this society longer than any other member. He served the society on the standing committee for four years, and was one of the publishing committee during the publishing of three volumes of their collections. He was vice-president from 1862 to 1870. During his resident membership he made valuable contributions to the collections of the society, such as the papers on the Narragansett Patent, and on William Vassall, also his tribute to his much cherished friend, Gen. Winfield Scott, on the occasion of his death.

In the ninth and tenth volumes of the fourth series of the society's collections may be found a large collection of valuable material gathered during his residence in England, entitled "The Aspinwall Papers," which will ever keep his name in fresh remembrance in the minds of his friends and the public. These were edited and annotated after he had reached his eighty-fifth year.

Upon the breaking out of the Rebellion in 1861 he tendered his services to Gen. Scott, at the age of seventy-five, which were not accepted, but during the progress of the war he ever manifested a lively interest in, and kept himself informed of, all that was going on,—the movement of the armies, etc.

The following resolution was passed by the Massachusetts Historical Society in testimony of the respect with which he was regarded by that learned body:

"Resolved, That in the death of the venerable Thomas Aspinwall this society has lost one of its oldest and most respected members, to whom we are indebted for important and valuable services, and whose memory is worthy of being cherished as that of a gallant soldier in his youth, a faithful public servant abroad in his manhood, and a useful and patriotic citizen at home in his more advanced years."

In January, 1873, Col. Aspinwall's health began to give way to infirmity, although he was seen daily on the streets of Boston for exercise, but recognizing scarcely any one outside of his family, and remembering but little or nothing of things of the past.

His sickness was but of a short duration, only four days and a half was he confined to his bed. His last hours were so calm and peaceful that one could hardly notice when he breathed his last. He died on Friday, the 11th day of August, 1876, at his residence, 33 Hancock Street, Boston, aged ninety years, two months, and nineteen days. His funeral took place at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, in Brookline, on Monday following his death, at four o'clock in the afternoon. The church was well filled with relatives and friends from Boston and elsewhere, and by prominent citizens of the town generally.

The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. J. G. Littell, of Wilmington, Del., in the absence of the pastor. Immediately upon the conclusion of the service at the church the body, which was placed in an elegant casket, was taken in charge by the following pall-bearers: Hon. George Tyler Bigelow, ex-chief justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts; Maj.-Gen. H. W. Benham, United States army; Hon. Josiah Quincy, Hon. Leverett Saltonstall, Amos A. Lawrence, Esq., and Samuel S. Shaw, Esq.

The remains are in the family lot in "Walnut Hills" Cemetery, Brookline.

DR. WILLIAM ASPINWALL.

The subject of this notice was the son of Thomas and Joanna (Gardner) Aspinwall, born in Brookline, May 23, 1743, on the farm where five generations of the name have lived, which building is now standing, and is owned by one of the Aspinwall family, a namesake of the doctor. The old house is but a short distance from the spot where Peter the ancestor resided for a short time during the building of this house, and is on an avenue named in honor of the family. Dr. Aspinwall fitted for college under the direction of Rev. Amos Adams, pastor of the "First Church in Roxbury," entered college in 1760, and graduated in 1764, receiving his degrees of Master and Bachelor of Arts in their usual order. Among his classmates we may mention Bishop Parker, Governor Strong, of Massachusetts, and Shearjashub Bourne, a member of Congress. Immediately upon leaving college, having decided on the medical profession as one for which he had a decided preference, he entered the office of, and pursued his studies with, the justly and highly-celebrated Dr. Benjamin Gale, of Killingworth, Conn., completing his education at the hospital in Philadelphia, where he received the degree of doctor of medicine in the University of Pennsylvania about 1768. He attended a course of medical lectures in that city in the winter of 1768-69. It will here be remembered that the first course of anatomical lectures ever given in this country were delivered only four years previous to that time, in that city, by Dr. William Shippen. The following certificate from Dr. Shippen shows the estimation of the ability of Dr. Aspinwall:

"This may Certify, that Mr. William Aspinwall has attended with uncommon diligence my course of Lectures on Anatomy and Surgery, also my course of midwifery, which, added to his close attention to all the other medical lectures, and to the practice of the Pennsylvania Hospital, has amply fitted him to practice physic, surgery, and midwifery with credit and reputation. I can with pleasure add, that he promises fair, by his irreproachable conduct since his arrival in Philadelphia, to be in every other respect a useful and agreeable member of society."
"PHILADELPHIA, 27 May, 1769."

Professors Kuhn and Morgan are no less explicit in their commendations. The following certificate of Professor William Bond also confirms the foregoing opinions, after Mr. Aspinwall's attendance upon his course of clinical lectures:

"He has, on these and many other occasions, given me so many proofs of his capacity, assiduity, and improvement in the healing arts, that I with pleasure give him this testimonial of my esteem and affection; and do hereby recommend him, on my good faith, to the publick, as a judicious young physician and surgeon, who has taken indefatigable pains in acquiring a knowledge of the different branches of his profession."

Having completed his course of medical studies and attendance on lectures in Philadelphia, he returned to his native town, and immediately commenced a course of successful practice at the age of twenty-six, which soon extended far and wide, often requiring a journey of forty miles to visit his patients. These he usually performed on horseback, carrying his medicines in saddle-bags,—a custom in early days, when apothecary-shops were not as numerous as they are to-day.

At the breaking out of the war of the Revolution an enthusiastic impulse seized upon the doctor to such a degree that all personal and professional considerations were lost or forgotten in that all-absorbing and patriotic sentiment which had led thousands to rally to the country's rescue. Being young, ardent, and patriotic, he went with the Brookline men, "not standing on the order of their going," not by the road, but by the shortest way, as the bee flies, across fields, jumping fences, and over the river, and were soon in Cambridge, and joined those who saw the enemy safe in Charlestown. In the skirmish at Cambridge the doctor was actively engaged in the combat. In this skirmish Capt. Isaac Gardner was killed, pierced by twelve bullets and bayonet wounds. On Dr. Aspinwall's return to Cambridge, he sought and found the body of Capt. Gardner, and had it carried from the field to his afflicted family, which consisted of a wife and eight children. Dr. Aspinwall early applied for a commission in the army, but his personal friend, Dr. Joseph Warren, afterwards Maj.-Gen. Warren, dissuaded him from this pursuit, and he finally decided to serve his country in the medical department. He was appointed surgeon in Gen. Heath's brigade, and very soon became deputy director in the hospital at Jamaica Plain.

His appointment as surgeon of the hospital at Roxbury by the Congress of the colony of Massachusetts Bay bears the autograph of James Warren, president, and is dated at Watertown, June 28, 1775. On the 19th day of August, 1775, he was surgeon to St. Thomas' Hospital, otherwise known as "American Hospital."

The deep personal interest which he took in the war between the two nations acting upon a mind deeply imbued with a sense of his country's wrongs, gave strength and tone to his sentiments that were of immense value to him in the later part of his life.

Dr. Aspinwall's language on political subjects was bold and strong, his creed being that of a Democratic-Republican. In the unhappy scenes of party excitement he not only unwaveringly adhered to what he deemed original and fundamental principles, but he aimed to preserve a good conscience, and to do justice to the honest opinions, the pure motives, and undoubted integrity of his opponents. He was not a political persecutor, and when he was in the councils of the State resolutely declined acting with his coadjutors, who were disposed to drive from office incumbents whose only fault was what they deemed political heresy.

Soon after the death of Dr. Zabdiel Boylston, also a native of Brookline, that eminent and distinguished physician and first inoculator of smallpox in America, Dr. Aspinwall established himself in that undertaking, and erected hospitals for that purpose on his own estate, one of which has been standing within the memory of a person now living in this town. One of these pest-hospitals was on the left-hand side of Aspinwall Avenue, between Toxteth Street and the railroad bridge. Another was near to the corner of Perry Street and the same avenue. He was very successful in his treatment of cases of this disorder, and his fame soon spread to a great distance. His practice was the inoculation of the genuine article of smallpox virus, so as to bring about the disease by design, and have it treated scientifically, instead of awaiting in expectation of receiving it, and being in constant dread and fear of the contagion. Probably there was no physician in the United States who had inoculated so many persons as Dr. Aspinwall, and no one who had acquired such a celebrity in the treatment of this malignant disease. In 1788 the doctor was allowed to keep an open hospital by vote of the town, as appears by the following:

"Voted, that Doct^r William Aspinwall have Liberty and he is hereby Granted Liberty to continue Inoculating with the Small Pox as Usual."

To this hospital large numbers resorted, and from which they returned with warm expressions of satisfaction.

Dr. Aspinwall continued in the successful treatment of this disease till the introduction of vaccine inoculation by Dr. Waterhouse, of Cambridge. He had made ample accommodation for an enlarged practice, and established what might have been justly deemed a sure foundation for prosperity when vaccine inoculation was first introduced. He well knew that if vaccination possessed the virtues ascribed to it his schemes of fortune and usefulness arising from inoculation were at an end, he should be involved in a loss, and his anticipations of a fortune be blasted. But as an honest man and faithful physician, he deemed it his duty to inquire into the efficacy of the novel substitute. With the utmost alacrity, therefore, he gave the experiment a fair trial, promptly acknowledged its efficacy, and relinquished his own establishment.

An article published in the Medical Intelligencer from Dr. Benjamin Waterhouse well illustrates the honesty of Dr. Aspinwall, which is as follows:

"The late Dr. Aspinwall, a man of great sagacity, and uncommonly well grounded in the principles of his profession, gave evidence of it on the first sight of a vaccine pustule. I had invited all the elder physicians of Boston and the vicinity of Cambridge to see the first vaccine pustules ever raised in the New World. They gave them the ordinary inspection of an unusual eruption on the skin; all but Dr. Aspinwall, whose attention was riveted on the pustule, its areola and efflorescence. He came a second time, and viewed the inoculated part in every light, and reviewed it, and seemed loath to leave the sight of it. He seemed wrapped in serious thought, and said repeatedly, 'This pustule is so like smallpox, and yet it is not smallpox, that, should it, on scabbing, take out a part of the true skin, so as to leave an indelible mark or pit behind, I shall be ready to conclude that it is a mild species of smallpox, hitherto unknown here.'

"He had been in the habit of examining the smallpox pimple and pustule through glasses, to see if it had taken, and he remarked that they were peculiar, unique, and unlike any eruption he ever saw, but this kind pox came the nearest to them. Some time after I gave him a portion of the virus, to make his own experiments and observe the progress of its inoculation and coincidence of the constitutional symptoms, when he observed that its progress, febrile affection, and mode of scabbing were very like smallpox, and so of the indelible mark left on the arm, yet throughout the whole visible affection different. To crown the whole of his honorable conduct, he, some time after, took all those of my family whom I had vaccinated into his smallpox hospital, the only licensed one in the State, and there tested them to his satisfaction, and one to the verge of rigid experiment, and then he said to me and to others, 'This new inoculation of yours is no sham. As a man of humanity I rejoice in it, although it will take from me a handsome annual income.' His conduct throughout was so strongly marked with superior intelligence, generosity, and honor as to excite my esteem and respect, and I accordingly dedicate this effusion of gratitude to the memory of the Hon. William Aspinwall, M.D., a gentleman, respectable in public life as a counselor, and an honor to his profession as a physician."

Of Dr. Aspinwall's religious life it may with truth be said he was always religious, and at an early age made a public profession of religion, and was always present at public worship, unless professional duties prevented. He was ever ready to impart religious as well as medical counsel at the bed of sickness, and for his holy faith he always had the most profound respect. Under bereavement, infirmity, or sickness, his religious principles yielded him firm support and buoyed him above the vicissitudes of life. During a confinement of several of the last years of his life, when deprived of his sight, the religion of Jesus Christ was his support and consolation. It was the theme of his discourse, and he considered his testimony in its favor the best legacy he could leave to his children.

Dr. Aspinwall was endowed with a strong intellect and a resoluteness that shrunk from no labor or duty. He was an example of perseverance amidst untoward circumstances and of accommodating them to his peculiar situation. To young physicians his example holds out encouragement, that economy, integrity, constant industry, and unremitting study of his profession will finally succeed, and bring reputation and competence. Few men in any profession have sacrificed so small a portion of their lives to pleasure or to inaction as he. His was a life of incessant toil.

As an instance of his devotion to his professional business is the following anecdote by a friend. One day, on returning home from a round of visits, he found at his table one of his college mates, whom he had not seen since they were at Cambridge together, and whom he could probably never meet again. In the midst of their delightful intercourse a message came for Dr. Aspinwall to visit a sick person ten miles distant. Without the least delay he took leave of his friend, mounted his horse, and hastened away.

Says one who knew him well,—

"I have a clear recollection of my terror when, sixty-four years ago, a very old man, with but one eye,—he seemed to be a very old man, though he was but fifty then,—came towards me, with a little glittering weapon in his hand, as I sat in my nurse's lap. I had the promise of a cake of gingerbread if I behaved well, and so I sat still and suffered him to make a little incision in my arm. I had been carried from Boston to Brookline to be inoculated for the smallpox at the hospital there, and there we were to remain for several weeks, until the affair was well over, when, after having been thoroughly smoked and purified, we were again to go forth into the world.

"These associations were but short-lived, however, for this old man with but one eye really seemed to see farther into the hearts of little people than most of people who have two, and to have a master-key to their very souls. He carried me in his arms about his farm, and showed me his calves and pigs and poultry; told me some very pleasant stories, and gave me a puppy; in short, I became so fond of him that I asked my mother to say to him that he might inoculate me as often as he had a mind to; and when at last the time of our departure arrived, and we had been smoked all around, and he kissed me as he put me into the carriage, I bawled out loud; and I truly believe the good old gentleman was gratified by this unmistakable evidence of my affection."

He further adds:

"My recollections of Brookline do not quadrate with its present appearance; my reminiscences of it are of groves, and lawns, and orchards, and some noble elms around the preparatory, as it was called,—more trees and fewer houses.

"Upon the whole, my recollections of Brookline and of my residence at the hospital are very pleasant, and the impression of all I saw and heard must have been forcibly made; for by the assistance of a sort of Swedenborgian memory I can get up a very respectable resurrection of Dr. William Aspinwall at any time, just as he stood bending benignantly over me sixty-four years ago. I must have had rather a severe time of it, for I was blinded by the disease for more than a fortnight; during which my principal distress arose from my inability to see my new puppy. The good doctor often sat by my side and comforted me, telling me that I was much better off than he was, for in a very few days I should certainly see again as well as before with both of my eyes, but that one of his was closed forever.

"Dr. Aspinwall was about six feet in height, strongly built, and without any tendency to corpulency, even in his latter days. When a boy he entirely lost the use of his right eye in a manner which it may be well for young people to comprehend and remember. He had drawn his arrow to the head, when the notch escaping from the bow-string, the weapon was forced backward into his right eye, and utterly destroyed that organ. When I first saw him his left eye was perfect. But in his old age he was even deprived of the sight of the remaining eye by disease. His powers of vision were undoubtedly impaired by the too excessive use of his only eye, to such an extent that it brought on a disease which terminated in a cataract and deprived him of his sight. A few years previous to his death Dr. Nathan Smith, a professor in the medical schools at Yale, Dartmouth, and Bowdoin Colleges attempted to remove the cataract, but was unsuccessful, and thus the glimmering light that remained was totally extinguished. This calamity he endured with that characteristic resignation for which this excellent Christian had ever been remarkable under all and every trial of his life. He considered it a merciful dispensation in his Maker to suspend his labors and give him leisure and opportunity, which during a very active life he had too seldom enjoyed, for religious reflection and preparation for death. By a daily exercise of body and mind he preserved both in full vigor. His curiosity about public events and daily occurrences continued, and some of his last thoughts were upon his country, its prosperity, its improvement, its distinguished men, its relation with foreign powers. He was anxious that wise and good men should bear sway in our land, and that the intellectual, benevolent, and religious institutions received from our forefathers should be perpetuated."

While his professional duties consumed so much of his time, he was also not unmindful of what was doing in his native town, the birthplace and place of burial of so many of his kindred. He devoted time to its interests, and the records of the town abound in evidence of the respect and confidence reposed in him, by electing him to various positions of honor and responsibility in the gift of the town. He represented the town of Brookline in the State Legislature several years, and was thrice elected State senator for Norfolk County, beside having been called to advise in the Council of the State of Massachusetts. He was solicited to become one of the justices of the Court of Common Pleas, but declined the honor, and retired from public employment. He was a justice of the peace throughout the commonwealth, and member of the Massachusetts Medical Society. In each position he was faithful to his constituents and to the public weal, as well as unwavering in his political creed.

In 1788, Dr. Aspinwall purchased forty acres of land of Benjamin White, including the prominent and high hill on the south side of Washington Street, upon which he erected the present mansion-house in 1803, and the same has been occupied by his children and grandchildren since his decease, and is now in possession of his grandson and namesake, Hon. William Aspinwall. At the time the doctor purchased this estate there were but few houses in sight where now they may be counted by dozens. At the lower slope of the hill there formerly stood an old house owned and occupied by Francis Blanchard, the first sexton of the "Brookline Meeting-House," when there was but one in the town.

On the 16th day of April, 1823, he peacefully surrendered all that was near and dear to him on earth and departed to dwell in a mansion on high.

WILLIAM ASPINWALL.

William Aspinwall, the son of Col. Thomas and Louisa Elizabeth (Poignard) Aspinwall, was born in London, England, Feb. 16, 1819. Educated in a private boarding-school at Hammersmith, near London, till nearly fourteen years of age; passed a few months at William Well's school in Cambridge, Mass.; entered Harvard College August, 1834, graduated A.B., 1838; entered the "Dane" Law School the same year; studied law two years; took the degree of LL.B.; was one year in the law-office of Hon. Franklin Dexter and George William Phillips; admitted to the Suffolk bar in 1841; became a resident of Brookline in 1847; married, Jan. 11, 1848, Arixene Southgate Porter, third daughter of Richard King Porter, of Portland, Me. (who was a nephew of Rufus King, United States senator from Massachusetts, and afterwards from New York, and minister to Great Britain). Mr. Aspinwall was town clerk of Brookline, 1850 and 1851; representative to the General Court, 1851-52; delegate to the Constitutional Convention in 1853; senator from Norfolk County in 1854; trial justice, 1857-60; resigned in 1860; trustee of the Public Library, 1858-75, 1878, 1884; assessor, 1870, re-elected 1871, and declined; selectman, 1871-72; water commissioner, 1873.

EDWIN GROVER.

Edwin Grover, son of Simeon and Abigail (Hagar) Grover, was born in Newton, Mass., March 24, 1835. His early education was in the public schools of the town, Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and Kimball Academy, Meriden, N. H., from which he entered Harvard College in the class of 1857, from which he graduated with high rank. Soon after graduating he taught school in Jamaica Plain one year, studied law, and was admitted to the bar in May, 1859, and to the New York bar in December following. During his leisure hours in that city he occupied his leisure time writing editorially for the New York Times and the Philadelphia Inquirer, and with private pupils. On his twenty-fifth birthday, March 24, 1860, he married Anna M., daughter of Thomas and Julia A. (Hathaway) Porter, of Lawrence, Mass., formerly of Taunton, Mass. In August, 1861, returning to Massachusetts, he selected Corey Hill as a place of residence, on which he erected the first house built on that eminence. The place is now owned and occupied by George F. Fabyan. This place Mr. Grover began to occupy in February, 1862, and immediately commenced upon the successful practice of his profession in Boston. In the early part of 1863 he was appointed trial justice for the county of Norfolk, and entered upon its duties immediately. He had a large and lucrative practice, and enjoyed the confidence of the citizens of Brookline and vicinity, and was fast gaining in popularity as an able and successful lawyer. Among his clients were the extensive boot and shoe house of T. and E. Bachellor & Co., of Boston, for whom he, on the 14th day of December, 1863, started on a journey to the South and West to collect and adjust settlements amounting to several hundred thousand dollars. When at Duvall's Bluff, Ark., on White River, on his way to Little Rock, he was taken suddenly ill with congestion of the liver, where, after an illness of three or four days, he died, Jan. 29, 1864, on board the steamer "Polar Star."

CHAPTER LXX.

HYDE PARK.

BY EDMUND DAVIS.

HYDE PARK lies in the eastern part of the county, and is about seven miles from the State-House in Boston. It is bounded on the north by the part of Boston which formerly constituted the town of West Roxbury, on the east by the part of Boston which was formerly Dorchester, on the southeast and south by Milton, and on the west by Dedham. Two lines of railroad—the Boston and Providence, and the New York and New England—run through it, being about one and one-third miles apart where they enter the town on the northeast, and gradually approaching and crossing each other on the southwest, near the Dedham line. There are seven stations within the limits of the town, four on the Boston and Providence Railroad, and three on the New York and New England Railroad. The Neponset River flows through the town in a course approximately parallel with the railroads, part of the way forming the boundary between it and Milton. Mother Brook, a water-course partly a stream and partly a canal, leading from the Charles River, enters the town on the west and empties into the Neponset near the centre of the town. Further natural drainage is afforded by a small brook running toward the northeast and emptying into Stony Brook, which has given our neighbors of Boston so much trouble and expense.

The area of the town is two thousand eight hundred acres, of which about two hundred acres are devoted to streets or ways. This fact argues a pretty close settlement, which is, indeed, the case, there being twelve hundred and sixty-five houses, containing upwards of eight thousand inhabitants. The surface of the land is somewhat diversified by hill and plain; enough so to please the eye, without causing much inconvenience to road-makers or builders. None of the hills are so high that they cannot be easily surmounted; none of the valleys so low that good drainage cannot be obtained. Between the railroads the surface is for the most part quite level, the beautiful little eminence of Mount Neponset being the most noticeable exception. East of the Neponset River the land rises somewhat abruptly, forming Fairmount Heights, the place where the pioneers of this new town first founded their homes, and which to-day is closely covered with pleasant and in some instances elegant residences bordered by wide and well-shaded streets and avenues. West of the Boston and Providence Railroad the surface again swells into slight knolls and elevations, upon which stand many fine residences. This portion is known as Sunnyside. And still farther beyond this is a considerable tract of hilly and rocky territory forming a part of the rugged, woody wilderness, known as Muddy Pond Woods. These extend far beyond the town limits and into Dedham and Boston. They are a favorite resort of pleasure-seekers, traversed as they are in all directions by numerous wood-roads, and it has been well said that, "immersed in this maze of sylvan delights, one hardly realizes that he is within a few miles of the metropolis of New England, and requires but little imagination to persuade himself that he is among the primeval forests of Maine."

Readville is the name of the southeast portion of the town, and is for the most part a level plain, not so closely built over as the other parts of the town. In this section, however, and the territory adjoining it, the greater part of the manufactories are located. A branch railroad to Dedham Centre leaves the Boston and Providence Railroad here. Towards the northeast part of the town, on the same railroad, are the pleasant and thriving districts of Hazlewood and Clarendon Hill. Opposite the former, at about a quarter of a mile's distance, on a gently rising hill, stands the residence of Mr. Henry Grew, the house and its grounds on the sloping hillside, backed by the forest, forming a charming landscape. Still another small village is clustered around the paper-mills of Messrs. Tileston & Hollingsworth, at the eastern extremity of River Street, and near the River Street Station, on the New York and New England Railroad. These several districts, though thus distinguished by distinctive names, are by no means isolated and separate villages; one touches upon another, the rows of houses continue unbroken, and there is nothing in the way of unoccupied territory to mark the end of one section or the beginning of another. The town is compact, and its divisions thoroughly welded together.

Hyde Park is a town of to-day, and its history is the history of to-day. Incorporated in 1868, anything which is to be said about it prior to that time belongs to the history of those adjoining towns from whose territory it was made up. The writer is thus deprived of the greater part of that material which age in the subject affords. As mists and vapors in the atmosphere lend to the outlines of objects at a distance more graceful and pleasing, and at the same time larger and more imposing, proportions, so the mists of time constitute media through which the men and events of long ago, though indistinct and shadowy, seem all the more grand and impressive. To the writer of to-day the attributes of his contemporaries are unmistakably human and personal; current events, though interesting, uninvested with special significance. It requires the halo of time, the attribute of remoteness, to take from any act its selfish and personal bearing, and leave alone conspicuous in it its effect upon subsequent events, and its influence upon the weal or woe of individuals or communities. The mind loves to contemplate the acts of those long since passed away as springing from motives grander and more prophetic than what we are willing to concede to the actors of our time, and to trace with laborious ingenuity, among the events succeeding those acts, indications here and there of results attributable to the far-sighted energy or self-denying sacrifices of the men of yore. We imagine a condition of things, material and intellectual, greatly different from that of the present, and in the toils, privations, and struggles of our ancestors discern a poetry and charm which they, probably, never dreamt of. We spiritualize the old, we rigidly keep the new down to hard practicality.

Yet in this brief review of Hyde Park as it is to-day, after its short existence of less than a score of years, it will be necessary to go a little beyond its corporate life and examine these influences to which it owes its being and the circumstances and surroundings which attended its inception.

One standing to-day upon the top of any of the small eminences which diversify the surface of the town, may, if the atmosphere is clear, sweep with his eye the lower harbor of Boston on the east, the Blue Hills which skirt the horizon in the southeast, the valley of the Neponset to the south glimmering through the green meadows, and to the west and north the elevated lands of the neighboring towns, while at his feet lie in thick profusion the hundreds of houses and miles of streets and avenues which go to make up the town of Hyde Park. The spires of churches, belfries, and tall chimneys of manufactories, the smoke of locomotives, and long lines of railways arrest the eyes, the hum of travel and traffic rises to the ear. Everything betokening the presence of eight thousand souls is manifest to the senses.

But far different was the view which awaited the anxious vision of the examining committee of pioneers in 1856; then, indeed, the hills, the rivers, and the high lands were to be seen in the distances, but nearer at hand little to mark the presence of man. There was then no considerable village on the line of the Boston and Providence Railroad from Jamaica Plain to the Canton viaduct. The territory between was spread over with farms, woodland, and the meadows which fill the basin of the upper Neponset. All of human habitations in sight were a few farm-houses along the road leading from Dedham to Dorchester, and the small hamlet around the old cotton-factory at Readville. This tract was mostly in a state of nature, a great portion of it covered with the pine, the cedar, and the birch, with here and there a solitary farm-house, surrounded by a small clearing, its occupants quietly pursuing their pastoral lives almost within sight of the steeples of Boston, and little dreaming of the change which was so soon to come over the scenes with which they had been so long familiar.

The highway leading from Dedham to Dorchester, a narrow lane rather than road leading out from this highway westerly into West Roxbury—a road from Milton to Dedham, and one from this last to a point on the Dorchester highway at the old cotton-mill in Readville—were the only avenues of travel. The line of railway then called the Midland (now the New York and New England Railroad) had succumbed to the weight of financial difficulties and was not in operation; the Boston and Providence Railroad had a depot only at Readville, and not more than half a dozen trains per day stopped there. The cotton-mill at Readville, and the old Sumner Mills, which had passed into the hands of Tileston & Hollingsworth, were the only manufacturing activities. The following extract from an address delivered at the first annual banquet of the town officers of Hyde Park, March 9, 1872, by the venerable Henry Grew, one of the town's oldest as well as most esteemed citizens, presents such a graphic and truthful portraiture of the condition of things at and shortly before the time under consideration as to fully justify its insertion here:

"Having purchased a few acres of land in the summer of 1846, I commenced building a house, and moved to this place, then a part of Dorchester, on the first day of May, 1847. At that time most of this territory was occupied by farmers. There were on River Street (the old highway between Dorchester and Dedham), within a range of a mile or a mile and a half, about ten houses, most of them small and occupied by farmers, with two exceptions, one a blacksmith and one a wheelwright, with a population not exceeding fifty persons." Also Sumner's mills and a few small tenements occupied by their operatives, and a small school-house near the same. "These were the only settlements in Dorchester. On the easterly side of the Neponset River, which was the boundary line between Dorchester and Milton (now Fairmount), all was woodland and pasture, the first settlement in that part of our town having commenced in 1855 or 1856. West of my house was an unbroken range of forest-trees; on the northerly side, in West Roxbury, were three farms. My nearest visiting neighbor was $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 3 miles distant. I was almost literally surrounded by woods, and my friends in Boston were much surprised at my going to such a wild and lonely place. There was, however, the Boston & Providence Railroad, on which cars passed within half a mile of my residence, running three times a day each way, to and from Boston. There was no station between Forest Hill and Readville; occasionally the cars stopped at the crossing at West Street to take or leave passengers. After a while some of the trains stopped at Kenney's Bridge (now Hyde Park Station), but passengers were few, perhaps ten or twelve in the course of a week. No house of shelter or station-master. The signal for stopping the cars by daylight was made by the turning of a signal board by the passenger, and after dark by the swinging of a lantern."

The region more particularly described in the foregoing address was known in "ye olden time" as Dorchester Commons, and was used as a common pasture for cattle by the inhabitants of that venerable town, and was then a wild and wholly uncultivated tract, covered with trees, shrubs, and undergrowth. A portion of it was embraced in the land granted to Lieutenant-Governor Stoughton, of Dorchester, in colonial times, and referred to by him in his will as "my farm which is beyond the Mother Brook." How far this farm extended is now an unsettled question, but undoubtedly it reached beyond the present limits of the town southwardly along the Neponset River, and through the easterly part of Readville, and probably embraced a goodly portion of the Fowl Meadows, that sort of land in the early days of the colonies being apparently far more prized than upland. The Governor had a farm-house somewhere on this farm, but where has not been determined. It is believed by many to have been on or near the site of the old Sprague Manor-house, itself a building dating back to near the time of the Revolution. "Dorchester Commons" was gradually sold or parceled out into farms. In 1846 three of these farms, containing about two hundred acres, and including what is now the most thickly settled and valuable part of Hyde Park, were purchased by three men, who proposed to build upon and occupy them. Two houses were erected, one the stone edifice, corner of Gordon Avenue and Austin Street, formerly known as the Lyman House, lately the residence of Charles A. White, and now owned and occupied by Col. John B. Bachelder, the Gettysburg historian; the other was the old homestead of Gordon H. Nott, whose enterprise and liberality were largely contributory to the early growth of this town. These three individuals then sold the remainder of their purchase to the Hyde Park Land Company. This company made some improvements and disposed of some of its land, but little was accomplished by it before 1856. The earliest recorded sale of some one hundred acres of the Commons was for five pounds colonial. The above sale to the Hyde Park Land Company was for the expressed price of twelve thousand dollars, or about sixty dollars per acre. Within the last fifteen years considerable parcels of the same land, without buildings, has changed owners for a consideration of seventy-five cents per foot, and in two instances for one dollar per square foot.

The portion of the town taken from Dedham was formerly known as "the Lower Plains," a title sufficiently descriptive of its topographical characteristics. Away back a large part of it was owned by one Damon, in memory of whom the school-house now in that locality received its name. About 1850 it was named by its inhabitants Readville, in honor of Mr. Read, who was the principal owner of the cotton-mill there. About this mill were some score of houses and tenements; and farther away, but still within the district, were perhaps half a dozen other residences, among them the homestead of D. L. Davis and that of the late William Bullard, both on the Milton road, still occupied by the then owners or their descendants, and the handsome and, for those days, elegant French cottage of William S. Damrell, then member of Congress. This stood, with ample and pleasant grounds around it, on a low hill rising back from the pond caused by the mill-dam. It is now owned and occupied by E. A. Fiske. Mr. Damrell, as the only Congressman ever resident upon soil now included in our town, claims more than a passing notice. He was an intense anti-slavery man, bold and fearless in the expression of his convictions, a warm friend and supporter of Sumner, Banks, Hale, and the other foremost champions of human liberty. He was of indomitable will, and resolutely attended to his public duties during the years immediately preceding the Rebellion, although so disabled by paralysis of the lower extremities, occasioned by lead-poisoning, as to require the assistance of a person upon either side to move from place to place. Three of his sons served in the army of the Union during the civil war. One died in the service, another died after the close of the war from disease contracted in the service; the third and only surviving member of the family is Maj. A. N. Damrell, Engineer Corps, U.S.A.

In 1856, the time when the first of those enterprises which caused the growth and development of Hyde Park was begun, Readville contained the bulk of the population within its limits.

Fairmount was the spot selected for the experiment, and the credit of the first suggestion of, and of the greatest activity in pushing forward, the particular plan which led to the settlement there must be awarded to Alpheus P. Blake.

He was then a young man, employed in Boston, poor in everything but a vigorous brain and iron determination. His occupation brought him into contact with others who, like himself, had business in the city, and whose means did not permit them to procure satisfactory homes for their families there. He conceived the project of forming an association of these men, and, uniting their slender means into a common fund, acquiring therewith on more favorable terms sufficient land in some one of the outlying towns to afford each member ample space for a country home at reasonable cost, and within easy access to his place of business. Previous to this attempts to build up villages on some of the many unoccupied fields and hillsides in the region around Boston had been frequently made, and generally with entire want of success. But in most, if not all, these enterprises the lands had been acquired and put upon the market by men who looked only to the money profit to themselves, and had no intention of personally being residents of the settlements which they tried to incubate. Mr. Blake believed and argued that a body of men seeking homes for themselves in the spot which they might select would deserve and meet with entire success. He personally visited and inspected many localities in the suburbs, and was most attracted by the possibilities of this vicinity. He desired to secure the tract between the Boston and Providence Railroad and the Neponset River, but found this already in the possession of men who had so exalted an opinion of its prospective value as to put their estimate of its present worth entirely beyond his means. His attention was thus, perforce, directed to the hill-slopes on the opposite banks of the river. He succeeded in getting a reasonable price fixed upon what he wanted, and then talked the matter up so well among his friends as to effect a formal organization of a number of them at a meeting held Sept. 1, 1855, at the residence of one of the members on Revere Street, Boston. Mr. Blake was made president of the company thus formed, and a committee was appointed to examine the locality suggested by him. Although the Midland Railroad then occupied the location now of the New York and New England, it was bankrupt and not in operation; so the investigating committee were obliged to go to Mattapan, on a branch of the Old Colony Railroad, and thence walk some two miles to their destination on Fairmount Hill.

This experience, with the wild appearance of the country it was proposed to acquire and subjugate, so discouraged several of the committee that they in disgust abandoned both the place and the enterprise, and thus forfeited their chances of future glory and profit. The remainder of the associates, however, to the number of twenty, "stuck," formed a trust company under the title of "The Fairmount Land Company and Twenty Associates," purchased one hundred acres off the back part of the farms of the dwellers upon the Brush Hill road in Milton, and on the 15th day of May, 1856, the first blow toward the erection of the first house in Fairmount was struck. This building is the one now standing on the corner of Beacon Street and Fairmount Avenue, at present occupied by G. H. Peare. Henry A. Rich, David Higgins, and William H. Nightingale were the first mechanics. The latter died some years since; the two former are still among the prominent residents of our town, Mr. Rich having been its collector the greater part of the time since its incorporation. It was the plan of the twenty associates that each should build and occupy a residence in the new territory. Most, if not all, of them did so, and three of them, Messrs. Fisk, Higgins, and Payson, still live in the houses then built by them. A wood-cut, printed in an illustrated paper of the date May 23, 1857, shows twenty-six buildings standing on the slope of Fairmount; another, in 1859, represents forty-two. This not rapid growth was effected only by untiring perseverance under many difficulties and discouragements. The association was made up of poor men, and great economy was necessary. The land was not fully paid for, the balance of the purchase price being secured by a ground mortgage. At one time the project was on the point of being abandoned by reason of the many obstacles encountered, but the firmness of the late D. B. Rich prevented this. The pioneers had a hard time of it. The nearest point at which railroad accommodations could be obtained was on the Boston and Providence, at Kenny's Bridge, and there but two trains each way per day stopped; there was no depot, and to reach Fairmount from there it was necessary to cross the river in small boats, or on the stringers of the Midland Railroad bridge.

The lumber and other material needed in the construction of their buildings was brought from Neponset by teams through Milton, and with much labor and difficulty transported up and over the crest of the hill. The mere preparation of roads over which the material could be brought was a work of no little amount on that rough hillside, then far more steep and uneven than now. The nearest store was at Mattapan; the nearest post-offices at Milton and East Dedham. To accommodate the mechanics engaged upon the first houses, D. B. Rich opened a "boarding-house" in an old building, where the seats were boxes and kegs, and the other accommodations of like ostentatious magnificence. But the settlers were resolute and full of resources. They endured what they could not remedy, and made use of every means attainable to better their condition. Before long, by joint contributions and efforts, they constructed a foot-bridge across the river. Finding the Midland Railroad there at hand, they resolved to utilize it, and did so, again combining their means and buying a car with an engine in one end, in which they journeyed in and out of Boston with great rejoicing, though they had for some time to dispense with a depot. In one respect they were greatly favored at this time,—no lawyer, doctor, or clergyman had invaded this Arcadia, and thus the denizens were left free to concentrate their efforts to the common good without unnecessary mental or bodily affliction.

It is true that in 1859 one disciple of Esculapius came like a serpent into this Eden; but the place was too much for him, too healthy, and after trying for some time to eke out a precarious existence by teaching in Boston during the day and searching for a chance to practice his profession at night, he was obliged to abandon the unequal contest and avoid starvation by retreat. Although the town has long since passed from a condition in which it could boast even an average immunity from the professions above specified, its sanitary reputation at least is still of a high order, and to this day it has no burial-place within its borders,—not, however, for the Western reason that no one dies here unless shot for the express purpose of starting a graveyard, but chiefly because the excellent cemeteries in the adjacent city and towns have rendered the necessity for one here less imperative.

Among the names of prominent and enterprising citizens of this earlier time, in addition to those already mentioned, appear those of C. F. Gerry, William Rogers, S. A. Bradbury, W. T. Thacher, D. W. Phipps, G. B. Parrott, J. N. Brown, and S. S. Mooney.

In 1859 the Real Estate and Building Company was formed, and in 1861 incorporated. This company, of which A. P. Blake was for many years the agent and principal manager, contributed very materially to the subsequent settlement and growth of the town. It operated at first in Fairmount, but soon acquired large portions of land between the two railroads, and mainly north of River Street. Under its management these tracts were surveyed, traversed by streets and avenues in sufficient numbers to make the land readily available to the individual builder, and lots of convenient dimensions were laid out and offered to purchasers on sufficiently liberal terms.

Many of these lots were sold by the company for an average price of two cents per foot, and the purchaser allowed several years in which to complete payment for them. It also advanced to buyers funds to assist them in building,—such loans, of course, being secured by mortgage. The fact that its stock never paid any large dividend to the holders seems to prove that the company was not conducted in any grasping or avaricious spirit. Under its efforts and the enterprise of many individuals the growth of the place was fairly progressing, when the civil war came, upsetting the plans of so many, and, by the doubt and uncertainty it engendered, paralyzed to a great extent all enterprises. The most strenuous efforts were made by the Real Estate and Building Company and others interested to overcome this incubus. Then, as now, printer's ink was deemed by the dwellers here a most potent instrumentality, and placards and circulars, urging investments in building lots, full of confident assertions calculated to inspire the most timid, were freely issued. Some of these are exhilarating. For instance, "The war appears to have very little effect upon the rapid progress of the great enterprise at Hyde Park and Fairmount;" and again, "Nothing short of the complete overthrow of the government can stay the rapid growth of the beautiful villages of Hyde Park and Fairmount." There seems to be in these extracts a calm candor, an air of casually mentioning an admitted fact, which ought to have convinced the most skeptical mind. With such inspiring words, and many other well-devised efforts, did our predecessors strive to allay the panic of those dark days. That these efforts were only moderately successful is apparent in the admission made by the building company, in its prospectus of 1864, that during the mighty struggle of the nation for its existence special expenses for the purpose of carrying on its enterprises had been mainly suspended by the company. Yet the growth of the town was not wholly arrested during this time, for we learn from a contemporary paper that in 1862 there were one hundred and fifty dwellings in the district between the Brush Hill road and the Boston and Providence Railroad station at Hyde Park, which number had increased to two hundred in 1865.

The end of the war, however, was the beginning of an era of truly wonderful activity and progress in this place, and for the next seven years it advanced at a marvelous pace. The vast increase of the currency of the country, caused by the prodigious expenditures of the government, made money plentiful and encouraged speculation. New lands in large quantities were acquired by the building companies and by individuals, platted, sold, built upon, and occupied with almost incredible rapidity. In the year 1867 not less than one hundred and six dwelling-houses were erected, to say nothing of buildings for business and other purposes. The price of lots trebled and quadrupled in value in a few weeks; sometimes in a few months increased twentyfold. They were bought and sold in great numbers, and the speculator who had not handled ten or a dozen lots a day felt that he was rather falling into habits of luxurious idleness. A good deal of money was made in real estate at this time; a good deal was likewise sunk out of sight in the same commodity, for the prices asked and given at last became excessive beyond all reason, and when the crash did come it found many in just the condition to be ruined. But while the "good times" lasted they brought the population of Hyde Park up to six thousand seven hundred and fifty, its dwelling-houses to the number of eleven hundred and twenty-one, and its assessed valuation to upwards of seven million five hundred thousand dollars. This, however, is a little anticipatory.

The growth of the place from 1865 was largely due to its natural attractiveness, which was now made to appear through the exertions of its public-spirited citizens, of whom the names of the following are most frequently mentioned in the current publications: W. J. Stuart, R. Bleakie, G. H. Nott, C. A. White, T. D. Weld, M. L. Whicher, A. H. Brainard, A. Webster, T. W. H. Moseley, W. U. Fairbairn, I. L. Benton, and L. B. Hanaford. Through their efforts, aided by many others, the establishment of manufacturing and other business interests of great importance was effected, social and moral needs were well provided for, and the unrivaled railroad possibilities developed. Local trains were multiplied on both railways, and additional stopping-places secured. When the railroad managers doubted the expediency of establishing a new station and erecting a depot at any required point, enough citizens were forthcoming to furnish means to build a station-house at the place desired and lease or give it to the railroad, on the condition of adequate train-accommodation. So great was the demand for mechanics at this time that the most indifferent workmen commanded exorbitant wages. This and the other inducements held out attracted to the town a not inconsiderable number of equivocal characters, and, as the credit system was largely in practice, many a confiding trader was sadly victimized. It appears from contemporaneous evidence that many hearts might have echoed the wail of one dismayed grocer, contained in the subjoined excerpt from a flyer distributed by him: "I have kept a grocery-store about three years, mainly on the cash principle, but, notwithstanding this limited deviation from a strictly cash system, I have lost more than all the net profits on my sales, and am now poorer than when I commenced."

But such experiences are common to all new and rapidly-growing places, and under this froth of irresponsible adventurers was an able body of earnest, energetic, industrious, laborious, wide-awake men, whose faith in Hyde Park was as firm as adamant, and who plied every instrumentality without cessation tending to promote its prosperity. So well did they succeed that in 1867 they were in a condition to ask for incorporation. The first meeting looking to that end was called at Music Hall on October 14th in that year, at which E. P. Davis was chosen to preside, and S. A. Bradbury and Charles A. Jordan as secretaries. A committee was appointed to consider the advisability of forming a new town, and the meeting adjourned to the 22d of the same month, at which the committee reported in favor of the proposed action, describing the district desirable to include. Almost all the residents conspicuous for their interest in the place were warm advocates of the measure, among whom may be mentioned Messrs. C. F. Gerry, A. P. Blake, R. Bleakie, H. S. Adams, B. F. Leach, B. Conner, B. F. Radford, D. L. Davis, T. C. Evans, M. L. Whitcher, A. Webster, B. C. Vose, and R. W. Turner. A formal petition to the General Court for incorporation of the district suggested in the committee's report was duly filed. As illustrative of the transitory nature of the residents of new places, it is interesting to note that of the fourteen men whose names are appended to this original petition but five are now among our inhabitants. The request for incorporation was variously viewed by the towns whose territory was affected. Dorchester made no opposition; Dedham refused to yield so much as was asked for, and succeeded in keeping a portion of it; Milton also objected strenuously, the contest here finally narrowing down to the question whether the petitioners should have the southeasterly line of their proposed town established as petitioned for, so as to include a portion of the Brush Hill road and some twenty-seven families resident thereon, or whether the line should run along the crest of Fairmount Heights, several hundred feet northwesterly from said road, and leaving the above-mentioned families to remain within Milton's limits.

Over this the fight waxed hot and furious. In the legislative committee-room frequent hearings were had during a period of five or six weeks, which resulted at last in a report to the Legislature recommending a compromise line, giving the petitioners less than they asked, but more than the Brush Hill residents were willing to concede. The people of Hyde Park have been always and still are much addicted to a free use of printer's ink, and now its aid was invoked by both sides. Printed addresses "To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives," "Five Reasons why Brush Hill should not be Set Off from Milton to the Proposed Town of Hyde Park," "Five Reasons why Brush Hill should be Set Off," etc., were among the more ponderous missiles employed in this paper warfare, while the columns of the Boston dailies teemed with communications from champions of either side, pitching into their opponents with argument, ridicule, assertion, and denial, in a manner decidedly lively and, at this lapse of time, quite entertaining.

The outcome of all this heated controversy was that the act of incorporation of the town of Hyde Park, passed and approved April 22, 1868, took about thirteen hundred acres from Dorchester, eight hundred from Dedham, and seven hundred from Milton, and left the old residents along the Brush Hill road still within the boundaries of Milton, and presumably happy. The new town promptly organized on the 30th day of the same month, Maj. William Rogers, formerly of Governor Andrew's staff, being chosen moderator of the first town-meeting. The board of selectmen chosen consisted of Messrs. Henry Grew, Zenas Allen, M. L. Whiteher, W. J. Stuart, and B. F. Radford; C. W. Turner was elected town clerk; Henry S. Adams, treasurer; and Henry A. Rich, collector. The school committee chosen consisted of five clergymen and one layman, to wit: William A. Bullard and Revs. N. T. Whittaker, P. B. Davis, W. H. S. Ventres, W. H. Collins, and Amos Webster,—a fact going to show that there was now no dearth of spiritual ministration, whatever may have been the case in earlier days. The recipients of municipal honors were not elected without vigorous opposition.

Hyde Park esteems the places in its gift too highly to bestow them easily. There were no less than five tickets in the field; the regular caucus nominations being the successful ones. The custom thus inaugurated of lively competition for town offices has ever since been honored with implicit observance.

A section of Capt. Baxter's Light Battery was present, and hailed the birth of the new town with a salute of one hundred guns. The citizens made a holiday of the occasion, and celebrated the event with rejoicings, and plentiful displays of fireworks in the evening. A fine rainbow at sunset was accepted as a propitious omen, significant of the future lustre of the town.

At this time there were in the town four school-houses, only one of which, however, was of any considerable size or value; six religious societies, three of which worshiped in churches of their own, and the remainder in hired halls; and of manufacturing industries, besides the cotton-mill and the paper-mill, a woolen-mill, a vise-factory, iron-works, car-shops, and a needle-factory. The population was about three thousand five hundred, the number of polls seven hundred and seventy-four, and the valuation, as fixed on the 1st of May following, two million nine hundred thousand dollars.

One of the leading motives which had caused the mass of the residents of Hyde Park to espouse so warmly the project of incorporation, had been the feeling that their needs had not received sufficient attention from the parent-towns of which it was previously a part. The school accommodations were very inadequate, the buildings insufficient in dimensions, and inconvenient in location. Most of the streets had been made by the adjacent owners, and, as few of them had been accepted by the towns, they were of different widths, ungraded, and in many instances full of obstructions. Few of them were furnished with lights, and most of these were at private charge. There was no fire department or any reliable means of subduing a conflagration. To remedy all these deficiencies and numberless others, the citizens had asked for and had obtained self-government. Many thoughtlessly expected that it would prove an immediate panacea for all their disabilities. So it will be well believed that for the first few years the town officers had no easy time of it. All those things, usually the result of many years of quiet effort in towns of slow growth, were here crowded, as it were, in a moment upon the attention of the people and their official agents. The latter addressed themselves to meeting the demands thus made upon them with creditable ability and success. Miles of streets were accepted, graded, widened, or relocated, and bridges built or extensively repaired, a good fire department organized and well equipped, and a suitable building constructed for its occupation, and many other things done to put the town on a proper footing. The number of school children increased so fast that within the first five years of its corporate existence the town was obliged to erect four large buildings at a cost of about one hundred and twenty thousand dollars. All these improvements called for large expenditures, most of which was met by direct taxation, but a considerable amount by borrowing, which last expedient soon raised a debt of very respectable proportions. The burdens thus incurred soon began to be felt very sensibly by the owners of land, which constituted seven-eighths of the taxable property of the town, and soon all propositions looking to further outlays became fruitful sources of contest, protest, and more or less successful log-rolling. The town-meeting was the natural arena for the final fight on these matters, and Hyde Park town-meetings have always been considered particularly interesting, though it is said that of late they have lost somewhat of their pristine brilliancy, and there are dark fears expressed that ere long they will become as unexciting and commonplace as those of less favored communities. But it is not to be understood that a niggardly policy has ever controlled this town; on the contrary, if it has erred at all, it has been in the opposite direction. During the sixteen years of its existence it has raised by taxation upwards of $1,130,000, or an average of $70,500 per year. Of this about $154,000, or a yearly average of $9600, has been expended upon streets and bridges; and not less than $487,000, an average of over $30,000 per year,—over forty per cent. of the whole amount raised,—has been devoted to the establishment and maintenance of public schools.

For several years the town business was transacted in rooms and halls hired for the purpose. This was felt to be inconvenient, and a town building was desired by many. A controversy, probably the most intense of any which has ever agitated the town, and which certainly stands out most prominently in the recollection of the participators, arose in 1870, over a proposition to purchase for the above-named purpose an edifice recently erected on the corner of Gordon Avenue and River Street, and known as Gordon Hall. Meeting after meeting was called to decide the vexed question, "Should or not the building be bought by the town?"

After much contention the property was finally purchased, but it was accidentally destroyed by fire March 8, 1883.

The year 1870 was quite prolific in notable events here. Then it was that another public demonstration was made in the dauntless attempt of some of its female citizens to storm the ballot-box and exercise the full powers of untrammelled suffrage, which carried the name and fame of Hyde Park into distant States and even beyond seas, and a failure to note which would render a sketch of the town's history undeserving the toleration of the fairer and mightier part of its population.

For some time previous to the March meeting, 1870, there had been signs and portents of approaching trouble, which took visible form and shape when a placard appeared, addressed to the women of Hyde Park, inviting them to attend a caucus, to be held March 4th, to select candidates for the various town offices, the same to be supported by the women at the polls. The caucus was duly held, and well attended, stirring addresses were made inciting the auditors to stand by the position they had taken in the front rank of the woman-suffrage movement, to make up their ticket, and back it at the polls; the speakers arguing that, though votes thus tendered might be rejected at the ballot-box, or, if received, not counted, the movement would not on that account be barren of even immediate result, inasmuch as it would set the ball of universal suffrage in motion, mark them in the eyes of posterity as its foremost champions, and make this town historic. These appeals were not fruitless; a ticket was made up, the candidates thereon being men and legal voters, and the caucus adjourned.

Election day fell that year upon March 8th, and proved to be a stormy one, snowy and blustering; yet some fifty ladies assembled in the Everett House parlors, whence they proposed to make their descent in a body upon the voting place. At the latter place, meantime, was congregated a large number of men, who, aware of the impending conflict, awaited with mingled anxiety and impatience the dénouement. Among them were not a few who believed in the wisdom of the women's action, and ardently desired the early coming of the day when, as legalized and qualified voters, mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters might participate in shaping the policy of the community of which they are so essential a part. But most of the men there present being, as is the nature of rude man, somewhat despotic and overbearing, regarded with great disfavor the proposed attempt of the ladies, and some threatened forcible prevention of it. At length men who had been out as scouts, watching for a movement of the enemy, announced their advance in force. The excitement within the hall grew greater, and cries of "don't let them in" were raised and repeated, and perhaps this unmanly measure might have been adopted. But when the occasion arises the man for the occasion is generally on hand. He was here, and in the right place. The moderator's chair was occupied by Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., the well-known novelist, whose pen and voice were and are always ready to speed on reform, progress, and development, whose soul cannot tolerate injustice or oppression. From his place he spoke to the angry throng before him, urging them to behave with courtesy and decorum towards their approaching townswomen. His words allayed the tumult, and through the door came the women, each bearing in her hand a bouquet of flowers, the line headed by the sisters, Mrs. Angelina Weld and Sarah Grimke, who, by the deeds of their previous lives, had made themselves exemplars of Christian charity, unselfish benevolence, and unhesitating self-sacrifice. Surely there was naught in the presence of these ladies, or those who closely followed them, to call for the storm of groans and hisses which immediately arose, drowning the comparatively few cheers of the men of another way of thinking. The line of ladies could with difficulty move through the throng about them. Again the moderator proved a host in himself. He stated that the votes thrown by the women would not be counted with the others, or influence the election in the slightest degree; rebuked the intolerance which would interfere with this harmless discharge of what they deemed a duty, and at last threatened with arrest and removal the most uproarious of the opponents. His attitude, aided much undoubtedly by that high esteem and love for him which has always characterized his fellow-citizens, produced a calm on the floor, and the ladies, without further molestation, advanced and deposited their ballots in a separate box, and at once left the room. The deed was done! The women had voted! And it is worthy of notice that a number of the ballots deposited by them were scratched, thus demonstrating their possession of one of the most essential qualifications for voting, particularly in Hyde Park. The women's ticket was voted by quite a number of men, and it was afterwards claimed in some of the Boston papers, as a proof of the moral effect of this action, that their candidates were elected; but this was erroneous, none being successful whose names were not on the other tickets.

The prediction of the ladies that this act of theirs would give notoriety to themselves and their town was prophetic. The affair was voluminously discussed and commented upon by most of the press within the commonwealth, received much attention from several well-known journals of other States, and even penetrated to the Sandwich Islands, and formed the subject of a flattering editorial in their newspaper, expressed in the mellifluous language of the beloved Kalakaua. The comments were of all sorts, "from grave to gay, from lively to severe;" but perhaps the following from the New York Herald is as good a sample as any of the more jocose style of treatment:

"The women succeeded in voting yesterday at the town election in Hyde Park, Mass. They put a separate ticket in the field and about sixty of them voted for it. They came in a body to the polling-place with bouquets and cotton umbrellas in their hands and modest determination in their countenances; some of them old and gray-headed, and many of them young and pretty. Their presence, which should have cast a benign influence over the unhallowed precincts which heretofore had been accessible only to men and the vile odors of rum and tobacco, was the occasion of hisses on the part of some of the disorderly men in the crowd. But the women had a stanch defender in Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., who stood up for them with the gallantry and daring of the old Spanish knights or Muscovian gunmakers that he writes about in the Ledger. He cast upon the disturbers one look of his eagle eye. 'Base ruffians,' he cried, in thunder tones, 'think ye to bar the way of these fair dames to yonder ballot-box? By my halidom, these women shall vote or perish in the attempt.' These brave words had their effect, and the gallant women voted; and, more than that, although their votes were counted out, their ticket was elected."

This, the first, was also the last attempt to vote in this manner, but the spirit which prompted and animated the movement still survives, and woman suffrage has many warm adherents here of both sexes. Nor has the impress of woman's influence upon the morals of the town stopped here. A power everywhere in Massachusetts in all charitable, philanthropic, moral, and intellectual movements, women here have earned a recognition of their worth greater even than that enjoyed by most of their sisters. In referring to the very efficient assistance given by them in the establishment of the public library, to their great help of the temperance reform movement, to their auxiliary organization in aid of destitute sufferers from the late war, to their literary societies, and to the constant and effective work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, mention is made of but a few of the many specific ways by which they have abundantly contributed to give to their town whatever of virtue and excellence it may justly claim.

Always ready and liberal in everything tending to forward the education of the masses, the town in 1871 appointed the following gentlemen a committee to raise a fund for the establishment of a free public library: Perley B. Davis, Isaac H. Gilbert, Francis C. Williams, Horace R. Cheney, Edward M. Lancaster, Hobart M. Cable, E. P. Davis, E. E. Pratt, and Theodore D. Weld. Their first meeting was held at the house of Alanson D. Hawley, who had been custodian of the State archives for fifteen years and one of the foremost in urging on the founding of a library here, but whose rapidly-failing health, resulting in his death soon after, disabled him from active work in the cause which he had so much at heart. While the committee were in his study he pointed out to them over one hundred new and valuable books as his donation to the prospective library. The committee confined their action to personal applications for subscriptions, payable in six months, to the library fund; arranging for a course of weekly entertainments, extending over a period of six months, for the benefit of the fund; solicitation of donations of books; and instituting measures for a general town fair, to be organized and conducted by the ladies. In pursuance of the last above action, a meeting of ladies was called and held in the Baptist vestry early in June, when they organized with a president, Mrs. L. B. Hunt, and the following vice-presidents, one from each religious society, to wit: Mrs. G. B. Parrott, Mrs. E. D. Swallow, Mrs. A. R. Whittier, Mrs. Horatio Raynes, Mrs. F. C. Williams, Mrs. Arthur O'Neil. Each of these was made the head of a sub-committee of six ladies. Under this organization a most admirable fair was held which netted upwards of two thousand five hundred dollars. H. S. Adams gave free use of Neponset Hall and the necessary adjoining rooms. A paper, issued daily during the continuance of the fair, under the editorial management of S. Thurber and W. Hamilton, added to its interest and profit. The report of the general committee, made April 11, 1872, gave as the net result in hand for the library fund four thousand four hundred and sixty-six dollars and seventy cents, and upwards of one thousand books donated. Theodore D. Weld was especially prominent in accomplishing this gratifying exhibit. Subsequent payment of subscriptions increased considerably the amount of money.

The library was opened to the public in March, 1874, in Everett Block, with William E. Foster as librarian, and three thousand seven hundred volumes ready for circulation. The first board of trustees consisted of Theodore D. Weld, Rev. P. B. Davis, Rev. I. H. Gilbert, elected for three years; Rev. E. A. Manning, H. M. Cable, E. M. Lancaster, for two years; Rev. W. J. Corcoran, E. S. Hathaway, C. W. W. Wellington, for one year. Mr. Foster remained as librarian till his resignation in March, 1876, when he was succeeded by Mr. Reeves, who, in October of the same year, was followed by Mrs. H. A. B. Thompson, in charge at the present time, with Miss Mary Hawley as assistant.

During the last few years the library has greatly increased in size and circulation. It contains over seven thousand three hundred books, and seven thousand three hundred and forty-five persons have registered their names for cards. It remained in Everett Block until February, 1884, when, having entirely outgrown its limits, it removed to rooms specially fitted up for it in Masonic Block, and affording much more ample accommodations. The present trustees are A. H. Brainard, chairman; G. Fred. Gridley, secretary and treasurer; Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., C. C. Hayes, M.D., H. B. Miner, E. C. Aldrich, E. M. Lancaster, H. M. Cable, Edmund Davis.

The call for aid to the sufferers from the great

Chicago fire met with a liberal response from Hyde Park. Frequent meetings were held, and upwards of five thousand dollars, in addition to large supplies of clothing, bedding, and necessities, was contributed. In this noble work the ladies were as usual untiring, Mrs. Dr. Edwards, Mrs. A. H. Brainard, and Miss Nettie Richardson being especially prominent.

The financial panic which swept over the country in the latter part of 1873 fell with excessive weight upon Hyde Park and almost menaced its future existence. The reasons for this result are readily apparent. The very methods which had been adopted to cause the town to fill up and build up so fast, the selling of land for a small sum down and a large sum secured by mortgage, rendered it peculiarly open to such a catastrophe as then came upon it. The greater number of its citizens were men of limited means, attracted here by the ease with which property could be acquired, largely upon credit, and by speculative hopes. The price of land had become greatly inflated. Parcels subject to inundation at time of high water often sold for ten cents per square foot, and more desirable lots had proportional values. The greater part of the real estate was under mortgage, not a little of it to an amount nearly up to even its inflated valuation. The assessors had yielded to the craze, partly from sharing in it, partly, perhaps, to keep down the percentage of taxation by a high valuation. Then the depression in business and the destruction by fire of several mills caused the abandonment of a number of productive industries, the consequent removal of many operatives and families to other places, and a great falling off in the demand for residences and for the general commodities of life. All this operated to cause the bottom to fall out of real estate, and a reduction in the apparent value of all property in the town of nearly fifty per cent. This is seen by comparing the assessed valuation of May 1, 1873, to wit: real estate, $6,608,179; personal, $901,636; with the valuation May 1, 1880, namely, real estate, $3,701,250; personal, $421,640. This fearful shrinkage discouraged many who had been holding on to their estates by the eyelids as it were. Taxes were suffered to remain unpaid. In 1874 the list of estates advertised for sale for non-payment of taxes comprised two hundred and nineteen estates, and filled ten and a half columns in the local paper. The interest due on mortgages remaining unpaid, they were foreclosed in great numbers, and many thus lost all which they had. But this experience, which brought loss and ruin to very many, was not in its final result a calamity to the town. The process of shaking things down to a substantial foundation was decidedly unpleasant, but the outcome has been beneficial. The estates lost by their unlucky former possessors have become the property of others better able to hold, improve, and beautify them, and the town has thus gained in its outward appearance and the number of its well-to-do citizens. A greater conservatism is manifested in public and private enterprises, and the present status of the town is one of healthy and well-based prosperity. Its net debt, which in 1873 was $178,766, is now reduced to about $96,000, and by means of the sinking-fund, as now managed, will be entirely liquidated in a few years, and this debt is placed on terms as favorable as those enjoyed by any town or city in the State.

Notwithstanding the pressure of the "hard times," the citizens of Hyde Park were fully awake on Centennial year. They were well represented at the Exposition both by products and by visitors, and they celebrated the glorious Fourth in the most enthusiastic manner. The day began with a procession, followed by a meeting of citizens in the grove, corner of Austin and West Streets, which was presided over by E. R. Walker, chairman of the Board of Selectmen. Here there was singing by chorus, prayer by Rev. P. B. Davis, reading of the Declaration of Independence by G. Fred. Gridley, singing of the Star Spangled Banner by Miss M. C. Pollard, oration by Hamilton A. Hill, and singing of "America" by the audience. At 4 o'clock P.M. union religious services were held in the Congregationalist Church, opened with prayer by Rev. M. T. Alderman, followed by remarks by Theodore D. Weld, Rev. P. B. Davis, and Rev. I. H. Gilbert, and closing with prayer by Rev. Mr. Gilbert. At 7 o'clock P.M. an immense meeting was held in Everett Square, and the new pump, presented to the town by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Hyde Park, was dedicated. Mr. Walker presided, and an address was delivered by E. I. Humphrey, which was followed by a fine original poem by Charles F. Gerry. A flag, the gift of N. H. Tucker, was then presented by Miss Nettie B. Richardson, accepted by Mr. Humphrey in a brief speech, and run up to the top of the flagstaff amid the cheers of the assembled multitude. A regatta and an exhibition of athletic sports were among the other attractions, and at night a grand display of fireworks closed the stirring observance of the day. The committee charged with the preparation and conduct of the programme embraced upwards of one hundred of the most prominent residents.

Another event in commemoration of that year was a great tree-planting, which took place October 28th, when more than eight hundred and fifty shade trees were set along the streets and avenues of the town.

This was brought about mainly through the efforts of Charles F. Holt, and has been the cause of many more being planted since, and has added greatly to the beauty and comfort of the thoroughfares.

This same year, 1876, is also memorable in the history of the town on account of the great temperance reform movement which began here in the spring. The Temperance Reform Club, then formed, during that year and the following held weekly public meetings, at which one of the largest halls was frequently filled to overflowing, and sometimes hundreds were unable to gain admittance. The good results of this organization are inestimable. By it many were redeemed from lives of gross indulgence; many more were stopped in a downward career toward such lives; the subject of temperance and morality was brought home to every thinking mind; and the sentiment thus awakened has placed and kept this town among the foremost in opposition to the encroachments of alcohol, and in support of all restrictive measures. In this connection it will not be amiss to state that the Women's Christian Temperance Union, which has been a power for good in this community, was begun here by an organization formed by a few women, April 26, 1876. It became at once auxiliary to the State organization of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and worked under the direction of the national organization. Mrs. William Sturtevant was its first president, and until her death, some four years subsequent, was one of its most earnest and efficient members. Mrs. E. T. Lewis was first secretary. The presiding officers since have been Mrs. L. P. Alderman, Mrs. J. B. Richardson, Mrs. J. L. Doty, and Mrs. Jesse Wager, at present in the chair. The work done by this body of devoted women in the promotion of Christianity and temperance cannot be detailed here. Mention can only be made of some incidents. When the law entitling women to vote for members of the school committee was passed in this State, the union addressed itself to urging women to avail themselves of the privilege, not only that they might have a voice in the educational interests of their children, but that a large vote might operate towards obtaining woman suffrage on the liquor question. The result of these efforts was that over eighty women qualified and voted. To their efforts also is it owing that Hyde Park was the first town in the State to place temperance text-books in the schools for reference and oral instruction. The Union, believing that the most important as well as hopeful branch of its work was among the young, has labored unceasingly in this direction, and a juvenile organization of about three hundred children is now under its charge. Toward the establishment and success of the Temperance Reform Association it rendered the most efficient aid. It has a standing committee for the dissemination of temperance literature, another to visit and carry aid and consolation to homes resting under the bane of alcoholic indulgence, another to provide for weekly Sunday meetings for the awakening and strengthening of temperance sentiment. The Union has also contributed greatly to the large majority here against the licensing of the liquor traffic, by communicating directly with every voter before election, and by the personal solicitations of its members at the polls.

Two other associations for the promotion of temperance have an assured existence here.

Energetic Lodge, No. 125, I. O. G. T., was instituted by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts March 13, 1882, with fifteen charter members, and has steadily increased, till at the present time it has a membership of over one hundred and twenty-five of both sexes, representatives of many of the best families in the town, and, as their lodge-name suggests, energetic in every good word and work. The place of meeting, which has been the Odd-Fellows' Hall, is on the point of being changed to Grand Army of the Republic Hall.

The first Worthy Chief Templar of this lodge, Daniel F. Wood, is the oldest member of the order in the State, and it was introduced into Massachusetts through his efforts. George Manley, by whose energy Energetic Lodge was started, was its first Worthy Secretary.

Star of Hope Section, Cadets of Temperance, is composed of boys and girls from eight to eighteen years of age. Its principal object is to demonstrate the pernicious effects, physiologically, upon the system of indulgence in alcoholic stimulants and narcotics. Meetings are held every Thursday evening in Congregational Chapel. R. C. Habberley is Worthy Patron.

The religious societies of the town claim more extended mention.

First Baptist Church.—This was the first church organized in town, and antedates by several years the town incorporation. In the year 1856, when "the twenty Associates" commenced the erection of the first houses here which constituted the nucleus of Hyde Park settlement, Rev. Mr. Patterson, pastor of the East Dedham Baptist Church, came over and preached occasionally at five o'clock on Sunday in the boarding-house on the corner of Fairmount Avenue and Brush Hill road. Sometimes pastors from Boston came out and preached in the grove then crowning a hill between the present Baptist meeting-house and the New York and New England Railroad.

In the year 1858 it was thought that the time had fully come when a Baptist Church should be organized and assume the responsibility of sustaining public worship. Accordingly, on the 9th day of September, in the house of L. B. Hanaford, Esq., on Fairmount Avenue, ten members of Baptist Churches elsewhere met and formally organized what is now the First Baptist Church in Hyde Park. One of the members having built Fairmount Hall midway Fairmount Hill, the church hired and dedicated to the worship of God the second floor hall.

In 1861 the church commenced the erection of a chapel on the avenue between Pierce and Davison Streets, and finished it in 1862, at a cost of about two thousand five hundred dollars. In 1868 increased church accommodations became necessary. A building committee was appointed, and limited to the expenditure of twenty thousand dollars for a new house, which was completed in November, 1870. It is cruciform in style, brick walls to the top of the vestries, which are ample in size for all church purposes, and supplied with modern conveniences. The auditorium has a seating capacity of seven hundred persons.

Rev. G. R. Darrow was the first pastor, settled in 1863, but resigned in 1864. Since then the pastorate has been successively filled by Revs. C. A. Skinner, W. H. S. Ventres, I. H. Gilbert, D. C. Eddy, D.D., and Gorham Easterbrook. The membership of the church, originally only ten, is now three hundred and seventy-four.

Episcopal Church.—The first service of the Protestant Episcopal Church was conducted by Rev. Samuel B. Babcock, rector of St. Paul's Church, Dedham, in Union Hall, near the New York Central Railroad depot, Oct. 10, 1858, at one of the "union meetings," at that time supported by adherents of all denominations. After a while the Episcopalians transferred their place of meeting to Lyman Hall, near the Boston and Providence Railroad, where services were held every Sunday morning, the various clergymen officiating being furnished and paid by the Southern District Association. When there was no clergyman forthcoming, services were read generally by Mr. Lyman. A Sunday-school, which soon grew to a membership of sixty-five, was established, mainly through the exertions of Rev. John W. Nott, who was at that time passing a vacation here. For some time the family of A. H. Brainard constituted the entire number of communicants, the congregation being made up of those who only had a preference for that form of worship. Mr. Brainard also furnished a portion of the choir and all the instrumental music, which latter consisted of a small melodeon, which its owner "shouldered" to and from the place of meeting every Sunday. This instrument also assisted in the services of several other religious societies, which borrowed it in turn until able to acquire something more pretentious. If still in existence, as it was a few years ago, it will undoubtedly be freely at the service of any other infant congregation to help out the music if necessary.

The present parish was organized Nov. 8, 1860, under the name of Christ Church, with the following officers: Wardens, A. H. Brainard and G. H. Nott; Vestrymen, L. Bickford, J. Pratt, S. Fennell, and W. H. Hoogs; Treasurer, S. A. Bradbury; Clerk, J. M. R. Story. Rev. A. H. Washburn took charge of the parish in March, 1861, was elected its rector in January, 1862, and so continued till early in 1866, when he became rector of Grace Church, in Cleveland, Ohio. During the early part of his ministration a church edifice was erected largely through the efforts of Gordon H. Nott, the same now used by the society, on the corner of River and Maple Streets. This is of Gothic style of architecture, with a seating capacity of about 300. While it was in process of construction worship was held in Bragg's Hall, on Fairmount Avenue. The building was consecrated Dec. 1, 1863, by Right Rev. Manton Eastburn, bishop of the diocese, assisted by several other divines. Mr. Washburn's connection with the parish was of great benefit to it, and his resignation deeply deplored. He was succeeded, April, 1867, by Rev. Wm. H. Collins, who officiated as rector till his resignation, July 21, 1869. His successor, Nov. 16, 1869, was Rev. John W. Birchmore, who remained till May 15, 1872. In October, 1872, Rev. Robert Scott was unanimously elected rector.

In the summer of 1874 the Rev. R. B. Van Kleeck, D.D., was chosen rector. He was a man well known and highly esteemed by clergy and laity in all parts of the country, and the five years of his rectorship form a memorable period in the history of the parish.

During the year 1879-80 the Rev. F. H. Horsfield was minister in charge of the congregation. He was succeeded in the autumn of 1880 by the Rev. Edward A. Rand, who with unremitting devotion to duty continued as minister in charge until Whitsunday, 1882.

He was succeeded by the Rev. John T. Magrath, who officiated for the first time on Trinity Sunday, 1882, and immediately entered upon the duties of the rectorship. Since Jan. 20, 1884, the sittings have been free.

Congregational Church.—Congregational services were first held in Hyde Park in December, 1860, in Bragg's Hall.

The place of meeting was soon changed to Lyman Hall, where, for a few months, the services were conducted by Rev. L. R. Eastman, afterwards, with only occasional clerical aid, by the brethren, until Dec. 1, 1862, when Rev. Hiram Carlton commenced ministerial labors, which was continued till October, 1864.

On May 7, 1863, an ecclesiastical council organized here a church of ten members, of which Sylvester Phelps and Thomas Hammond were elected deacons. Rev. R. Manning Chipman was the officiating clergyman from Dec. 1, 1864, to Nov. 30, 1866, the services being held during this time in Bragg's Hall.

In January, 1867, the church and society extended a call to Rev. Perley B. Davis, who was then settled over the church at Sharon, Mass., who accepted, and was installed April 10th following, and who has continued as pastor of the society to this day.

Measures were now taken for the erection of a parsonage and church edifice. A lot of land at the junction of Fairmount Avenue and Everett Square, extending through to Oak Street, was presented to the society by the Real Estate and Building Company, and a parsonage fronting on Oak Street, and costing about five thousand dollars, was built, and occupied by the pastor the following September.

On Jan. 31, 1868, the corner-stone of the church edifice was laid with appropriate exercises, and on October 15th following the church was publicly dedicated to the worship of God, the pastor preaching the sermon. The building is a Gothic structure, costing seventeen thousand dollars, and had a seating capacity of four hundred and sixty-two. By the untiring efforts of the ladies of the congregation it was furnished with an organ, bell, carpet, and cushions at an expense of nearly five thousand dollars. For the better accommodation of the Sunday-school and social meetings, in the autumn of 1874 a chapel was erected adjoining the church, capable of seating three hundred people. This was built by voluntary subscription, presented to the society, and dedicated Jan. 1, 1875.

On Sunday, Sept. 7, 1879, by the efforts of Mr. Edward Kimball, the church-debt raiser, the debt of twelve thousand five hundred dollars, which had rested very heavily upon the society, was raised by pledges from the congregation, and in December, 1880, the debt was fully paid. April 16, 1880, seven members were dismissed from the church to form a nucleus for the church at Clarendon Hill. Owing to the increase in numbers of the congregation and the Sunday-school during the two years en-suings, it was decided to enlarge both church and chapel, at a cost of ten thousand dollars, and, the requisite amount having been pledged, work was begun in October, 1883. The church was so remodeled as to furnish seven hundred and sixty-nine sittings, including the choir-seats. The chapel was made thirty-five feet longer, a portion being fitted for class-rooms and library. Thirteen cathedral glass windows for the church were donated by J. P. Higgins, and a large double front window, representing St. Paul and the Good Shepherd, was a gift from the Young Ladies' Aid Society. The enlarged church was rededicated Feb. 26, 1884, and the chapel the next evening.

The condition of the church is very prosperous, it having a membership of four hundred and eighty, of whom seventy-two were received during the first year. The Sunday-school membership is five hundred and fifty, with an average attendance of three hundred and seventy-five for the year.

The Clarendon Congregational Church was organized April 19, 1880, with fifteen members. Rev. S. D. Hosmer was then its acting pastor, and continued ministerial labors there till May, 1882. He was followed by Rev. A. H. Johnson, the present pastor. The membership is now twenty-seven.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—June 28, 1857, the residents of Fairmount, then numbering twenty-seven families, met at the house of A. P. Blake, and organized the Fairmount Sabbath-school, with Daniel Warren as its superintendent. During the following summer preaching services were held every Sunday afternoon at Mr. Blake's house, and in the fall the Hyde Park and Fairmount Religious Society was formed, which was a strictly union society, and held its meetings in the hall of the Hartford & Erie depot building. The Sabbath-school was held there also, and a prayer-meeting, which became very interesting and effective. During the spring and summer of 1858 the society met in a new building in Fairmount owned by Messrs. Pierce and Higgins; but in the fall of that year, the Baptist element forming a separate organization and remaining there, the remainder of the society returned to the depot hall. July 6, 1859, the Hyde Park and Fairmount Religious Society dissolved, but the Methodist members continued holding meetings till September 4th, when these also were discontinued, the Sabbath-school alone continuing, and meeting at the house of Mr. Warren. This school was then only sixteen in number, having been greatly depleted by the departure of many to join the Baptist and Episcopal schools. It gradually increased, however, till, in 1861, it numbered fifty-nine members, when it was again reduced to thirty-two on the formation of the Orthodox and Universalist societies, but during the following year it rose to the number of sixty-eight. In the winter of 1863-64 preaching services were held one evening each week in Benton's Hall, at which the pulpit was filled by different clergymen, and from April 17, 1864, till the following spring Rev. C. S. Sewell supplied this meeting and one at Jamaica Plain, one-half of each Sunday in either place, after which the desk was for a time again left vacant. During the most of this period and until June 2, 1867, the Sabbath-school held its sessions at the house of its superintendent, Mr. Warren, whose interest in it had from its start been constant and unwavering, and to whose unremitting efforts a great part of its growth was due. Among the means employed by him to promote its vitality were a series of social entertainments, called "superintendent's parties," at one of which the proposition was made and adopted which resulted in the organization of the Methodist society, Feb. 10, 1867, with a membership of twenty-eight, and the appointment of Rev. N. T. Whittaker as its pastor. On the 2d of June, 1867, the Sabbath-school, then called the Warren Fairmount Sabbath-School, was presented to the Methodist Church, though not by its beloved superintendent, who had looked forward to participation in the event with intense interest, but who had passed to his heavenly reward on the 26th of the previous May. The school brought with itself to the society six hundred and eighty books and a small sum of money.

From this time to the present the history of the society has been one of uninterrupted growth in every respect. As its increase in numbers necessitated, it from time to time changed its place of meetings in quest of more commodious quarters, removing to Union Hall in 1869, and to Neponset Hall in 1871, where it remained till the completion of its church building. In 1871 it erected a parsonage. Ground was formally broken for laying the foundation of the church edifice, June 2, 1873, by Mrs. Mary S. Warren, the pioneer Methodist of Hyde Park; the corner-stone was laid Oct. 28, 1873, with exercises conducted by former pastors, and an address by Bishop Wiley. The auditorium was completed and dedicated Nov. 19, 1874, with appropriate exercises, and a sermon by Rev. H. W. Warren, D.D., the vestries having been dedicated December 31st preceding, the sermon being preached by Dr. B. K. Pierce, editor of Zion's Herald. During the following winter there was a great religious interest manifested in the society, and a large addition made to the membership.

The following have been the pastors: 1867-68, Rev. N. T. Whitaker; 1869, Rev. George Prentice; 1870-71, Rev. E. S. Best; 1872, Rev. E. A. Manning; 1873-75, Rev. George W. Mansfield; 1876-77, Rev. J. S. Whedon; 1877-78, Rev. H. J. Fox; 1879-81, Rev. W. N. Richardson; 1882-83, Rev. Jesse Wagner, the present incumbent. The present condition of the society is exceedingly flourishing; its membership is two hundred and ninety, that of its Sunday-school three hundred and fifty.

Its house of worship, situated on the corner of Central Avenue and Winthrop Street, is of wood, with freestone base and steps, and a single lofty spire one hundred and sixty-five feet in height. The first floor contains an ample vestry, class-rooms, dressing-rooms, and kitchen. The auditorium, on the second floor, is sixty feet long by seventy-five feet in breadth, finished in ash and black walnut, lighted by large stained-glass windows, with sittings for seven hundred and twenty people, exclusive of one hundred more in the gallery at one end. This room has been the scene of many union meetings, and on occasions has accommodated one thousand persons. Its walls are delicately tinted and the frescoing very chaste. This edifice cost $45,000, and entailed a heavy debt upon the society. Previous to 1881 special efforts had reduced this to $29,000, and during that year, by the work of a debt-raising society, the whole remaining amount was pledged and paid, and the church thus relieved from the burdensome and harassing obligations which had so long hampered and limited its usefulness. Of this amount, $15,000 was pledged at one meeting conducted by Bishop Randolph S. Foster. The Ladies' Circle and the Sunday-school aided nobly in this work, the former raising $2800, the latter $575. By authority of the Northeast Conference the collections of the year from the churches of the Boston District, amounting to $850, were also contributed, and subscriptions were made by friends in those churches aggregating thousands of dollars.

The original furnishings of the church, including settees, cushions, and carpets, to the cost of $1500, were provided by the Ladies' Circle.

First Unitarian Society.—The first meeting of this society as a separate denomination was held in June, 1867, as the consequence of action taken at a preliminary meeting, June 1st, held in the Fairmount school-house, at which John P. Jewett was chairman, and Benjamin C. Vose, secretary. During the following summer regular services were held every Sunday afternoon at the old Music Hall, prominent Unitarian clergymen of Boston and vicinity occupying the pulpit. In November of the same year the society moved to Deacon Hammond's Hall, and engaged as pastor Rev. T. B. Forbush, who remained until the following March. In June, 1868, a permanent organization was formed under the name of the Christian Fraternity. The next year this name was changed to that of the Second Congregational Society of Hyde Park, which in turn was, in May, 1880, superseded by the present title.

In June, 1868, Rev. William Hamilton was invited to become the regular preacher of the society, and he continued as such about a year, services during that time being held in Hamblin Hall. In November, 1868, Rev. Francis C. Williams was selected to take charge of the society, and was installed as pastor the following February. During his pastorate, which continued until June, 1879, the society had a varied experience, particularly in its places of worship. Meeting in the town hall for about a year, they thence went to Neponset Hall, where they remained till its destruction by fire, in the early part of 1874. Their church building was then in process of construction, and until its completion, in the latter part of the same year, they were kindly accommodated by the Methodist Society, which tendered the use of its vestry. The Unitarian Church was dedicated Feb. 18, 1875, and in it their services have since been held. It occupies a slightly and pleasant position on the corner of Oak and Pine Streets, on Mount Neponset, and presents to the eye a neat, attractive, and agreeable aspect. It is of the Romanesque style of architecture, and is constructed in a very substantial manner, and of excellent material. The audience-room, exclusive of vestibule, is sixty-seven by thirty-seven feet, with a seating capacity of a little more than three hundred. The finish of the pulpit and its surroundings is of black walnut; of the pews, black walnut and ash. It is well lighted, with stained-glass windows of shades affording very agreeable effects. In the vestry is a ladies' reception-room, dining-room, kitchen, etc. The cost of the building was fifteen thousand dollars. During his long stay, Mr. Williams' influence on the church and town was marked and beneficial. His successor was Rev. A. Judson Rich, who was invited in November, 1879, installed the next January, and who remained four years. At the present time the society is without a settled pastor.

Roman Catholic Church.—The parish was organized Oct. 1, 1870. Previous to that time services were regularly held by Rev. Father McNulty, of Milton, and under his administration the number of worshipers increased so rapidly that Rt. Rev. John J. Williams ordered a separate parish to be formed on the above date, and Rev. William J. Corcoran was appointed pastor. During the first few years of his stay the Catholics worshiped in the old Music Hall, on Everett Square. Finally, by Father Corcoran's efforts and the co-operation of the faithful, a frame church was built on land on Hyde Park Avenue, which had been previously secured by Father McNulty. This church was destroyed by fire Jan. 2, 1875, and the parish attended services in the town hall until Music Hall was removed to their lot on Hyde Park Avenue and fitted for temporary use, when they went there. In the mean time a large lot of land, most delightfully located on Maple and Oak Streets, in Mount Neponset, had been bought. An ample dwelling-house, situated on a portion of this lot, became the residence of the pastor and his successors.

Father Corcoran was followed as pastor, in February, 1877, by Rev. M. Conlan, who, Feb. 1, 1880, was succeeded by Rev. Richard J. Barry. Under the administration of Father Barry the society has grown very largely in numbers and influence. Immediately upon his taking charge he zealously set to work to cause the erection of a church upon the lot on Mount Neponset, and the result is a spacious and elegant edifice, a lasting memorial of what can be accomplished by energy and perseverance. It is of brick and stone, with interior woodwork of cherry, and a seating capacity of one thousand and eighty. The frescoing, stucco, and windows are works of real art. Taken as a whole it is a gem, and will compare favorably with any church in the State in architectural merit and beauty of finish. Situated on a slight eminence, it presents a conspicuous and pleasing object of view from several miles around. It was designed by Charles J. Butemore. The funds for its construction were raised principally by collections from house to house. Among the donors most generous in amount should be mentioned Messrs. Robert Bleakie, John S. Bleakie, and Daniel Sheedy.

The corner-stone was laid July 4, 1880, by Most Rev. John J. Williams, in the presence of some six thousand people, the trowel used on the occasion being now in the ownership of Mrs. John S. Bleakie. Nov. 18, 1883, a chime of bells, weighing eleven thousand pounds, was blessed by Bishop De Goesbriand, of Burlington, and sounded forth November 25th following. This was the generous donation of the late Martin O'Brien, of this town, and of the pastor. The numbers of persons at the present time attached to the church is two thousand one hundred, with three hundred and forty attendants at the Sunday-school. The society is in a most flourishing condition, and is still under charge of Rev. Father Barry, ably assisted by his brother, Rev. Henry A. Barry. A number of religious societies are connected with the church.

There is also a society of Second Adventists, who meet in Lyric Hall, and a weekly Union Meeting held in Readville.

The manufacturing industries of Hyde Park, already great, are yearly becoming more extensive. Particular reference to some of them will be of interest.

Industries.—R. Bleakie & Co.'s woolen-mills. The gift of several acres by a number of interested land-owners to Francis Skinner and others, in 1862, led to the formation and incorporation of the Hyde Park Woolen Company in 1863, which at once began the erection of a twelve-set mill for the production of army goods, blankets, and flannels. The first blanket was woven by John Bleakie, father of the present owner, on July 31, 1863. Robert Bleakie became superintendent Aug. 1, 1864, and under his able direction it became so successful that, in 1865, the capacity of the mill was increased to twenty-one sets of cards, employing about four hundred operatives. Early in the morning of June 9, 1873, the mills took fire, and all but the bare walls of the main building, and the chimney, was destroyed, involving a loss of some four hundred thousand dollars, and scattering the employes to other places until the work of rebuilding should be completed. This work was commenced at once, and pushed with all possible energy until Fall, when the disastrous financial panic which then swept over the country made it seem most prudent to discontinue new enterprises till it should be past. So the windows and doors of the mills were put in, and the property left in the care of faithful watchmen. Then followed a long season of depression in the woolen business, so serious that there was no encouragement to resume operations; and finally, in the fall of 1878, the whole plant was sold to Robert Bleakie, since which time it has been operated to its full capacity, fourteen sets of cards, in the manufacture of suitings and overcoatings, by the firm of which Mr. Bleakie is the senior partner, and gives employment to nearly three hundred workers.

The large amount of taxable property, and the money monthly paid to the operatives, is a considerable item in the prosperity of the town, and its citizens regard with much pride the neat appearance of the buildings and the well-kept grounds around them.

Tileston & Hollingsworth's Paper-Mill. In 1836, Edmund Tileston, of Dorchester, and Amos Hollingsworth, of Milton, purchased the old Sumner Mills, a detailed account of which, since its erection by George Clark, was published in 1859 in the "History of Dorchester." Then (1836) the property consisted of a paper-mill and a cotton-mill. In 1837 the cotton-mill burned down, and the firm built a paper-mill in its place. This mill, on which many additions and alterations had in course of time been made, was burned March 12, 1881, and the same year Franklin L. Tileston and Amos L. Hollingsworth, sons of the former partners and successors of the old firm, built the present mill. This, with the other mill standing on the same privilege, now makes five tons of fine plate- and book-paper per day.

The cotton-mill at Readville is the oldest manufactory in the town, and one of the oldest in the State. A portion of the present wooden building was erected in 1814. It was capable of running sixty-six looms and producing two thousand yards of cloth per day. It was built and operated by a copartnership, which was changed from time to time, but always retained the name of the Dedham Manufacturing Company. It was first under the superintendence of F. A. Taft; later under that of Ezra W. Taft, still living in Dedham. In 1832 the late James Downing, of Hyde Park, became its superintendent and agent, and so continued till 1864. He began in the mill as overseer in 1816, and consequently was identified with it for forty-eight years. Ex-Governor Gardner, of Massachusetts, was one of the early partners; also Mr. Lemist, who was lost at the burning of the steamer "Lexington"; also Mr. Read, in honor of whom Readville took its name. At the breaking out of the civil war a quantity of cotton in transitu for the mill was seized by rebels at Baltimore, and not recovered. When the supply on hand was exhausted the mill closed, and did not reopen under its old management. In 1864 it was sold to Mr. Boynton, of Boston, and Manton Bros., of Providence, by whom the large brick mill was built. In 1867 it passed into the hands of the Smithfield Manufacturing Company of Providence, by whom the wooden mill was enlarged to about double its former capacity. The whole property is now owned by B. B. & R. Knight, of Providence. It runs about four hundred and fifty looms, and furnishes employment to over three hundred and fifty operatives. The power is supplied partly by water, but chiefly by steam. The following incident attending the acquisition of this privilege is handed down by oral tradition. At the time when the old mill was built, by the law or usage a privilege could be acquired by the party first improving it by a dam and wheel in operation. Three parties competed for this privilege,—one at, one above, and one below the present site. The middle party proved most enterprising. It got its dam well along, ferreted out somewhere an old water-wheel, placed it in position in the night, and got it actually in motion, and thus claimed and held its location.

The American Tool and Machine Company, manufacturing castings, is among the most valuable and important of the industries of the town. It occupies extensive buildings, has a great amount of taxable property, employs a large force of skilled and intelligent workmen, and has a monthly pay-roll of some thirteen thousand dollars.

The Brainard Milling Machine Company, whose specialty of manufacture is indicated by its name, is a concern of large extent and great activity.

Among the others may be enumerated the Boston Blower Company, machines; Glover & Wilcomb's curled-hair factory; J. T. Robinson & Co., manufacturers of paper-box machinery; John Scott, wool scouring; Kenyon & Crabtree, chemicals; Alden & Co., Waste Rubber Chemical Company; Alden & Gammett, tack manufacturers; Moody & Co., horse-nail manufacturers; Readville Rubber Company; R. H. Gray & Co., shoddy; S. Z. Leslie & Co., Novelty Wood-Work; H. N. Bates, door-spring manufacturer; John Johnston, carriage manufacturer; McDonald & Co., morocco curriers; J. M. Bullard, grist-mill; People's Ice Company and C. E. Davenport & Co., ice cutters and dealers; C. L. Farnsworth's bakery; and many others of less proportions.

As has been previously mentioned, about two hundred acres, or one-fourteenth of the area of the town, is embraced in streets; of these, some twenty-five miles of highways have been accepted and are under the care and supervision of the surveyors; the remainder are private ways. No street less than forty feet in width is accepted. Thanks to the Centennial tree-planting, these avenues are beginning to be well shaded by thrifty forest-trees. They are for the most part thickly studded with residences, which, being of so recent construction, are all of modern style, are kept in remarkably good repair, and present a very attractive appearance. They are the homes of hundreds whose daily avocations are pursued in the adjacent city of Boston. The two lines of railway, furnishing in the aggregate forty-five trains each way to and from the city, provide every facility for this manner of living, and being through lines, the convenience of access to any desired point is unsurpassed. The amateur culture of pears and grapes is almost universal, and quite successful. The schools of Hyde Park are contained in six buildings. The high school, with about one hundred pupils and four teachers, is located on the corner of Hyde Park Avenue and Everett Street, near the middle of the town. A small building in the same yard is occupied by a primary school. The Grew School, on Gordon Avenue, Sunnyside, F. H. Dean, principal; the Damon School, on Readville Street, E. W. Cross, principal; the Fairmount School, H. F. Howard, principal; and the Greenwood School, D. G. Thompson, principal, in the Hazlewood district, are each large edifices, with eight class-rooms and a hall, and in them, at the present writing, one thousand four hundred and fifty scholars are taught by twenty-nine teachers. The annual reports of the State Board of Education give Hyde Park a very honorable standing among the towns of the commonwealth. The only other public structure belonging to the town is the fire-engine house on Central Park Avenue. This department is well organized, and has been effective in subduing fires. W. W. Hilton is chief engineer, C. L. Farnsworth and F. A. Sweet, assistants. The principal apparatus consists of two steamers, one chemical engine, and the requisite hose and hook-and-ladder carriages. The principal other buildings of a quasi-public character are the Bank Building, owned by A. H. Holway, and Neponset Block, owned by I. J. Brown, both on Everett Square, and Masonic Hall Block, owned by J. S. Conant, and Everett Block, owned by the East Boston Savings-Bank, both on River Street, the latter now containing the town offices.

The following is a brief sketch of the only banking institution which Hyde Park can boast. During the winter of 1870-71 the necessary preliminary steps were taken, which resulted in the passage by the Legislature of "An Act to incorporate the Hyde Park Savings-Bank," approved March 11, 1871, in which Henry Grew, Martin L. Whitcher, and James Downing were named as corporators. These gentlemen, with the associates whom they selected,—forty in all,—met in the hall then used for a high-school room, corner of River Street and Hyde Park Avenue, April 20, 1871, and voted to accept the charter. A full organization was effected at that time by the choice of Charles F. Gerry as president, with the requisite number of vice-presidents and trustees.

At a subsequent meeting of the trustees, at the house of Mr. Whitcher, April 27, 1871, Henry S. Bunton was elected treasurer, and has held the position continuously since. The bank was opened for the reception of deposits in the selectmen's room, town hall, June 17, 1871, the first depositor being John M. Twitchell.

On the 1st of September following rooms were occupied in Neponset Block, where the business of the bank was transacted until that building was destroyed by fire, May 5, 1874. Temporary quarters were then provided in the town offices, Everett Block. The Bank Building was erected in 1875, and the rooms in the same, which are now used; were leased from and after Jan. 1, 1876. The bank has had four presidents, Charles F. Gerry serving five years; Henry Grew, one year; Isaac J. Brown, three years; and Robert Bleakie, four years.

The bank shared in the embarrassments to which the majority of Massachusetts savings-banks were subjected as the result of protracted business stagnation and depression. For two years, in common with many others, it was placed by the State Commissioners under the restrictions of the "Stay Law." By this means one of our most useful local institutions was preserved, although at the date of resumption, June 15, 1880, the amount of deposits had dwindled to about thirty thousand dollars. Since that time, under wise and conservative management, the Hyde Park Savings-Bank has prospered, and has received a full measure of the confidence and patronage of the citizens of the town. It has now about eight hundred depositors, the amount of the deposits being one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

The present officers are, viz.: President, Robert Bleakie; Vice-Presidents, Amos H. Brainard, Benjamin C. Vose, J. Ellery Piper, Sidney C. Putnam; Trustees, Robert Bleakie, William J. Stuart, Benjamin F. Radford, David Perkins, Waldo F. Ward, Orin T. Gray, Rinaldo Williams, Frederick N. Tirrell, John S. Bleakie, Hobart M. Cable, Augustus H. Page, James D. McAvoy, Francis W. Tewksbury, Wilbert J. Case, George Sanford; Treasurer, Henry S. Bunton.

The town rejoices in two weekly papers. The Norfolk County Gazette, Samuel R. Moseley, editor, is the lineal descendant of the Dedham Gazette, which was established in Dedham in 1813, and of the Hyde Park Journal, started in Hyde Park in 1868, by Barrows & Getchell. Feb. 26, 1870, the Gazette, then edited by Henry O. Hildreth, now postmaster at Dedham, and the Journal were united, under the name of the Norfolk County Gazette, Hildreth & Getchell, editors, and the place of publication fixed at Hyde Park. A few years later Mr. Hildreth retired, and Getchell & Moseley carried on the paper until Jan. 13, 1877, when Mr. Getchell was succeeded by Mr. Moseley, the present editor and proprietor. It is by far the oldest paper in the county, and has numbered among its contributors many of the most eminent men in this section of the State.

The Hyde Park Times issued its first number June

9, 1883, with E. S. Hathaway as its editor; it soon passed into the hands of Hunt & Chamberlin, and again into those of Herbert E. Hunt, its present editor and proprietor. A mere infant yet, its career and reputation lie before it.

Oct. 29, 1868, the Everett House, a pretty and comfortable building, standing on the corner of the square, was opened to the public as a hotel. During the twelve years it was kept open it served as the temporary home of many families now domiciled in homes of their own in the town, and their recollections of their sojourn there are doubtless fraught with pleasant memories. The Willard House, on Gordon Avenue, was first opened Jan. 22, 1873. It is now called the Lincoln House, and is the only hotel in the place.

Hyde Park abounds in secret orders, prominent among which stand the Masons and Odd-Fellows, a detailed account of which organizations follows.

Masonic Organizations.—Before the incorporation of the town of Hyde Park, the establishment of a lodge was considered desirable by the Masons resident within its present territorial limits. A dispensation was, therefore, procured from the Most Worshipful Grand Master in response to a petition bearing twenty-one signatures. Preliminary meetings had been held at various places in Dedham and Hyde Park, and the first regular communication of Hyde Park Lodge was called Feb. 15, 1866, at a small hall on Fairmount Avenue, since occupied by the Advent society. Here the lodge held its meetings until the following winter, when a hall was leased and fitted up in the Music Hall building, corner of River Street and Hyde Park Avenue. The same was dedicated, and Hyde Park Lodge was constituted by Grand Master Charles C. Dame and the officers of the Grand Lodge, Dec. 21, 1866. The charter members were fifteen in number, viz.: Enoch P. Davis, Charles F. Gerry, Charles A. Jordan, Samuel A. Bradbury, William W. Colburn, William U. Fairbairn, Nathaniel Hebard, James L. Vialle, David S. Hill, Timothy Phelps, William A. Bullard, Robert Campbell, Francis H. Coffin, Waldo F. Ward, and Ambrose B. Galucia. In September, 1869, the fraternity again folded their tents, and occupied apartments in the third story of the Gordon Hall building, corner of River Street and Gordon Avenue. The building was purchased by the town the following year, and used and known as the Town Hall until its destruction by fire, March 7, 1883.

During this period of nearly fourteen years a Chapter, Council, and Commandery were organized, and the history of each of the several bodies was one of uninterrupted prosperity. By the fire the fraternity were suddenly ejected from the pleasant rooms which had so long been their home, and suffered a total loss of all their furniture and paraphernalia. By special authority from the Grand Master the meetings of Hyde Park Lodge were held for three months in the hall of Constellation Lodge, of Dedham, and more recently in Neponset Hall, until the completion of spacious and convenient apartments in the new Masonic building on River Street. The new halls were occupied by the lodge on the 15th of February, 1884, and are admirably arranged for Masonic purposes. The furniture includes a fine organ, built by Messrs. Hook & Hastings, of Boston.

The lodge has now about one hundred and forty members, and includes many of the leading business men and officers of the town. Among the names which have appeared on its roll of membership are those of two venerable Masons, James Downing and Timothy Phelps, each of whom had served the old Constellation Lodge, of Dedham, as Worshipful Master. Mr. Downing was made a Mason in 1819, and Mr. Phelps in 1821.

Its first chaplain was Rev. Alvan H. Washburn, D.D., who at the time was rector of Christ Church. He was a man of prominence in the church, and his untimely death, Dec. 29, 1876, in a railroad disaster at Ashtabula, Ohio, sent a thrill of sorrow through the hearts of many who had known and loved him. Hyde Park Lodge has a charity fund of good proportions, and its philanthropic work has been constant and effective. One of its pleasant social features has been an annual entertainment on Washington's birthday for the benefit of the wives and families of its members.

The following-named persons have successively held the office of Worshipful Master since the organization of the lodge, each for a term of service of two years: 1866-67, Enoch P. Davis; 1868-69, Charles F. Gerry; 1870-71, William H. Jordan; 1872-73, Henry S. Bunton; 1874-75, Fergus A. Easton; 1876-77, William H. Ingersoll; 1878-79, Charles H. Colby; 1880-81, John F. Ross; 1882-83, Stephen B. Balkam.

The following is the present list of officers: Henry N. Bates, W. M.; James F. Moor, S. W.; Henry F. Howard, J. W.; Henry S. Bunton, Treas.; Thomas D. Tooker, Sec.; Charles Sturtevant, Chaplain; Melville P. Morrell, Marshal; Edwin W. Sawyer, S. D.; Albert E. Bradley, J. D.; Robert Scott, Jr., S. S.; George L. Lang, J. S.; Thomas F. Sumner, I. S.; Zorester B. Coes, Organist; David A. McDonald, Tyler.

Norfolk Royal Arch Chapter commenced its existence May 18, 1870, under a dispensation from the Grand High Priest, Henry Chickering. The chapter was duly consecrated and constituted May 24, 1871, with twenty-eight charter members. Its several High Priests have been, viz.: 1871-72, Gamaliel Hodges; 1873, Sylvanus Cobb, Jr.; 1874-76, Henry S. Bunton; 1877, Charles C. Nichols; 1878, William H. Ingersoll; 1879, Henry C. Chamberlain; 1880-81, Charles L. Farnsworth; 1882-83, Moses N. Gage.

Its present officers are Moses N. Gage, M. E. H. P.; David L. Hodges, E. K.; Eugene E. Cadue, E. S.; Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., Treas.; Henry S. Bunton, Sec.; Henry N. Bates, C. of H.; Charles Sturtevant, P. S.; Melville P. Morrell, R. A. C.; Philander Harlow, M. 3d V.; Henry M. Phipps, M. 2d V.; Edwin C. Aldrich, M. 1st V.; Andrew Cochran, Chaplain; Charles L. Farnsworth, S. S.; Henry S. Holtham, J. S.; Edward Roberts, Organist; David A. McDonald, Tyler.

The present membership of Norfolk Chapter is about eighty. Two of its members are permanent members of the Grand Chapter of Massachusetts, Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., who was elected Grand Scribe in 1880, and Henry S. Bunton, who was elected Deputy Grand High Priest in 1883.

Hyde Park Council of Royal and Select Masters was organized under a dispensation from Charles H. Morris, Most Illustrious Grand Master, dated Oct. 1, 1872, and was chartered and constituted Oct. 6, 1873, with thirty-five charter members.

The following-named persons have held the office of Thrice Illustrious Master: 1873-74, Gamaliel Hodges; 1875, Fergus A. Easton; 1876-77, Henry S. Bunton; 1878, John F. Ross; 1879-80, Sylvanus Cobb, Jr.; 1881, Charles M. Tilly; 1882, Henry N. Bates.

The present officers are, viz.: David L. Hodges, T. I. M.; Eugene E. Cadue, D. M.; Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., P. C. W.; Francis L. Gerald, Treas.; Henry S. Bunton, Rec.; Moses N. Gage, C. of G.; Charles Sturtevant, C. of C.; Ellis H. Williams, Chaplain; John F. Ross, Marshal; Charles L. Farnsworth, Steward; David A. McDonald, Sent.

The present membership of Hyde Park Council is about sixty.

Cyprus Commandery of Knights Templar and the Appendant Orders was organized under dispensation from Nicholas Van Slyck, Grand Commander, Oct. 31, 1873.

The name was given in allusion to the island of Cyprus, which was the first asylum of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem after their expulsion from the Holy Land. Cyprus Commandery was constituted and dedicated Oct. 12, 1874, by the Grand Commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, on which occasion Rev. George S. Noyes delivered an historical address. The number of charter members was twenty-seven.

Its Eminent Commanders have been, viz.: 1873-75, Gamaliel Hodges; 1876-77, Henry C. Chamberlain; 1878, Sylvanus Cobb, Jr.; 1879-80, Henry S. Bunton; 1881-82, George F. Lincoln.

The present officers are, viz.: Stephen B. Balkam, E. C.; Moses N. Gage, G.; Melville P. Morrell, C. G.; Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., Prel.; Henry N. Bates, S. W.; Charles Sturtevant, J. W.; Daniel J. Goss, Treas.; Francis L. Gerald, Rec.; Edwin C. Aldrich, St'd B.; Philander Harlow, Sw'd B.; Samuel E. Ward, W.; Benjamin F. Tyler, Henry S. Holtham, Joel F. Godwin, C. of G.; David A. McDonald, A. and S.

Its present membership is about sixty.

Independent Order of Odd-Fellows.—In response to a petition bearing ten signatures, the Grand Lodge granted a charter, and Feb. 20, 1869, Forest Lodge, No. 148, I. O. O. F., was instituted by Grand Master Levi C. Warren and suite of Grand Officers. The charter members were nine in number, viz.: David Perkins, Rufus B. Plummer, George W. Haliday, Sidney Winter, John R. Thompson, Fergus A. Easton, William H. Nightingale, George G. Bolton, and Nathaniel Shepard. The lodge held its first meeting in what was then known as Masonic Hall, in the building now occupied by Putnam & Worden, corner of Hyde Park Avenue and River Street. From this it removed, Oct. 8, 1869, to Bragg's Hall, on Fairmount Avenue, where it remained till January, 1870, when it again changed to the New Masonic Hall, in the late town building, corner of Gordon Avenue and River Street. In 1873 it took up its quarters in Pythias Hall, where it has since remained, the name being changed to Odd-Fellows' Hall. The whole experience of the lodge has been gratifying in respect to its growth in numbers, in social influence, and financially. It was particularly prosperous under the guidance and energetic assistance of Deputy Grand Master Samuel Cochran, a citizen of Hyde Park, a present Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Massachusetts.

Its present active membership is one hundred and seventy-seven, embracing among its members many men of influence and standing in the community, and from whose ranks numerous recipients of municipal honors have been drawn.

The lodge has some $4000 standing to its credit in safe investments, and lodge furniture, regalia, and paraphernalia to the value of $1500 to $1800 more.

The following persons have held successively the position of Noble Grand since 1880, the time of the adoption of the present constitution and by-laws: Henry P. Bussey, from July, 1880, to January, 1881; George L. Eldridge, from January, 1881, to July, 1881; Frederick E. Rollins, from July, 1881, to July, 1882; William W. Fowler, from July, 1882, to January, 1883; Frank H. Fogg, from January, 1883, to July, 1883; Charles S. Butters, from July, 1883, to January, 1884.

The present elective officers are: N. G., William E. Kelley; V. G., James H. Bell; R. S., Henry F. Arnold; Treas., Francis L. Gerald; P. S., Richard F. Boynton; Trustees, William Price, George L. Eldridge, Frederick E. Rollins.

The appointed officers are: W., Edward J. Price; C., Edwin L. Slocomb; O. G., Jacob C. Hanscom; I. G., William Holtham; R. S. N. G., Frederick E. Rollins; L. S. N. G., Robert P. Holmes; R. S. V. G., James O. Buzzell; L. S. V. G., Douglas Strachan; R. S. S., Edwin L. Tuckerman; L. S. S., Henry L. Boss; Chaplain, George L. Eldridge; Organist, Frank A. Shuman.

Progressive Degree Lodge, No. 34, Daughters of Rebecca, I. O. O. F., was instituted in Odd-Fellows' Hall, March 8, 1882, by Grand Master Henry W. Clark and suite, of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts. It began with thirty-three charter and forty-nine other members, and now has ninety-eight.

Its first Noble Grand was William Price; Mrs. Carrie F. Arnold at present holds that office. It meets at Odd-Fellows' Hall, first and third Wednesday evenings in each month.

Ambassadors Lodge, No. 5, Union Order of Independent Odd-Ladies, was instituted in Odd-Fellows' Hall, Feb. 9, 1880, by the late Mrs. Eliza A. Hamlin, then Right Worthy Lady Governess of the Government Lodge. It started with fourteen charter members, and now numbers forty-seven. One member only, Mrs. Emma S. Christopher, has been removed by death. The first presiding officer of the lodge was Mrs. S. J. Boynton; the present one is Mrs. S. J. Fowler. It meets alternate Tuesday afternoons at Odd-Fellows' Hall.

The following secret orders of mutual life insurance societies are established in the town:

Hyde Park Lodge, No. 437, Knights of Honor, was organized Jan. 31, 1877. It meets in Neponset Hall on the second, fourth, and fifth Wednesdays of each month. Its present membership is one hundred and thirty-one.

Neponset Council, No. 136, Royal Arcanum, was organized Aug. 6, 1878. It meets in Neponset Hall, alternate Monday evenings. Its present membership is one hundred.

Golden Rule Commandery, No. 53, United Order of the Golden Cross, was organized April 2, 1879. It meets at Neponset Hall on first and third Thursday evenings. Its present membership is thirty-four.

Fairmount Council, No. 149, American Legion of Honor, was organized April 7, 1881. It meets in Odd-Fellows' Hall, second and fourth Thursday evenings. Its present membership is sixty-five.

Riverside Lodge, No. 33, Ancient Order of United Workmen, was organized Oct. 31, 1881; meets in Neponset Hall, first and third Tuesdays, and has a membership of sixty-two.

St. John's Court, No. 23, Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, was organized Dec. 14, 1881; meets in Odd-Fellows' Hall on second Mondays of each month, and has a membership of fifty.

Hyde Park Council, No. 66, Order of United Friends, was organized March 28, 1883; meets in Grand Army of the Republic Hall, first and third Thursdays of each month, and has a membership of sixty-three.

The subjoined includes the remaining orders and associations:

Timothy Ingraham Post, No. 121, Department of Massachusetts, Grand Army of the Republic, was organized March 24, 1870, with the name of H. A. Darling Post. Its present membership is one hundred and thirty-five. It meets in Grand Army of the Republic Hall, on first Mondays of each month from April to October, and on first and third Mondays from October to April. George G. Bailey, Jr., commander.

Timothy Ingraham Woman's Relief Corps, No. 35, Dept. Mass., organized Feb. 18, 1884, with forty-four charter members. Mrs. Helen Bryant, president. Meets at Grand Army of the Republic Hall.

Young Men's Lyceum, organized April 8, 1883, meets in Lyric Hall, on alternate Thursdays; membership, forty-four.

There has just been incorporated a water company, composed of citizens of the town, who propose to soon furnish an ample supply of pure water for domestic and other uses, and thus provide for a want which has been greatly felt.

The writer has purposely avoided the ungrateful task of selecting from among his contemporaries names of citizens for special mention or honor.

Where particular reference has been made to individuals, it has been in consequence of their connection with events which fell within the scope of this memoir. Hyde Park contains at least its fair proportion of men and women whose abilities and achievements will leave an indelible mark after them, but it will devolve upon some future historian to commemorate them. Our successors are our only just biographers.

It only remains now to refer to the town's representatives and local government.

Hyde Park did not become entitled to a representative in the General Court until 1877. Charles F. Gerry served in that capacity during that year, it being the last year of his residence here. His successor was William J. Stuart, who served during 1878 and 1879. Hobart M. Cable followed him, and held the position during 1880-83. Henry C. Stark is the present representative.

The principal town offices are now held by the following gentlemen :

Selectmen, H. C. Stark, D. W. C. Rogers, Samuel Cochran ; Assessors, J. F. Goodwin, George Sanford, Charles Haley ; Treasurer, Henry S. Bunton ; Collector, George Sanford ; Town Clerk, Henry B. Terry ; School Committee, Andrew Washburn, C. G. Chick, H. S. Bunton, R. M. Johnson, G. M. Fellows, H. M. Cable.

The present valuation of the town is $4,855,402.

Hyde Park has now passed through the somewhat boisterous, turbulent, and doubtful period of adolescence, and stands upon the threshold of a long life of promise and vigor. Favored in its location, strong in its resources, proud of its institutions and its people, it looks to the future with hope and confidence.

The writer must express his acknowledgment of the ready assistance afforded him by several, and particularly by Mr. Henry A. Rich, who placed in his hands a mass of valuable papers gathered during the last twenty-eight years with a view to their use in the preparation of an extended history of Hyde Park, which Mr. Rich proposes to have prepared at an early date. Without these the foregoing sketch would have been, necessarily, much more incomplete.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

ROBERT BLEAKIE.

Robert Bleakie was born Aug. 1, 1833, at Rutherglen, near Glasgow, Scotland, and is the eldest of the four children of John and Mary Maxwell Bleakie.

In 1836 the elder Bleakie moved to Hawick, Scotland, where he followed his profession, that of an overseer of woolen weavers, for the prominent firm of Dixon & Laing. Robert received the first of his school education in an institution under the management of the Presbyterian Church, and at the age of eleven years entered the employ of the above firm as a hobbin-boy, and in a year's time became a weaver under his father.

In 1847 his father engaged to go to America, in the employ of the famous Salisbury Mills, of Salisbury and Amesbury, Mass., for the purpose of starting the first fancy woolen looms in the country. Less than one year later the family followed, under the care of Robert, who was employed in the mills as a weaver until 1850, when the family moved to East Greenwich, R. I., where he followed his trade until 1852, when he, in his turn, was called to take charge of the weaving department of the very successful Elm Street Woolen Mills, in Providence, R. I., and while living in that city he completed his school education at night schools. Here he continued until 1859, when he was engaged as superintendent of the Harrison Mills, at Franklin, N. J. Two years later he accepted a similar position in a large woolen-mill in Rhode Island, where he remained until he went into business for himself, starting a one-set woolen-mill, in 1861, at Tolland, Conn.

While considering, in 1864, a proposition to go into business with Messrs. Chapin & Downes, of Providence, R. I., he received what seemed an advantageous offer, to take the superintendence of the woolen company's mills at Hyde Park, which he accepted, and in this place he has since made his home, except for a short interval, during which he resided in Amesbury, Mass. After the destruction of the mills at Hyde Park by fire, in June, 1873, Mr. Bleakie assisted in the management of several other mills controlled by the same owners.

Early in 1876 he invited his brother, John S., and his friend, Charles Fred. Allen, to become his partners in the woolen business, and they commenced operations under the firm-name of Robert Bleakie & Co., in a six-set mill at Sabattus, in the town of Webster, Me., on the 1st day of February. Before the end of the year they hired an eight-set mill at Amesbury, Mass., and afterwards bought both, and operated them in connection with the woolen-mill in Hyde Park, which was purchased by the firm in 1878, and supplied with fourteen sets of machinery. The business at Sabattus, Me., had increased to eleven sets in 1882, making the whole number thirty-three under one private management, with headquarters at

Robert Bleckley

Wm J. Stuart -

Hyde Park, and doing an annual business of more than a million dollars.

Mr. Bleakie was twice married. Of five children three survive,—two daughters and a son.

As a citizen, he has always taken an active interest in national, State, and local affairs, although he has never been persuaded to accept public office. He has always commanded the confidence of his fellow-citizens. He is a member of the Masonic order, and for several years has been the president of the Hyde Park Savings-Bank.

WILLIAM J. STUART.

William J. Stuart, son of Arthur and Agnes (Mason) Stuart, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., March 15, 1828. He comes from the noted Stuarts of Scotland, through a Scotch-Irish branch. His father was prominently connected with railroading in the United States from its earliest days, being employed on the Pottsville Railroad, in Pennsylvania, one of the first adventures of this now greatly multiplied means of travel. About 1835 he came to Boston, and became what is now called assistant superintendent or general manager of the Boston and Worcester Railroad, and thus William received the educational advantages of the justly-celebrated public schools of Boston, supplemented by two years' attendance at Marshall S. Rice's private school at Newton. When he was fourteen years old he was indentured to learn the trade of coppersmith with Hinckley & Drury (predecessors of Boston Locomotive-Works). Serving until he was of age, he became master of all the details of the business, but, wishing a short change of avocation, he went to Pennsylvania, and passed one season with a company of civil engineers on a railroad in the Lehigh Valley. Returning to Boston, the next year he engaged in business for himself as a coppersmith in South Boston, on the site ever since occupied by him for the same purpose. Since the establishment of his business, which was then largely devoted to locomotive work, there have been three radical changes in the character of his products. From locomotive work he changed to sugar-works for Cuban plantations. About 1860 this trade was superseded by steamboat work for Loring, the ship-builder, and during the Rebellion was entirely employed on government vessels. He made the copper-work of the first two gunboats (small ones) ordered by the government, and also for, among numerous others, the "Nahant" and "Canonicus," and put all of the copper-work into Commodore Farragut's celebrated flag-ship "Hartford." When the war closed and government work ceased, Mr. Stuart for some years was engaged on sugar machinery and brewery fittings, but now makes a specialty of radiators for house-warming. He has been content with a profitable business of moderate extent, has never tried to do a rushing business, and has had no desire to change from the even tenor of his regular avocation. Although burned out three times, he has, on each occasion, at once rebuilt, and, as before mentioned, carries on his business to-day where he first started. Mr. Stuart married, May 23, 1853, Sarah M., daughter of the distinguished Dr. Leroy Sunderland. She was a woman of more than ordinary attractions and character. She died July 26, 1871. On Oct. 4, 1874, he was married to Mrs. Elizabeth G. Daniels, daughter of Edward and Ruth (Snow) Barber.

Mr. Stuart became a resident of Fairmount in the spring of 1858, and the next year became a land-owner here, and erected his present residence. He was one of the incorporators of the town of Hyde Park, was elected one of its first board of selectmen, was its second representative to the Legislature, serving two years (1878-79), and is now one of the three commissioners of the sinking fund of the town. He has ever been active in public affairs, is a thoroughly genial and pleasant social companion, and has many friends. He is an advanced thinker, and holds the most liberal and progressive views in politics, religion, and other questions of the day. Originally Free-Soil, he has been a Radical Republican since 1856. Possessed of a fine amount of property, the reward of his diligence and attention to business, he is one of the best representatives of the town of his adoption, and to whose welfare he has given so much of his service, and holds a high place in the regards of his townsmen.

MAJ. ANDREW WASHBURN.

Andrew Washburn, son of Joshua and Sylvia (Mosman) Washburn, was born at Newton, Mass., Aug. 23, 1830. He is a scion of the highly distinguished Washburn family, which has held so many prominent positions in civil, military, and professional affairs. Governor Emory Washburn once informed Andrew that his great-grandfather and Andrew's grandfather was the same person.

Joshua Washburn was born in Natick about 1800. He removed to Newton about 1820, where he married Sylvia Mosman, a native of Weston, Mass., but of Scotch ancestry. He purchased a large farm, on which he has resided for over sixty years, combining the avocation of merchant with that of agriculturist. His present homestead lies in the centre of Auburn-dale (Ward 4, Newton), which occupies the greater part of his former estate. He is now hale and vigorous at the age of nearly eighty-five. A man of decided principles, he was one of the very earliest to espouse the cause of freedom for the slave side by side with Jackson, Phillips, Weld, and Garrison, when even a suspicion of abolitionism meant almost social ostracism, and placed its supporters at the mercy of lawless mobs. Often when he was attending anti-slavery meetings Mrs. Washburn would pass the hours at home in terror, fearing never to see him alive. He was never an office-seeker, and shrunk from all such positions, excepting those connected with town affairs, which he discharged, as became a good citizen, with the same sound practical sense that characterized him in his private affairs. He has been for years a member of the Orthodox Congregational Church, and was at one time parish clerk of the Second Church of Newton. Mrs. Joshua Washburn died in 1865, aged sixty-five. Of their six children, of whom Andrew is third child and second son, four now survive.

Andrew was fitted for college at Newton by Rev. Dr. Gilbert, and at Grantville (Wellesley Hills) by Rev. Mr. Adams. He entered the class of 1848 at Middlebury College, Vermont, and after two years passed from the sophomore class of that college into the junior class at Harvard, a fact which speaks well for his proficiency at that time. He was graduated from Harvard University in 1852, and at once engaged in teaching, which profession he followed in high schools and academies for about eight years. In 1861, Maj. Washburn was resident superintendent of the Massachusetts State School for Feeble-Minded at South Boston. This position he resigned to take a commission of first lieutenant in the Fourteenth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry (afterwards First Heavy Artillery), and was quartermaster and commissary of the regiment. From Fort Warren, where the regiment was organized, it was ordered to Washington, and there was kept for some months as part of the defensive forces of that city. It was sent to the front, however, and Mr. Washburn with it participated in the second battle of Bull Run, after which engagement they again were placed on the defensive force of Washington. Mr. Washburn was commissioned major Jan. 16, 1862, and served as regimental and brigade quartermaster, regimental and brigade chief of ordnance, and also served on the staff of Maj.-Gen. A. W. Whipple as chief of ordnance and artillery. His period of service in the Army of the Potomac was about two years, mostly in Washington and vicinity. He then returned to Massachusetts, and was employed as construction clerk, assistant master pyrotechnist and master of pyrotechnics, and to take charge of the laboratories at the arsenal at Watertown. Here he remained until the close of the war. Resigning these offices, he then went to Richmond, Va., for the Freedmen's Aid Society of Boston, as superintendent of its schools, and was appointed to the same position for white schools by the American Union Commission of New York. Soon after arriving at Richmond he received the appointment of inspector of schools for the State of Virginia under the Freedmen's Bureau, with headquarters at Richmond. He was a member of the City Council, and drafted the bill organizing the schools under the new order, and was made the first city superintendent. Afterwards, in connection with Dr. Sears, agent of the Peabody Fund, he established the Richmond Normal School, and was its principal five years. For two years during the same period Maj. Washburn was clerk of the Hustings Court, with seven deputies and clerks, and had all the responsibility of the criminal business of the city, and of all courts of record, probate, etc. He was also appointed United States pension agent, and twice commissioned as such, and was offered a third commission, which was declined. As an evidence of the high valuation placed upon Maj. Washburn's services, we give the following letter from Hon. Columbus Delano, Secretary of the Interior:

"DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

"WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 25, 1875.

"Dear Sir,—I am advised by your letter of the 7th that you decline a reappointment as Pension Agent at Richmond, Va.

"I take pleasure in expressing my satisfaction with your administration, because it has always been marked with fidelity to the public interests, and I trust that the conduct of your successor will be equally satisfactory to the Pension Office and to this Department.

"With a sincere desire for your future prosperity and success, I am,

"Very truly yours,
(Signed)

"C. DELANO.

"HON. ANDREW WASHBURN,

"Pension Agent,

"Richmond, Va."

He was one of the executive committee of the National Council of the Union League, an organization numbering at that time many thousand members in the Southern States, and was president of the Virginia State Council of the same order. He was president of the Richmond Colored Normal School Association for seven or eight years.

The public schools of Richmond have stood to the present as established, and have never taken one retrograding step. This city is the only place in the

Andrew Washburn

Southern States of which this can be said, and this result is largely due to the care, foresight, and wisdom of Major Washburn. Probably no other man could have been found who was better fitted for his work, or who would have discharged his numerous and responsible duties with more ability, or who would, from the ruined and chaotic state of society in the anarchy immediately subsequent to a great war, have evolved such beneficial and satisfactory results as were brought about by him; and he has the satisfaction of knowing that his services have been appreciated, and that where his labors were carried on he still has the warmest friendship of the best people. While a resident of Richmond his private business was extensive, and we mention a few of the enterprises in which he was engaged in order to show his active, energetic, New England character. He had the contract for cutting the granite for the new building of the Department of State at Washington, employing from fifteen hundred to two thousand men. He was president of the Buckingham Slate Company, with a large number of employés, and, with one other, purchased a large tract of timber land, on which they erected saw-mills, and employed many wood-choppers and timber-cutters, producing timber, lumber, shingles, hoop-poles, etc. After his return to Massachusetts, in 1875, he resided two years at Walpole, where he engaged in manufacturing "curled hair" for about one year. He served as chairman of school committee in Walpole. From Walpole he removed to Hyde Park, where he has since been resident. He is now vice-president and director of the New York Refining Company, organized under the laws of New York for manufacturing and handling petroleum products, of which organization he was one of the incorporators. He married, May 24, 1854, Eliza, daughter of James and Macey (Stone) Billings Gardner. Her father is of the Dorchester branch of the Gardner family, which goes back as a family of good repute to the infancy of New England colonization. Their children now living are Gardner and Mary.

Major Washburn is Republican in politics. He has been member of the school committee of Hyde Park for seven years, four of which he has been chairman, which office he now holds. He is a member of Forest Lodge (Hyde Park) of I. O. O. F.; of Columbian Lodge (Boston), St. Andrew Chapter, of Boston; Hyde Park Council; and Hyde Park Commandery of F. and A. M.

In social life Mr. Washburn is characterized by pleasing, unassuming manners and warmth of friendship, and enjoys a wide range of cultured and intellectual acquaintance.

CHAPTER LXXI.

CANTON.¹

BY SAMUEL B. NOYES.

Indian Name of the Town, Punkapaog—John Eliot—Organization of Precinct, 1715—List of Precinct Officers—Incorporation of Stoughton, 1726—Roger Sherman—War of the Revolution—Various Votes—The Suffolk Resolves—The First Troops from Stoughton—Capt. James Endicott's Company—Other Companies—Committee of Correspondence and Inspection—Documentary History—Incorporation of Town—Names of Petitioners—First Town Officers—War of 1812—Extracts from Town Records—The First School-House.

THE Indian name of the town of Canton was "Pakemit, or Punkapaog." "The signification of the name," writes Gookin, in his "Historical Collections of the Indians of New England," "is taken from a spring that ariseth out of red earth. This town is situated south from Boston about fourteen miles."

Pakemit, or Punkapaog, was a part of that territory which was granted to the town of Dorchester by the General Court in 1637, and which comprised the present territory of the towns of Canton, Stoughton, Sharon, portions of Foxborough, and Wrentham. In the year 1636, according to Blake's "Annals of Dorchester," "This Year ye Gen. Court made a Grant to Dorchester of ye old part of ye Township, as far as ye great Blew-hill: and ye town took a Deed of Kitchamakin Sachem of ye Massachusetts for ye same." That became incorporated as the town of Milton, 1662.

The apostle John Eliot had begun to preach to the Indians at Neponset Mill, Dorchester, as early, probably, as the year 1633. The Neponset Mill, built this year, was the first mill built in this colony, and in the year 1657, "the town at the request of ye Revd. Mr. John Eliot, Granted Punkapaog Plantation for ye Indians and appointed men to lay it out, not exceeding 6000 acres." Here the apostle probably came to preach, and the first magistrate who was appointed to have charge of the Indians in the colony, Maj.-Gen. Daniel Gookin, came with him. "Eliot's son John (H. U. 1656) began his ministerial labors among the Indians about the time he left college," says Sibley; and Gookin says, "For sundry years he preached the Gospel unto the Indians once a fortnight constantly at Pakemitt, until his decease in 1688, at the age of 32."

¹ In the preparation and compilation of this history, free use has been made of the material furnished by the valuable and timely address made by Hon. Charles Endicott, July 4, 1876, and the published historical contributions made by Hon. Ellis Ames, with their kind assent and co-operation. S. B. N.

The village was about two miles southwest of Blue Hill, and about three miles southeast of the town of Dedham. In 1674 there were "not above twelve families in it, and so about sixty souls." Here they worshiped God and kept the Sabbath in the same manner as was done at Natick. They had a ruler, a constable, and a schoolmaster. Their ruler's name was Ahawton; their teacher, William Ahawton, his son. "In this village," says Gookin, "besides their planting and keeping cattle and swine, and fishing in good ponds and upon Neponsitt River which lieth near them; they were also advantaged by a large cedar swamp, wherein such as are laborious and diligent do get many a pound by cutting and preparing cedar shingles and clapboards, which sell well at Boston and other English towns adjacent."

In 1637, "ye Gen. Court made a Second Grant to ye Town house to Plymouth Line called ye New Grant."

In 1707, "Punkapoag Plantation with some other of ye Inhabitants of ye New Grant were set off a Precinct by themselves as far as Machopaog Pond and Moose Hill, and ye meeting-house ordered to be sett where it now stands upon Packeen Plain."

In 1717 a church was gathered, and on the 30th of October, Rev. Joseph Morse (Harvard University, 1795) was ordained pastor thereof.

The territory, including what is now Canton, Sharon, Stoughton, and a part of Foxborough, together with some other parcels of land now in Wrentham and Dedham, was created a precinct, with the necessary powers and privileges exercised in precincts for the maintenance of the gospel ministry, on the 19th day of December, 1715. That territory was then a part of Dorchester, and the precinct was called Dorchester South Precinct, until it was all incorporated into a town by the name of Stoughton, in December, 1726.

The precinct was organized and held its first meeting March 28, 1716, when Joseph Hewins was chosen moderator and precinct clerk, and Henry Crane, John Fenno, and Joseph Hewins, assessors.

The following is a list of officers for the precinct annually, until its incorporation into a town in December, 1726, together with the date of the annual meeting:

March 25, 1717. Samuel Andrews, moderator; Peter Lyon, clerk; Assessors, Peter Lyon, Joseph Hewins, Henry Crane.

March 17, 1718. Peter Lyon, moderator; Peter Lyon, clerk; Assessors, Peter Lyon, John Vose, John Fenno.

March 4, 1719. Joseph Hewins, moderator; Joseph Hewins, clerk; Assessors, Joseph Hewins, John Puffer, Joseph Tucker.

March 21, 1720. Joseph Hewins, moderator; Peter Lyon, clerk; Assessors, Peter Lyon, Joseph Tucker, and William Crane.

March 3, 1721. ———, moderator; Joseph Tucker, clerk; Assessors, Joseph Tucker, ———, John Fenno.

March 5, 1722. Samuel Bullard, moderator; Joseph Tucker, clerk; Assessors, Joseph Tucker, Samuel Bullard, and William Crane.

March 4, 1723. Samuel Bullard, moderator; Joseph Tucker, clerk; Assessors, Joseph Tucker, Samuel Bullard, and William Crane.

March —, 1724. Joseph Hewins, moderator; Joseph Tucker, clerk; Assessors, Joseph Tucker, Samuel Bullard, William Crane.

March 1, 1725. Elder Joseph Hewins, moderator; Joseph Tucker, clerk; Assessors, Joseph Tucker, Samuel Bullard, William Crane.

March 1, 1726. Nathaniel Hubbard, moderator; Joseph Tucker, clerk; Assessors, Joseph Tucker, John Fenno, Peter Lyon.

In 1724 a portion of the new grant was set off to Wrentham, and on the 22d of December, 1726, the town of Stoughton was incorporated, and the present towns of Stoughton, Canton, Sharon, and a part of Foxborough were included within its limits. Dorchester interposed no objection to the act of incorporation, for when the question came before that town to see whether they would agree to its being set off, the vote was thirty-four in favor and twenty-nine against it.

On June 20, 1765, Stoughtonham was incorporated as a district, and continued as such until by a general act, passed Aug. 23, 1775, that and all other districts of like character were invested with all the powers and privileges of towns. By special act Feb. 25, 1783, Stoughtonham took the name of Sharon. This part of the old town of Stoughton (now Canton) constituted the First Precinct or Parish, and that part, now Stoughton, after the incorporation of Stoughtonham as a district, constituted the Second Precinct.

We may assume that the inhabitants of the different precincts lived harmoniously together under one town government, increasing in population and wealth, maintaining their churches and schools, and educating themselves and their children in these as well as in the town-meeting, the militia, and the General Court, not only for the ordinary duties of life, but also for those of local government and the more stern realities of the Revolutionary crisis.

Here, within a mile of this spot, Roger Sherman, whose name is appended to the Declaration of Independence, and who was one of the committee that reported it to the Congress, passed the days of his boyhood and youth, even if not born here upon our own territory, which is a matter of some doubt and uncertainty.

The Revolutionary War.—For a series of years preceding the Declaration of Independence the action of the British ministry and Parliament on the subjects of taxation, trade, and labor had been such as to exasperate the colonies, and doubtless led many thinking minds to reflect upon the value to the colonies of their connection with the mother-country and the absurdity of remaining in subjection under the many grievances imposed upon them.

That a people like this, numbering two and a half millions, with an extensive territory and ample room for expansion, could long remain subject to a foreign government that oppressed and held them down is utterly inconceivable.

Sabine scouts the idea that the stamp-duty and the tea-duty were the causes of the American Revolution. "Colonies," says he, "become nations as certainly as boys become men, and by a similar law." "The Declaration of the fifty-six at Philadelphia was but the contract signed by the forty-one sad and stricken ones in the waters of Provincetown, with the growth of one hundred and fifty-six years." "At most, taxation and the kindred questions did but accelerate the dismemberment of the British Empire, just as a man whose lungs are half consumed hastens the crisis by suicide."

For years prior to 1776, Samuel Adams, the great leader of Revolutionary sentiment, had labored with all his powers to instill into the minds of the people republican ideas. He was unreservedly for separation and independence, which he had avowed as early as 1769, and which he wished to have declared immediately after the battle of Lexington. He foresaw that sooner or later it must come, and to his view, apparently, the sooner the better.

"Taxation" and "Taxation without Representation" were the watch-words to some considerable extent. But it was not simply the paltry taxes that were levied upon the colonies that led to independence. These words were but the terms used to signify a certain class of legislative acts that were especially aimed at the industrial and maritime interests of the colonies. Sabine tells us, "there were no less than twenty-nine laws which restricted and bound down Colonial industry," "hardly one of which, until the passage of the Stamp Act, imposed a direct tax." "They forbade the use of water-falls, the erecting of machinery, of looms and spindles, and the working of wood and iron; they set the king's arrows upon trees that rotted in the forests." It was not so much "direct taxation" as it was this restrictive policy and legislation, the end and purpose of which was to keep the colonies as mere tributaries and market-places for the trade and manufactures of the mother-country, and to prevent our merchants from carrying on trade with any nation other than Great Britain.

The colonies hesitated long before proceeding to active resistance, but having once entered upon it, the path of duty became plain, and they persevered until success crowned their efforts.

In the early spring of 1773 the Boston Committee of Correspondence, at the head of which was Samuel Adams, addressed a letter to the town, and a meeting was called to consider it. The record proceeds as follows:

"At a Town Meeting, legally assembled in Stoughton on Monday y^e 1st day of March, A.D. 1773. Mr. Joseph Billings, Moderator.

"Voted to hear the Letter sent from the Town of Boston: and after some debates, the following Letter was read:

"To the Boston Committee of Correspondence:

"HONORED GENTLEMEN:

"Having had opportunity to hear and consider your Letter to us: for which we are obliged and Thankful to you; We, according to our best understanding, think that our rights as Men, as Christians and British subjects are rightly stated by you and in the many instances produced have been greatly infringed upon and Violated by Arbitrary Will and Power. We esteem them heavy grievances, and apprehensive that in future time they may prove fatal to us and our Posterity, as to all that is dear to us, Reducing us not only to Poverty but Slavery, We do Humbly Remonstrate against them and concur with you and our Brethren in several Towns of the Province, tho' we cannot Joyn with all the Towns, nor with you in every circumstance and Particular of your Proceeding, Yet we must concur with you and them in Bearing our Testimony against them and in uniting in all Constitutional methods for regaining these Rights and Privileges that have been ravished from us and for retaining those that yet Remain to us and accordingly we advise and Instruct our Representative to exert himself for these ends. And as that this Province ever had, and (ought) to have a right to Petition to the King for the Redress of such grievances as they feel and for Preventing such as they have just Reason to apprehend and fear, that he move that an Humble Petition for these Purposes be Presented to His Majesty, Hoping for a Divine Blessing upon all our Constitutional Endeavours for the Preservation and Enjoyment of all our natural and Constitutional Rights and Privileges, and Professing our Loyalty to the King and Praying that he may Long sit upon the throne and Rule in Righteousness, and that he may be a nursing father to us his Loyal Subjects and all his officers may be peace and his exactions Righteousness, We subscribe ourselves your distressed Brethren and oppressed fellow subjects."

"Voted to accept of this Letter and that it be Recorded upon the Town Book, and a copy be sent by the Town Clerk to the Committee of Correspondence in Boston."

It will be seen that at this time the town was extremely cautious about committing itself to the views and purposes of the Boston committee. They agreed fully in the statement of grievances, but preferred to continue their petitions to the king. This caution is still further exhibited by the action of the town-meeting held on July 11, 1774, when it was

"Voted to dismiss the 2^d Article, viz:—To see if the Town will vote to pay £2. 17. 9. to the Hon^{ble} Thomas Cushing, Esq^r of Boston, by y^e 15th day of August next, to pay y^e Committee of this Province chosen by our General Court to meet y^e Committee of other governments."

It is evident, however, that there were active friends of resistance in Stoughton, and that they were not idle, nor were they long delayed in bringing the town to their way of thinking.

A little more than a month from the date of the preceding meeting, to wit, on the 16th of August, as Baneroft informs us, "a county congress," of the towns of Suffolk (which then embraced what is now Norfolk), met at a tavern in the village of Stoughton. This tavern, Mr. D. T. V. Huntoon says, was the "Doty Tavern," a building now standing a little to the south of the base of Blue Hill. At this meeting Joseph Warren was present. "As the aged Samuel Dunbar, the rigid Calvinist Minister," of the First Parish, continues Baneroft, "breathed forth among them his prayer for liberty, the venerable man seemed inspired with 'the most divine and prophetic enthusiasm.' 'We must stand undisguised upon one side or the other,' said Ebenezer Thayer, of Braintree."

We do not find that the Stoughton men, who may have attended this meeting at Doty's tavern, were chosen thereto by any action of the town; so far as our own citizens were concerned, it was an individual matter. It is said, however, by Baneroft, "that the members were unanimous and firm, but that 'they postponed their decision till it could be promulgated with greater formality,' " and, so far as this town was concerned, it may be added, with greater authority. To this end, and in contempt of Gage and the act of Parliament, they directed special meetings in every town and precinct in the county to elect delegates, with full powers to appear at Dedham on the first Monday in September.

On the 29th day of August another town-meeting was held. The meeting at Doty's Tavern had had its effect; the appearance there of the aged minister Dunbar probably had created enthusiasm among the people, given courage to the timid, and hope to all. William Royal was chosen moderator, and it was "Voted that a Committee be chosen to represent y^e Town in a County Convention of y^e Towns and Districts of this County to be holden at the house of Richard Woodward at Dedham on Tuesday y^e 6th day of September next, with full power of adjourning, acting and doing all such matters and things in said Convention, or in a general Convention of the Countys of this Province as to them may appear of Public Utility in this day of Public and General Distress." "Voted that five persons be chosen for this Purpose, and also that John Withington, Theophilus Curtis, John Kenney, Jedediah Southworth and Josiah Pratt be this Committee."

"That this Committee be directed to endeavor to obtain a County Indemnification for all such persons as may be fined or otherwise suffered by a non-compliance with a Late Act of y^e British Parliament, intituled 'An Act for the better regulation of the Government of the Massachusetts Bay in North America.'

"That this Committee be also a Committee of Correspondence to advise and correspond with the other Towns in this Province about all such matters and things as may appear to them likely in any way to affect the Public."

On the 6th of September, 1774, the county convention assembled at the house of Mr. Woodward, in Dedham; every town and district in the county was represented. Their business was referred to a committee, of which Joseph Warren was chairman.

The convention was adjourned to meet on Friday, the 9th of September, at the house of Daniel Vose, in Milton, when Warren presented the resolutions, with an elaborate report introductory thereto, from which we extract two lines, in these words: "On the fortitude, on the wisdom, and on the exertions of this important day, is suspended the fate of this new world and of unborn millions."

The address and resolutions, since known as the "Suffolk Resolves," were unanimously adopted.

And it was "Voted, That Joseph Warren, Esq. and Doct. Benjamin Church of Boston, Deacon Joseph Palmer and Col. Ebenezer Thayer of Braintree, Capt. Lemuel Robinson, William Holden, Esq. and Capt. John Homans of Dorchester, Capt. William Heath of Roxbury, Col. William Taylor and Doct. Samuel Gardner of Milton, Isaac Gardner, Esq., Capt. Benjamin White, and Capt. Thomas Aspinwall of Brookline, Nathaniel Sumner, Esq., and Mr. Richard Woodward of Dedham, be a Committee to wait on his Excellency Gov^r Gage and inform him that this County is alarmed at the fortifications making on Boston Neck, and to remonstrate against the same."

The committee on the next day prepared an address "To His Excellency, Thomas Gage, Esq., Captain-General and Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Province of Massachusetts Bay," and presented the same to Gage on Monday, the 12th.

To this address the Governor replied on the same day; after which the committee met together and adopted an answer to the Governor, of which a copy was delivered to Secretary Flucker by Joseph Warren, with a desire that he would present it to the Governor, and request His Excellency to appoint a time for receiving it in form, which, as the committee were informed, the Governor declined.

These resolves attracted great attention. They were sent by special messengers to our delegates in the Continental Congress, delighting Samuel Adams and John Adams, and creating great excitement in the Continental Congress, where they were read. Joseph Galloway, a loyalist, at one time a member of the Continental Congress, in his "Historical and Political Reflections of the Rise and Progress of the American Revolution, London, 1780," said these "Suffolk Resolves" "contained a complete declaration of war against Great Britain."

On the 26th day of September, at a town-meeting held in the First Precinct (in the meeting-house which stood within twenty rods of this spot), the town, together with the District of Stoughtonham, made choice of Mr. Thomas Crane for their representative, and voted him the following instructions:

"SIR.—As we have now chosen you to Represent us in the Great and General Court to be holden at Salem on Wednesday y^e 5th day of October next ensuing, We do hereby Instruct you that in all your doings as a member of the House of Representatives you adhere firmly to the charter of this Province, granted by their Majesties King William and Queen Mary, and that you do no act that can possibly be construed into an acknowledgment of the validity of y^e act of y^e British Parliament for altering y^e Government of Massachusetts-Bay. More especially that you acknowledge y^e Honourable Board of Counselors elected by y^e General Court at their session in May last as y^e only rightful and Constitutional Counsel of this Province; and as we have reason to believe that a Conscientious Discharge of your duty will Produce your Dissolution as an House of Representatives, We do hereby Impower and Instruct you to join with y^e members who may be sent from this and y^e other Towns in y^e Province, and to meet with them at a time to be agreed upon in a General Provincial Congress to act upon such matters as may come before you, in such a manner as may appear to you most conducive to y^e true Interest of this Town and Province and most likely to Preserve the Liberties of all North America."

On the same day the town made choice of Mr. John Withington to meet the committee from the several towns in this province, at Concord, the second Tuesday in October next, in a General Provincial Congress, "to act upon such matters as may come before you in such a manner as may appear to you most conducive to the true interest of this town and province and most likely to preserve the liberties of all North America."

Jan. 9, 1775, the town made choice of Mr. Thomas Crane to represent them in a Provincial Congress to be held at Cambridge the 1st day of February next.

At the same meeting it was put to vote whether the town would send their province money to Henry Gardner, Esq., and it passed in the negative.

Gardner had been elected province treasurer by the Provincial Congress.

This money consisted of tax money collected by the constables for the province, and the proposition really was to divert it from the use of his majesty's officers and treasury and use it for the purpose of resisting the encroachments of the crown.

How this vote could have been carried in the negative after what had already taken place it is a little difficult to conceive; however that may have been, at an adjourned meeting held a week later the vote was reconsidered, and it was "voted to send all our province money to Henry Gardner, Esq., of Stow, as is recommended by ye Provincial Congress." It was further "Voted to indemnify the constables for not carrying the Province money to Harrison Gray, Esq.," who was the treasurer of the crown.

On the same day the Continental Congress and their resolves were fully approved and a Committee of Inspection chosen, consisting of nineteen persons, viz.:

John Withington, John Kenney, Adam Blackman, James Endicott, Jeremiah Ingraham, Abner Crane, Peter Talbot, Jonathan Capen, Robert Capen, Jedediah Southworth, Samuel Shepard, David Vinton, Theophilus Curtis, Josiah Pratt, Eleazer Robins, Samuel Tucker, Benjamin Gill, Robert Swan, and Peter Gay.

This committee was instructed to use its interest that the resolves and the association of the Continental Congress be closely adhered to.

Matters now looked warlike, for on March 6, 1775, the town "Voted to raise one quarter of the Militia as Minute men agreeable to the advice of y^e Provincial Congress," "and to give them one shilling for half a day's training, for two half days every week." The field-officers with the selectmen were directed to raise the men.

March 20th, the town "Voted that Mr. Thomas Crane attend the County Congress at Mr. Daniel Vose's in Milton, y^e 26th day of April next."

It will be remembered that it was at the house of Mr. Vose that the Suffolk Resolves were adopted on Sept. 9, 1774.

Whether the meeting at Mr. Vose's was held on the 26th we are not informed, very likely not, for before that time important events were to happen. The 19th of April was fast approaching. Gage had determined to cripple the country towns by destroying the colony stores at Concord, and secretly prepared an expedition for that purpose. A force of eight hundred grenadiers and infantry crossed in boats from the foot of the Common to East Cambridge. The activity of Warren and Paul Revere discovered the purpose of Gage, and arrangements were made by which Concord and the Middlesex towns should be notified. Paul Revere's famous midnight ride on the 18th of April aroused the people of Medford, Lexington, and Concord, and it almost seems as if the clatter of his horse's hoofs was heard here in Stoughton, for, on the 19th, nine companies of militia marched from Stoughton and the district of Stoughtonham to the assistance of their brethren, viz.:

Capt. James Endicott's company.....	83 men.
“ William Briggs’ “	41 “
“ Asahel Smith’s “	77 “
“ Peter Talbot’s “	85 “
“ Josiah Pratt’s “	33 “
“ Israel Smith’s “	23 “
“ Samuel Payson’s “	33 “
“ Edward Bridge Savels’ company.....	64 “
“ Ebenezer Tisdale’s “	31 “

Making in all four hundred and seventy men who marched from Stoughton and Stoughtonham on that eventful day.

On the 27th of April, Capt. William Bent's company, fifty-nine men, marched to Roxbury for three months and twelve days' service.

In June, Capt. Frederick Pope enlisted a company of fifty-eight men for one month and nine days' service.

Capt. Endicott, on the 4th of March, 1776, marched with his company of forty-one men “to the assistance of the Continental troops, when they fortified on the heights of Dorchester.” A little later in the same year, with eighty-two men, he marched to Ticonderoga, and on the 28th of March, 1778, to Roxbury, “agreeable to an Order of Council,” with seventy-eight men.

On the 22d of March, 1776, Capt. Theophilus Lyon's company, forty-seven men, marched to Braintree, and on March 1, 1778, Capt. Lyon, with forty-nine men, marched to Castle Island.

Capt. Robert Swan, with sixty-two men, marched to Bristol, R. I., and with thirty men, to the Castle, on Dec. 19, 1777.

Capt. Abner Crane, with fifty-eight men, in 1779, marched with his company “in a campaign to Claverack on the Hudson River.”

The promptness with which the militia met every call was most creditable. Nor was the town less prompt in furnishing its quota to the Continental army. For this the town furnished nearly or quite two hundred men, for terms of service varying from six months to three years, or during the war, some of our men having served for the full period of four years.

May 25th, Thomas Crane was chosen to represent the town in the Provincial Congress for the six months following, and Peter Talbot, Christopher Wadsworth, and Benjamin Gill were appointed a Committee of Correspondence.

On July 10th Stoughton and Stoughtonham, in town-meeting assembled, elected Thomas Crane to represent them in a great and General Court, to be held in Watertown, on Wednesday, the 19th day of July, 1775.

Very little action of importance in town-meeting was transacted during the remainder of the year 1775.

We come now to the year 1776. On March 18th, Messrs. Elijah Dunbar, Peter Talbot, Josiah Pratt, Theophilus Curtis, John Kenney, Christopher Wadsworth, and David Lyon were chosen a Committee of Correspondence and Inspection.

All of these men, except the chairman, had marched to the lines, to the music of fife and drum, on the 19th of April, two of them, Talbot and Pratt, as captains, each in command of a company.

On May 22d another town-meeting was held, at which, we may well suppose, the men who had mustered and marched so promptly on the 19th of April were present. An article in the warrant had informed them that the question of independence was to be acted on by the meeting. The first business was the choice of representatives, and Benjamin Gill and Thomas Crane were chosen.

The date of this meeting was May 22d, six weeks prior to the adoption of the Declaration of Independence by the Continental Congress, and while the question there was trembling in the balance our fathers passed this resolve:

“Voted, That if the Honourable Continental Congress should, for the safety of this Colony, Declare us Independent of the Kingdom of Great Britain, We, the Inhabitants, will Solemnly engage with our lives and fortunes to support them in the Measure.”

All honor to these men of seventeen hundred and seventy-six!

On the 4th of July, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was adopted. The following is the action of the Massachusetts Council, showing what measures were taken to give publicity to the document:

“In Council, July 17th, 1776.

“ORDERED, That the Declaration of Independence be printed, and a copy sent to the Minister of each Parish, of every Denomination within this State, and that they severally be required to read the same to their respective Congregations as soon as divine service is ended, in the afternoon, on the first Lord's Day after they shall have received it: And after such Publication thereof to deliver the said Declaration to the Clerks of their several Towns or Districts, who are hereby required to record the same in their respective Town or District Books, there to remain as a perpetual Memorial thereof.

“In the Name and by Order of y^e Council.

“R. DERBY, JR., President.

“A true Copy, Attest, JOHN AVERY, Dep. Sec'y.”

And our town clerk adds, “faithfully recorded.” Attest, George Crossman, Town Clerk.”

On July 18th the town voted to raise, by taxation, a sum of money to give to each man to the number of thirty-eight men, that shall enlist into the service for the Northern Department, against Quebec, the sum of £6 6s. 8d. as an addition to their bounty.

May 21, 1777. John Kenney was chosen as "agent of the town, to procure evidence against the 'toreys,' and a committee, consisting of John Kenney, Christopher Wadsworth, David Vinton, Peter Talbot, Capt. Pratt, Capt. Endicott, and Benjamin Tucker, was chosen to see to the enforcement of the 'Regulating Act.'"

May 28th, a committee chosen to examine the accounts of the town's Committee of Correspondence, etc., made report, which was accepted.

Some of the items of these accounts are given, as showing the character of the work performed by the committee.

The account of Elijah Dunbar, Esq., contained, among others, these items:

"1776.
March 18th.	To $\frac{1}{2}$ day writing circular letters ...	£0	4. 5.
" 20th.	To $\frac{1}{2}$ day at Johnson's about getting wood for the army		2. 0.
May 13th.	To $\frac{1}{2}$ day taking cognizance of those y ^e have been unfriendly to y ^e country	1.	10 $\frac{1}{2}$.
June 23rd,	To $\frac{1}{2}$ day at Capt. Smith's to take some order with those who refused to sign the Test Act	2.	0.
July 22 and 26,	To 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ days at Johnson's about procuring hard money, etc.....	4.	0.
1777.
Feb. 12 and 13,	To 2 days on y ^e business of Regulating prices.....	8.	0."

The full amount allowed Mr. Dunbar was £2 17s. 6d.

"Capt. Peter Talbot attended all the above said service, except the writing of notifications about regulating prices, and over and above y^e aforesaid account he attend^d y^e County Convention at Dedham and singley he went about $\frac{1}{2}$ day to get the Test Act signed."

Capt. Talbot's allowance was £2 4s. 4d.

Capt. Christopher Wadsworth attended substantially the same service that Capt. Talbot did, and was allowed £21 4s. 4d.

"Capt. Theophilus Curtis was allowed.....	£1.	3.	10 $\frac{1}{2}$.
Capt. David Lyon	£2.	8.	0.
Capt. Josiah Pratt.....	£1.	10.	10 $\frac{1}{2}$.
And John Kenney's is allowed.....	£3.	3.	8.

the same as Capt. P. Talbot, and over and above, for one journey to Gen^l Washington, sent by the Selectmen."

On May 26th the selectmen exhibited to the town-meeting a list of those persons that, in their opinion, "have endeavored since y^e 19th of April, 1775, to counteract y^e United Struggles of this and the United States, for the preservation of their Liberties and Privileges, as follows: William Curtis, Noah Kingsbury, Samuel Capen, Edward Taylor, Henry Crane, Edward Shail."

The report is signed by Benjamin Gill, Adam

Blackman, Jonathan Capen, and James Endicott, selectmen.

Some, if not all, of these men must have joined the Loyalist party but a short time prior to the presentation of this report, for both Edward Taylor and Edward Shail marched with Endicott's company on the 19th of April, and on two later occasions, in 1776, Shail's name appears upon the muster-rolls.

March 16, 1778, the town voted to accept the report of the committee chosen to make an average or equal balance of duty, by fixing the pay for the different kinds of service, as follows:

The eight months at the Lines in 1775.....	£3.	0.	0.
The two months service at y ^e Lines in 1775.....	1.	4.	0.
The twelve months service in 1776, excepting the men that went with Capt. Pope.....	20.	0.	0.
The 12 months service with Capt. Pope in 1776...	15.	0.	0.
The 4 months service at Ticonderoga, in 1776, } each man giving credit for bounty received.....	8.	0.	0.
The 4 mos. service at the Lines in 1776.....	4.	0.	0.
The 2 " " at York in 1776.....	6.	0.	0.
The 3 " " " " 1776 & 1777.....	7.	0.	0.
The 3 " " " " y ^e Lines in 1777.....	2.	10.	0.
The 12 days service at Castle Island in 1777.....	0.	15.	0.
The 3 weeks service at Bristol, R. I. in 1777.....	2.	0.	0.
The 2 months " " North Kingston, R. I. in 1775.....	5.	0.	0.
The 3 " " " Stillwater and other places, in 1777.....	10.	0.	0.
The 4 " " " Rhode Island in 1777.....	6.	0.	0.
The 1 " " " y ^e Secret Expedition in 1777.....	3.	0.	0.
The 5 " " " to Gen. Burgoyne in 1777 & 1778.....	7.	0.	0.
To 3 " " " at Dorchester & Boston in 1778.....	2.	10.	0.
" 3 " " " in Rhode Island in 1778...	6.	0.	0.
" 3 " " " at Noddle's Island & Hull in 1776.....	2.	0.	0.

In this year the town began to be excited about a new form of government for the State of Massachusetts, proposed by the General Court.

March 23d it was "Voted That Messrs. Elijah Dunbar, Peter Talbot, Wm. Wheeler, Jed^h Southworth, John Kenny, Adam Blackman, Hezekiah Gay, Nath^l Fisher, Samuel Shepard, Geo. Crossman, Isaiah Johnson, James Hawkes Lewis, and Samuel Talbot, be a committee to take under consideration the new form of government, and make report to the town."

April 7th, "Voted That Elijah Dunbar, Esq. and Capt. Jedediah Southworth, be a committee to meet in a county convention at Dedham, on the 28th day of this inst, to take into consideration y^e new form of government."

And on May 18th the committee of thirteen, appointed 23d March, made an elaborate report against the proposed new form of government. And it was voted unanimously to disapprove the same, two hundred and thirty-five votes being given.

May 28th, Thomas Crane, Esq., was elected representative, and the town voted him the following instructions:

"To THOMAS CRANE, ESQ.

"SIR,—The town of Stoughton having made choice of you to Represent them in a Great and General Court, y^e ensuing year, it must be agreeable to you, (if you consider yourself the servant of y^e town and accountable to them as you really are,) to know y^e minds of your constituents, respecting y^e important Duties of your Station, who have chosen you to act for their safety & happiness, as connected with y^e whole & not for your own private emolument or separate interest, & therefore, y^e Town think fit to give you the following instructions: You are by no means to vote for any person belonging to y^e following orders of men to have a seat in y^e legislative Council, but use your Influence that they may be excluded, (viz,) the members of the Continental Congress and officers holding Commissions under them, —Judges of y^e Superior Courts of Common Pleas, Judges of the maritime Courts,—Judges of Probate, Registers of Probate, Sheriffs,—Members of the Board of War, & all Executive Officers who have a fixed annual stipend. As soon as y^e Two Branches of the Legislature are settled and properly organized, your primary object must be the Prosecution of the War with spirit and vigour, with a view to bring it to a speedy & honourable issue.

“For this purpose you are directed to exert yourself to have y^e Continental Army completed in the most expeditious manner, & see that negligent Towns and Delinquent officers are punished according to law in that case made and provided. And also, you are to vote for such large and speedy supplies as may appear to you necessary to enable y^e Commander-in-Chief of our armies to answer the expectations of his Country, that y^e war, if Possible, may be ended the ensuing campaign with Immortal Honour to himself & Permanent Glory and Security to y^e United States of America.”

Lengthy additions were made to these instructions by the town, which may be found duly recorded in the records. They were also published in the “Continental Journal” of June 18, 1778:

June 1, 1779. “Voted, To give our Representative y^e same Instructions our Representative had y^e last year, Together with y^e following Instructions, (viz):

“To Elijah Dunbar, Esq.—Sir: Whereas y^e Town of Stoughton thought proper to instruct their Representative y^e last year in matters that concerned the public weal,—and you being the Present Legislative Servant of this Town, & as such you have solicited instruction from your constituents for the guidance of your General conduct in that Capacity y^e ensuing year, Therefore, y^e Town think fit to Direct & Instruct you strictly to adhere, and in the most cautious manner observe & obey” . . . “y^e instructions given to their Representative y^e last year,” . . . “excepting these two Paragraphs in said Instructions which relate to the form of Government that was proposed to the consideration of the inhabitants of this State for approbation or Disapprobation, which paragraphs are now redundant, as we find by a resolve of the General Court, pass^d Feb^y 29th, 1779, that s^d form hath been Disapproved by a majority of y^e Inhabitants of said State,—And also, you are further directed and empowered by your constituents to vote for y^e calling a State Convention for the sole purpose of forming a New Constitution or Form of Government, provided it shall appear, on Examination, that a majority of y^e people present & voting at their respective Town meetings choose, at this time, to have a New Constitution or Form of Government made, and if such a Convention should be voted to be called, you are hereby instructed to exert your utmost endeavors that some mode may be adopted, whereby the inhabitants of the State, (as nearly as possible,) may be equally Represented in said Convention; and furthermore, you are enjoined ever to be watchful of the Rights & Liberties of the (people,) and whenever any Infringement shall be attempted on them: or you are apprehensive that their safety or Interest are in Danger, You are, like a faithful Sentinel, to give the alarm to your Constituents.”

August 9. “The Town made choice of y^e Rev^d. Mr. Jedediah Adams for our Delegate to sit in State Convention for y^e sole purpose of forming a New Constitution.”

Paper money had now become so much reduced in value that the town adopted a report of a committee regulating the prices of certain articles. We give a sample of these prices as established Aug. 9, 1779:

“Cyder £6 per bbl. and for making, 18s. per bbl. Pertators and Turnips 18s. per bushel, & other sauce in proportion. For a common dinner 15s. other meals in proportion. For lodging 3s. per night. West India Tody at 12s. per Bowl. New England do. 9s. per bowl. Horse keeping one Night on grass 18s. on Hay 15s. Beef 5s. per lb., Mutton, Veal & Lamb, 4s. per lb., Butter, 11s per lb., New Milk Cheese 6s. per lb., New Milk 2s. per Quart, English Hay, 36s. per Hundred. For Shoeing a Horse £4.—a yoke of Oxen £8.”

A committee of twenty-one persons was selected to inform the Committee of Correspondence of any breaches of the resolution respecting these prices.

On May 24, 1780, Thomas Crane, Esq., was chosen representative, and on September 4th the first election for Governor took place, agreeably to a resolve of the State Convention passed on the 16th day of June, and John Hancock had fifty-three votes, the whole number thrown.

October 10th, Elijah Dunbar, Esq., and Thomas Crane were chosen representatives. Thomas Crane was excused from serving, and Capt. James Endicott was elected. Capt. Endicott was excused from serving, and Mr. Christopher Wadsworth was chosen.

On April 2, 1781, the vote for Governor was as follows: John Hancock had forty-seven votes; James Bowdoin had two votes.

May 16, 1783, John Kenney was chosen representative, and sundry instructions were voted him, showing a violent state of public feeling in regard to the Tories, and showing also the first recorded evidence that the war was ended:

“2d. Whereas we have reason to believe that this year every effort will be made for the return to their possessions of that abandoned set of men, very justly described by the Laws of this Commonwealth, Conspirators and absentees, who voluntarily at the beginning of the war, not only deserted their country's cause, but have aided and assisted the Enemy with their counsels and money, and many of them with their personal services, most inhumanly murdering innocent women and children, therefore, we instruct you to attend the General Court constantly, and use your utmost exertions that they, and every one of them, be forever excluded and Barred from having Lot or portion amongst us. And that the Estates they formerly possessed and have justly forfeited, may be immediately sold, and the money arising therefrom be applied to the Discharge of our public debt; and that such of them as have unwarily crept in among us, may be immediately and forever removed out of this Commonwealth.”

“4th. And, whereas the war is at an End, we earnestly recommend it to you to use your interest in the General Court that our army, both officers and privates, may be paid off as soon as possible, either in money or securities, according to the public engagements made to them when they entered the service. But on no account are you ever to give your voice or vote for the establishing of half-pay officers amongst us, or any thing that may be called an equivalent, but to use your utmost exertions against it."

On the 30th of November, 1782, the preliminary treaty of peace was signed by the commissioners of the two countries, by which the independence of the United States was acknowledged.

When the news was promulgated here we may well believe there was great rejoicing. In 1783 a meeting was held in the old meeting-house, at which the venerable Dunbar was present. His prayers at the Doty Tavern had been answered, and he was doubtless ready himself to depart hence, to be here no more forever. At that great meeting of gladness and joy, it is humiliating to reflect that religious intolerance should have prevented the attendance of the veteran Gridley, whose services in the French war had been so valuable to his king, and in the early days of the Revolution so important to the republic.

May 7, 1787, Elijah Dunbar and Col. Frederick Pope were elected representatives.

The bitter feeling which existed in 1783, as shown by the instructions to representative Kenney, before quoted, appears to have subsided. The following are extracts from the vote of instructions to Messrs. Dunbar and Pope:

"These discriminating and disqualifying acts, which serve to irritate the minds of the people, instead of promoting the desirable blessing of peace, your constituents wish to have repealed, together with all other laws that appear repugnant to the common good."

"You will inquire whether the liberty of the Press, so essential to the security of freedom in a State, has been in any manner violated or restrained in this Commonwealth, and if so, you will endeavour to have the violators impeached and future restraints prevented."

"That if the Tender Act should be continued, which, on account of the present scarcity of Cash, may be for the best, for a limited time, you will endeavor to have amended, so that property may be appraised at the same rate for the payment of a Creditor, as it would have been at the time when the particular Debt was contracted."

"In order that all the Inhabitants in the Commonwealth may have full employ, be beneficial to themselves and the Public: You will endeavor by every feasible and rational method, to encourage & promote Ship Building, Whale and Cod Fishery, Agriculture, and every necessary & useful manufacture that may be profitably carried on in the States:—& that large Duties be laid on all imported articles that might be thus manufactured in them; and also upon all articles of Luxury & Extravagance, and that moderate Duties be laid upon many articles of convenience, but none upon the real necessities of life."

From 1783, for several years, the attention of the town was given to the division of Suffolk County, which the town heartily favored. Success finally crowned this enterprise, and Norfolk County was incorporated March 20, 1793.

The obstructions to the passage of fish up the Neponset, by the dams at Milton, were fruitful sources of contention and litigation, so that, at one time, serious trouble was imminent. A party from Stoughton went to Milton to remove obstructions, when they were set upon by the employés of the mill-owners and driven away. A special town-meeting was called to take action thereon. A committee, of fourteen members, was chosen to join with the fish committee in getting the way through Leeds' Dam, and another committee, of twenty members, as the vote expresses it, was chosen "to stir up the People to go down and assist in opening Leeds' dam, for the fish to go up;" but cooler counsels prevailed, and the parties contested their rights in the courts.

In 1794 a novel experiment was tried for supplying the town treasury, by voting that the person who should be chosen representative should serve for 6s. 7d. per day, and if the General Court should fix the pay at a higher rate, "y^e overplus is to be returned to the town." Col. Frederick Pope was chosen, and accepted the condition prescribed. It is probable that the experiment proved not to be remunerative, for at the next election the subject was dismissed.

Incorporation of Town.—In 1795 the inhabitants of the First Parish met in legal meeting, held at the meeting-house, on the 9th day of March, and voted on the thirteenth article (which was to see if the parish will petition the General Court to be set off as a separate town), that Elijah Dunbar, Esq., Col. Nathan Crane, Mr. Joseph Bemis, Col. Benjamin Gill, and Capt. Elijah Crane be a committee to prepare a petition for the inhabitants to sign for a division of the town. And further voted that Col. Gill, Capt. Elijah Crane, and Col. Nathan Crane be a committee to present the petition to the General Court.

A petition was accordingly prepared, signed by one hundred and forty-three inhabitants of the parish, and is here given:

.. PETITION.

"To the Honourable Senate and House of Representatives of the Comth of Mass^{ts}, in General Court assembled:

"The Petition of the Subscribers, Inhabitants of the first Parish in the Town of Stoughton, in the County of Norfolk in s^d Comth, humbly sheweth that the local situation of said Town of Stoughton is very singular, being near Eleven Miles in length & about four Miles in breadth, as may appear by a Plan thereof, and also that there is a large body of land laying upon and contiguous to the line between the North and South Parishes, which is and always will be incapable of any valuable improvement, which throws the bulk of the Inhabitants of said Parishes at a great distance from each other, which peculiar circumstance makes it always inconvenient & sometimes impracticable for the Inhabitants of either of said Parishes to attend Town Meeting as they have been usually held for some years past, by reason of the great distance of way & sometimes impassable roads.—

"Therefore, your Petitioners humbly pray that the lands within the said first Parish & the Inhabitants thereof, (except those persons and their property that wish to remain with the Town of Stoughton,) may be incorporated into a Distinct and separate Town. And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

"Stoughton, Apr^l 17th, 1795.

Elijah Dunbar.
Benj'n Gill.
Nathan Crane.
Elijah Crane.
Joseph Bemis.
Sam'l Capen (2d).
William McKendry.
Ezekiel Fisher.
David Hartwell.
Jno. Kenney, Jr.
Charles Fenno.
Sam'l Wales.
Nath'l Hill.
Moses Baker.
Redmon Spurr.
Thomas French.
Michael Shaller.
Sam'l Strobridge.
Isaac Billing.
Seth Strobridge.
Archibill McKendry.
Samuel Gooch.
Lem. Tant.
John Wentworth.
Ezekiel Johnson.
John Puffer.
Abel Puffer.
Ephraim Hunt.
David Talbot.
Nathaniel Pitt.
William Bent.
Nath'l Fisher.
John Kenney.
James H. Lewis.
Laban Lewis.
Benj'n Bussey.
Elijah Puffer.
Lem'l Whiting.
Sam'l Tucker.
Simeon Tucker.
Samuel Tucker, Jr.
Benjamin Tucker.
Benjamin Sylvester.
John Mudden.
James Tucker.
Elisha Haws.
Elijah Wentworth.
Joseph Henry.
Stephen Blake.
James Smith.
John Morse.
Ephraim Smith.
Amos Upham.
John Dunlop.

Rodolpis Kinsley.
Wm. Crane.
James Reed.
Lemuel Davenport.
Fisher Kingsbury.
Ebenezer Holmes.
Edward Downs.
Samuel Canterbury.
Thomas Allen.
Jarath'l Crane.
Silas Crane.
Elijah Crane (2d).
James Endicott.
George Jordan.
Luther May.
Henry Bailey.
George Crossman.
Joseph Chandler.
Richard Wild.
Benjamin Lyon.
Sam'l Morse.
John Capen (2d).
Benj'n Wentworth.
Enoch Dickerman.
Oli'r Wentworth.
Josiah Tilden.
Nath'l Wentworth.
Jonathan Farrington.
John Billing.
Nath'l Whiting.
Daniel Tucker.
Adam Blackman, Jr.
Samuel Blackman.
Nathaniel Kenney.
Jno. Blackman.
Benj'n Lewis.
George Blackman.
John Withington.
Sam. Morse, Jun'r.
Henry Morse.
Elijah Gill.
Lem'l Fisher.
Abel Wentworth.
Abel Fisher.
Comfort Hoyton.
Paul Wentworth.
Elijah Fenno.
Jacob Billings.
Stephen Billings.
Nath'l Billing.
Nathan Billing.
Peter Billing.
Judah Henry.
Oliver Shepard.

John Gill.
Arunah Wentworth.
Joses Hill.
Henry Crane.
Nath'l Shepard.
Henry Morse, Jr.
John Tant.
John Tant, Jr.
William Wheeler.
Samuel Wheeler.
Sam'l Billing.
Joseph Billings.
John Tucker.
Nath'l Tilden.
Ephraim Jones.
Seth Wentworth.
Philip Whiting.
Adam Blackman.

Israel Bailey.
Jona. Billing.
Dudley Bailey.
George Stone.
Daniel Billing.
Enoch Leonard.
Wm. Shepard.
Elijah Endicott.
Lemuel Smith (2d).
Joseph Stearns.
Thomas Shepard.
Richard Gridley.
Uriah Leonard.
Calvin Crane.
Peter Thayer, Jun.
Silas Kinsley.
Oliver Downs."

At the date of this petition there were but one hundred and forty voters in the parish, so that there were on this paper three names in excess of the entire number of legal voters.

The petition was presented to the General Court June 11th, and an order of notice thereon issued, returnable at a later day. Stoughton, in the mean time, chose a committee, consisting of Samuel Talbot, Samuel Shepard, Joseph Richards, and James Pope, to oppose the petition.

Jan. 20, 1796, a remonstrance, signed by Lemuel Drake and one hundred and sixty-nine others, was presented in the House, being an excess of fifteen names over and above the whole number of legal voters in the Second Parish,—in fact, a few names from the First Parish were upon this remonstrance.

On June 10, 1776, the committees of the parish, and of the town, agreed that the matter should be referred to the Hon. Seth Bullard, of the Senate, and Judge Bullock, of Rehoboth, and Mr. Joseph Hewins, of Sharon, of the House. This committee was instructed to visit the town, hear the parties, and report thereon. They spent four days in this service, and on Sept. 3, 1796, made their report in favor of an act of incorporation, and on the 23d of February, in the year 1797, the town of Canton was duly incorporated.

On February 24th, Thomas Crane, Esq., issued his warrant to Laban Lewis, requiring him to warn the qualified voters to meet at the meeting-house in Canton on the 6th of March following, at one of the clock P.M., then and there to choose all such officers as towns are required by law to elect.

First Town Officers.—At a meeting held in pursuance of this warrant, Elijah Dunbar, Esq., was chosen moderator, and Elijah Crane, town clerk; Elijah Crane, Deacon Benjamin Tucker, and Col.

Nathan Crane, selectmen and assessors, and Joseph Bemis, town treasurer.

On April 3d the first meeting of the new town was held for the election of Governor, and Increase Sumner had thirty-nine votes, James Sullivan twenty, Edward H. Robbins ten, Moses Gill seven, and William Heath one.

May 1st. Elijah Crane, the first representative, was elected by a unanimous vote.

On the same day there was voted,—

For highways.....	$983.17
For salary of Rev. Zachariah Howard, for 1797.....	300.00

And at an adjourned meeting,—

For town charges.....	$800.00
For schooling.....	500.00

In 1798 the town voted for highways $1000, town charges $600, schooling $500, Mr. Howard's salary $300, and also voted to clapboard the back end of the meeting-house, and board and clapboard the back side of the belfry, also to paint the house.

These votes, and some that follow, will sound strangely to us at this day, when the town has nothing to do with the building or repair of meeting-houses or the support of the ministry, and every individual selects for his favor and support such church as best suits him, and is under no obligation to support any other. On the same page of the record above is a registry of a certificate of a committee of the denomination of Quakers, chosen at their monthly meeting, held at Lynn, "that Jonathan Leonard of Canton, doth belong to said Society." Such certificates were then necessary in order to relieve the person from liability to taxation for parish purposes. Many present will remember Mr. Leonard, who was engaged with Adam Kinsley in the manufacture of iron and steel, and was usually called "Quaker Leonard." The house in which he lived now forms a part of the Massapoag House.

In 1799, at a meeting held in December, an article was inserted in the warrant, "to see if the town will procure and set up a stove in the meeting house, for the convenience and comfort of those who attend Public Worship in the winter season," and the article was dismissed.

In 1800 we find the town instructing their representative to petition the General Court, and use his influence, to get the fine remitted that was imposed upon the town for not sending a representative to the General Court in 1799.

In 1802 this entry appears upon the records:

"Voted that the selectmen procure Lombard de Poplar trees at the expense of the town, and that they notify the inhabitants to assist in setting them out without expense to the town."

In this manner, doubtless, the poplar-trees, so common many years ago, were introduced.

1803. I select these passages: April 4th, "Voted that the selectmen post notification in the Belfry, calling on Youth and others not to make a tarry in Belfry after Public Worship is begun."

Again, May 2d, "Voted that Joseph Bemis, William Wheeler, Henry Bailey, Capt. Abner Crane, Benj. Lewis, and Adam Kinsley, be a committee to deliberate on the subject of Enlarging the Singers' Pew, as also, the subject of singing in general, to the end that that part of publick worship may be performed with conveniency, decency and in good order."

In 1805, this vote, "That Henry Bailey, Joseph Bemis and Jona. Leonard, be a committee to hear the aggrieved parties as respects their time and expense in search for Jack Battus, (the murderer of the young girl Talbot,) and report at April meeting."

At April meeting sixteen persons were allowed, in all, $46.50 for this service.

March 7, 1808. "Voted to pay a bounty of one dollar per head or tail, for every Rattlesnake absolutely taken & killed within the town in the months of April, May & October the present year."

Practically this was very much like offering a bounty of two dollars for each snake killed, and very likely it was found to be so, for the next year the town voted the same sum for rattlesnakes' tails, and cautioned the treasurer "to guard against deception when he is applied to for such bounties."

May 2d. At the election for the choice of a representative, Mr. Bemis, who had been the representative for eight successive years, and was a candidate for re-election, was also the town clerk. His record reads thus: "The votes being given in, sorted and counted, it appeared that Dea. Ben. Tucker had 32 votes, Joseph Bemis had 29 votes, and Andrew Capen 1 vote, and of course," says the record, "Dea. Benj. Tucker was elected."

War of 1812.—The war of 1812 now begins to be recognized in the records of the town. May 4th, voted to make up the pay for persons volunteering to fill up the quota of one hundred thousand men to fourteen dollars per month, if they go into actual service.

August 15th. It was voted that such addition be made to the pay of those persons who were drafted from this town under the last requisition of the President of the United States as shall make their monthly pay eighteen dollars.

September 12th. The town voted to furnish each non-commissioned officer and soldier with sixty rounds of ball-cartridges, and directed the selectmen immediately to purchase six hundred pounds of pork, two hundred pounds of beef, and eight hundred pounds of bread, for supplying the militia of the town, when called to defend their country. And also to procure covered baggage-wagons, to be in readiness to accompany the militia when called to the service of their country.

We have no means of giving a statement of the number of men furnished for the defense of the country in this war. The rolls are all in the custody of the United States, at Washington.

It is, however, apparent that the town was in favor of a vigorous prosecution of the war, and could brook no opposition. It appears that in 1813 the Rev. Edward Richmond, of Stoughton, preached a sermon in Mr. Richey's (Ritchie's) pulpit, on fast-day, in which it is supposed he denounced the war. The town took the matter in hand. On the 5th of April a committee of fifteen made this report :

"Gentlemen of the town,—Your committee, appointed to take into consideration the subject of the Rev. Edward Richmond's fast day sermon have attended the duty assigned them, and do recommend that the town pass a vote expressive of their disapprobation that the Rev. Edward Richmond should hereafter be introduced into the Desk of Canton Meeting House on Lord's Days, Fast Days, Thanksgiving Days, and Lecture Days, as a teacher of Religious Morality, &c., and that the Town Clerk be directed to serve the Rev. William Richey with a copy thereof without delay. ELIJAH DUNBAR, per order."

The clerk certifies that the above vote was taken by yeas and nays, and it passed in the affirmative.

April 1, 1816. A committee reported that they had purchased for the town Mr. Andrew Capen's farm for two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars. This is the present town farm, which was afterwards sold and again purchased of Mr. Elisha White, about the year 1837. Mr. Andrew Capen was the father of Nahum Capen, Esq., the able author of the "History of Democracy," and formerly postmaster of Boston.

May 6, Art. II., "To see if the town will give a bounty on crows' heads the present year."

Voted, on motion of Gen. Elijah Crane, "that every man kill his own crows."

Nov. 27, 1819. In the warrant for town-meeting this article was inserted on petition :

"To see if the town will express their opinion, as there are three Religious Societies within the town, whether they are willing to raise, in any case, any sum of money as a town, for ministerial purposes."

Dec. 6. On that article it was "Voted that the town of Canton do not raise any money in future, as a town, for ministerial purposes."

From the date of that vote we think the town had no further connection with parish affairs, thus anticipating legislation fourteen years, for the statute dis-severing the parishes from the towns did not pass till April 1, 1834.

First School-house in Canton.—The first schoolhouse built in this town stood somewhere near the spot where the present school-house in District No. 1 now stands. We give below the only record we can find of its building, with one or two other incidental votes :

March 28, 1734. "It was put to vote whether ye town would build a School house and it past in ye affirmative, also voted to grant a tax of twenty Pounds to be laid out in building said house and that said School house should be set on ye Town's land near ye Meeting House."

May 20, 1734. "The same day it was put to vote whether the town would petition ye General Court that some of ye province Land might be granted to this town to enable it to support and maintain ye School herein and it past in ye affirmative."

At the same meeting, William Royal, Esq., was chosen "to prefer the foregoing petition."

June 7, 1734. "Voted that there be a Com'tee chosen to build a School house in this town, and the Com'tee chosen were Ens'gn Charles Wentworth, Lev't William Billings and Mr. Preserved Lyon."

"The same day voted that there be four men appointed to take care of ye boys in our Meeting house in time of Publick Worship on Sabbath Days in order to restrain them from play and that they take care of them one quarter of year each and ye men appointed to s'd service are William Wheeler, Philip Liscom, Jun'r, Joseph Hewins, Jun'r, and Richard Hixson.

Sept. 22, 1735. "The same day an accompt of forty shillings was laid before ye Town by ye Com'tee Chosen to build ye School House and then put to vote whether ye town would allow said forty shillings and it past in ye affirmative."

Sept. 29, 1740. "Voted that Sixty Pounds be allowed out of the hundred Pounds granted for Town charges be improved for keeping of School in the several places where it hath been heretofore kept, as also at a place in Town called York s'd Money to be drawn out of ye Treasury by the persons living in said places as the Select men shall order."

March 19, 1734-44. "Voted that the money that shall be appropriated for the use of ye School in this town ye ensuing year shall be received by each Precinct in such proportion as each precinct pay to ye Province Tax for s'd year."

May 21, 1744. "Voted that the sixth article in ye Warrant, relating to the Building Two School houses, viz. one in ye Second and one in the third Precinct in this town, in such places as each precinct shall appoint, be continued til the next Town Meeting."

Sept. 26, 1744. "To see if ye Town will pass a vote to build Two School Houses, one in ye second and one in ye third precinct in this town (in such places as each precinct shall appoint) be continued til ye next town meeting."

The school money was divided as by the vote of March 19, 1743-44, for several years succeeding.

March 21, 1747-48. "It being put to vote whether the town would allow ye Second and third precinct in this town to draw out of ye Treasury each precinct's proportionable part of ye Fifty Pounds which was paid by ye Town in general for building a School house in ye first Precinct and it passed in ye Negative."

In the early days the inhabitants were, to a very great extent, located in the central and northerly parts of the town ; this continued even to a comparatively recent period. Here stood the old meeting-houses; the post-office, the taverns, and the stores were here. A person of sixty or sixty-five years of age may well remember when there were but twenty dwellings, or thereabouts, on the old Taunton road, between the house of Mr. Samuel Downes and the Sharon line, and but half a dozen at the Stone-Factory Village. Now the southerly portion of the town contains, by far, the larger part of the population, four of the five churches, the banks, nearly all the stores, and most of the manufactories. In this town, as everywhere else, the century now closed has witnessed the feeble commencement, as also the full development of our manufacturing industries. As already shown, it was the policy of Great Britain to discourage manufactures in the colonies. Independence gave our people their opportunity, and well have they improved it. One hundred years ago this was, perforce, an agricultural town. Now the people are devoted to manufacturing pursuits.

CHAPTER LXXII.

CANTON—(Continued).

ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.

First Congregational Church—Organization—The Covenant of 1717—The First Pastor, Rev. Joseph Morse—The First Celebration of the Lord's Supper—The First Deacons—Extracts from the Early Records—List of those who joined the Church during Mr. Morse's Ministry—Death of Mr. Morse—Inventory of his Estate—Rev. Samuel Dunbar—Rev. Z. Howard—Rev. William Richey—Rev. Benjamin Huntoon—Succeeding Pastors—Church Buildings—Evangelical Congregational Church—Baptist Church—Universalist Church—Roman Catholic Church.

First Congregational Church.—As the history of the First Congregational Church was for more than one hundred years practically the history of the town, it is here given in detail, the facts being taken from the official records.

This society was organized Oct. 13, 1717, and Rev. Joseph Morse was ordained pastor. At his ordination five churches were represented, namely, Milton, Dorchester, Dedham, and the two churches in Braintree. Rev. John Danforth, of Dorchester, preached the ordination sermon from Hebrews xiii. 17.

Twenty persons owned the covenant, ten of whom were members of neighboring churches.

The church covenant "that was agreed upon by the Rev^d Elders and Messengers with the Brethren that were to be in the foundation of said church" was stated under eight heads, and was signed by Joseph Morse, Richard Smith, Peter Lyon, Samuel Andrews, Joseph Esti, Isaac Stearns, Benjamin Blackman, Joseph Hewins, George Talbot, John Withington (who were members of neighboring churches before the ordination), and Benjamin Esti, Thomas Spurr, Joseph Topliff, Robert Pelton, John Wentworth, David Stone, Benjamin Gill, William Wheeler, Edward Bailey, Samuel Hartwell (who were non-communicants, but yet examined and approbated by the reverend elders some time before the ordination,—viz., June 26th–27th,—for to be of the foundation of the church when gathered). "Also, our aged Brother Samuel Pitcher of Milton Church was looked upon as one of the foundation of our church. But he was not able to be present at the Ordination and died about a Month after. Those Brethren that did belong to Milton Church before the ordination, namely, Sam^l Pitcher, Richard Smith, Peter Lyon and George Talbot not having obtained their dismissal from Milton Church before the Ordination were not actually and personally in signing the Covenant and in being of the foundation on that day, but sometime after, when they had obtained their dismissal they signed the Covenant and came up in full with the rest of their Brethren, all except Samuel Pitcher whom the Lord removed by Death Nov. 23^d, 1717, the next day after our first church meeting. Also, John Withington being ill at the ordination and not present that day signed the Covenant afterwards."

The following is an abbreviation of the church covenant agreed upon to be that form of covenant that those persons should engage in and lay hold of who are received into full communion in this church :

"YOU DO HERE, in the presence of Almighty God and his People solemnly take and chuse the Lord Jehovah to be your God, promising and covenanting with his help to fear him and cleave to him in love and to serve him in truth with all your heart giving up yourself and your seed after you in covenant with God and this Church to be the Lord's entirely and to be at his disposal and direction in all things, that you may have and hold communion with him and this church as a member of Christ's mystical body, according to his revealed will to your lives' end.

"You do also take the holy scriptures to be your rule of life to walk by wherein you may discern the mind of Christ, and endeavoring to live in the faithful improvement of all opportunities to worship God, according to all his GOSPEL INSTITUTIONS, taking the great Immanuel the Son of God to be your Savior and Redeemer in all his offices, promising to afford your attendance upon the public dispensation of God's Word, the Administration of the Ordinances of Jesus Christ, especially that of the Lord's Supper, as God in his holy providence shall give you opportunity.

"You also engage, with the Lord's help by virtue of the death of Christ, to mortify all sin and disorderly or vile and sinful affections and to abstain from all sin, especially from scandalous sins, as the Lord shall keep you, that you may not depart from the living God, and that you may live a life of holiness and obedience to the revealed will of God.—You promise you will peaceably submit yourself to the Holy Discipline appointed by Jesus Christ in his Church and you do now offer yourself up to the Care, Government, and Watch of this church, obeying them that have the rule over you in the Lord. Of the integrity of your Heart herein you call God the searcher of all hearts to witness, beseeching him to enable you to keep this Covenant inviolably to God's glory and your own spiritual good and edification and where you shall fail in observing and keeping it you beg the Lord's forgiveness and pardon and healing for the sake of our Lord Jesus Christ."

How the salary of Rev. Mr. Morse was raised, and how much it was, will appear from the following vote, from the "Book of Records":

"At a precinct meeting legally warned in Dorchester April the 20th 1716, Samuel Andrews Moderator—the same day it was voted that the Inhabitants of said precinct would give to Mr. Joseph Morse forty pounds annually so long as he shall uphold and perform the work of the ministry among them."

The same day it was voted that there should be fifteen pounds raised by rate upon the inhabitants and ratable estates within this precinct, and laid out upon the meeting-house as far as that would go towards the finishing of it.

Five pounds more rate were voted to defray the necessary charges of said precinct. A committee, consisting of John Fenno and Richard Hixson, were chosen to receive the money that was granted for the meeting-house and for other necessary charges arising within said precinct, and to hire workmen to doe the work about the meeting-house and to pay them for their work. At a precinct meeting legally warned, July 11, 1716, Joseph Hewins, moderator, it was voted that there should be four shillings levied upon the poll in the minister's rate this present year. The same day it was voted in the affirmative that the assessors receive and pay Mr. Morse his salerey, and that the constable should make up his accounts with him.

The constable's receipt was as follows:

ye 21 of March 1712
Then Constable Sam^l Bullard Broft a receipt in full from under ye hand of ye Reverend Mr. Morse unto ye assessor of this precinct of ye Ministerial Rate comitted unto Sion Bullard to collect in ye yeare 1716

On Dec. 8, 1717, there was a contribution in the whole congregation for furnishing the Lord's table of £3 3s. 1d. The first celebration of the Lord's Supper was on Feb. 9, 1718. The first public baptism took place Oct. 20, 1713, four years before the church gathering, when ten children and one adult were baptized by Rev. Mr. Danforth. The town of Dorchester had granted thirty pounds towards building a meetinghouse, thirty feet square, which was finished in 1708, eight years after the birth of the first white person, Thankful Redman, who was born in a house which stood on the spot where the house of Hon. Henry L. Pierce now stands.

At the church meeting held May 15, 1718, "It was agreed upon to set apart a Day for fasting and prayer by the Church, and to hold it in the Meeting House, for to seek the Lord's favor and the smiles of His Countenance to rest on this Church and Congregation, and that Religion and Godliness might be advanced, and the peace and prosperity of both Church and Congregation might be continued and enlarged by God Almighty." Accordingly, the 4th day of June, 1718, was so kept.

Dec. 5, 1718. A church meeting after a great sickness, to spend some time in prayer, and to discourse about things appertaining to the Church.

"Note. In the month of September, 1718, was a great sickness in this place; several died, the Minister being near Death, but mercifully spared, being absent from the Lord's House 13 Sabbaths; 10 of them were supplied by Mr. Mekinstry:—the congregation being without preaching 3 Sabbaths."

"May 15, 1719. A Church Meeting—then voted—

"That the Church set apart a day solemnly to seek God by fasting and prayer and to invite the congregation to join with us in this great work that the Lord's face and favour may be sought after by us for the pardon of our sins and the sanctifying mercies and afflictions, and for the obtaining all needful blessings.

"That the Church having considered of the Ordination of the persons chosen into the office of Deacons, voted, that they proceed regularly and in convenient time, to the peaceable and full consummation thereof, as God shall enable and direct them."

Dec. 17, 1719. "A Church Meeting," after the consideration of two articles, voted:

"It was proposed to consideration, whether it was necessary for this Church to chuse, in convenient season, an Elder or Elders and another Deacon or Deacons, to assist and strengthen the Church in maintaining the Kingdom and encouraging the Interest of Christ among this people.

"Voted to take the abovesaid proposal into our most serious consideration."

Feb. 26, 1720. A church meeting voted:

"Thought advisable to choose more subordinate officers in the church.

"Whether or no the church will proceed to choose an Elder or Elders, and it was voted that they would choose one.

"The church proceeded to vote for an Elder, and the vote fell on Deacon JOSEPH HEWINS—a very clear vote.

"Voted to choose one Deacon.

"The church proceeded to vote for a Deacon, and the vote fell on Brother ISAAC STEARNS. All this was done at a considerable full meeting."

"March 18, 1720. A Church Fast of Male and Female in a private House. A collection for a Church Stock for the use and benefit of the church. This was the first collection in the church for the purpose aforesaid, and there was contributed and promised £1, 6d. 0s.—That day Alexander Gordon and his wife, (strangers from Ireland,) were received to communion with us during their abode in this place, and they promised to remain under the Watch and Discipline of the church accordingly.

"March 21, 1720. That day the Deacons paid to Mrs. Amity Morse 15s. in full, for taking care of the Vessels of the Lord's Table till that time from the first improvement of them."

The office of deacon was not lightly esteemed in those days. Those selected by their brethren generally took the matter into serious deliberation before accepting. Thus we find that Deacon Joseph Hewins considered the matter for a full month, and that he hesitated a long time before he accepted the office of elder. The singing was, as we judge, in the congregational style.

June 16, 1721, a church meeting voted,—

"That Peter Lyon proceed in setting the Psalm in the congregation on Sabbath Days, when present."

"That Deacon Stearns be ordained or confirmed in the office of a Deacon, with our Brothers Blackman and Hewins when they are ordained."

Jan. 10, 1723, a church meeting voted,—

"That the church make a fresh application of their request to Joseph Hewins to accept the Office of a Ruling Elder in the church, accordingly such request was directed to him by the Pastor."

"That the Deacons discourse with all communicants in this place to seek after and obtain Letters of Recommendation from the churches they belong unto, to bring to our church in this place."

Of course, it will be understood that we are not giving the church records in full. We make such selections as will show the gradual growth of the church, the officers chosen, and other important events as they transpired. We shall also give the names of all those who were members of the church during the ministry of Mr. Morse.

We again refer to the Precinct Records, page 6:

"At a meeting of ye Freeholders and other Inhabitants qualified to Law legally warned and assembled on November ye 15," (1717?) "Joseph Hewins Moderator. The same day it was Voted on ye affirmative that ye precinct (—) Ten Pounds for to be rayed by a reat for (—) precinct is now indebted and to defray ye charge (—) nesaseryly arise in ye precinct this presant year to be layed (—) upon ye meeting house."

"The same day it was voted in ye affirmative, that they would choose a Committee of five men for to seate ye meeting house, and ye Committee chosen were Henry Crane, Samuel Bullard, John Fisher, Joseph Hewins and John Puffer."

"The same day it was voted in ye affirmative that they would chuse a Comitee for to gather in ye Reverend Mr. Morse's old arears, and ye Comitee chosen was Henry Crane, Thomas Spur, Benjamin Esti, John Puffer and John Wentworth."

1718. "At a meeting of the Freeholders and other Inhabitants qualified according to Law in Dorchester South Precinct Legally warned and a ssembled August ye 18th, 1708. Joseph Hewins Moderator."

"The same day it was voted in ye affirmative that ye precinct congregation would give to the Reverend Mr. Morse 35 Pound more than his former salary, for this present year."

"At a meeting of ye Freeholders and other Inhabitants qualified according to law Legally warned and assembled in this precinct on November ye 26, 1718. Mr. Nathanael Hubbard Moderator."

"The same day it was voted in ye afermative that ye first Monday and ye last Monday in February annually should be ye set days for ye Inhabitants for to make up their accompts with Mr. Morse of the Ministerall Rate.

"At a meeting of ye Inhabitants of this precinct Legally warned and assembled February ye 16th, 1718–19, Joseph Hewins Moderator,—Joseph Hewins was chosen Precinct Clerk and first assessor and John Puffer ye second assessor and Joseph Tucker ye third assessor."

"The same day it was voted in ye affirmative that ye precinct would give to the Reverend Mr. Morse Fifteen Pounds more to be aded to his former salary for this present yeare."

"The same day it was voted in ye afermative that they would grant a rate to be made of Twentie Pounds and collected of and from ye Inhabitants and estates of said Precinct (—) Be lay'd out upon ye Meeting House and to defray any necessary charges that may arise in ye precinct this year."

"The same day it was voted in ye afirmitive that the a(ssessors) should reserve ye saide Twentie Pounds of ye Constables hire workmen and pay them, and pay any other charges."

It appears from the records that the officers chosen in March this year did not accept, and a meeting was held in September following (day torn off the record), and Peter Lyon was chosen precinct clerk. Mr. Lyon was again chosen clerk "on ye 21st day of March, 1719–20."

"The same day it was voted in ye afermative that the precinct inhabitants would give ye Reverend Mr. Morse Sixtie Pounds for his labor in ye work of ye ministry for this presant yeare."

"The same day ye assessors was chosen a Comitee to call and apoint precinct meetings. The same day it was voted in ye affirmative that their should be six shillings Levied upon ye poule for this preasant yeare to ye Ministeriall rate."

"At a precinct meeting legally warned and assembled ye 29 of June 1720. The same day John Fenno, Joseph Tucker and Peter Lyon gave an account how they had layd out ye Ten Pound and ye Twentie Pound Rate which were comitted to Constable Haws and Constable Liscom to colect. The same day it was voted on ye afermative that they would choose a Committee of three men for to save ye Meeting house and ye Comitee then chosen was John Fenno, Benjamin Blackman, and Joseph Hewins."

"The same day there was Ten Pound granted to be rayed by way of Rate upon ye pouls and estates in s'd Precinct for to repair the Roof of the Meeting house and to Bank the outside of ye sill of s'd house and to Repaire Mr. Morse's Pew Desently and to defray other nessessary charges arising in s'd precinct."

"The same day the assessors were chosen a Comittee to Receive ye s'd Ten Pounds Rate of ye Constable and hire workmen and pay them for said work and pay other charges arising according to ye vote."

"Then John Fenno, Joseph Tucker, and Peter Lyon Received of Constable Liscom 20 Pound which was in full of a Rate which was comitted to him to collect in ye yeare 1719.

"The same day Paide to Left. John Vose for work don in ye Meeting house Seventeen Pounds and nineteen shillings."

The record for 1720-21 is much defaced and destroyed. Sixty pounds were voted to Mr. Morse for his labor, etc., that year.

"The same day it was voted that ye assessors should be a Committee for to inquire into ye precincts title to ye Land where ye Meeting house stands and to get a stronger confirmation of the same if nede be."

March 5, 1721-2, the precinct inhabitants voted that they "would give ye Reverend Mr. Morse Sixty Pounds for his labor in the work of the ministry for this present yeare."

"The same day there was chosen a Committee for to open the Boun" (dary of the meeting) "House Land and the Neighbors Lands adjoining and to mesuer how" (far it was from) "the rhode and likewise each way and for the Committee" (to report the) "same to the clerk of this precinct; that he may inter" (the same.) "The Committee then chosen was John Fenno and."

The other names are torn off; the above in parenthesis we have ventured to supply. The committee thus chosen reported March 15, 1722; but their record is so mutilated as to be entirely unintelligible.

The following are the names of the persons who owned the covenant, who were baptized and joined to the church in the time of Mr. Morse's ministry, and of such as were before his ordination:

Owned the Covenant before Mr. Morse's Ordination:

October 20, 1713. By Rev. Mr. Danford: Oliver Jordan, Jane Pitcher.

June 26, 1717. By Rev. Mr. Thatcher: John Wentworth, Shubal Wentworth, Edward Baily, Edward Wentworth, Elizabeth Jordan, Abigail Wentworth.

After the Ordination:

January 26, 1717. Abigail Jordan.

February 2. Obadiah Hawes, Jr., Rebecca and Sarah Hawes.

March 2, 1718. Joseph Smith.

March 9. Thomas and Joseph Jordan.

March 16. Margaret Hixon, John Walter, Hannah, Rebecca, Margaret, and Elizabeth Hixon.

March 30. Richard Hixon.

May 11. Sarah Morey.

June 22, 1791. Jane Jordan, Bethia Wentworth, Rebecca Fenno.

September 27, 1720. Samuel Waters.

November 27, 1721. Edward Esti.

April 16. Mary McClellan.

July 6. Samuel Billings.

November 5. Isaac Comings.

December 17, 1722. Thankful and Prudence Redman.

January 10. William Weeks, Charles Wentworth, Zecharia Lyon, Joseph Fenno, Isaac Fenno, John Fenno, Ruth Fenno, Elizabeth Fenno.

October 21. Freeclove Monk.

December 2, 1723. Benjamin Smith.

March 31. Beriah Billings, Elizabeth Stowbridge.

September 22, 1724. Increase Hawes.

April 12. John Hawes.

November 1. Elhanan Billing.

December 6. Robert Redman and his wife Mary, Jonathan Kenney, John Kenney.

January 17, 1724-25. Sarah White.

March 15. Jerusha Collick.

Communicants.

February 9, 1717. Sarah Stone.

February 23. Rebecca Hawse.

April 20, 1718. Hannah Hartwell.

June 22. Eleazer Billing, John Dickerman, Amity Morse, Jane Pitcher.

June 29. Joseph Tucker and Judith his wife, Margaret Hixon.

December 17. Elizabeth Speer.

December 28. Jerusha Billing.

March 15, 1719. Mary Tolman.

May 24, 1720. Mary Jordan, Elizabeth Ames.

April 24. Nathaniel Etheridge.

February 11, 1721-22. Thankful Smith.

February 25. William Crane and his wife.

March 25. Elhanan Lyon and Meredith his wife, David Eames.

April 8. Hannah Baily.

July 1. Nathaniel —.

August 3. Thomas Tolman.

August 12. Mary Baley.

September 9. Jane Jordan.

March 10, 1723. Abigail Jordan.

August 2, 1724. Susannah Blackman.

June 27, 1725. Abigail Kingsbury.

July 4, 1725. Margaret Hawse.

Baptisms.

Before the Ordination:

October 20, 1713. By Mr. Danford: Sion, of Mr. Joseph Morse; Thomas, Oliver, Ester, of Thomas Jordan; Sarah, of Benjamin Esti; Samuel, of Joseph Topliff; Christian, of Robert Pelton; Eliakin, Abijah, Jane, of Edward Pitcher; Mary Stone.

June 26, 1717. By Mr. Thatcher: Martha, of John Wentworth; Abigail, of Thomas Speer; Zeriah, of Joseph Tucker; William, of Thomas Jordan; William, John, of John Wentworth; Amariah, of Joseph Topliff; Edward, of Edward Pitcher; Matthias, of Eleazer Puffer; Thankful, of Daniel Stone.

After the Ordination:

June 19, 1717. David, of Shubal Wentworth.

June 26. Abigail, of Samuel Hartwell; Abiel, of Essh. Allen.

February 2. Obidah Hawse, Jr.; Rebecca and Sarah Hawse.

February 16. Joseph, of Joseph Jordan.

March 2, 1718. Eleazer, of Obediah Hawse, Mercy, of Joseph Smith.

March 9. Thomas and Joseph Jordan, Robert, of Elea. Speer.

March 16. Margaret Hixon and her children, John, Walter, Hannah; Oliver, Margaret, and Elizabeth, Abigail, of Philliss Goodwin.

April 20. Zebadiah, of Edward Wentworth.

April 27. Sarah, of David Stone; Samuel, of Samuel Billings.

May 16. Sarah Morey.

June 1. Benjamin, of Benjamin Jordan.

June 8. Thomas, of John Dickerman.

June 22. Jonathan, John, Jane, of James Jordan; Bethia Wentworth, Rebecca Fenno.

July 20. Elizabeth, of William Wheeler.

February 15, 1718-19. Joannah, of Daniel Stone.

April 12. Mary, of Edward Baily.

April 19. Thomas, of Thomas Tolman.

May 24. Francis, of Joseph Esti, Jr.

May 31. Jeremiah, of Thomas Jordan.

July 26. D——, of Samuel Bird.

August 23. Uriah, of Joseph Tucker.

September 27. Samuel Waters.
 November 8. Hannah, of Shubal Wentworth.
 November 22. Ebenezer, of John Dickerman.
 December 6. Sarah, of Benjamin Gill.
 December 20. Hannah, of Samuel Heartwell.
 April 3, 1720. Edward, of Edward Pitcher.
 April 10. Moses, Aaron, of John Wentworth, twins.
 April 24. Peltiah, of Samuel Esti.
 May 1. Jedediah, of Jonathan Jordan.
 May 29. Joseph, of Joseph Smith.
 June 5. Abigail, of Thomas Speer.
 June 12. Manning, of Joseph Sawin.
 September 25. Samuel, of Joseph Jordan.
 October 2. Mary, of David Eames.
 October 23. Abigail, of William Wheeler.
 October 23. Paul, of Edward Wentworth.
 October 23. Elizabeth, of John Jamison.
 November 6. Benjamin, of Philip Liscom.
 November 27. Isaac, of Edward Esti.
 February 19, 1720-21. Henry, of Daniel Stone.
 March 12. John, of John Hixon.
 April 9. Nathaniel, of David Stone.
 April 16. Mercy, Mecletton.
 May 24. Amity, of Mr. Joseph Morse.
 July 16. Elijah, of Samuel Billing; Lydia, of Jabez Frost.
 July 30. Abigail, Miriam, of Elea. Puffer, twins.
 August 13. Isiach, of Thomas Jordan.
 November 5. Hannah, of Isaac Comings.
 December 10. Mary, of Joseph Holland.
 December 17. Thankful and Prudence Redman.
 February 11, 1721-22. Samuel, of John Dickerman.
 May 6. ———, of Benjamin Gill; James, of James Smith;
 Jonah, of Samuel Heartwell.
 June 3. Ruth, of Joseph Esti, Jr.; William Weeks, Charles Wentworth, Zachariah Lyon, Joseph Fenno, Isaac Fenno, John Fenno, Ruth Fenno, Elizabeth Fenno.
 July 1. Nathaniel Otis.
 July 8. Abijah, of Timothy Jones; Hannah, of Samuel Bird.
 July 22. Abigail, of Eben. Clap.
 September 30. Abigail, of Edw. Wentworth.
 November 21. Freeloze Monk.
 November 28. John William Wheeler.
 December 4. John, of William Crane; Ephram, of Benjamin
 Smith.
 December 9. Elizabeth, of Edw. Esti.
 March 3, 1723. James, of Elias Puffer.
 March 31. Mary, of Bettiah Billing.
 April 21. Michael, of ——— Speer.
 June, 1723. Ezekiel, of Shub. Wentworth.
 June 29. Amity, of Daniel Stone; Experience, of John Philips, of North Purchas, Taunton.
 June 16. Samuel, of John Throbridge.
 June 30. Ephram, of David Eames.
 July 7. Abigail, of David Stone.
 July 21. Elizabeth, of William Sherman.
 September 1. Keziah, Mary, of Ezra Morse, of Dedham, twins.
 September 22. Jesse, of Desire Hawse.
 December 8. Ebenezer, of George Talbot.
 February 2, 1723-24. Mercy, of John Dickerman.
 February 23. Isaac, of Isaac Comins.
 March 22. Mary, of Thomas Tolman, Jr.
 April 5, 1724. At Dedham, New Congregation at Guilds;
 Rachel, of Samuel Thorp; Sarah, of Ebenezer Dean; Sarah, of Nathaniel Guile; Hannah, of William Bullard, Jr.; Martha, of ——— White, of Dorchester, South Precinct.

April 12. John Hawse, Mary, of Ebenezer Clap; Benjamin, of Benjamin Smith.
 May 17. Sarah, of Mary Meellen; Mary Redman.
 May 31. Nathan, of Samuel Heartwell.
 July 19. Sarah, of Samuel Esti.
 July 26. ———, of William Weeks.
 September 13. Joseph, of Joseph Esti, Jr.
 October 25. Benjamin, of Benjamin Gill.
 November 1. Ebenezer, of Elkanah Billing; Ananiah, William, Rachel, Bethiah, of Charles Wentworth.
 December 6. Robert Redman, and his wife Mary, Jonathan
 Kenny, John Kenney, Sarah, of Robert Redman.
 January 10, 1724-25. Sarah, of Cornelius Thing.
 January 17. Sarah White.
 January 24. Guild, of Jonathan Kenney.
 February 7. Samuel, of Samuel Bird.
 February 28. Stephen, of Stephen Billing.
 March 4. Hannah, of William Wheeler.
 March 28. Cornelius, of Cornelius Collick.
 April 4. Sion Wentworth, Mary, of Joseph Smith.
 August 1. Sarah, of Benjamin Savel.
 September 5. Melitable, of John Hixon.
 March 13, 1726. Nathaniel, of William Sherman; Jonathan, of Jonathan Kenny.
 March 20. Eliphalet, of Elias Monk.
 March 27. Mulford, of Corne's Thompson; Sarah, of Samuel Heartwell.
 July 10. Silas, of Joseph Sarvin.
 August 7. Jonathan, of Beriah Billing.
 1726-27. Ann, of Daniel Stone, by Rev. Mr. Dexter.
 March 5. By Rev. Mr. Thatcher: David, of Thomas Jordan;
 Zebulon, of William Crane; Experience, of George Talbot;
 Silas, of Edward Wentworth; Benjamin, of Benjamin Gill;
 Stephen, of David Tilden; Manaph, of John Dickerman;
 William Witherbee.
 May 24. James, of Shubael Wentworth; William, of Joseph
 Smith.

During his ministry of ten years thirty-one persons were added to the church, and one hundred and sixty-seven were baptized. He had preached the Word of God ten years and nine months before his ordination. In 1726-27 his connection with the parish was dissolved by mutual consent. He continued to reside in the parish until his death. He was buried in the old Canton Cemetery. The inscription on the gravestone is as follows:

"Here lyes buried the.

Body of the Rev^d.

Mr. JOSEPH MORS, dec^d

Nov. 29, 1732. in y^e 61st year of his age.

Within this silent grave here now doth ly

Him that is gone unto Eternity.

Who, when he lived was by good men respected,

Although by others was perhaps rejected,

Yet that don't hinder his Triumphant Joy

With Saints above where nought can him annoy."

He was a man of considerable property, as appears by the following, which is copied from the Registry of Probate for the county of Suffolk, vol. 31, pp. 184, and which may be interesting as showing what composed the property of that day:

"An Inventory of Mr. Joseph Morse his estate who departed this life November 29th, 1732.

Books one Bible Pools Annotations.....	£35.
To wearing apparel 2 Rings & Cane.....	16.	16
To housing Land with orchard & meadow.....	1450.
To oxen & steers.....	27.	5
To cows Heifers Bulls, Horse Hired & Sheep...	67.	15
To Five Beds Bed-Cloaths & Bed-Steads.....	50.
To Silver Tankard one cup & seven spoons.....	37.	10
To Pewter Platters, Plates, Basins, Tankard....
Flaggon spoons & Earth ⁿ Ware.....	8.	3
To three Brass Kettles warming pan & skillet...	10.
To chest of Draws and two Tables.....	8.	2
To 2 Weavers Looms & their tackling.....	7.	9. 6
To 2 Saddles Mail Pillion & Portmanteau.....	6.	4
To Iron Potts Potthooks & Kettle.....	2.
To Iron Tramells Cart Hoops Streaks & Nails...	7.	4
To 16 chairs 3 Trunks 2 chests & 2 Boxes.....	4	15
To chest w th one Draw Cupboard Joynt chest & Table.....	2.	4
To axes fetters old iron chain Plow & horse tackling.....	2.	16
To five swine, Barrells Tubbs Trays old stilliards & Gun.....	9.
To Lanthorn, Candlesticks, Candlebox fire Irons Leather for Shoes one HIVE of Bees Look'g Glass Small Chest Box & Lumber.....	11.	2

£1763: 5: 6

"The above Inventory was Taken & the Goods appraised according to the best of our understanding of what was brought to our View by us at Stoughton.

"JOHN WENTWORTH.

"THOMAS SPUR.

"SAMUEL HARTWELL.

"BOSTON, April 24, 1733."

We have thus gathered from various sources such things pertaining to Mr. Morse and his ministry as seem to be of interest. Mr. Noyes has his autograph in his possession, and an account kept between himself and his mother, Priscilla, dated 1693. The gold-headed cane mentioned in his inventory is now in the possession of one of his descendants at Manchester, N. H. His father died Feb. 3, 1731. His paternal grandfather was John Morse, who was the oldest son of Samuel Morse, of Dedham, who was born in England, 1585; emigrated to New England, 1635; settled at Dedham, 1637; and died at Medfield, April 5, 1654.

Joseph Morse was born in Medfield about 1671, and was graduated at Harvard College in 1695. After leaving college he sometime resided in Providence, R. I., where he married Amity Harris. He then resided and preached at Watertown until he came to the place of his ordination, at about the age of forty-seven.

Rev. Joseph Morse's children were Joseph, born at Watertown, 1706, who married Bethia Waters for his first wife; John, born at Watertown, 1708; Amity, born at Watertown, 1710; Sion, born 1713, at Stoughton (now Canton); Henry and Mary. Many of their descendants now reside in Canton.

Rev. Samuel Dunbar succeeded Mr. Morse, and was ordained in 1727.

The following extracts from the records in relation to singing are of interest:

"April 6. There being like to be a difference ab't Singing, some of ye Brethren proposed New Tunes to be added to the old ones and some against. I proposed to ye Chh. May 18, that we would settle ye matter by yer vote & to ye end bring in yer votes in meeting next Lds Day evening and further vote who should set ye tune."

"May 25. Put off ye voting till next Lord's Day Evening at ye desire of several."

"June 1. Voted that SOME NEW TUNES be added to ye Old ones yt are ordinarily sung in ye Congregation and ye Mr. DUNBAR set ym."

The Mr. Dunbar above mentioned must have been the Rev. Pastor himself. There was no other man of his name in the church or parish. He was a famous singer, and his only son, Elijah, who was born this year, and baptized Aug. 24, 1740, was afterwards renowned in the churches for his singing.

The subject of church music caused no little agitation in those days. What was called "regular singing" had been introduced, and, as we are told by Mr. Drake in his "History of Boston," "the practice was opposed by the churches generally."

The Puritans were averse to regular singing. They say, in "The Confession," 1571, "We allow the people to join in one voice in a psalm-tune, but not in tossing the psalm from one side to the other, with intermingling of organs."

The excitement began somewhere about the year 1720, and raged over all the New England colonies. But it purified and brightened the churches. "In some," says Hood, "it was the glorious harbinger of a great and powerful outpouring of the Holy Spirit." Mr. Dunbar's church was at this time (1739-40) in a very flourishing state. Eleven were added to the church during the year, and we do not find any further reference made to the matter of singing.

Mr. Dunbar probably "set" the tunes, as "old Mr. Peter Lyon" had done in Mr. Morse's time, and they sang as they were moved by the Spirit, making melody in their hearts. We fancy we hear them now, standing around that sacred table, lifting up their voices in Barnard's version of Psalm cxxxiv.:

"Lo: all ye Servants of the Lord
Who nightly stand and wait,
Attending in his sacred House,
Jehovah celebrate.

"Bless ye the Lord, lift up your Hands
Within his Holy Place
The Lord, who Heaven and Earth hath made
Thee out of Sion bless."

Mr. Dunbar preached many sermons, which were printed. The following is a reproduction of the title-page of one:

MAN, like Grass, weak and withering.

A

S E R M O N

Preach'd in the first PARISH of Stoughton

UPON

The Melancholy Occasion

OF THE

Premature Deaths of several

Young PERSONS there;

FEBRUARY 5th, 1748-9.

By Samuel Dunbar, M. A.

Pastor of the CHURCH there.

JAMES, iv. 13, 14. Go to now, ye that say to-Day, or To-morrow, we will go into such a City and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get Gain. Whereas ye know not what shall be on the Morrow: For what is your Life? It is even a Vapour, that appeareth for a little Time, and then vanisheth away.

B O S T O N :

Printed by J. GREEN for D. COOKIN, in Marlborough Street. 1749.

This discourse was suggested, as he says in a note, by the deaths, which followed each other in rapid succession, of a child of Mr. James Andros and a child of Mr. Samuel May: of Elisha Tailor, Abigail Liscum, Mary Houghton, Mary Clap, young persons, and "The Aged Widows, Mrs. Morse and Mrs. Stearns, good old Deacon Blackman, Mr. Moses Gill, and Mr. Benjamin Gill; Mr. Humphrey Atherton, Mrs. Mary Fisher, Mrs. Paul, Ann Shadd."

Paul Revere, at the age of twenty-one, accompanied Col. Richard Gridley to Crown Point in 1755-56, and assisted in the struggle then going forward between France and England for the possession of this continent. And, remarkably illustrating the intimate association between the New England clergy and the laity in their work of reclaiming the land to civilization both by the arts of peace and war, the Rev. Samuel Dunbar, minister of this church and town, accompanied them on their distant and perilous journey.

Mr. Dunbar returned to his parochial duties on the 6th of December, 1755. The general thanksgiving had been observed in his absence, Dec. 4, 1755, but whether there had been preaching or not is not recorded. During that year a public fast was observed March 20th, July 3d, and August 28th, the latter, "A General Fast upon ye account of ye Defeat of General Braddock's Army at ye Ohio. I preached from Joshua vii. 1-7." In 1740, Mr. Dunbar thus chronicles the gathering of a new church:

"May 1th. This evening the Chh. voted ye following Brethren and Sisters of ye Chh. a Dismission and Recommendation in order to be gathered into a Distinct & Particular Chh. in ye 2d Precinct of this Town: Viz Joseph Hewins, Benjamin Esti, Peletiah Whittemore, Eleazer Puffer, Jeremiah Fuller, Joseph Hewins, Junior, John Noyes, Ebenezer Hewins, John Smith, Eleazer Hawse, Benja. Savel, Daniel Richard's, Benj. Esti, Junior, Ebenr. Esti, Samuel Cowmings, Clifford Belcher, Elizabeth Whittemore, Mary Savel, Rebeckeh Esti, Elizabeth Puffer, Harriet Fuller, Hannah Hewins, Judith Hewins, Mary Hawse, Martha Esti."

There had been preaching for some time, doubtless, in the Second Precinct, now Sharon, before the foundation of the church. We find the following record, 1737-38:

"July 23. This Lord's Day about 30 Families drew off from the Public Worship in this place to ye New Meeting House on ye Plain at Masspog. Young Mr. Burnal preached among ym Ye Lord give grace & Truth in this town & precinct."

In those days it was the practice to double date between January 1st and March 25th, thus 1737-38, until the introduction of New Style in 1752. Prior to 1752 the civil year began in March, which was called the first month. To render Old Style into New Style the first month must be reckoned as the third, and eleven days be added to all dates between 1700 and 1752.

In 1741-42. "Jan. 13, 1741-2, The Pastor & Deacons ye Delegates of ye Chh. assisted in ye Ordaining Council, & Ordained ye Rev. Wm. Philip Curtis, Pastor of ye Chh. in ye 2d Precinct began with Prayer, Mr. Nath. Walter, of Roxbury, preached from Acts xx. 28. I gave ye charge, and Mr. Payson, of Walpole, gave ye Right hand of Fellowship."

Mr. Dunbar and his parish took a lively interest in this new church, as appears from various memoranda made by him. Vide the following, 1742:

"June 4th Stayed ye Chh. Voted to give to our Younger Sister Chh. in order to furnish ye Table of ye Lord am ym One Flaggon, 2 Tankards 1 Large Cup and ye Little Cups."

In 1748, the twenty-second year of Mr. Dunbar's ministry, a new meeting-house was finished.

"Oct. 23, 1748. This Lords Day I preached the last Farewell Sermon in the Old Meeting House, Hebrews x. 32. first clause, a large and crowded assembly.

"Oct. This day was ye Dedication of ye New Meeting House. I preached from Isai. 60 7. last clause.

"Oct. 30. This Lords Day and a Sacrament Day. We assembled in the New Meeting House. I preached from Psa. 26. 8."

Mr. Dunbar remained as pastor until his death, June 15, 1783.

The following is the inscription on the stone which points out the spot in the cemetery where Mr. Dunbar was buried. It was written by his son, Elijah

Dunbar, Esq., and the Latin is slightly altered from the inscription on the gravestone of President Chauncy, in the Cambridge graveyard :

"CONDITUM
Hic Corpus Est.
REV'DI SAMUELIS DUNBARI,
Ecclesiæ Stoughtoniensis primæ,
Per LV. Annorum Spacium,
Pastoris Vigilantissimi,
Concionatoris Eximinii,
Pietate.
Paritus ac Liberali Eruditione,
Ornatissimi.
Qui Obiit in Domino June XV.
MDCCCLXXXIII.
Et ætatis sue LXXIX."

In these days, when the ministerial relation is so often severed, it is difficult to conceive of the state of the parish which had been blessed with the same faithful pastor for fifty-five years. It will be remembered that there was no other religious society in all the First Parish of Stoughton, being that territory now included in and forming the town of Canton. Blessed days ! when the whole people of the precinct worshipped together around one common consecrated altar !

They took immediate steps to obtain a preacher, as appears by the following vote (p. 103, Precinct Records 1783, July 14th) :

"At a Pree't meeting legally assembled and held on Monday the fourteenth day of July A. D. 1783, in the first Pree't in Stoughton.

"Col. Benjamin Gill, Moderator. After consideration and debate.

"1st. Voted that the Parish will meet together every Lord's day at the meeting house for public social worship, and in order to raise a fund for supplying the precinct Treasury for that purpose.

"2d. Voted that there be a free contribution every Sabbath after service, and that every one that contributes shall have an order upon the Treasurer for the money he has so contributed, and marked once every two months, if he desires it, and the Parish Committee and Parish Treasurer are hereby directed to grant orders accordingly, and ye s'd orders and allow them.

"3d. Voted that the Parish Committee be a Committee to receive the 2d contributions, make a particular account of it and deliver the money thus obtained to ye precinct Treasurer, taking receipts for the same.

"4th. Voted Messrs. Elijah Dunbar, Benjamin Gill, and Adam Blackman, be a Committee, who are hereby authorized and empowered, (provided there shall be a fund sufficient) to supply the Pulpit, for the term of three months, beginning ye 17th August next, and ending ye 9th of November following, unless ye Parish otherwise order.

"5th. Voted that ye Precinct Treasurer pay weekly for preaching, agreeable to ye contract made with ye preacher, by the above Committee.

"And as it may happen through various causes that regular preaching cannot be obtained, therefore in that case.

"6th. Voted that Messrs. Joseph Billings, Elijah Dunbar,

John Kinney, and Benjamin Gill, be desired to lead and conduct ye public social worship in the following manner, viz:— 1st. To read a portion of ye Holy Scriptures. 2d. To read a psalm to be sung. 3d. To read some pious practical discourse. 4th. Then to read a psalm to be sung, and 5th. To dismiss the assembly by reading an Apostolical Benediction."

1786. "At a meeting of ye Freeholders and other Inhabitants of ye first Precinct in ye Town of Stoughton, qualified to vote as ye Law directs, legally assembled and held at ye Meeting House in ye s'd first Precinct this twenty-ninth day of May An. Dom : 1786.—

"Chose Col. Benjamin Gill Moderator.

"Voted to concur with ye Vote of the Church in giving Mr. Zechariah Howard a call to take ye Pastoral care of ye Church in this Place. Nem. Con.

"Voted and granted to Mr. Zechariah Howard ye Sum of Ninety Pounds lawful money as a Salary to be paid him annually while he continues in ye Pastoral Relation to this Church and Congregation.

"Voted and granted Mr. Zechariah Howard a Settlement or gratuity of two hundred pounds lawful money in order to lay a foundation for his comfortable and honorable support, one hundred pounds to be paid him ye first year after settlement and ye other hundred pounds ye second year after his settlement.

"Voted and granted Mr. Zechariah Howard ten cords of good merchantable Firewood to be delivered annually at ye Place of his abode in s'd Precinct, during ye Time he shall continue without a family, or keeping House by himself; and upon having a family or keeping House by himself, voted him twenty Cords of good Merchantable Firewood to be delivered annually at ye Place of his abode in s'd Precinct during his Pastoral Relation to this Church and Congregation.

"Voted that James Endicott, Esq., George Crossman, Esq., and Messrs. Samuel Tucker, Henry Bailey, James H. Lewis and Adam Blackman be a Committee to present Mr. Zechariah Howard with copies of ye Votes of this Precinct Relative to his call and Settlement.

"The Same Day ye Precinct voted to board and shingle one side of ye Roof of ye Meeting House and ye other side of ye Roof together with ye sides and ends of ye Meeting House to be repaired.

"Attest, WILLIAM WHEELER,
"Pree't Clerk."

"At a Meeting held 'at ye Meeting House in s'd first Precinct this twenty-fifth Day of September. 1786,

"Chose Col. Benj'n Gill Moderator.

"Mr. Zechariah Howard gave an answer to ye Call given him by ye Ch'h and Congregation in this Place who ordered ye same to be recorded—which is as follows, viz.

"To the Church and Congregation in ye North Parish in Stoughton.

"Brethren and Friends,

"Having taken under mature and serious consideration ye call which you have given me to settle with you in ye Work of ye Gospel Ministry, thinking it my Duty, I heartily accept thereof tho' it is not without Fear and Trembling that I think of taking upon me ye Weighty, ye Solemn and Important Charge. If ye greatest of ye Apostles, while he thought of ye Momentous undertaking was obliged to cry out who is equal to these things, you must be sensible that an unexperienced youth will not only stand in Need of ye greatest Candor and Friendship from ye People of his Charge but more especially of an Interest in their Prayers at ye Throne of Grace for Divine aid and assistance let me therefore intreat of you to make it your Prayer to Almighty God with whom is ye Residue of ye Spirit of all Grace that I may in every Respect fulfil ye office of a faithful Minister of ye New Testament, that during my Labors among you I might approve myself unto God and ye Conscience of Men to be in Reality a Servant of Jesus Christ and that I might at all times take such heed to my Life and Doctrines as to save myself and them that hear me. The perfect union and happy agreement that has been and still subsists among you has been a great inducement to my accepting of your Invitation. The kindness and repeated marks of Friendship that I have already received from Individuals and ye Society at large flatter me that you will cheerfully contribute every thing necessary on your part to my comfortable and honorable support among you. You must not, indeed you cannot rationally expect to find in me, at present if ever a full and complete Reparation of ye great Loss which you sustained in ye Death of your late worthy Pastor. As successor to such a Man I am fully sensible that I must appear to disadvantage, his illustrious example will be a stimulus to Duty and I hope, in many respects Beneficial, but had Nature been impartial in ye Distribution of her Favors it would require time and much experience to equal his attainments. But as ye great Shepherd of Israel ye kind Parent of ye Universe requires of each and all his servants in exact proportion to what he hath given unto them, I trust that having an Interest in your Prayers, I shall not neglect ye Gift that is in me but be enabled to improve it to ye Honor of God and Benefit of ye Church, finally Brethren pray for me, pray for yourselves; let it not only be ye Study of your lives but your daily prayers that we may each and all of us know what is ye good and acceptable and perfect Will of our God, but ever have an heart and Disposition to perform it. That this Sacred and Solemn connection which we are about to form may be a mutual Blessing, that we might not only live comfortably together here in this world but have a joyful meeting at ye Bar of Almighty God, where I must shortly appear to give an account of my ministry and you of ye improvement you make of it.

“Wishing you Grace, Mercy and Peace in our Lord Jesus Christ I subscribe myself your devoted “Friend and humble Servant in ye Lord.

“ZACHARIAH HOWARD.

“Given at Stoughton, Sept. 17th, 1786.”

“The Same Day ye Precinct Voted that ye twenty-fifth Day of Oct'r next should be ye Day for ye Ordination of Mr. Howard.”

Mr. Howard was duly ordained, and remained until his death, Sept. 15, 1806.

Mr. Howard was succeeded by Rev. William Richey, in 1805. The following votes concerning the settlement of Mr. Richey will serve to give “an idea,” says Hon. Charles Endicott in his historical address, “of the way and manner in which they made a contract for a parish minister seventy years ago.

“April 6. ‘Voted unanimously, that the town concur with the church in giving Mr. William Richey a call to the pastoral charge of said Church and Society of this town.’ Thereupon a committee of twenty-five persons was chosen to confer with Mr. Richey, as to salary, etc., and report at an adjourned meeting.

“One might suppose that poor Mr. Richey would have stood no chance whatever with a committee of twenty-five full-grown, sharp, sagacious men. But he seems to have met the ordeal bravely, for on the 15th the committee reported that the town should grant Mr. Richey one thousand dollars as a settlement, upon certain stated conditions as to length of service, etc., and pay him a salary of five hundred and seventy-five dollars per annum, ‘to be computed upon the following staple articles of life, on the 1st week of May, annually, by such committee as the town shall appoint, joined with Mr. Richey, by the Boston prices, viz.: corn, rye, flour, salt-beef and salt-pork, butter, cheese, wool, flax, sole leather, and coffee,’ and then they provided that if the salary was not paid in three months after it became due, ‘then Mr. Richey to have interest after it becomes due till paid.’ ‘Also, that the town grant him eight cords of good, merchantable fire-wood annually, during the time he shall remain without a family, and sixteen cords annually, when he shall have a family.’

“It is clear that an impression soon got abroad that the parson had been too sharp for the committee of twenty-five; that question of interest to be computed on overdue salary was uncomfortable. So, at the next meeting, so much of the foregoing vote as related to interest was erased or expunged. But Mr. Richey, on being informed of the repeal, quietly said, in a note to the committee, that he thought he ought to receive his salary when due, and that he should expect interest to be allowed, should there be a delinquency of payment. And the town, on hearing the letter read, again voted the interest clause, in a somewhat modified form.

“Another difficulty! How much should be paid in cash under the contract based upon the market price of corn, salt-pork, and the other articles named in the contract? Messrs. Dunbar, Tucker, and Bemis labored with this problem for I know not how long, but they solved it at last, and reported the result, and also the process by which they arrived at the result, as they said it might be useful thereafter as a precedent. The result was that the cash pay for the salary of the minister for the second year of his service was reduced from five hundred and seventy-five dollars to four hundred and eighty dollars and forty-nine cents. The minister appended a certificate to the report, slightly suggestive of a sort of quiet humor, that he had reviewed the calculations made by the committee and found the result of them to correspond with the letter of the contract. ‘This contract, however, did not always operate to the minister’s disadvantage, for in one year, during the war of 1812, his salary amounted to nearly nine hundred dollars.’

Mr. Richey was succeeded in the pastorate by Rev. Benjamin Huntoon, who was born in Salisbury, N. H.,

Nov. 28, 1792. His early life was passed on his father's farm. He commenced his academical studies, preparatory to entering college, at the academy in Salisbury, and was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1817. During all this time he supported himself by teaching school. He had the ninth appointment in the graduating exercises, which was a dialogue with Mr. Benjamin Woodbury, who was his college chum, on the question, "Which of the learned professions is more favorable to literary eminence, Divinity or Law?" Mr. Huntoon taking the side of divinity.

After leaving college he taught the academy at his native town until 1819, when he entered upon the study of divinity at Andover Theological Seminary. In the spring of 1820, his health failing, he came to Boston, and took charge of an academy in Salem Street. While carrying on this school he was invited to the ministry of the First Congregational Church in Canton, and was ordained Jan. 30, 1822. Rev. John Pierce, of Brookline, preaching the sermon, Rev. Henry Ware giving the right hand of fellowship. He soon became widely and favorably known as a most earnest worker and eloquent preacher, and probably delivered more occasional discourses than almost any other minister in the neighborhood. In the latter part of the year 1829 he was invited to preach the sermon at the dedication of a new Unitarian Church in Bangor, Me., and the society there prevailed on him to resign his pastorate here, and he was installed at Bangor in June, 1830. In the fall of 1833, his health failing under his numerous and onerous labors, he asked and received a dismissal from that church, and spent the winter at Savannah, Ga., preaching to the Unitarian Society there. In 1834 he returned to the North with re-invigorated health, and was installed over the First Congregational Church in Milton (Rev. Dr. Morison's), Oct. 15, 1834.

Again, on account of failing health, he was obliged to resign his charge, and passed the winter in the then far West, preaching at Peoria, Ill., and at Chicago. In the spring of 1837 he was invited to settle at Cincinnati, Ohio, where he remained one year. In June, 1838, he went to Peoria, where he remained preaching to the First Unitarian Church there until August, 1840, when he was invited by the church in Canton, where he had been first ordained, to return, and he was accordingly reinstalled at Canton, March 13, 1841. In 1849 he resigned the pastorate and went to Marblehead, and became the pastor of the Second Congregational society at that place. In 1855, his health failing, he left that place, and in May, 1856, took charge of the parish at Winchendon, where he remained until Nov. 8, 1857. In April, 1859, he was installed over the society at Westborough, but his health continuing to fail, he was forced to relinquish his charge in February, 1860.

In the fall of that year, having a desire to return to the place where he had been first ordained to the ministry, and where he had passed so many happy years, he returned to Canton, and refitted and repaired his old house. Here he spent the declining years of his life, blessed with the love and fellowship of those who had known and revered him in his earlier days, a constant worshiper, and an occasional preacher, in the church which was erected through his exertions in the first years of his ministry. His presence and his daily walk were a benediction and a psalm. His name was a household word in every family. The traditions of his early labors were familiar to all. They whom he met at the sacrament of the Lord's Supper,—they whom he had blessed at the marriage altar,—they whom he baptized in infancy, and whom he had watched over in the schools, and counseled in their riper years,—alike revered and loved him, and came to his funeral weeping mourners. They who had been his early parishioners (Deacon Dunbar, Deacon Thomas French, George Downes, Deacon Leonard Everett, Silas Kinsley, Elijah Tucker, James Bent, and others) had long been gathered to their final rest, and he seemed almost alone of the men of that day to remain. And when he died,

"He fell like autumn fruit that mellowed long,
Or, like a clock worn out by eating time,
The wheels of weary life at last stood still."

It does not become us to attempt an analysis of his character. Such a task belongs more properly to those who have known him longer, and who are better qualified otherwise to speak of him. Rev. Dr. Thompson, of Jamaica Plain, at the funeral, spoke of him as having been one peculiarly fitted to be a pioneer in the advance of liberal Christianity. His services were sought for by the infant churches in every part of the country. There was an earnestness of personal vital piety, an animated hopefulness, and an enthusiasm of manner which gave great power and effect to all his pulpit labors.

He was an active and zealous laborer in the cause of human brotherhood, and recognized and steadfastly maintained the rights of all men of whatever color, or creed, or condition. He was the uncompromising opponent of every form of oppression. He took a manly stand on all the live questions of the hour. His voice, his pen, his purse, his house, were always at the service of those who strove to promote the public good.

In the performance of his daily pastoral duties he was pre-eminently happy. Wherever he went he was welcome. How kind he was! What a large heart he had! How he overflowed with affectionate tenderness towards all whom he met! How his noble nature manifested itself in his obliging deeds! How well he taught how neighbors, husbands, friends, should live! How successfully he personified the Christian graces! What perfect faith he had in the promises of the gospel! And he died in the hope of a glorious resurrection. He died April 19, 1864.

The following is a list of the pastors from Mr. Huntoon's first ministry to the present time:

Rev. Henry F. Edes, of Providence, R. I., was ordained Oct. 26, 1831.

Rev. Orestes A. Brownson, of Walpole, was installed May 14, 1834.

Between 1836 and 1841 there was no settled pastor.

Rev. Benjamin Huntoon began his second ministry March 1, 1841.

First Wednesday of January, 1850, ordination of Rev. Robert P. Rogers, of Cambridge.

Sept. 18, 1854, installation of Rev. Seth Saltmarsh.

April 19, 1857, ordination of Rev. Nathan H. Chamberlain.

Sept. 11, 1861, installation of Rev. Edward C. Guild, of Brookline.

April 2, 1867, Rev. George F. Piper was engaged to preach with view to settlement, March 15, 1868.

Young People's Union formed. Mr. Piper closed his ministry, October, 1872. Parsonage built and occupied.

May 4, 1873, Rev. William H. Savary, of Ellsworth, Me., began to preach, and was installed pastor June 8, 1873, and is the present pastor.

The present meeting-house stands on a fine elevation of land in the territorial centre of the town, and is the second built by the parish, since its organization as the First Parish in Stoughton, on the 5th day of April, 1736. Then there was a small building in which the church of Dorchester, South Precinct, had been gathered, Oct. 30, 1717. When the precinct became the First Precinct in the town of Stoughton it was organized anew. In 1745, October 14th, at a legal meeting of the parish, "it was put to vote whether the precinct would build a new meeting-house, and it passed in the affirmative, and "the same day y^e Precinct choose Preserved Lyon, James Indecut and Silas Crane, a committee to provide materials to build the meeting-house." In it there were "convenient seats for the Indian Inhabitants of Stoughton to sit in on y^e Sabbath days." The first meeting-house was taken down, and it is now a barn, I believe, in the Sixteenth Ward of Boston, late Dorchester. The church built in 1745-47 stood until 1824, the First Parish "in Stoughton" having, on the 16th day of January, 1797, become the town of Canton.

The present church was dedicated Jan. 26, 1825, when the Rev. Dr. Harris, of Dorchester, Rev. John White, of West Dedham, Rev. Ralph Sanger, of Dover, and others, assisted the pastor, Rev. Benjamin Huntoon, in the services.

It is interesting to look over the records and to note who were the active men at the time of Mr. Huntoon's first ordination in 1822, not one of whom is alive to-day. Gen. Elijah Crane, Thomas French, Leonard Everett, Simeon Tucker, Thomas Tolman, William Tucker, Laban Lewis, Thomas Crane, Frederick W. Lincoln, were committee of arrangements. The meeting-house then stood farther east towards Ponkapoag. Mr. Huntoon soon began to agitate the building of a new meeting-house, and on Nov. 10, 1823, a committee, composed of Gen. Elijah Crane, Deacon Gill, Thomas French, Thomas Kollock, Thomas Dunbar, Thomas Billings, Thomas Tolman, Thomas Crane, Simeon Tucker, Leonard Everett, Isaac Fenno, Samuel Hawes, Amasa Jordan, Jerathmael Crane, Laban Lewis, Ezra Dickerman, Frederick Lincoln, Capt. Charles Tucker, Maj. Tucker, Samuel Capen, Israel Bailey, Jesse Fenno, Elijah Endicott, Isaac Copeland, George Downes, was appointed to take the matter into consideration, and on Dec. 3, 1823, Thomas French, Thomas Tolman, George Downes, William Tucker, and Frederick W. Lincoln were appointed a committee to select a suitable place for the building. Jan. 5, 1824, Thomas Crane, Leonard Everett, Capt. Charles Tucker, were chosen a committee to prepare a draft of a meeting-house, which was to be forty-six feet by fifty-four feet, and to be a house wholly in the Gothic order. The money was raised by subscriptions, by proceeds of the Wheeler donation, and otherwise, and by sale of the old meeting-house, as appears from the following report of the building committee:

"We, the subscribers, having been directed by the building committee to report to the parish the expense of building the new meeting-house, submit the following statement:

"First. They have examined accounts which they have been able to obtain from persons who have furnished material or have performed labor in erecting the new meeting-house in Canton, and find that their several bills amount to the sum of $4927.96.

"Second. They also state that Gen. Elijah Crane has a demand against the parish for timber, joist, etc., the amount of which your committee have not been able to ascertain; that there are others also in the same situation, viz., Mr. Shaller's bill, Mr. Samuel's bill, and perhaps others; it is also expected that there will be some extra charges by Messrs. Clark and McKendry, for work done by them not specified in their respective contracts.

"Third. They further state that the proceeds of sales from the old meeting-house amounts to about $200, which in the opinion of the subscribers will cover all demands against the parish for building the new house, not presented to us, and that the cost of said house will not vary essentially from our first calculation of $4927.96.

"CANTON, 4th January, 1825.

"THOMAS FRENCH,

"CHARLES TUCKER,

"LEONARD EVERETT,

"A true copy.

"JAMES BENT, Clerk."

Baptist Church.—The first Baptist sermon in this town was preached by Elder Joel Briggs, of Randolph, and April 14, 1812, occurred the first baptisms, those of Ezra Tilden and wife Bethial, his brother Abner Tilden, and Enos Upham. The old Baptist society was organized April 27, 1812, with the following persons: Samuel Blackman, Nathan Tucker, S. Tucker, Jr., Ezra Tilden, Nathan Kinney, Benjamin Gill, Jr., Enos Upham, Abner Tilden, Benjamin Lewis, Jabez Cobb, Samuel Canterbury, Elijah Jordan, Elijah Hawes, Spencer Wentworth, Nathaniel Billings, Jr., Jacob Wentworth, Jabez Billings, Thaddeus Churchill, Seth Wentworth, Oliver Wentworth, Isaac Mann.

The present church was organized June 22, 1814, with thirty-five members, as follows: Nathan Tucker, Friend Crane, Jason Houghton, Lemuel Fuller, Jr., Andrew Fadden, Abner Tilden, N. T. Davis, Ezra Tilden, Jr., Oliver Houghton, Benjamin Gill (2), Elijah Hawes, Wales Withington, Enos Upham, Samuel Tucker, Jr., James Wentworth, Hannah Tucker, Caty Tucker, Abigail Hill, Abigail Bird, Ruth McKendry, Ruth Houghton, Lucy Allen, Milla Tucker, Eliphal Wheeler, Ruth Buss, Abigail Gill, Bathsheba Fuller, Bathiab Tilden, Mary Morse, Rebecca Crane, Caty Houghton, Lucinda Gill, Mary Houghton, Olive Tucker, Eliza Tucker.

The pastors from that time to the present have been as follows:¹ Revs. Henry Kendall, George Evans, Elisha S. Williams, Edmund Billoon, Thomas Barrett, Henry Stanwood (licentiate), Ferris Moore, Samuel Adams, Moses Curtis, Hiram Gear, Asaph Marriam, Charles O. Kimball, Henry Clark, Lewis Holmes, T. C. Tinglay, David B. Ford, P. R. Russell, G. W. Hervey, Theron Brown, J. H. Hartman (in whose time the meeting-house was enlarged), Clifton Fletcher, N. B. Jones, Jr., E. S. Ufford. Rev. G. L. Lewis was installed in 1883, and is the present pastor.

The first church building was completed in 1820, and dedicated Jan. 14, 1821. The second building was commenced late in 1835, and dedicated June 13, 1837. This building was remodeled in 1862.

¹ Many of these were supplies.

The First Universalist Church was originally known as "The Norfolk Universalist Society" in the town of Canton, and was organized Jan. 26, 1819, at the house of Mr. George Downs, with eighty-eight members from Canton, and also a number from Stoughton and Sharon, and one from Milton and one from Dedham.

During the succeeding years meetings were held and preaching enjoyed in Leavitt's Hall, and in the old town house in Canton, until, in 1847-48, an eligible spot of land containing a quarter of an acre was obtained in the heart of the South Canton Village on the easterly side of the old Bay road, on which they built a meeting-house. The society was growing with the growth of the town, and it was found expedient, if not necessary, to make a change in the name of the society, and on Jan. 20, 1849, a petition was presented to Ellis Ames, Esq., one of the justices of the peace within and for the county of Norfolk, by fourteen members of the society "commonly known as the First Universalist Society in Canton," for him to issue his warrant requiring the qualified voters of said society to meet to organize themselves as a corporation and select a corporate name, etc. This petition was signed by Daniel Tisdale, Jona. Messinger, John Cram, Samuel Chandler, Uriah Billings, Samuel Leonard, William Mansfield, C. S. Fowler, F. W. Deane, J. S. Shepard, Lawton Smith, V. J. Messinger, John Fanning, V. A. Messinger.

Pursuant to Mr. Ames' warrant, directed to Lawton Smith, one of the applicants for a warrant, a meeting was duly and legally called, and held in the meeting-house of the First Universalist Society in Canton, on Saturday the 3d day of February, 1849, at six o'clock in the afternoon.

The following qualified voters of said society appeared: Uriah Billings, John Cram, John Hall, Lawton Smith, Charles S. Fowler, Charles Leland, William Mansfield, Samuel Chandler, Charles Melan, Daniel Tisdale, James S. Shepard, Vernon A. Messinger, Lorenzo R. Smith, Jonathan Messinger, Joel Holmes, Francis W. Deane, William Morse, Stephen F. Tillson, C. H. Harlow, Virgil J. Messinger.

Ellis Ames, Esq., having read the warrant and the return thereon, called for the voters to elect a clerk, and Mr. Virgil J. Messinger² was unanimously chosen, and the oath of office having been administered to him by Ellis Ames, Esq., he took the chair and called upon the meeting to elect a moderator, and Samuel Chandler was unanimously chosen.

² Mr. Virgil J. Messinger, who was the first clerk chosen by the First Universalist Parish of Canton, has been annually re-elected its clerk for thirty-five consecutive years, and is the present clerk.

Upon motion of Uriah Billings it was then voted that this society do organize themselves as a corporation or parish, with all the powers given to corporations by the forty-fourth chapter of the "Revised Statutes," and with all the other powers, etc., expressed in the twentieth chapter of the "Revised Statutes," under the name of the First Universalist Parish in Canton.

Jonathan Messenger, William Mansfield, William Morse were chosen assessors; Francis W. Deane, treasurer; James S. Shepard, collector; Uriah Billings, Charles S. Fowler, Lawton Smith, standing committee.

The meeting-house was built in shares, of which there were sixty-five; all the shareholders subsequently conveyed their rights and interest in the house as distinct from the pews to the parish, which assumed and has retained control of the house as a religious corporation. A committee of three was chosen to appraise the pews and to appoint a day for leasing the same, and William Mansfield, Uriah Billings, James S. Shepard were chosen, who appointed Saturday, April 14, 1850, at four o'clock P.M., as the time, and in accordance therewith all the pews belonging to the parish, thirty-one in all, were put up at auction to be leased to the highest bidder above the appraisal, of which twenty-one, appraised collectively at one hundred and eighty-eight dollars, were leased for the sum of $243.50. "Samuel Bradley Noyes, Esq., by request officiated as auctioneer."

Several gentlemen of Canton who were members of or interested in the First Congregational Parish and in other societies, had furnished money for the building of the meeting-house, one of whom is thus mentioned in the records of a meeting on March 9, 1852: "It was moved and unanimously voted that the thanks of this parish be and are hereby tendered to F. W. Lincoln, Esq., for his very liberal and generous donation to this parish of his two pews, and all interest in the house and land owned by said society."

The pulpit was supplied by various ministers until Dec. 27, 1854. Rev. Joseph Crehore was installed as pastor of the First Universalist Parish in Canton. Rev. Hosea Ballou read the Scriptures; Rev. — Lovejoy made introductory prayer; Rev. E. G. Brooks, of Lynn, preached the sermon; Rev. W. H. Ryder, of Roxbury, gave installation prayer; Rev. E. Fisher, of South Dedham, charge to pastor; Rev. J. W. Dennis, of Stoughton, right hand of fellowship; Rev.

W. H. Ryder, address to the people. On the 4th day of August, 1857, Rev. Joseph Crehore resigned the pastorate.

The parish met on the 17th of the same month, and resolved that they "desire that he will reconsider the reasons which have induced him to tender his resignation," and if he would "continue his labors as our pastor we unreservedly pledge him our most cordial co-operation, sympathy, and support." This vote was communicated to him by the standing committee. Mr. Crehore replied that he "felt constrained to adhere to the decision" heretofore communicated to the parish. The parish then by vote accepted his letter, and his pastorate closed Oct. 31, 1857.

Rev. Henry Jewell succeeded Mr. Crehore as pastor in September, 1858. He remained seven years and five months, when he resigned, and accepted a call in a Western State. He was universally respected and beloved by the parish and through the town. His pastorate closed February, 1866.

March 26, 1866, at a meeting of the parish, "Hon. Charles Endicott made some remarks in regard to the expediency of uniting the Universalist and Unitarian Parishes in this town, whereupon it was voted that a committee of three be chosen for that purpose, to confer with a committee of that parish, and Charles Endicott, F. W. Deane, James S. Shepard were chosen as that committee, which committee at a meeting of the parish held Nov. 12, 1866, reported verbally that it was inexpedient.

Rev. George W. Perry was ordained pastor of the First Universalist Parish of Canton by the Massachusetts Universalist State Convention, Feb. 24, 1868, and on July 9, 1868, by ordination services at the meeting-house in Canton. Mr. Perry resigned Nov. 12, 1869, and his resignation was accepted to take effect Dec. 31, 1869. Rev. Edmund Davis was engaged as pastor and commenced his labors December, 1870, and resigned Feb. 1, 1873; was re-engaged July 1, 1873; resigned April 9, 1879; left July 1, 1879. Dec. 19, 1881, Rev. E. A. Read was invited to preach; resigned Nov. 18, 1883.

The Evangelical Congregational Church was organized July 3, 1828, at the house of Mrs. Katie Hartwell. There were present as council Dr. Codman, of Dorchester, Dr. Coggs, of South Dedham (now Norwood), Jonathan Curtis, of Sharon, Samuel Gile, of Milton, Dr. Hitchcock, of Randolph, Dr. Burgess, of Dedham. Dr. Park, of Stoughton, was moderator. There were only ten in number who sought the organization of a church, and these became the first members,—Deacon Ebenezer Crane, Stephen Thayer, Tilly Flint, Hannah Crane, Betsy Crane, Frances Crane, Judith Albee, Abigail Kollock, Mary Kollock, Jane H. Kollock.

For a year and a half there was neither a house of worship nor settled pastor; but the old record says that in the mean time "meetings were regularly held at Mrs. Hartwell's, who freely opened the doors of her house to their preaching, although from the first she had kept the door of her heart shut against their doctrine."

In 1830 a church edifice was dedicated, and Rev. William Harlow was ordained pastor. Rev. Joy H. Fairchild preached the ordination sermon from John xviii. 38, "What is truth?" Rev. Mr. Harlow remained two years. Rev. John Turner succeeded him as stated supply; he was followed by Rev. Erastus Dickinson, who was ordained in 1835, and gave two years of an ardent youth to the service of the church. Succeeding his ministry were seven years of preaching by supply; Rev. H. G. Park and Rev. John S. Kidder supplying most of the time.

On the 5th of June, 1844, Rev. William B. Hammond was ordained and installed pastor. He remained seven years. Succeeding him, Rev. Solomon Clark was installed Nov. 12, 1851; he also had a pastorate of seven years, and the church moved on steadily progressing.

The old record says, "Upon his dismissal it became apparent to the church and society that a more attractive house of worship would promote their prosperity." The result of their deliberations and labors and sacrifices was a new and commodious church dedicated, and the last bills upon it paid Aug. 22, 1860.

Rev. Rufus W. Clark, D.D., preached the sermon. Rev. I. P. Langworthy made the consecrating prayer, and at the same time Rev. Ezra Haskell was ordained pastor. Rev. R. G. Vermilye preached the sermon. Rev. H. B. Hooker made the ordaining prayer. Mr. Haskell was dismissed April 27, 1865.

Rev. Rowland H. Allen was ordained Nov. 1, 1865. Professor E. A. Park preached the sermon. Rev. Jonathan Edwards made the ordaining prayer.

Up to that date the pastors have been Rev. William Harlow, ordained 1831, dismissed 1832; Rev. John Tucker, engaged 1833, dismissed 1834; Rev. Erastus Dickinson, ordained 1835, dismissed 1837; Rev. Harrison G. Park, engaged 1839, dismissed 1841; Rev. John S. Kidder, engaged 1841, dismissed 1842; Rev. William B. Hammond, ordained June 5, 1844, dismissed Jan. 2, 1851; Rev. Solomon Clark, installed Nov. 12, 1851, dismissed Jan. 19, 1858; Rev. Ezra Haskell, ordained Aug. 22, 1860, dismissed April 27, 1865; Rev. Roland P. Allen, ordained Nov. 1, 1865. His pastorate ended with this church in March, 1867.

Rev. William E. Dickinson was called, and sent his letter of acceptance to become pastor Nov. 27, 1867. He remained as pastor until April, 1870.

Feb. 27, 1867, Rev. J. F. Jennison was called to supply the pulpit, and stayed until Aug. 1, 1874.

Rev. J. W. Savage was hired to supply the pulpit from the third Sabbath in October, 1874, and continued to do so until Nov. 14, 1880; and later than that date, with the exception of one year's supply by Rev. Mark Taylor, the church has sat under the preaching of various clergymen of the faith.

The present officers of the church are: deacons, Edward R. Eager and Elijah A. Morse; John Howard, treasurer.

St. John's Roman Catholic Church.—About the year 1854 Rev. Father Strain, of Chelsea, came to Canton and began to preach in the "Stone Factory Chapel," in West Canton; with him came Rev. Terence Fitzsimmons, of St. Peter and St. Paul Church, Broadway, South Boston; the building of a church was begun on "Chapel Hill," so called, a short distance north of the railroad station in South Canton. It was opened for service in 1855. Rev. P. F. Lindon succeeded Fitzsimmons, attended by his assistants, Mr. Callaber and Mr. Hatley, till 1861, when the latter, Rev. John Hatley, came to reside in Canton, and under his auspices, by the Lord's help, the present church was built, and was dedicated in 1868. It will seat, including the choir, seven hundred and seventy-five persons. There are two services on each Sunday, the average attendance on each of which is eight hundred. The number of communicants is over fifteen hundred. It cost about sixteen thousand dollars, and was dedicated by Archbishop Williams. Connected with the church is a parsonage, and a capacious hall and vestry. It is in contemplation to enlarge the present church or to build another.

CHAPTER LXXIII.

CANTON—(Continued).

THE PRESS, MANUFACTURES, BANKS, ETC.

The Canton Journal—Early Manufactures—The First Cotton-Factory—Present Manufactures—Memorial Hall—Military Record—Number of Men Furnished—Amount of Money Raised—Various Votes in Relation to Bounties, etc.—Roll of Honor—Revere Encampment, Grand Army of the Republic—The Neponset National Bank—Canton Institution for Savings—Representatives from 1776 to Present Time.

The Canton Journal.—For about twenty years there had been no local newspaper in Canton, no one seeming to have any desire to embark in such an enterprise until December, 1876, when N. T. Merritt, of Dorchester, a gentleman of considerable newspaper experience, established the Canton Journal. This paper was started as an eight-column folio. The progress of the paper under Mr. Merritt's management was not such as to guarantee success, and at the end of four months he was obliged to step down and out. D. S. Hasty, of Easton, proprietor of the Easton Journal and Stoughton Sentinel, thereupon took the paper in charge, appointing E. B. Thorndike, its present publisher and proprietor, local representative. Mr. Thorndike opened an office in the post-office building, and at once went to work with the determination to place the paper upon a sound basis. From this point it became apparent that his labors would be crowned with prosperity, and that a permanent local paper for Canton was an established fact. In the path to success in journalism, as in the other walks of life, there are obstacles to overcome, and unexpected events often present themselves, which seem for the time to retard progress, and to this the Canton Journal was to experience its share. A few weeks after assuming control of the paper the proprietor, Mr. Hasty, was removed by the hand of death, and thus necessitated another change. At the settlement of Mr. Hasty's estate, A. P. Smith, of Stoughton, purchased the printing-office located at Stoughton, and known as the Sentinel office, the several papers there printed, and the good-will of the entire business. Mr. Thorndike continued with Mr. Smith until November, 1880, at which time he purchased the good-will and title of the Canton Journal, and removed the composing-room to Canton, opening in the upper story of Meserve's building, on the corner of Washington and Rockland Streets. Type, presses, and material were added from time to time, until the business had grown to such an extent that a larger printing-room was inevitable.

On the 19th of November, 1881, just one year after the purchase of the Journal by Mr. Thorndike, he secured the services of J. T. Geissler, of Sharon, as editor, who still holds that position. The first of May, 1882, found the establishment in the more commodious quarters on Church Street, known as the "old school-house," where it still remains. Upon entering these new apartments large additions to type, materials, etc., were again made. New presses, including a Campbell cylinder, a power paper-cutter, a steam-engine, and boiler, were put in, and the town of Canton for the first time could boast of a steam printing-office within its borders. On the 27th of October of the same year the size of the Journal was increased to nine columns folio, thus giving more space for local matter, which had become crowded by advertisers. It is now in its eighth volume, steadily increasing its army of readers, and still aiming to a higher point in the journalistic world.

Manufacturing Interests.—Perhaps it may not be generally known that the first cotton-factory by machinery in Massachusetts was located at Canton in 1803.

From papers of the late James Beaumont we extract a portion of the agreement entered into by the company:

"James Beaumont, Abel Fisher, and Lemuel Bailey agreed to enter into Partnership to begin and carry on the Cotton-spinning Business, and, on the 14th day March, 1803, they agreed in a manner which the following copy of the writings will best explaine.

"Be it Known that we James Beaumont, Abel Fisher and Lemuel Bailey having provided a Building and Machinery for Spinning Cotton Yarn upon the eastern branch of Neponset River in the town of Canton, in the county of Norfolk, Do enter into the following articles of agreement.

"1st.—We shall be known and transact Business under name of James Beaumont & Co.

"2nd.—That the Stock shall amount to twenty four Hundred Dollars and be advanced by each one in the following proportion, Viz.—

"Said James Beaumont shall advance sixteen hundred dollars.

"Said Abel Fisher shall advance four hundred dollars.

"Said Lemuel Bailey shall advance four hundred dollars.

"Making the whole stock to amount to Twenty-four Hundred dollars as afores'd.

"3rd.—It is agreed that the whole Cost of erecting s'd Building, and procuring the Machinery shall be considered as part of money advanced towards Stock, and each one shall be credited as he has advanced and that the privilege of water, and also of land on which s'd Building is erected, or any additional Improvement that may be made and other convenient necessary Room for carrying on s'd Business or manufactory shall continue five Years from the date hereof."

The partnership was to continue five years, and James Beaumont was to have the sole direction of the business.

It was also "agreed that the work people may be boarded by the partners in proportion to their respective rights in Stock provided nevertheless, that the place of board be conveniently near the factory, and the food and Drink be of such a Quality as is fit and necessary to comfort and invigorate people employ'd in s'd Business and that the rate of Board allowed each partner shall be similar in similar Circumstances.

"In Testimony of our mutual Consent and confirmation of every clause and article of the foregoing, we the parties aforesaid have herunto set our hands and Seals this fourteenth Day of March in the year of our Lord Eighteen hundred and three.

"Signed Sealed and delivered each partner in presence of ELIJAH DUNBAR, THOMAS DUNBAR.

"JAMES BEAUMONT,
"ABEL FISHER,
"LEMUEL BAILEY."

Reminiscences of James Beaumont.—The following reminiscences of manufacturing in Canton from 1803 to 1813 were written by the late James Beaumont, when in his eightieth year :

"I was engaged in a nominal partnership with two men, Abel Fisher, and Lem^l Bailey, they owned the Millprivilege called the old Everton place, it had been occupied in early times as a forge and grist-mill, but when I first saw it the water was running, down in its natural bed. my partners engaged to build the dam. & Factory building, and due time I got the Machinery to work (with some assistance) which consisted of 3 Cards, a drawing and roveing, frame and a Mule of 144 spindles, I had made with my own hands, the drawing and roveing Cans, and other tin work, in a coppersmiths shop in Boston. we first began to make, Wick yarn for the Candle makers the first. lot was made from sea Island Cotton, and was very smooth and beautiful; I took a sample of it. to a well known, Firm in Rosbury. Aaron Davis & Co.

"Mr. Ezra Sampson was a partner and active manager in the soap, and candle, department, he pronounced the wicking first-rate, and they gave me a large order and agreed to give me 75 cents p^{r} lb for it. the stained sea Island Cotton had cost me. about 23 or 24 cents p^{r} lb but Mr. Sampson surmised that the white Georgia Cotton would be whiter. and more suitable if not so smooth, so I used it the price of upland Cotton at that time. was from 16 to 18 Cents p^{r} lb.

"A year or two after this, the Messrs Davis & Co.s Candles, got into such request, especially the moulders, that I worked up for them eleven (11) Bales of Cotton into wicking in one year they then furnished the cotton and they gave 25 Cents p^{r} lb for working it—I likewise, made wicking for other candle makers. in less degree.

"when the machinery had got well gated—we began to make warp & filling yarn for domestick cloth; the first Piece was for sheeting this was made from sea Island Cotton was warped on common warping barr it was sized in the chain. I wrung it out of the size tub myself hand over hand. Tattershall, an English weaver, made good cloths of it. Thus, in 1802 was the first piece of Cotton cloth ever. made in America from Mule yarn. either all or in part I sold such cloth at 50 cents p^{r} yard and shirting from 35 to 42 Cents p^{r} yard.

"I put a sample of my first. sheeting in the Museum at Lowell 7 or 8 years ago. Mr. Kimball, of that establishment who had been a manufactor said he had no doubt of the authenticity of the relek, after examining it.

"My partners in business, Fisher & Bailey, I found out was not desirous to continue with me their only object from the first was to dispose of the Everton place, and they had not Money to carry on with, so they gave me a bond for a Deed I not as yet being naturalized so I had it all to myself my little concern was so successful that I had several offers from Gentlemen of cappital to become partners; amongst the rest was I. Smith Boyce of Dorchester he proposed that I should sell out at Canton, and he would furnish me with funds and have a Factory built at Dorchester on a large scale. we had had several confabs about it. I had had so much toil and care in getting my little concern at Canton underway that I had no desire to move

"However Mr Boyce being an extreemly industrious active man, he did get a Factory agoing say about the year 1807 or 8. this was without doubt the most prosperous and Profitable concern of the kind ever established in the Union

"There were made Bedticks, Gingham, shirtings & sheetings in large quantities in the time of the Embargo and 1812 War; and long after.

"In the embargo Cotton got down to 8 or 9 Cents but when war was declared it rose to the enormous price to 40 Cents and once to 48 the seacoast was blockaded, but it was found that Cotton could be brought by teams, all the way by land so that it could be afforded at the first mentioned price or less

"It a was fine sight to behold these Teams & their drivers I once saw a string those teams pass through Dedham 6 or 8 in number fine well cared for brown and black horses, 4 or 6 in a team, but the drivers were even more black shiney & fat than the horses; cuff was in his glory then flourshing his long wip and grinning at the Dedhamites in merry glee saying dare you you cannot displays sich a fine team of osses as dis in your poor plantations (nor could they)

"A Bale of Goods, seemingly India Cotton, much used then had fallen from one of the Wagons, and the drivers balled out in corous to the conductor (the only white man amongst them) who speedily replaced it by as many black paws as could get hold of it

"In my remarks on the other page, I meant to notice respecting the great success of the Dorchester Factory that the owners before the war was commenced had purchased a very large quantity of Cotton at the lowest figure, when as before stated it rose to 4 or 5 times its originall cost

"About the year 1802-3 John Blackburn came over from England and soon after commenced building the Tyler Mill at Pawtucket R. I. Mr. Blackburn was perhaps the most effecent and skillful Machinest then in the Union he was likewise well versed in the construction of that kind of Machines call Throstle frames, a great improvement (on Arkwrights first inventions) both for cheapness and dispack of work Mr B. did not like Slater lock, bolt, and guard is establishment but the doars were freely opened to the bubblick—this consern was highly prosperous, a few years after Mr Blackburn went to Mendon in this state, and with assistance Built the largest Factory then in the country, this was also prosperous

"In the time of the Embargo and War following, Mills and Machiner began to increee abundantly, young America had got hold of the machinest and manufacorers aret, and he drove it with steam speed—the Rhode Islanders, with Slater & Blackburn at their head, hunted up the millsites, and waterfalls, in that part of Massachusetts now called Webster and Slaterville, were a vast business is done at this time

"To return to my own matters when estabesled first at Canton I ingeneral let people have a free look, into my Mill espeshaly the females the farmers wives and daughters would come to buy yarn and would of course want to see the Factory

"I would open the outer door leading into the entry; and after shutting the same; they especially the young ones would be sore afraid when they heard the thundering clattering noise within I would open the inner door and they would peep in, then advance a little way and look round with great astonishment, one old Lady was looking at the large slivers of cotton drawings, advanceing out of the big drawing cans up through the rolers—as if by majick, would exclaim now do tell. lud amassy! is that spinning. then another having advanced further having espeyed the Mule would scream do marn, come here and look at this great big high wheel, that has everso many spindles drawing out at once and nobody to them, and then another viteron Lady spinner would shout out what on harth are you going to do with all this yarn, you never will be able to sell it in this varst world

"Canton in 1801.—When I first saw the Everton place which I afterward improved the Water course, was shooting through its natural bed, there was a Grist Mill standing on the north side and there had been a Forge for Iron worked there, but, it was all in ruins. the larg gearing and Waterweel shaft had been sawed nearly through, and mended with bars of Iron here was dessollation mannifest; the place had a bad name, and was said to be haunted. indeed if weather the missschief had been done by evil spirits or evil bodys in the flesh, they had made finishing work of it

"It was a delightful place for a Dam here the rocky banks approached near to gather, and a small rocky Island reared its brushy & Flower decorated, head right in the middle of the River (called the eastern branch of the neponsett) the old Grist Mill was a relict of antiquity, it had been used, for a building to manufactor Gunpowder in; before or at the time of the revolutionary war. it had been moved probably on the Ice from the millprivilege above now known as the Revere copper, Co's works this old building was again removed about 50 years ago 10 or 12 roods, and has been used since as a stable for the storage of hay, and the lodging of Cattle and there it yet stands—with the Iasabella grape vine climbing up to its southern gable up to its ver ridge pole. an emblem of youth and old age closely intertwined in love together. as may be now seen from the great viaduct close by, at this day—There was not any dwelling house on the premises but one, and that containing two rooms below and a low chamber above at that time in this old shell, with some additions made to it I lived very happily several years with a large family

"The roads were very poor at that time large boulders and rocks imbelishing it on each side, and some times in the middle thereof But, the latter was sometime convenient for teams turning out you could drive on each side, and in other places the ruts would be so deep that it would be difficult to pass

"In regard to buildings they were low and cheaply built, and in winter have been very uncomfortable had it not been for the rousing fires they constantly kept, in cold weather, the cracks in the boards & holes under the doors, with the broaken glass in the windows gave them a quantum suffiect of pure air for all purposes

"Their Barns was not large, they had a good deal of land but not much fodder, and but few cattle to eat it. The best farmers however, would have a yoke of Oxen and a horse to do their work, the Orchard was the best attended to of all their lands; and gardens if any the least as for flowers they did not need any the romping Johns wort and the great Ox daisey, white weed, embelished their fields with yellow White and golden Flowers delightful to see, then they had the Flax plant carefully nurtered, with its exquilty beautiful blue flowers, and what did they need more of the kind

"they generally contrived to raise Corn and Rye for bread; to fat the hogs and a little for the working cattle, they did not raise much English Hay, but carefully applied all their manure for the dressing of the Corn & Flax, most of their fodder was obtained from the low-bog meadows, this they had abundantly, and when well got did very well for the young stock and cows that did not give milk

"Most of the best farmers had a small flock of Sheep, those with the Flax they depended on for their clothing; the Ladys, —I mean the women, the farmers Wife and daughters were the principle Manufacorers, they did not want many shoes in summer nor were Stockings very abundant. A fashionable Mantumaker of the modern time would have been in danger of starving before thos Women would have helped her

"Starv me to a farm-house 'summer' the old Grandfather a deacon of the congregational church just come in from the hay field, the mistris of the house ready to receive me saying after introductory complements 'she' will you go and sit down in the other room (best), my husband will be in soon, no I had rather sit here and see you make cheese did you never see cheese making, they do not make any chees whear I was brought up

(Yorkshire in England) She, then what do they do with theier milk in warm weather. Oh! they set it in a cool place in there stone built houses the buttery or Celler and skim it afterstanding 3 meals the sweet skimmed milk is used in the family or sold to the neighbours at half price, the cream after being collected and soured a little in the vessel it is churned into the best Butter in the world the Butter milk is preserved and ate as a dainty to bread or thick hasty pudding, made of Oat meal—

"her, Dont they use Coffee and Tea common as whe do. No, Coffee they scarcely use att all, and Tea only used sparing by the elderly women, heads of familys. In my two apprenticeships, the first of near 2 years I never tasted either in my Masters house (so to say) in the second of 3 years I never drank any but once; the good old man for a good man he was, and the name of Jonathan Wood shall be ever remembered with gratitude. He had been out with me to a Benevolent quaker to see if he would not advance some money to pay legacys on real Estate I was soon to come heir to? We had succeeded and I was in high spirits; when whe got home, his good old Dame as he called her, were just sitting down with her sister to an Afternoons Tea drinking. now Jimy says he sit thee down with mee and our Women folks to a dish of Tea. I did sit down but I can never remember having being so ashamed before or since in all my life.

"But how did you live in, the morning the breakfast table was set out with Trenchers (wooden plates) by the side of each a small pint earthen mug with a spoon was placed the viands were a large Panfull of sweet milk, then a plate of Pattee's of Butter home made, these were about the size of half a dollar a good deal thicker but did not weigh so much in number they were just equal to the number of the guests at table, which guests consisted of Mr. Wood a Journyman or two and four apprentices. A large earthen panful of Oatmeal haisty Pudding was placed on the centre of the table and a few sheets of hard, thin oat cakes placed on the clean but naked table. All being ready at it we went with a hungry will dipping out with our spoons filling them partly in the pudding then dipping them in the milk pots, after this first course of pudding we had recourse to the milk pan with bread and butter to finish. I forget weather we spread the Butter with knives or our thumb; this I know it always tasted best to me done by the latter method, indeed it is difficult to do it with a knife that if you press the Butter hard the bread is so light and honeycomb like that it will fly in many pieces.

"Our dinner consisted of boild hang beef and dried flitch bacon and broth was made of the liquor the meat was boild in by adding a little oat meal, the broth was invariable ate first then we had either dumplings or a pudding boild in a bag, then we finished off with the Animal food & vegetabiles.

"Our evening meal was baked (flour) pudding, milk and bread alditum, we had always for lunction at 11 o'clock a small mess pot about a pint of good home brued Ale of Malt and hops, strong and delicious, at dinner we had small bear made of the same materials the women folks never sot down with us men at meals.

"Sunday was strictly observed in these families on that glorious day of rest and recreation this mother in Irail and her husbands Mother would deck out in their best and march across the fields and lanes, bare leg and bare foot to meeting 2 miles with their stockings and shoes in their pockets or under their arms and when near the holy place under some sheltering tree would don them, and when the holy serviss was over would doff them again near by, there was nothing mean or stingy about this woman on the contrary she had a most liberal Soule, but shoes was an extra luxury and fine knit cotton stocking was a still greater one, when the father came in he invited me to take some old orchard with him or a glass of toddy both I declined as I never loved cider and new rum I detested both smell & taste of but begged a drink of her new come whey from her chees tub, she slyly regretted her husband had such a desire for either Rum or old orchard, oh you know whe cannot do our hot ummer work espeshaly in hay time without it replied he.

"But to return to my Everton place. I was looking over the coppys of old Deeds lately and I found one dated Jan. 28 1717 wherein I found it recorded that Edmund Quince of Brantrey, in Suffolk County, Esqr. John White of Boston in the county aforesaid Gentⁿ Standfast Foster, Thomas Tilestone, Sam^l Paule, Ebenezer Mawdesley, Ebenezer Jones, and Robert Royal, all of Dorchesster, had at the above time entered into partnership to buy & make a Dam at this place and containing two acres of land which they hereby bought of one Timothy Jones of said Dorchester for the sum of six Pounds, for the purpose setting up Iron works, and in due time a forge was put in Operation the oar was collected in the visintity but most particularly from the pond called Massapogue.

"For two years after commenced business the Herring came up the River in great numbers in the spring wending their way through many difcutys to massapogue pond men were appointed by the adjoining Towns to see the fish had free right of way several of these worthys visited me and demanded me to hoyst my flood gates and lay the bottom of the mill dam bare excepting the channel but says I the Fish have not began to run yet. is the season of their running. Oh says I Gentlmen it is a hard case for me to stop my Factorey; but says I, walk into the house and we will talk the matter over. when seated I brought out my old Cogniac, a bowl of loaf shugar and water, to which they helped themselves bountifully after wading in the river not inspeting the fish for they were not there, but the water. They went off in great good humor and said I must send them word when the fish began to run about a week after they did begin to run, but I did not see them, though others did, I did not look very minutely well down they came upon us (the inspectors I mean) dip net in hand, and there they went to work floundering in the river and took several dozens of the herring which after taking a chearer or two of my Brandy they carried home to their friends.

"About a week after this the fish came up abundantly. My self and work people were idle and wanted a fishing frolick so I said to one of my men Slimsey we will have some herring to-night. his laughing eye, took the hint, to shut down the flood gates, yes. It was a beautiful night in May (the fish came late up this river and did not do, much good to any one excepting idle familys that would rather fish than work they came so late, but I will tell my story about fishing over leaf. About 10 o'clock Slim & I wended to the dam head & down with the flood gates. this shut the water back into the dam. there was a planked apron way a gently inclined plane up which the fish used to rush with great difficulty, at the bottom of this apron was a pond hole some 20 or 30 feet wide were the fish used to linger before ascending the rapid in this hole were bushels of fish the retiring water having left them without means of escape, there was a small Indian canoe lying on the beach near by we rushed into the hole, and went at it with a will throwing them out with our hands three or four at once, and when tired of this way we would kick them out with our feet while exersizing in this delightful sport there came two young man along over the wooden Bridge near by with their Galls. sometimes Lovers walk out together in the stilly night they were friends, the young men jumped down into the river and after a few more jumps came cothrsh, right into the fishery hole, were they began to labour with all their might and being fresh hands at the tiller the fish came out thicker and faster whilst the females on a mossy bank near by cheered us with their songs, duetts, and solos, in this balmy and moonlight evening whilst we in the ditch with our hurrahs and shouts joined in the chorus, but game began to grow scarce & and we thought we had enough, as the canoe was well ny full the word was given let us out and liquor and take care of the spoils. I went into the house and got the fixings and a basket to carry the fish home. the young men were or had been employees of mine and I think the young women too so they carried mine & Slimsys share home about 2 Barrels leaving about as many more for those that came at the eleventh hour.

"At that time there wear in Canton several Manufacturing establishments, Enoch Leonard's Forge, Gen^l Elijah Crane's Grist-Mill, Leonard & Kinsley's mill-saw, edge-tool, and Forge works, the renowned Copper works of Col^l. Paul Revere, the first established in this country of the kind, besides several grist-mills at the different works; these with my establishment of the manufacturing of Cotton yarn and cloth were a great benifit to the publick and employing many hands, this made the mill-owners wish for the stopping of the Herrings, rather then the stopping of the above valuable manufacturing concerns. The owners, therefore, a few years after in conjunction with other mill-owners below, in Dorchester and Millton, petitioned the General Court to stop the herring from runing in the Neponcett river, which was granted, and publick opinion fully agreed with the law.

"Canton from that time to the present or to 1820, at least, might be termed with truth, the first in time and the first in quantity and quality of any in the State of its manufactured articles.

"I will here innumerate the different kinds of goods & articles made and manufactured in Canton within the first 15 years of the present century.

"Forge work, Enoch Leonard's crow-bars and shapes for blacksmith's work, Leonard & Kinsley's made mill-saws, crow-bars, and various kinds of axes and other heavy edge-tool work, anchor, flukes, &c., blister steel, and various kinds of iron castings in demand at that time.

"At the Revere works were made copper sheathing, bolts, and spikes, and afterwards a furnice was erected for casting brass and refining copper. Here at (the Revere works) were cast large brass guns and bells for churches, and those bells were, perhaps, the first founded in the Union.

"The Cotton mill of which I had the control, produced yarns, bedticks, sheeting, shirting, checks, plads, and ginghams. I likewise made cotton pelisse wadding, for which I had large orders from New York, Boston, &c. This article was not made by any other person in this country at that time. About 1802-3 it was made by running the carded batts through rolers wet with size. I afterwards got a patent for my invention. I have not made any wading for more than 30 years, but the advertizements in the milliner's shop windows still say or did 3 or 4 years ago: 'Beaumont's poliss wadding sold here.'

"Miss Ann Bent, who kept a lady's fancy goods store in what is now called Washington Street, in Boston, was my best customer. This lady was the first I showed it to; she highly praised it, and recommended it to her customers as the best for the purpose of any other. Before this the wadding had been imported, the cotton kind from England, and the silk kind from France.

"About this time (1807-8) I desolved partnership with Richard Wheatley, with whom I had been connected in bussiness several years, whe devided the real estate, and I built a small factory on the north side of the river on my own account, set up wool carding and spinning machines. When the Merino sheep began to be imported in great numbers (thanks to the great and good Napolian Bonapart, who scattered both the lazy Spaniards and there flocks, many of the latter found their way into this country.

"I then began to make all wool cloth yorkshire plains careys- and Sattinets, for the last article I got great credit making my own cotton warps of sea Island Cotton and employing English workmen who beat them up well in the hand loom so that when afterwards finished you could not scarcely tell the back side from the face. I sold the finest of them for $3.50 p yard both before and during the 1812 war. I charged 25 Cents p pound for carding (full blood merino and 17 Cents half blood) into roles

"I will here mention some of my customers for whom I Manufactured the fine wool wholly or in part. Governor Robbins of Milton into cloth Cap^t Nat^l Tucker, of Milton into cloth. Benjamin Bussey of Boston, Esq partially into Cloth.—Amary Esq^r of Roxbury into yarn and slubbing all these Gentlemen owned small flocks of the merinoes. Esq^r Amarey I think of Milton I made some cloth for I likewise continued the manufactory of my wick yarn and Wadding

"Towards the begining of the 1812 war, and during the same there were large quantys of Muskets and Rifles were made several thousand stand for the United states and with high credit to the makers by Mess^{rs} Leonard & Kinsley, honorable Thomas French, and others

"Mr Enoch Leonard & his sons in partnership with William Dunbar Esq^r made some very good horsmans Sords, & Sailors Cutlashes for Sam. There were two brothers. Bazins in Canton at the above time very ingenious and Inventive, who made stocking weaving Machines, likewise Machien for twisting the strands and laying cords & ropes—they likewise were the inventers of them sweet Musickal Instruments, the Aeolian reeds either the small tubelike ones, held the hand and blown into with the mouth as well as the larger Instruments were the bellows is applied

"After I desolved partnership with Mr. Wheatly he ingaged a man to conduct his istablishment named David Wild he understood his business well a year or two later. Mr. Wild assisted in building a Cotton Factory, & Machinery in partnership with Gen^l Elijah Crane who owned a millprivilage in Canton this was the third of the kind in the town

"There was a young man, a house carpenter a very ingenious and industrious man, at the time Mr Wheatly & I began to build machinery who hired him in his line of business as well to make the wood part of the Machines) Azel Ames by name he worked for us when in company, and afterwards for myself about in all 4 or 5 years. he had saved considerable money, he had a younger brother work as an apprentice with him, we always boarded them and as they lost no time of concequence he had a handsome sum to carry with him to Bridgewater his native town—soon after he went to marshfield, with his brother and built and established a Cotton Factory and they made it go well, this was the greatest effort. I ever knew, for a Mechanick in wood work only to bravely build turning Layths for wood & Iron Tools for fluting and fitting Iron & brass—also making Pattrens for Castings of Iron these nettles—and afterwards turning filing & fitting them together

"This Factory of Mr. Ames's was in full operation years before the Waltham concern was thought of

"Even the stone mason, who worked for Mr. Wheatly and us contrived to set agoing a Cotton Factory in Sharon the adjoining Town to Canton, that is with much assistance this was the third or fourth swarm so to say that had left our hive in Canton

"Thus I have given you in a straightforward way my experiences and knowledge of Cotton Manufacturing previous to the time of the Waltham Factory in 1813."

The Kinsley Iron and Machine Company.—

These works were established by Leonard & Kinsley in 1787, and have been in constant operation since that time; the manufacture of steel by the German process was then commenced and continued until 1830 or later. From 1790 to 1797 from one hundred and fifty to two hundred tons of mill-saws were made annually. In those early days the works were very small. Early in the present century the manufacture of fire-arms was introduced, and a considerable quantity of muskets was furnished the government for the war of 1812. The steel produced at this time and for many years after was used for making sleigh-shoes, horse-shoe calks, plowshares, etc. About 1821 the firm of Leonard & Kinsley dissolved, and the business was continued by Mr. Adam Kinsley. In 1833–35 a foundry building was constructed for the manufacture of castings. A few years later (on the death of Mr. Kinsley in 1837) the business passed into the hands of two of his sons, Lyman and Alfred. Soon after, Lyman bought out Alfred Kinsley's interest in the business and conducted it himself until 1855. About 1838 the forge was burned, and a new one built. Under Mr. Kinsley's management the manufacture of car-axles and car-wheels was added to the now growing industry; in 1845 the work was prosecuted day and night, and forty car-wheels were made daily; in 1846 eighteen hundred car-wheels were furnished to one Western road alone. The manufacture of wagon-axles—one of the branches of the business from its commencement—was largely increased. A rolling-mill was erected, in 1852–53, for the purpose of rolling car-axles and a beam-engine of one hundred and ninety-horse power, and an eighteen-inch train of rolls put in. In 1853 the idea of rolling car-axles was abandoned, and the manufacture of iron commenced. In 1854 the Kinsley Iron and Machine Company was chartered and in 1855 was organized; the capital stock is two hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. Lyman Kinsley was elected president and held that position until about 1859, when he retired from the business. Hon. Oliver Ames, of North Easton, was chosen as his successor, and held the position until his death, when he was succeeded by his son, Frederick L. Ames, the present president. Edward L. Eager, Esq., was chosen treasurer upon the organization of the company, and has remained in that capacity to the present time. The present agent is Mr. Frank M. Ames.

Since the organization of the company the works have been in constant operation. In 1854 the axle-shop was destroyed by fire; a new building was erected in 1859. In 1861 the present foundry building was built and the old foundry torn down. On the 14th of January, 1875, the rolling-mill and forge were burned; preparations for a new mill were commenced, however, before the fire of the old mill had died out, and on the 24th of May following operations were resumed in a new mill much larger and more convenient than the old, but on the same site.

The company employ about two hundred and twenty-five men. The buildings cover about one and a half acres of ground, the mill alone covering nearly one and one-quarter acres.

They manufacture merchant bar-iron, car and locomotive forgings, castings, machinery, finished wagon-axes, bridge-bolts, and heavy hardware.

The Revere Copper Company.—Paul Revere & Son commenced the copper-works in Canton, Jan. 3, 1801. Previous to that time they had carried on a bell and cannon foundry on Hull Street, in Boston, which was removed later to Canton, where they continued to cast bells and brass cannon of all sizes and all kinds of composition work; manufactured sheets, bolts, spikes, nails, etc., from malleable copper and cold-rolled. Paul Revere died in 1818, and the business was carried on by his surviving son, Joseph Warren Revere, until 1828, when the Revere Copper Company was incorporated by Joseph W. Revere, James Davis, Fred. W. Lincoln, and James Davis, Jr. Since the death of the original founder the business has been continued under the management of John Revere, president, S. T. Snow, treasurer, with increasing facilities, and their manufacture includes all grades from the raw material to the finest-graded articles of rolled copper.

Neponset Cotton Manufacturing Company.—In 1824 the present stone mill, generally known as the Neponset Factory, was begun, and finished in 1825, and was put in operation as a woolen-factory by Holbrook, Dexter & Hill. They manufactured satinets and kerseymere cloths. In 1828 the company failed, and the mill property and machinery was silent for nearly two years. It had cost four hundred thousand dollars, and was sold to a new company for one hundred and forty thousand dollars, the Neponset Manufacturing Company, which carried on the manufacture till 1838, when they abandoned the business, and the property, fixtures, and machinery was purchased by Mr. J. W. Revere for fifty thousand dollars. In 1844, — Robeson, of New Bedford, leased the property for ten years, and at the expiration of the term renewed the lease for ten years, and again for ten years, abandoning the business in 1879.

In 1883 the property was purchased for thirty-five thousand dollars by James L. Little, and the buildings are undergoing thorough repairs preparatory to occupation as a cotton-factory.

Eureka Silk Manufacturing Company.—The silk business in Canton was started in 1839, by V. J. Messinger; but some months later he removed to Needham, where he remained five years, making sewings, gimps, and fringes. In 1844, Mr. Messinger returned to Canton, and in partnership with his brother, V. A. Messinger, established the business there as Messinger & Brother. They continued the manufacture of sewings and machine twist successfully and uninterruptedly till 1863, when it was transferred to Charles Foster and J. W. C. Seavey, the latter of whom had been with Messinger & Brother since 1853. The firm-name was J. W. C. Seavey & Co. In 1869 the firm became Seavey, Foster & Bowman, who continued the business till 1881, when the proprietors formed a joint-stock company for the manufacture of all kinds of twisted silk, under the name and firm of the Eureka Silk Manufacturing Company. They have increased their business from year to year, until they have become one of the most successful and extensive manufacturers in this country. Their favorite brands, the "Lion" and "Eureka," have a high reputation. The firm have contributed largely to the movement of putting up strictly pure dye goods, and have also manufactured and introduced measuring and strength-testing machines, to enable buyers to inform themselves of the actual quality of the goods they are buying. To the enterprise of this firm consumers are indebted for many improvements in the style and quality of twist silks.

G. H. Mansfield & Co.—The privileges now occupied by this establishment were first utilized in 1821 by Simeon Presbrey, in the manufacture of cotton thread. He subsequently enlarged the original mill, and added the manufacture of twines. He carried on the business until 1845, when he sold it to Thomas B. Vose, who continued it until 1849, when it passed into the hands of William Mansfield. Mr. Mansfield carried on the manufacture as sole proprietor until July 1, 1858, when it was purchased by his two sons, George H. and Preston R., who have continued it to the present time. In 1865, W. B. White and G. H. Mansfield formed a copartnership, under the name of White & Mansfield, and commenced the manufacture of shoe-lace, and, in the spring of 1866, inaugurated the manufacture of braided fishing-lines. The firm of White & Mansfield was dissolved in 1866 by the retirement of Mr. White, and the business has since been continued by G. H. Mansfield & Co. They manufacture braided silk and linen lines, and it is a notable fact that this firm was the pioneer in the manufacture of braided lines in the United States.

MEMORIAL HALL, CANTON, MASS.

The Narragansett Suspender and Web Company.—The building on the west side of the Canton Junction Station of the Boston and Providence Railroad, occupied by the Narragansett Suspender and Web Company, J. R. Wattles, proprietor, and by L. W. Wattles & Co., manufacturers of spinning and twister rings, with the entire contents, was totally destroyed by fire May 10, 1884. Mr. J. W. Wattles was the sole proprietor of both concerns, and of the buildings and land. The factory building was erected in 1865, and had been from time to time enlarged and improved and added to.

The business of making spinning rings for cotton-mills was established in 1843 by Mr. Luther R. Wattles, and had been carried on in Canton for the past twenty-five years by Mr. J. W. Wattles under the name of L. R. Wattles & Co. The Narragansett Company manufactured suspenders and all kinds of elastic web goods, and had a wide reputation. Arthur J. Wattles, son of J. W. Wattles, was superintendent of both companies, and another son, Joseph W. Wattles, Jr., was book-keeper and cashier of both concerns.

Paper-Box Manufactory.—In 1837, Nathaniel Dunbar commenced the manufacture of piano-forte keys, on the site now occupied by the box-factory, and continued it until 1857. In the fall of that year, in company with Charles F. Hard, he commenced the manufacture of paper boxes. That co-partnership continued until the fall of 1868, when the establishment was purchased by Mr. Dunbar, and continued by him as sole proprietor until his death, which occurred July 11, 1883. The business is still carried on under the name of Nathaniel Dunbar, by his oldest son, Francis D. Dunbar.

Thomas Lonergan commenced the manufacture of spinning- and twister-rings in 1878. In 1881 his factory was destroyed by fire, and immediately rebuilt. He has continued the manufacture to the present time.

For history of establishments of Messrs. Shepard, French, Draper, and Morse, see their respective biographies in the following pages.

Memorial Hall.—At the annual meeting in April, 1878, the town appointed a committee, consisting of William Horton from School District No. 1, Elisha Horton of No. 2, Frank M. Ames of No. 3, Ellis Tucker of No. 4, George E. Downes of No. 5, Thomas Lonergan of No. 6, and James S. Shepard of No. 7, to procure plans and select proper locations for a new town hall, and directed the committee to make their report on the 17th day of June, 1878. After considerable discussion as to the merits of the several locations proposed, it was voted to build at the corner of Washington and Depot Streets.

A committee, consisting of Frank M. Ames, James S. Shepard, Elisha Horton, Joseph W. Wattles, and Edward R. Eager, was selected, and instructed to take a deed of the land donated by Elijah A. Morse, and erect a building thereon, to be called "Memorial Hall," from some one of the plans before the meeting.

The design for the building was prepared by Stephen C. Earle, of Boston.

The architecture is what may perhaps be called Modern Gothic. The underpinning and steps are of Concord granite. The walls are of brick, decorated with Longmeadow freestone and black brick. The brick are laid in black mortar. The inside finish throughout the building is of ash. The floors are of Southern pine. The main building is one hundred and one by sixty-two feet on the foundation. The main front has a projection of seven feet, thirty-one feet in width, which rises five feet above the walls of the main building. On each side, at the front, are projections of eighteen inches.

The building covers about six thousand five hundred square feet; its extreme height is eighty feet above the grade line. The basement is eleven feet six inches high, first story twelve feet, and second story twenty-six feet in the clear. The building is entered by a flight of six steps of fine hammered Concord granite, twenty feet long, ten and one-half feet wide, which are partly covered by a porch.

The marble-tiled vestibule is entered by two sets of double-folding black walnut doors, opposite which are similar doors of ash with glass panels. On the right is the ticket-office; on the left, a door to the basement stairs. The stairway hall is twenty-two by twenty-eight feet. On either side are flights of stairs six feet wide. On the right is a lobby, doors from which enter the room of town clerk and treasurer (which is fourteen feet nine inches by sixteen feet), and also that of the selectmen (which is eighteen feet six inches by twenty-four feet). Connected with these rooms are a fire-proof vault, for town records, and two large closets.

On the left is the librarian's room, which is twenty feet nine inches by sixteen feet. In the centre and opposite the principal entrances is a wide, double-folding door to the corridor. On either side of this door are placed the beautiful memorial tablets, a gift of Elijah A. Morse. The corridor is eight by forty-four feet.

On the right or south side are doors to the selectmen's room, also to the school committee room, which is sixteen feet three inches by twenty-four feet, and a side corridor sixteen feet long leading to the side entrance. On the left or north side is the library, twenty-four by forty-four feet. At the east end is the small, or caucus hall, which is thirty feet six inches by forty-eight feet six inches, and will seat about two hundred persons. The side entrance is eight by sixteen feet, and is entered from steps twelve feet in length, and similar to those on the front of the building. Doors from the side entrance enter the school committee-room, corridor, small hall, and the private stairway hall which leads to the hall and stage above. From this stairway are doors to the basement stairs and town officers' toilet.

The landing at the front stairs is thirteen feet six inches by twenty-eight feet; opposite the stairs are two double-folding doors to the audience-hall and ladies' private room. On the left are stairs to the gallery and a door to the lobby, which is fourteen feet nine inches by sixteen feet. The audience-hall is fifty-eight by sixty-seven feet, and twenty-six feet high. At the east end is a stage eighteen feet six inches deep, with opening thirty-two feet wide. On either side are anterooms about fourteen feet square. The doors between the stage and anterooms are arranged to slide up, and give a stage nearly the width of the building. At the opposite end is a gallery nineteen by sixty feet.

The gallery is provided with seats for two hundred and twenty-four persons. The floor is furnished with one hundred and fourteen settees, each seating five persons. The ordinary seating capacity of the hall is nine hundred and forty-four persons, although one thousand and fifty people can be comfortably seated.

THE MEMORIAL TABLETS.—The left-hand tablet bears the names of those who were killed in battle, with the date and place where they were killed, viz.:

Walter S. Glover, at Gaines' Mill, June 27th, 1862.

John McGinley, at Bull Run, August 29th, 1862.

Edward H. R. Revere, George W. Kehr, at Antietam, September 17th, 1862.

James Donahoe, Andrew L. Hill, at Fredericksburg, Dec'r 11-13th, 1862.

Charles E. Bootman, Stephen H. Smith, at Port Hudson, June 14th, 1863.

Robert Blackburn, Jr., John Denningham, John O'Brien, in the Wilderness, May 5th-6th, 1864.

The tablets at the right have the names of those who died in the service from disease or wounds, viz.:

George W. Bailey, at Gaines' Mill.

William Spillane, at Harrison's Landing.

George C. Corbett, at Craney Island.

Charles F. Adams, at Frederick City.

Walter Davenport, at Fredericksburg.

John M. Pooler, at White Oak Church.

Charles O. Fuller, William B. Foster, John Geddis, Jerome B. Snow, Asahel White, at New Orleans.

William E. Brewster, John W. Ayer, Owen Shonsey, at Brashear City.

Thomas Curran, at Canton.

Charles C. Knaggs, Long B. Crowther, Joseph Jenkins, at Baton Rouge.

Charles D. Slattery, at City Point.

Over the door to the corridor is the inscription: "Erected to commemorate the patriotism of the soldiers of Canton, who fell in defence of the Union in the War of the Rebellion." A transom running the whole width of the group has the dates 1861-65 repeated over each tablet bearing the soldiers' names, and the central part has the motto, "It is sweet and honorable to die for one's country."

The materials used in the construction are, for the plinths at the bottom, dark Tennessee marble. For the body of the work, a cream-colored marble delicately mottled, from the Echaillon quarries at Grenoble, France, finished with a slight polish, except where it is carved. The shafts of the four columns supporting canopies over the side tablets are of red Lisbon marble highly polished. The tablets, bearing the names, are of light-veined Italian marble.

The carving consists of the arms of the Union, in a medallion on the canopy over the left tablet, flanked by branches of the oak and palm. The medallion over the other tablet bears the arms of the State between branches of the laurel and olive. The same foliage is also used on the capitals of the four columns. The bases of the columns are enriched with appropriate foliage, and the panels below on each side have three large rosettes. The initials of the names and some words of the general inscription are painted red and the other letters a dark chocolate. John Evans, of Boston, executed the work from designs furnished by Mr. Earle, the architect of the building.

The gift to the town of a strip of land some twelve feet in width from the Hon. Charles Endicott, also the exchange of land with James Ryan, caused the shape of the town lot to be very much improved. The appropriation for grading the lot, erecting and furnishing the building, amounted to thirty-one thousand dollars. The total cost, including dedicatory expenses, was thirty thousand nine hundred and sixty-one dollars and twelve cents, leaving an unexpended balance of thirty-eight dollars and eighty-eight cents.

The hall was dedicated on the evening of Oct. 30, 1879, amid a large concourse of people, among whom were his Excellency Governor Thomas Talbot; Hon. Henry B. Peirce, Secretary of State; Hon. Charles Adams, formerly treasurer; Hon. Seth Turner, of Randolph; Rufus C. Wood, sheriff of Norfolk County; the selectmen of Canton, viz.: William W. Brooks, William Horton, and William O. Chapman, Esqs.; Hon. Charles H. French, Edwin Wentworth, William Mansfield, Ezra S. Brewster, and Ellis Tucker, who have served as selectmen; Francis W. Deane, the venerable town treasurer; J. Mason Everett, chairman, Arthur C. Kollock, Jesse Fenno, John Everett, and Thomas Lonergan, of the school committee; Rev. Father John Flatley and Rev. William H. Savary; Ellis Ames, Esq., and other gentlemen of Canton and of the neighboring towns.

From its earliest history down to the year 1837 the town had no house of its own. For a long series of years its public meetings were held in the meeting-house belonging to the First Parish; afterwards in the Baptist meeting-house at Canton Centre. Upon the erection of a new house by that denomination at South Canton, the old house at the Centre was purchased by the town for the modest sum of six hundred and fifty dollars, and in that small building for half a century the business of the town has been transacted.

All important public events that relate to the local affairs of a town, of course, form a part of its civil history; so that when one of these events is brought vividly before the mind, other events appear also, one after another, as they are bound together by the natural laws of association.

Canton was incorporated as a town Feb. 23, 1797, and the act was approved by Samuel Adams, the great leader of the Revolution, as Governor of the commonwealth. At that date its population must have been about 1000; in 1800 it was 1110; in 1810, 1353; in 1820, 1268; in 1830, 1515; in 1840, 1995; in 1850, 2598; in 1860, 3242; in 1870, 3879; and in 1875, 4192; a gratifying increase in each of its decennial periods with a single exception. In 1795, the whole number of legal voters in the first precinct was 140; in 1875, the number had increased to 733. The valuation has increased even more rapidly than the population, amounting in 1884 to $3,242,254, by the assessors' valuation, which is exclusive of corporate stocks taxed by the State.

The town from its incorporation has been generally most fortunate in the ability, character, and fidelity of its officers.

At the first meeting of this town under the act of incorporation, Elijah Dunbar, a man who appears to have served the town in almost every capacity for many years, was chosen moderator; Elijah Crane, town clerk; Joseph Bemis, treasurer; and Elijah Crane, deacon; Benjamin Tucker and Col. Nathan Crane, selectmen and assessors.

The dedicatory address was delivered by Hon. Charles Endicott, and remarks were also made by William W. Brooks, Hon. S. B. Noyes, Governor Talbot, Elijah A. Morse, Hon. Henry B. Peirce, Secretary of State, Hon. Charles Adams, ex-treasurer of the commonwealth, Hon. Winslow Battles, of Randolph, Rev. Dr. Angier, of Holbrook, Sanford W. Billings, of Sharon, Rev. Edwin Thompson, of East Walpole, Horace E. Ware, of Milton, Rev. Father Flatley, Rev. William Savary, Rev. Nelson B. Jones, Jr., Rev. Mr. Davis, Ellis Ames, Esq., Thomas E. Grover, Esq., and Timothy Kaley, Esq., of Milford, N. H.

The Canton Institution for Savings was chartered March 4, 1835, with the following officers: Thomas French, president; Friend Crane and Jonathan Stone, vice-presidents; Trustees, Adam Kinsley, Elijah Spare, Joseph Downes, Samuel Davis, Simeon Presbrey, P. M. Crane, Thomas Dunbar, William McKendry, Jedediah Tucker; James Dunbar, secretary and treasurer; Jonathan Messinger, F. W. Lincoln, Leonard Everett, Elisha White, committee of investment. Thomas French, president upon organization; Thomas Dunbar, president, April 4, 1843; Frederic W. Lincoln, president, April 7, 1846; Charles H. French, April 7, 1852, present president. James Dunbar, secretary and treasurer upon organization; Francis W. Deane, secretary and treasurer, April 7, 1852; Nathaniel W. Dunbar, secretary and treasurer, March 26, 1883, present incumbent. The present trustees are Charles H. French, Charles Endicott, James S. Shepard, Ellis Ames, Virgil J. Messinger, George E. Downes, J. Mason Everett, Edward R. Eager, William O. Chapman, Frank G. Webster, Francis D. Dunbar, George H. Mansfield, Samuel H. Capen, Henry F. Baswell. Present committee of investment: Charles Endicott, James S. Shepard, George E. Downes, William O. Chapman, Nathaniel W. Dunbar, treasurer. The first deposit was made May 2, 1835. Amount of deposits, present time, $449,964.40.

The Neponset Bank was chartered March 31, 1836, with the following directors: F. W. Lincoln, Leonard Hodges, Leonard Everett, George H. Mann, George Downes, Jonathan Messinger, Simeon Presbrey, Jonathan Robinson, Lyman Kinsley, Zachariah Tucker, Thomas Tolman; President, Frederic W. Lincoln; Cashier, James Dunbar. Oct. 6, 1845, James Dunbar, president; Francis W. Deane, cashier.

Oct. 5, 1851, Charles H. French, president; Francis W. Deane, cashier, until the organization under the National Banking Law.

The Neponset National Bank was organized March 1, 1865, with Charles H. French, president, who has continued to the present time. Francis W. Deane was the first cashier. May 24, 1880, Nathaniel W. Dunbar was chosen cashier, and is the present incumbent. The present directors are Charles H. French, Horace A. Lothrop, George E. Downes, Charles Endicott, James S. Shepard, William O. Chapman, William L. Hodges. Capital, $250,000, Surplus and undivided profits, $83,350.78.

Military Record.—Canton furnished three hundred and fifty men for the war, which was a surplus of twenty-three over and above all demands. Nine were commissioned officers. The whole amount of money appropriated and expended by the town for war purposes, exclusive of State aid, was thirty thousand four hundred and fifteen dollars and seventy-one cents. In addition to this, fifteen thousand dollars were raised by private subscription for the payment of bounties.

The amount of money raised and expended during the war for State aid to soldiers' families, and repaid by the commonwealth, was as follows: in 1861, $564.59; in 1862, $2585.00; in 1863, $4671.16; in 1864, $3000.00; in 1865, $2200.00; total amount, $13,020.75.

The amount of money and clothing furnished by the ladies of the town for the Christian and Sanitary Commissions was quite large.

The population in 1860, 3242; in 1865, 3318. The valuation in 1860 was $2,015,398; in 1865, $2,211,313.

The selectmen in 1861 and 1862 were James T. Sumner, Ellis Tucker, and John Hall; in 1863, William Horton, Ellis Tucker, and Ezra S. Brewster; 1864 and 1865, William Horton, Charles Endicott, and Ezra S. Brewster.

The town clerk during the years 1861, 1862, 1863, and 1864 was Andrew Lopez; in 1865, Charles Endicott. The town treasurer during all these years was Francis W. Deane.

1861. The first meeting to consider matters relating to the war was held April 29th, at which it was voted to provide "all suitable and necessary aid to families of volunteers living in the town," and the sum of five thousand dollars was appropriated for that purpose, "to be expended by a committee joined with selectmen."

1862. A town-meeting was held July 21st to see what measures the town would adopt to raise forty men required to fill its quota. It was voted to pay a bounty of one hundred dollars "to each volunteer duly mustered." August 18th, voted, "that the town assume and pay an additional bounty of one hundred dollars to such volunteers as have enlisted since August 5th, to fill the quota of forty men, as voted at a public meeting of citizens and been subscribed and paid by the citizens upon the faith that the town would reimburse the same." August 27th, voted, "to pay a bounty of one hundred and fifty dollars to each volunteer enlisting to fill the quota of the town for men in the nine months' service," and a committee of citizens was chosen "to co-operate with the town treasurer in devising ways and means to obtain the necessary amount of money."

1863. No meeting appears to have been held during the year in relation to the war. Recruiting, however, went on as usual, and the State aid continued to be paid to the families of the volunteers.

1864. April 5th, voted, "to pay a bounty of one hundred and twenty-five dollars to each volunteer enlisting to the credit of the town, under the recent call of the President for more men." July 5th, voted, "to pay the same amount of bounty to each volunteer under any call of the President, prior to March 1, 1863."

Roll of Honor.—The following is a list of names of deceased soldiers enlisted from Canton:

Charles F. Adams, 20th Regt.; buried in Canton; died at Frederick City.
 John W. Ayer, Co. A, 4th Regt.; buried in Brashear City; died June 5, 1863.
 Robert Blackburn, Jr., 20th Regt.; killed in Wilderness 1864.
 William E. Brewster, Co. A, 4th Regt.; buried in Canton; died June 3, 1863.
 Ch. E. Bootman, Co. A, 4th Regt.; buried at Port Hudson; killed June 14, 1863.
 Thomas Curran, 42d Regt.; buried in Canton; died Aug. 19, 1863.
 L. B. Crowther, Co. A, 4th Regt.; buried at Baton Rouge; died Aug. 28, 1862.
 George Cobbett, Co. G, 29th Regt.; buried in Stoughton 1862.
 Walter Davenport, unknown.
 James Donahue, 20th Regt.; killed in battle.
 William Foster, Co. A, 4th Regt.; buried at Brashear City; died April 21, 1863.
 Charles O. Fuller, Co. A, 4th Regt.; buried at Foxborough; died at New Orleans Jan. 28, 1863.
 Andrew L. Hill, Co. F, 18th Regt.; died in service February, 1863.
 John Geddis, Co. A, 4th Regt.; died in service April 12, 1863.
 Walter S. Glover, Co. K, 22d Regt.; died in service July 1, 1862.
 Joseph Jenkins, Co. A, 4th Regt.; died at Baton Rouge Aug. 29, 1863.
 Charles C. Knaggs, Co. A, 4th Regt.; buried at Canton; died at Brashear City Aug. 22, 1863.
 George W. Kehr, Co. K, 20th Regt.; killed at battle of Antietam.

Henry U. Morse, Co. A, 4th Regt.; died at Canton and buried here.

John McGinley, Co. G, 16th Regt.; killed at second battle Bull Run.

Timothy O'Flaherty, Co. A, 4th Regt.; died at Canton, out of service.

John O'Brien, Co. F, 58th Regt.; killed at Wilderness May 5, 1864.

Anthony Pollard, 4th Cav.; died in service Sept. 12, 1864; New York man.

Franklin L. Ramsell, Co. G, 29th Regt.; died in hospital, Baltimore, Md.

Edw. H. R. Revere, buried at Mt. Auburn.

David F. Sherman, Co. A, 4th Regt.; died out of service.

Owen Shaughnessy, Co. A, 4th Regt.; buried in Canton; died June 6, 1863.

Jerome B. Snow, Co. A, 4th Regt.; buried at New Orleans; died July 10, 1863.

Charles D. Slaterry, 14th Battery; died Jan. 13, 1865.

Stephen H. Smith, Co. A, 4th Regt.; killed at Port Hudson June 14, 1863.

William Spillane, 15th N. Y. Regt.; died at Harrison's Landing July 14, 1862.

William D. Tennant, 4th Cav.; died in service; New York man.

Asahel White, Co. A, 4th Regt.; died at New Orleans July 26, 1863.

F. B. Howard, Co. A, 4th Regt.; died 1868; buried here.

John M. Pooler, Thomas M. Mullins, and Edward Fox, buried here.

Revere Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.—That name reaches back to the pre-revolutionary years of the republic, and for three generations has been associated with patriotism and military glory. Revere Encampment, Post 94, Grand Army of the Republic, was organized in 1869. Much interest was at once manifested in the work; it grew from year to year, and at the present time is in a very prosperous condition. The Commander in 1883 was Alexander R. Holmes, M.D.

The present officers are as follows: C., Jonathan Linfield; S. V. C., John T. Pitman; J. V. C., George B. Hunt; Adj., Horace D. Seavey; Q. M., L. E. Wentworth; Surg., A. R. Holmes; Chap., A. A. Harrington; O. D., R. L. Weston; O. G., James H. Crane; S. M., J. F. Bisbee; Q. M. O., F. Z. Leonard. The following are the present members of the Encampment:

Bailey, Robert, 13th Pa. Cav.	Capen, H. S., 33d Mass. Inf.
Barlow, L. E., 26th Me. Inf.	Carr, Patrick, 10th Mass. Inf.
Bisbee, Jos. F., 4th Mass. Inf.	Carroll, D. W., 4th Mass. Inf.
Billings, John D., 10th Mass. Battery.	Christopher, J. K., 20th Me. Battery.
Bolles, Benj. S., 41st Ill. Inf.	Cram, Jas. H., 29th Mass. Inf.
Bowditch, Asa W., 44th Mass. Infantry.	Davenport, S., 14th Mass. Batt.
Bryant, C. F., 33d Mass. Inf.	Davis, Jas. N., 33d Mass. Inf.
Buckley, Timothy, 20th Mass. Infantry.	Didot, Armand F., Navy.
Burleigh, E. P., 5th N. H. Inf.	Emery, Wm., 1st Mass. Light Artillery.
Byam, R. S., 16th Mass. Inf.	Eddy, S. D., 3d Mass. Inf.
	Estey, E. H., 29th Mass. Inf.

Farrell, Wm., 15th Mass. Inf.	McPherson, David, drummer
Flood, Owen, 4th Mass. Inf.	24th Mass. Infantry.
Freeman, H. A., 4th Mass. Inf.	Morse, Elijah A., corp. 4th
Godfrey, J. W., 33d Mass. Inf.	Mass. Infantry.
Hall, J., capt. 4th Mass. Inf.	Morse, S. H., 4th Mass. Inf.
Harwood, Elbridge G., 42d	Morse, Albert, 33d Mass. Inf.
Mass. Infantry.	Parks, John, 4th Mass. Inf.
Harwood, Harrison E., 42d	Partridge, C., 24th Mass. Inf.
Mass. Infantry.	Peach, Henry, 23d Mass. Inf.
Harrington, Andrew A., 11th	Perry, J. W., 33d Mass. Inf.
Mass. Infantry.	Pettee, Albert, 19th Mass. Inf.
Hewins, B. L., 2d Mass. Inf.	Pitman, J. T., 1st Mass. Cav.
Hodson, H., 30th N. Y. Inf.	Seavey, H. D., 4th Mass. Inf.
Holmes, Alex. R., surgeon 3d	Seavey, F. E., 9th Me. Inf.
Mass. Infantry and Navy.	Shepard, H. S., 31st Mass. Inf.
Holbrook, F. L., 33d Mass. Inf.	Silloway, Jacob, Jr., 1st lieut.
Hixon, Edward R., sergt. Co.	6th N. Y. Infantry.
B, 33d Mass. Infantry.	Smith, S. L., 5th Mass. Inf.
Hunt, Geo. B., 35th Mass. Inf.	Tolman, Otis S., 4th Mass. Inf.
Kinsley, Adam, 1st lieut. 10th	Webster, F. G., 44th Mass. Inf.
Mo. Infantry.	Wentworth, Larra E., 4th
Lawrence, John, 1st N. J. Cav.	Mass. Infantry.
Leonard, F. Z., 4th Mass. Inf.	Weston, Richmond L., gun-
Linfield, Jona., 3d Mass. Inf.	boat "Pequot."
Lewis, George, 12th Mass. Inf.	White, N. S., 24th Mass. Inf.
Lynch, John, 20th Mass. Inf.	Witt, Hardin, 56th Mass. Inf.
McCorkee, William, 57th Mass.	Wyeth, J. J., 44th Mass. Inf.
Infantry.

The following are names of soldiers whose graves were decorated May 30, 1883:

C. F. Adams, 20th Mass. Inf.	Maj. C. D. Jordan, U. S. Army.
F. O. Bullock, 13th Wis. Inf.	Geo. W. Kehr, 20th Mass. Inf.
G. W. Bailey, 18th Mass. Inf.	C. C. Knaggs, 4th Mass. Inf.
C. E. Bootman, ¹ 4th Mass. Inf.	John McCready, U. S. Navy.
W. E. Brewster, 4th Mass. Inf.	J. McGinley, ¹ 16th Mass. Inf.
R. Blackburn, Jr., 20th Mass.	W. McKendry, 22d Mass. Inf.
Infantry.	William McKendry, U. S. Rev.
J. A. Bullard, ¹ 2d Eng., U. S.	Marine.
Navy.	Geo. W. McGinty, 29th Maine
Jeremiah C. Breslyn, gunboat	Vet. Vols.
"Osceola."	Lieut. Henry U. Morse, 4th
John O'Brien, 58th Mass. Inf.	Mass. Inf.
Martin Cary, 7th Me. Inf.	T. M. Mullen, 29th Mass. Inf.
Stephen Clary, 3d R. I. H. Art.	S. W. Merve, 4th Mass. Inf.
D. W. Croude, 5th Mass. Cav.	J. M. Pooler, ¹ 1st Mass. Batt.
Thos. Curran, 42d Mass. Inf.	J. H. Proctor, 1st Mass. Band
W. Davenport, ¹ 35th Mass. Inf.	Leader.
T. O'Flaherty, 4th Mass. Inf.	J. Reardon, 1st Mass. H. Art.
Patrick Flood, 23d Mass. Inf.	Edward Robbins, U. S. Navy.
Edward Fox, 19th Mass. Inf.	Owen Shaughnessy, 4th Mass.
John Geddis, ¹ 4th Mass. Inf.	Infantry.
W. S. Glover, ¹ 22d Mass. Inf.	D. F. Sherman, 4th Mass. Inf.
Wm. Heath, 22d Mass. Inf.	S. H. Smith, ¹ 4th Mass. Inf.
A. L. Hill, ¹ 18th Mass. Inf.	Zebah Thayer, 18th Mass. and
F. B. Howard, 4th Mass. Inf.	2d H. Art.
Dennis Hanlon, U. S. Navy.	J. K. Webster, 5th Mass. Inf.
John Howe, 4th Mass. and 11th	W. G. White, 48th Mass. Inf.
U. S. Infantry.	Asahel White, U. S. Navy.
E. Horton, Jr., ¹ 4th Mass. Inf.

Blue Hill Lodge, F. and A. M., is located here. Samuel H. Capen is present Master.

¹ Buried elsewhere.

REPRESENTATIVES FROM 1776 TO 1884.

Benjamin Gill, 1776.	Thomas Tolman, 1828, '36.
Thomas Crane, 1776, '77, '78, '81.	Elijah Spare, 1830.
Elijah Dunbar, 1780, '82, '87, '93.	James Endicott, 1832, '33.
Christopher Wadsworth, 1780.	James Blackman, 1834, '35.
John Kenney, 1783.	Michael Shaller, 1834, '35.
Capt. James Endicott, 1784, '85, '86, '90.	Nathaniel French, 1837.
Capt. Frederick Pope, 1787, '88, '89, '91, '92, '96.	Abel Wentworth, 1836, '37, '38.
Elijah Crane, 1795, '97.	Isaac Horton, 1838, '39.
Joseph Bonnis, 1800, '01, '02, '03, '04, '05, '06, '07, '11, '12, '13.	John Gay, 1840, '41, '42.
Benjamin Tucker, 1808, '09, '10.	John Endicott, 1843, '44.
Lemuel Whiting, 1811, '12, '13.	Lyman Kinsley, 1849.
Abel Wentworth, Sr., 1812.	Charles Endicott, 1851, '57, '58.
Friend Crane, 1814.	Charles H. French, 1853, '54.
John Bailey, 1815, '16, '17.	George Capen, 1855.
Samuel Capen, 1819, '20, '29.	Samuel Davenport, 1856.
Jonathan Leonard, 1823.	John S. Eldridge, 1859, '60.
Thomas French, 1824, '26, '27.	Oliver S. Chapman, 1863, '64.
	Joseph Leavitt, 1868.
	Frank M. Ames, 1869.
	James S. Shepard, 1871, '72.
	Elijah A. Morse, 1876.
	Thomas Lonergan, 1877.
	Edward R. Eager, 1881.
	Frank M. Ames, 1882.

Conclusion.—The religious history, the parochial history, the civil history, the military history, the business history, and the manufacturing history of the town of Canton have thus far been graphically, but, nevertheless, imperfectly sketched. From the time when the territory between Blue Hill, on the northeast, and Moose Hill, on the southwest, was a wilderness to the time when the forests leveled, the water-courses dammed and changed, the hills tunneled and the rivers crossed by railroads, the ponds "preserved," the one church of rude architecture, which stood on Packeen Plain "solitary and alone," or sparsely surrounded near and far by the wigwams of the Indians, whom the great apostle, John Eliot, gathered from time to time within its narrow walls, or on the grassy mounds, for religious instruction, with its surroundings, have all passed away, and its place occupied by stately edifices of wood and brick and of stone, for religious worship, prayer, and praise, for education of youth, for civil government and legislation, and the barren fields are changed into fertile farms, and the silence of the wild and unpeopled valleys is broken by the sound of whirring wheels and ponderous hammers and rattling machinery, the hum of busy industrial life and labor, and all the sights and sounds of advanced civilization, the life of the swarming descendants of those who two centuries and a quarter since begun the settlement of the present township of Canton.

In attempting any analysis of Canton folk it is necessary first of all to note three things about them, to wit: their origin, their history, and their locality.

They derive themselves, at least the old families of the town, mainly from English stock, and had, like so many of their neighbors, the energy, industry, and intelligence which belong to that blood. They were originally, too, of the Puritan religion, and heirs of the social life and manners, mixed good and evil, with the good predominant, as most of us are used to think, and this fourfold formative force of stock and faith shows unmistakably to this present time.

Other more modern influences have, of course, modified these influences, but the roots remain. The first settlers were mainly farmers, whose habits were determined by their occupation, and till a comparatively recent date Canton has been primarily an agricultural town; and as soil in such cases determines property, even to the size of houses, since only rich land gives the farmer crops adequate to generous houses, and as property is the material basis of advance in civilization, it may not be amiss to note that Canton soil, albeit in spots rugged and thin, has always been as good as that of its neighbors, and in some cases surpassing it, the historical Canton farmer has always had rather better than an average chance to improve his condition.

Neither should it be forgotten that this primitive moral character has been modified and, to a degree, shaped by the factory-life which has for a long time existed here. Leaving out of the question all inquiry as to the economic value of a factory population in furnishing a home-market to the farmer, and it cannot be denied that the mechanic's keenness and rapidity of mental measurement stimulates the general town social life wherein he is found, Canton has been fortunate in the character and ability of its leading mechanics and manufacturers, so that it is safe to say that its mechanical industries have gone to the formation of certain mental activity which is favorable to progress and thrift, as the present economic condition of its citizens shows.

When we add to these considerations the fact that Canton folk have always lived in easy communication with a large city, in fact, more or less a suburb of Boston, and that some of the most respectable of city society have made their summer homes here, it is evident that one cannot speak of Canton merely as a country town, or as one would speak of a rural population among the hills of New Hampshire or Maine. Canton folk have all the qualities of a people who, living in the country, have the city for a near neighbor, and the rural character belonging always to a people so located everywhere shows itself. Canton folk, like some of their neighbors, have put on cosmopolitan characteristics and manners. Underneath is the old stock and Puritan qualities, but the coloring of their social life is of this century, and the ideas which prevail in the great world.

William Cullen Bryant

They have the ancestral energy, thrift, and self-reliance, also a bias to daily economy, until it blossoms out into some startling display of gathered money lavishly spent on house or factory; but the main fact about the Canton man of to-day is that he is an American citizen, full of American ideas, and, like so many of his fellow-citizens, intent on making his mark and stamping his will upon the social and economic life about him. In a word, he is no other man than an American, and a pretty good representative of a people who seldom rest from attempting something which pleases himself and instructs the world of which he forms an energetic and usually an useful part.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

NAHUM CAPEN.

Nahum Capen was born in Canton, Norfolk Co., Mass., April 1, 1804. His family were among the earliest settlers in Dorchester. Bernard Capen and his wife Jane were supposed to be the ancestors of all of the name of Capen in New England, if not in America. Bernard died in 1638. The stone which marked his grave, and which is said to be the oldest in America, is deposited in the Dorchester Historical and Antiquarian Society. Robert Capen, "gentleman," as he is styled in the commission as an officer of the militia in Massachusetts, which he received from George III. in 1763, and again in 1768, was the grandfather of our subject. His father, Andrew Capen, a man of independent thought and a true gentleman, was born in Stoughton, Norfolk Co., Nov. 22, 1757, and died June 1, 1846. His mother was Hannah Richards, of Sharon, Mass., a lady of character and energy, who died Nov. 23, 1843, aged seventy-three years.

At an early age Mr. Capen showed a marked tendency towards literary pursuits. At school he was always at the head of his class, and at nineteen he rewrote "Plutarch's Lives" as an exercise. He intended, in early youth, to become a physician, and began the study of the profession; but delicate health prevented his completing this plan. At twenty-one he became a publisher and bookseller, and established a leading house in Boston, under the firm-name of Marsh, Capen & Lyon, with a branch in Concord, N. H. He also became early interested in the various systems of theology and the history of religious sects. In 1828 he began to investigate the nature and condition of man, devoting himself to the study of biography and the investigation of the great problems of government. He favored Andrew Jackson as a candidate for the Presidency, and was secretary of the Democratic party of Boston. He also became interested in metaphysics, and, devoting himself to the subject with great industry, he soon mastered all the ancient as well as modern systems.

In 1827 and subsequently he published several works anonymously. Among these was "The Mental Guide," which was complimented and approved by the celebrated William Wirt, Attorney-General of the United States, and by Rev. Henry Ware, D.D., of Harvard College, and others, to whom its authorship was never made known. He had an aversion to notoriety.¹ In 1827 he was made the honored recipient from the Masonic institutions of Boston of all the degrees both of the lodge, the chapter, and the encampment, the Grand Master and the principal officers of the Grand Lodge and other institutions presiding on the occasion. It was an extraordinary event, and one singularly calculated to illustrate Mr. Capen's sense of honor and great firmness of purpose.²

In 1830, Mr. Capen was united in marriage with Eliza Ann Moore, a lady of great worth and accomplishments.³

In 1832 he first became acquainted with Spurzheim, with whom he contracted the closest intimacy, though at that time he was but twenty-eight years of age, while Spurzheim was fifty-six. When Spurzheim died in Boston, after a brilliant career in that city, Mr. Capen had in his hands several thousand dollars belonging to him, besides his papers and personal effects of value. He immediately requested the appointment of a committee to take charge of the property, which was done. A biography of Spurzheim was prepared by Mr. Capen, and published as a part of Spurzheim's "Phrenology in Connection with the Study of Physiognomy," royal 8vo. He also wrote

¹ It was dedicated to Levi Hodge, LL.D., Professor of Logic and Metaphysics, Harvard University.

² See history of Columbian Lodge, by Grand Master Heard. Mr. Capen delivered a Masonic oration in Dedham, June 24, 1829, a public address before the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, in 1837. He was corresponding secretary of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts from 1833 to 1840. He wrote much during the anti-Masonic controversy, but anonymously.

³ This year he published anonymously a pamphlet entitled "An Inquiry into the Nature and Design of Music."

a life of Spurzheim's friend and coadjutor, Dr. Gall, and edited his works translated from the French, in six volumes. He aided in revising Spurzheim's works. He was his chosen critic. He also edited Dr. Combe's works on Insanity, and the "Annals of Phrenology," in two volumes.¹ In 1835, Mr. Capen visited Europe for the purpose of making contracts with leading authors for advanced copies of their works for republication. He succeeded with the most eminent, but the equitable rights of his firm were not respected by American publishers. On his return he prepared an extended essay on the subject of education, and designed plans for a model school, to be called the "New England Academy," to be succeeded by a university; his object being to elevate the standard of education. His plans and suggestions received the approbation of some of the most distinguished men and educators in this country, among whom were John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, Edward Everett, Horace Mann, and George Combe, of Edinburgh. "If executed according to the plan," Mr. Combe said, "it would be the most perfect school in the world." It was never carried out because Mr. Capen could not spare the time to collect the necessary funds. Having furnished the plan, he thought the moneyed men of the community should procure the means of executing it. On his return from Europe, Mr. Capen brought documents from England on the subject of life insurance, and was the first to propose a mutual company in Boston, but the proposition was looked upon as impracticable by leading men, and nothing was done. The interest he manifested in education led the Board of Education of Massachusetts to select the firm of which he was a member to publish the school library. This project of the board required a great outlay of capital, and resulted in great pecuniary loss to the publishers and to Mr. Capen personally.

Mr. Capen, however, did not lose interest in the great cause. From 1838 to 1846 no citizen of Massachusetts spent more time and labor without compensation in aiding the movements which resulted in the establishment of the Board of Education and the system of normal schools, which have given to that State the position of pioneer in the noble cause.

¹ In a letter of George Combe to a gentleman in the United States, dated Edinburgh, Nov. 26, 1833, he says of Mr. Capen, "He is securing for himself an honorable place in the annals of his country's philosophy by his own exertions. I am convinced that he is at this moment doing more substantial and permanent good to America than any individual engaged out of the pale of phrenology, however brilliant his reputation may be."

In 1831, Mr. Capen was consulted by a committee of Congress in respect to a revision of the copyright law, and in 1837, in letters to Daniel Webster and Henry Clay, he urged the passage of an international copyright law. He acted up to his convictions consistently, being the first publisher in the United States who proposed to pay a premium to foreign living authors, and his firm was the first to perform that duty. The memorial he addressed to Congress on the subject, in 1844, was eloquent and exhaustive. Horace Mann said of it, that it contained all that was worth knowing on the subject. It was approved by Dickens, who, in a letter to Mr. Capen, predicted that both would be in their graves before government acted upon the subject.

In 1846 he projected a United States statistical journal, to be published every two months. This project was earnestly favored by President Polk, the members of his cabinet, most of the United States senators, and other distinguished men of the nation; but it was laid aside to enable him to devote himself exclusively to the great work of his life, "The History of Democracy."

He edited the Massachusetts State Record from 1847 to 1852, inclusive, a work which was highly appreciated, and was then published under the sanction of the State Legislature. In 1850, Mr. Capen made up the "Record of Inventive Genius" of the country, from the statistics of the Patent Office from 1790 to 1849. This was printed by the government and extensively circulated. It was a remark of Rev. Dr. E. M. P. Wells, that Mr. Capen "had the capacity to make statistics speak."

In 1848 he wrote and published the "Republic of the United States," which he dedicated to the Hon. James Buchanan, of Pennsylvania. In 1850 he prepared the papers of Judge Levi Woodbury for publication in three volumes. Mr. Woodbury refused to have his papers placed in the hands of any other person, and gave him full authority to alter or omit any inaccurate expression or doubtful opinion.

Mr. Capen has been through his whole life a most consistent follower, both in word and deed, of the principles of Democracy. In regard to slavery, he agreed with the expressed views of Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. He was in favor of its abolition whenever it could be accomplished without violating the Constitution or endangering the Union. At an early period (1842) he advised Mr. Calhoun and other prominent men in his section to inaugurate and lead an anti-slavery party at the South, that the country might be spared the calamities of war. In 1861 he wrote an extended letter to Peter Cooper, in reply to one asking opinions respecting the Union. This was published in pamphlet form, and was extensively circulated. It was highly complimented by leading men and journals of all parties as one of the ablest produced on the subject. The learned Bishop Stevens, of Pennsylvania, said concerning it, "Rarely, if ever, have I read a paper which exhibits such profound analysis, such extensive learning, such true philosophy, such comprehensive views." He declared that the destruction of the American Union was "a moral impossibility."

In 1849, at the request of a member of the National Committee, he wrote a pamphlet entitled "One Hundred Reasons" in favor of electing Gen. Lewis Cass to the Presidency,—a remarkably spirited document which was circulated by hundreds of thousands. In 1849, as the result of a letter which led to the establishment of the Census Board, he was tendered the office of the superintendent of the census, which he declined.

During his whole mature life Mr. Capen has been a frequent contributor to the public press of the country on all subjects, scientific, literary, and political. Among the many and varied subjects to which he has devoted years of study and reflection, and in which he is an acknowledged authority, may be mentioned the subject of the importance of the usury laws. As early as 1849 he wrote a series of articles on the subject of the currency and the usury laws, demonstrating the necessity of such laws, and setting forth clearly and conclusively the evils that are sure to befall the community which neglects to protect itself by their rigid enforcement. By the influence of letters and documents from him, the State of Virginia was enabled to preserve her usury laws unaltered, and Governor Wise declared that for this Virginia owed Mr. Capen a greater debt than to any other living man. In 1855 the leading members of the Legislature of Massachusetts addressed him a letter of thanks for the information he had communicated on the subject. Among his active and increasing labors Mr. Capen has ever been a true, consistent, and unwavering Democrat. His lucid and well-trained mind has enabled him to comprehend clearly the great principles of the Democratic faith, which he has adhered to with constant fidelity, and defended by speech and pen on all proper occasions. In 1857 he was made by Mr. Buchanan postmaster of the city of Boston. He did not seek the office, nor did he wish to accept it, as it interfered with his life-work, "The History of Democracy," but he did so at the urgent advice of his friends. The appointment was unanimously approved by the Senate and by the press of all parties.

His improvements in the postal service were varied and extensive. There is scarcely a household in the large towns and cities in the land who are not daily gladdened by the arrival of the postman free of charge at their door, or does not find a daily convenience in the letter-boxes at the corners of the streets, and yet few of them know that it is to Mr. Capen that they owe these blessings. It was through his exertions that the system was first introduced into America. It was necessary both for the convenience of the public and the health of the officials to change the location of the office. The government not being ready or willing at that time to erect a new post-office in Boston, the Postmaster-General proposed that if Mr. Capen or his friends would erect a building the Department would rent it. With this understanding a new building was erected with accommodations ample for twenty years. When it was completed, Mr. Capen advised the government to pay the cost of the building and take it; and if his advice had been followed, a large sum would have been saved to the public treasury. The removal was violently opposed by the real-estate owners and money institutions near the old site. Memorials for and against the change were posted for signatures, from which it appeared that four hundred and eighty-seven firms and names of firms favored the old location, and nearly eight thousand, headed by Governor Everett and Rufus Choate, the new. At the expiration of Mr. Capen's term of office it was carried back to State Street, but Mr. Capen's foresight and judgment were speedily vindicated, by the fact that within eighteen months they endeavored to get back the building which he had erected. Of his management of the post-office there was but one opinion. Rufus Choate pronounced it "beautiful." The Department at Washington attached great weight to his opinions. The oldest official declared that he made more improvements in four years than had been made in the present century.¹

In 1850, Mr. Capen began what may be considered the most important work of his life, "The History of Democracy, or the Political Progress Historically Illustrated from the Earliest to the Latest Period." This work was undertaken at the request of some of the most distinguished Democrats of the day. The first volume was published in 1875, and he has nearly ready for the press the second, third, and fourth volumes, which will be ready for the electrotyper in 1884.

¹ In 1874 "The Washington and Lee University," of Virginia, conferred upon Mr. Capen the degree of Doctor of Laws.

In a biographical sketch of Mr. Capen by Edmund Burke, published in New York, 1858, he says, "A full and complete biography of a man like Mr. Capen would fill a book, and must be reserved for another pen, and on an occasion more appropriate than this."

HON. CHARLES H. FRENCH.

The family of French—those bearing that name in Canton—are descended from John French, who resided originally in Dorchester, and was admitted a freeman in 1639. He subsequently removed to Braintree with his wife Grace, where he was a resident in 1655, and where many of his children were born. From him are descended most of the Norfolk County families who bear the name of French.

Thomas, one of his descendants, was born in Milton, Oct. 2, 1742, and died in Canton, April 22, 1819. He married Salome, daughter of Nathaniel and Abigail (Pitcher) Babcock. She was born Nov. 26, 1749, and died March 3, 1802. Mr. French came to Canton before the breaking out of the Revolutionary war. After the surrender of Burgoyne, he was one of the soldiers who guarded the captured army at Cambridge in 1778. He cultivated a farm at the extreme northerly part of the town, which now forms a part of the celebrated Blue Hill farm of Col. C. W. Walcott. The site of the cellar on which his house stood can still be discerned. In this retired place, far from meeting or school-house or the marts of trade, he brought up a family of nine sons and two daughters, some of whom, in spite of the meagre advantages which they were possessed of in childhood, in after-years were to bear honorable testimony to the diligence with which they had employed even the slight resources at their command.

Ansel, the youngest, graduated at Brown University in the class of 1814 with the highest honors. Thomas was during his long life not only influential in school, parish, church, and municipal affairs in his own town, but was prominent in the politics of the county and State. He was chosen representative, senator, and was a member of the Council during the administration of Governor George N. Briggs. Nathaniel, though strongly opposed to his brother in political matters, was so decided in his opinions, so excellent in judgment, so much interested in the public affairs, that he was one of its most honored citizens and represented this town in the Legislature.

Alexander, another brother, who died May 12, 1826, at the age of forty, married Dec. 5, 1813, Hannah, daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Withington) Howe. She died July 25, 1816. Mr. French occupied the house on Green Lodge Street lately owned by Capt. William Shaller, and here, on the twenty-first of September, 1814, his son, Charles Howe French, was born.

The early life of Mr. French did not differ from the ordinary life of a farmer's boy in those days. He worked upon the farm in the summer, and in the winter attended the Blue Hill School. The loss of his mother and father at a tender age deprived him of that counsel, advice, and love which he so much needed at this critical period of his life. The happiest hours of these days were passed in the home-stand of General Nathan Crane, who had married his grandmother, who then resided near his home. He was for a year or two placed with a gardener and farmer at Watertown, and daily drove a load of vegetables to Boston market. Soon after he was placed with his uncle, Calvin Howe, at that time preceptor of the Milton Academy, where he hoped to remain and obtain a good education. But this hope was dissipated by the death of his uncle, who died after young French had been with him about a year.

At the age of sixteen years he was apprenticed, as was the custom in those days, to Mr. Jabez Comey, a millwright, at Dedham. With him he gained a thorough mastery of the science and practice of mechanics, a knowledge which afterwards was the chief source of his success in business life. After fulfilling his indentures, Mr. French was asked to assist Mr. William S. Otis in the building of one of the marvels of that day, a machine afterwards known as "The Otis Patent Steam Excavator." Mr. French accordingly came to Canton, and in a building which stood near what is now known as the Upper Silk Factory, the massive machine was begun and completed. As Mr. French thoroughly understood its mechanism, he was the man selected to superintend its transfer and to put it in working order. He accordingly went with it to Worcester, and entered the employ of Carmichael, Fairbanks & Otis, who had a contract to build a portion of the road now known as the Boston and Albany. Mr. Otis, at the early age of twenty-six years, while engaged upon this work, died Nov. 13, 1839. Mr. French's knowledge and experience rendered him the only man competent to fill the place left vacant by the deceased inventor. He was at once invited to join the firm, and the style was changed to Carmichael, Fairbanks, French & Dillon. Mr. Dillon in after-years became president of the Union Pacific Railroad. Mr. Fairbanks went to Russia with the celebrated engineer, Whistler, and assisted in building railroads for the emperor. Mr.

Charles W. French

Oliver S. Chapman, many years an honored resident of Canton, and well known to all railroad men, was also engaged on this work at this time.

This work having been completed, a copartnership was formed between Mr. Carmichael and Mr. French. The first-named gentleman had been the head of the former firm, and had large experience as a contractor. They received overtures from the Canadian government to undertake the widening of the Welland Canal. At the end of a year Mr. Carmichael took a contract at Brooklyn, N. Y., and the whole responsibility of the canal contract devolved upon Mr. French. In this arduous undertaking he was engaged five years, but so well had he performed his duty, and so honest had he been in his dealings with the engineers having in charge the work, that the Canadian authorities invited him to visit Montreal, and he was induced to spend another five years of his life in the same enterprise. At the end of this time his reputation as a skillful, accurate, and honest engineer, with a practical business knowledge, was fully established, and he returned to his native town.

His townspeople would not, however, allow him to remain idle. They offered him the presidency of the Neponset Bank, which office he accepted, and the duties of which he has performed from 1851 to the present time, with honor to himself, with the approval and hearty commendation of the stockholders and the townspeople. Throughout his management, and owing mainly to the confidence reposed in his judgment, the stock of the bank has continually increased in value, and no investment has been more eagerly sought for than the stock of this corporation.

In 1852 he was chosen president of the Savings-Bank, and has continued in that office until the time of this writing.

In politics Mr. French was a Whig as long as that party had an existence. He was a member of the General Court in 1853, and appointed on the Committee on Railroads, the same year a member of the Constitutional Convention, and in 1854 he was again elected to the Legislature, and was placed upon the Committee on Banks and Banking. On both occasions he was supported by his political opponents, showing that the man was of far more importance than the party. It is needless to write that Mr. French appreciated this compliment, and it must have been a proud and happy moment for him when the result of these elections was announced, and he found that his friends had broken their allegiance to party to vote for one whom they loved and honored.

In 1873 and 1874 he was elected to the Senate, where he was placed upon the Committee on Banks and Banking, also on Street Railroads.

Mr. French has had some experience in the militia: he was chosen colonel of the Fourth Massachusetts Regiment, and continued as its commander about five years.

At the breaking out of the war Mr. French was active in every good work to assist in suppressing the Rebellion; his heart and purse were always ready at the call of his country. He was one of the famous committee of "One Hundred" who were summoned by Governor Andrew to take measures to insure supplies to the Massachusetts troops who went to the front at the breaking out of the Rebellion.

Since residing in Canton Mr. French has been connected with the ancient parish; he has been its main support, its chief pillar. For many years he has been its treasurer, and whether the coffers were full or empty the parson always received his pay promptly. Without him the organization would long since have been abandoned; by his words of encouragement, by his counsel, and by his generosity the house of God has been kept open and the gospel preached. He was the largest contributor towards the erection of the parsonage and "The Parish Hall."

In 1858, Mr. French purchased one of the ancient mill privileges in Stoughton, and took into partnership Mr. Henry Ward, who had a practical knowledge of knitting machinery and the manufacture of fancy knit goods. Beginning in a small way, the business has gradually increased, and is now one of the largest industries in Stoughton, employing nearly three hundred persons.

On Oct. 10, 1880, a fire was discovered in the basement of the main building, which, extending to those adjoining, soon destroyed the entire property, including a new mill, eighty by thirty feet, three stories in height; all the machinery was destroyed. The total loss was one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, on which there was insurance amounting to fifty-five thousand dollars. Thus in a night was swept away the accumulation of years. Mr. French was now sixty-six years of age, and it was a gigantic undertaking to again begin from the foundations, but with that courage and pluck which never fails him he made up his mind to go on, and immediately commenced to rebuild. To-day "the end crowns the work," a new building, better adapted to the purposes of the business, has taken the place of the conglomeration of former days, the busy hum of wheels and the whir of machinery is again heard, and hundreds of busy men and women look to Mr. French for their daily bread, and thank God that he had the courage and public spirit to place the business on its old basis.

Soon after Mr. French returned to Canton he purchased about forty-five acres of land, being a portion of the original grant to the Indians from Dorchester. In a delightful situation, a short distance from the old road which formerly ran between Massachusetts and Narragansett Bays, he erected in 1854 a substantial stone house, where he now resides. He married, July 27, 1837, Almira, daughter of Deacon Leonard and Almira (Kimball) Everett, a Canton lady, whose father was a prominent and highly-respectable citizen of this town.

Mr. French has not hoarded his honestly-acquired gains, his hand has been ever open to the calls of charity, and many are the families that have been either entirely or in part supported by his bounty. A cause that is just, a case of suffering, always receives assistance from him. Whenever a subscription paper is started for a worthy or charitable purpose, he is always asked to head the list.

He has been active as a citizen, taken any part that was assigned him. In school matters, on the board of selectmen, as moderator of the town-meetings, he has done all he could for the interest and advancement of the town.

OLIVER SMITH CHAPMAN.

Oliver Smith Chapman was without doubt descended from Ralph Chapman, born in England in 1615, and who, at the age of twenty years, being then a resident of the parish of St. Saviors, Southwark, County Surrey, emigrated to America, as will appear upon consulting the list of passengers who passed from the port of London for the year ending at Christmas, 1635. Upon his arrival in this country he probably settled at Duxbury, although no mention is made of him until 1640. Ten years afterwards he became a resident of Marshfield, and lived there until the time of his death, which occurred in 1671. He had a daughter Mary, who married, in 1666, William Troop. This name, though variously spelled, occurs in the family of Oliver S. Chapman many times. His great-grandfather Throop, when he was a boy, he well remembered seeing. This ancestor, at the age of ninety-one, rode on horseback from Reedsborough, Vt., to Belchertown, in this State, to visit his relatives. Throop Chapman had a number of children, among others William, who, in turn, had, among others, Daniel, the father of Oliver, who was born Dec. 23, 1782, and died at Canton, April 12, 1867. He married, May 25, 1809, Nancy Smith, who was born in Walpole, Mass., Jan. 9, 1790, and died March 9, 1838. Their eldest son, Oliver S., was born at Belchertown, in the county of Hampshire, Aug. 18, 1811.

His early life was passed in his native town, where he learned from his father the trade of a wheelwright, and soon became a skillful mechanic, obtaining that practical information which enabled him in after-years to become so successful a man. Before he arrived at his majority he had erected with his own earnings a saw-mill.

While the Boston and Providence Railroad was in process of construction Mr. Chapman paid his first visit to Canton, where he was engaged upon a piece of work near the viaduct, and occupied with his employes the very house of which he died possessed. It was about this time that his friend and cousin, William Smith Otis, married (June 22, 1835) Elizabeth, the daughter of Deacon Leonard Everett, of this town. Mr. Chapman was present at the ceremony. The happiness of their wedded life was of short duration, for on the 13th of November, 1839, at the early age of twenty-six years, Mr. Otis died at Westfield, having invented and perfected in these short years one of the marvelous mechanical inventions of the age,—“The Otis Steam Excavator.”

Mr. Otis and Mr. Daniel Carmichael both had contracted to do work on the Providence road. The latter gentleman induced Mr. Chapman to go with him to Worcester, and near that city he was for a time engaged in constructing what is now a portion of the Boston and Albany Railroad. Again a short time in Canton, and then Mr. Chapman went to a place near Greenwich, in Rhode Island, where he took a contract to construct portions of the Providence and Stonington Railroad. In 1836 he went to Philadelphia, where a ship canal was in process of construction; upon this he labored. Subsequently he was at New Worcester for a short time. During the year 1837 he took contracts on the Eastern Railroad at Chelsea, Lynn, and Salem. It was on the 18th of September this year that he was married to Miss Olivia, the daughter of Reuben and Chloe Cook. His next employment was upon the Boston and Albany Railroad, in 1839. Here, in connection with Carmichael, Fairbanks & Otis, he was employed in excavating a most difficult passage through a solid rock, the sides of which, when complete, were sixty feet on the one hand and eighty on the other. This work, now known as the Summit Cut, was completed in 1841. But his health at this time failed him, and he returned with his wife to his native town, and there remained for two or three years. It was during these years (Jan. 3, 1844)

E. S. Chapman

Mr. Mansfield

that his wife died. On the 23d of March, 1845, he was married, for the second time, to the widow of Mr. William S. Otis. The following year he placed a steam excavator on the Vermont Central, at Windsor, and was at work at Claremont, N. H., and Burlington, Vt. About this time he had an interest in the lumber business in Saginaw County, Mich. The renewal of the patent on the excavator furnished Mr. Chapman for some time with occupation in building the machines and selling the right to use the same.

In 1845 he came to Canton, and in 1858 purchased the Marcus Clark estate, on what is now Chapman Street, making it his residence. Since that time he was more or less connected with railroads and with railroad men. In 1850, in company with his brother Wellington and Sidney Dillon, he was engaged in a contract on the Marietta and Cincinnati Railroad. He had contracts at Jacksonville, on the New Jersey Central, at Girard (1858), on the Lake Shore, and at Council Bluffs, on the Union Pacific. Of the latter corporation he was for some time a director, as also of the Canada Southern Railroad. He was at one time interested in a contract for filling the lands of the commonwealth on the "Back Bay," in the city of Boston, and possessed large tracts of land in the States of Michigan, Wisconsin, and Iowa. In 1863-64 he was sent as representative to the State Legislature from the Eleventh Norfolk District. In 1856, Mr. Chapman was chosen one of the directors of the Neponset National Bank of Canton.

On Thursday morning, Feb. 8, 1877, Mr. Chapman, apparently in his usual health, took the morning train for Boston. Soon after reaching the city he went to the store of J. V. Kettell, for the purpose of having his watch, which had stopped the evening before, attended to. He removed it from the guard, and Mr. Kettell turned to the window to examine it. Mr. Chapman called his attention to some difficulty with the case, and immediately afterwards sank upon a chair and fell to the floor. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, life was extinct. The physician who was first summoned pronounced the cause of death to be ossification of the heart, but the coroner, Dr. O. G. Cilley, said that it was apoplexy, caused by the extraordinary exertion of ascending the stairs. The funeral services took place at the Unitarian Church, in Canton, on Sunday, the 11th.

The lesson of such a life as his should be deeply written on our hearts. Let us be thankful and proud in the consciousness that there is goodness and honesty in the world,—goodness without ostentation, and honesty without cant. These were the distinguishing characteristics of Mr. Chapman's life. Possessed of ample means, he made no display. He never sought official position, but when public honors were bestowed upon him, he bore them meekly, ever remembering that it was a trust he received from his constituents, and not an occasion to display himself. During the thirty years of his residence in Canton he was ever active in all measures pertaining to the improvement and embellishment of the town. He was more than a good citizen; he was an active and energetic public man, always ready to give more than his share of time and money to benefit his townspeople. He was ready to serve on any committee where the public welfare was concerned. If a school-house were to be built, there was no one so well qualified to superintend its erection as Mr. Chapman. Day by day he was at his post, directing, guiding, and taking a part himself if the work flagged. During the dark days of the war he sustained the government, and by his influence induced others to do so who were disposed to be lukewarm. He was to be seen at all public meetings, and though it was seldom that he spoke, he was ever ready to contribute his time and his money to encourage those who were less sanguine than himself. No one watched the course of events during those gloomy years with more interest than he, and no one was more pleased and gratified at the final result.

"His life was private; safely led, aloof
From the loud world, which yet he understood,
Largely and wisely, as no worldling could
For he by privilege of his nature proof
Against false glitter, from beneath the roof
Of privacy, as from a cave, surveyed
With steadfast eye its flickering light and shade,
And gently judged for evil and for good.
But while he mixed not for his own behoof
In public strife, his spirit glowed with zeal,
Not shorn of action, for the public weal,
For truth and justice as its warp and woof,
For freedom as its signature and seal."

WILLIAM MANSFIELD.

William Mansfield, son of John and Sarah (Pritchard) Mansfield, was born in Boston, Mass., Feb. 20, 1803. His father, John Mansfield, was born in Hingham, Oct. 24, 1765. When a young man he went to Boston, where he resided until May, 1803, when he came to Canton. He was a builder and carpenter by trade. He married Sarah, daughter of Lieut. Samuel and Martha (Blowers) Pritchard. Lieut. Pritchard was an officer in the navy during the Revolutionary war, and was killed on the frigate "Alliance" in an engagement. John Mansfield died

Sept. 29, 1835. Sarah, his wife, was born in Boston, Nov. 27, 1776, died 1855.

They had twelve children,—Sally (deceased), married Judah Hawes, of Stoughton; Mary (deceased), married Abner Tilden, of Canton; Nancy (deceased); John (deceased); Sampson (deceased); William; Louisa (deceased), married Capt. Thomas W. Baker, of Dennis; George (deceased); Emeline, married Alexander Beaumont, of Canton, now of Stoughton; Caleb (deceased); John (deceased); and Edward, a resident of Dorchester.

William Mansfield acquired the rudiments of his education at common schools, supplemented by a short attendance at a private school. His early life, like most of the boys of his age at that period of our history, was passed on his father's farm. At the age of sixteen he commenced his apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade with his father, remaining with him until he was about twenty-two years of age. Oct. 8, 1826, he married Phebe, daughter of Jonathan and Priscilla (Faunce) Tillson. She was born in Carver, Mass., Jan. 11, 1808. Their children were Winslow B. (deceased), Horace H., George H., Sarah J., Preston R., M. Adelaide (married Wisner Park), Frederic W., and Herbert T. (deceased). In 1826, Mr. Mansfield went into the Bolivar Manufacturing Company's machine-shop as general repairer, and continued with them until Jan. 1, 1829. His enterprise and mechanical skill, combined with great accuracy, enabled him to mount the ladder of success. He established himself as a builder of machinery and printing-presses, building for the Perkins Institution for the Blind, of Boston, many articles requiring fine workmanship. This brought him the acquaintance and friendship of S. P. Ruggles, the inventor, who was then its superintendent. Mr. Mansfield's fondness for mechanism here found an active field. He made the large globe, four feet in diameter, now in use in that institution, also the first embossing-press used in this country, and did other work for the institution for several years. In connection therewith he manufactured cotton and woolen machinery. His machine-shop stood where the lower silk-mill of Seavey, Folsom & Bowman is now located. In May, 1843, he removed to Hingham and engaged in the baking business, returned to Canton, November, 1846, where he formed a copartnership with Jedediah Morse, and built a shop on Walnut Street, surveying and laying out a water-privilege just above that of the silk-mill, heretofore mentioned, and engaged in the manufacture of printing-presses, under the firm-name of Morse & Mansfield. These printing-presses were the invention of the Mr. Ruggles spoken of above. The "Ruggles Press" found its way into every section of the country. This copartnership existed until 1849, when Mr. Mansfield purchased the property known as the Presbrey thread-mill, and engaged in the manufacture of thread and twine until 1858, when he relinquished it, and was succeeded by his sons, George H. and Preston R. Since then Mr. Mansfield has devoted himself to his insurance business, which has grown largely on his hands. This he began in 1831, as agent for the Norfolk and Dedham Companies of Dedham. About 1850 he was elected director in both companies, and has served as such to the present time. He was trustee and one of the committee of investment in Canton Savings Institution for twenty years, resigning that trust in 1881. He was United States assistant assessor of internal revenue for Second District about six years. He took the United States census of Canton in 1870. Since the formation of the Republican party Mr. Mansfield has been unfaltering in his allegiance to the principles it advocates. He has served his town as assessor and selectman for seven years, and has held a commission as justice of the peace for nearly thirty years. Broad and liberal in his religious belief, he early identified himself with Universalism, and was one of the first to move in the formation of the Universalist Society in Canton, of which body he was one of the incorporators.

In private life Mr. Mansfield is especially characterized by modest, unassuming manners, strong social feeling, and warm friendship. Methodical and accurate in business matters, he can always be depended upon; upright and conscientious, his word is as good as his bond. Faithful in all relations, "above fear and beyond reproach," Mr. Mansfield has gained and holds a firm place among the best citizens of Canton.

JAMES STRATTON SHEPARD.

James Stratton Shepard, son of Joseph and Mary (Stratton) Shepard, was born in Foxborough, March 31, 1815. His father being in humble circumstances, he was obliged to commence labor early in life, and at ten years of age went into a cotton-mill, where he worked until he was fifteen. He was employed on a farm in Foxborough for two years, then going to Sharon, he commenced to learn the machinist's trade in 1832, but in about six to eight months he was put in charge of the carding-room in the mill of George H. Mann. There his diligence, energy, and general intelligence won for him the confidence of his employer, and he was promoted rapidly, until he had the entire charge of the mill. In February of 1839

Jas. L. Shepard

Elijah A. Morse

he went into partnership with his brother Joseph in the manufacture of straw goods in Foxborough. Not liking the business, and Mr. Mann being desirous of again securing his services, and receiving a sufficiently remunerative offer, he again assumed the superintendence of the mill. Sept. 12, 1839, he married Mary, daughter of Clifford and Mary (McKendry) Belcher, of Canton. She was born Feb. 1, 1819. Their children are four,—Sarah E. [married Ivers W. Adams, of Boston; they have five children]; Ellen A.; Georgie [married Freeland D. Leslie, of Canton]; and Willie S., now in the office of the American Net and Twine Company at Boston as salesman. Mr. and Mrs. Shepard commenced housekeeping in Sharon. In the fall of 1839, Mr. Mann's mill was burned, and Mr. Shepard began the manufacture of palm-leaf hats. After one year of this business, he took charge of a cotton-mill in Ashburnham for George Blackburn & Co., of Boston, making satinets warps, and in January, 1841, he removed thither as superintendent and agent. Here he remained until the fall of 1844. Then coming to Canton, he purchased the cotton-mill of Vernon A. Messenger, where he manufactured wicking for a few years, and in 1851 purchased the thread-mill of Southworth & White, and fitted this up, making seine-twine. The first year ten thousand pounds were made, and in 1883, five hundred and fifty thousand pounds. In addition to this, in connection with Timothy Kaley, about 1853, he carried on the manufacturing of knitting-cotton and harness-twine for three years, when he sold his interest to Martin Wales. The American Net and Twine Company were the largest buyers of the seine-twine for some fifteen to eighteen years. After the war (1864) he became a partner of that company, leasing his real estate to them, and engaged in the manufacture of fish-nets and seines. In this particular branch of industry and manufacture they were the first to engage in New England, and the business has increased largely, their products being in use from Labrador to Alaska, and in Europe as well. In November, 1879, they formed a corporation, having previously built a large mill at Cambridge. William Stowe, Arlington, John W. Fairbanks, Cambridge, and James S. Shepard, of Canton, were among the principal stockholders. Mr. Shepard is the largest stockholder, and, with his family, holds the controlling interest in the company.

He is still personally in charge of their interests in Canton. Salesrooms: Boston, No. 43 Commercial Street; New York, No. 199 Fulton Street. Mr. Shepard is a practical and thorough-going man. He has always given his personal attention to all the details of his business, and this has proved the prime element of his success. He is essentially a self-made man, and his life has been one of steady and active devotion to his varied and numerous business interests. He is a stockholder in various corporations and director in Neponset National Bank. Politically he has been a Republican from the organization of that party, and in 1871-72 represented Canton in the State Legislature. In private life he is especially characterized by strong social feeling and warm friendship for a large circle of friends. Of pleasing address, he is a genial companion, enlivening his conversation with shrewd practical remarks and quaint humor. He takes an interest in everything tending towards the building up of his town. Among the representative citizens of Canton who enjoy the confidence of the community we can safely place Mr. Shepard.

ELIJAH A. MORSE.

Elijah A. Morse, son of Rev. Abner Morse (a gentleman of learning and culture, well known as an author, and notably so of "Genealogy of Morse Family"), was born May 25, 1841. He traces his ancestry back through an ancient and honorable New England family, the first of whom having connection with American history being Samuel Morse, who settled at Dedham in 1634. The descendants of this sturdy pioneer have in every generation filled important positions, being distinguished in literature, art, science, and business, and marked for their independence, originality, and energy. Mr. Morse acquired his education at common and private schools, among others the Boylston school of Boston, then under the charge of that celebrated instructor, Hon. Charles Kimball, of Lowell. His father, although able and learned, like many professional men, had little of this world's goods. Elijah's business life began in his school-days. When about fifteen years old, during his vacation, he began to make and sell from house to house a stove polish, prepared from a formula given him by the eminent chemist, Dr. Charles Jackson, of Boston, who was a strong and intimate friend of his father. His little stock was carried in a carpet-bag, and at this day it is strange to contemplate the first humble commencement of the now gigantic business.

Elijah had no thought then of pursuing the manufacture as a permanent employment, although from the merits of the polish, and the excellent qualities he developed as a salesman and his success, he might well have done so. But after his school-days were over, in 1860, while a resident of Sharon, he did adopt its manufacture as a business. But on the breaking out of the great civil war he enlisted in Company A, Fourth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, as a three months' soldier under Lincoln's call for seventy-five thousand men. This term of service was passed in Virginia. He afterwards enlisted in the same company for nine months, and served with his regiment in Louisiana, where it was engaged in several battles, notably "Camp Bisland," and the siege and capture of Port Hudson. His term of service ended, in 1864 he made his home in Canton, and hired "a small upper room," and engaged in the business which has now assumed such colossal proportions. This was soon too small, and the present location was secured. From 1864 until 1868 his brother, Albert F., was in company with him, but since then Mr. Morse has been sole proprietor, retaining, however, the firm-name "Morse Brothers." From 1868 to the present there has been a rapid and enormous increase in the production and sale of his polish. Energy, perseverance, and an unusual amount of originality on the part of Mr. Morse has wrought the change. To properly place his goods on sale he traveled personally through twenty-two of the United States, acting as his own commercial traveler. To secure his proper legal rights he adopted the trade-mark "Rising Sun Stove Polish," and now every quarter of the globe knows and uses his polish, and it is as standard an article of household use as flour. The following from the Canton Journal gives the sales of a single day in 1881:

"Owing to the prospect of an immediate advance in Western freights, Morse Brothers have just received orders for an unusually large amount of their celebrated 'Rising Sun Stove Polish.' The sale of this day loaded four cars, and weighed 57,500 pounds, nearly 29 tons. It consisted of 1150 gross, and was contained in 2270 cases. There were 165,000 single packages, and, as they are four inches long, would reach (being placed in a line touching one another) nearly ten and one-half miles."

The daily production now (September, 1883) is five tons. This is unequal to the demand, and Mr. Morse, in addition to his already extensive works, has now in process of building a brick factory two hundred and twenty-five feet long and four stories high. This is the largest building for the purpose in the world. "His place, in almost every part, shows the character of his business,—the making of stove polish, and 'Rising Sun Stove Polish' is seen freely painted on numbers of his buildings. Even the great American flag, which is raised when the proprietor is at home, bears the same or a similar legend. His grounds are laid out with care and a view to business, but they are not wanting in beauty. In front of his residence are two gilded statues and of life size, emblematic of Spring and Autumn,—Spring with flowers, and Autumn with a sickle and sheaf of wheat. Upon the point of the roof of his main building is a life-size figure of Justice holding the scales evenly poised. Every part of the place shows the spirit of the man who rules it. We have been told that at one time, when the depression made everything in business stagnant, he paid his help half wages, although they had nothing to do in the shops, and this for several weeks." This speaks well for his benevolence and justice. "He was one of the number who learned the location of the grave of Col. Gridley (the patriot who engineered the fortifications at Bunker Hill, and afterwards took part in the memorable battle), and induced the town to remove the remains to the cemetery, and had a handsome monument erected over them." As characteristic of the man, and speaking more than pages of description, we give the following from the Canton Journal: "All the manufacturers in Canton received a circular a few days since from a New York tobacco-house offering to donate to the men in their employ a sample of their goods. Mr. Morse's reply was as follows: 'Your circular received. We don't use tobacco. Consider it a vile, dangerous, poisonous narcotic. It will kill lice, fleas, and every creature on God's footstool but a tobacco-worm, and will poison, injure, and shorten the life of any man who uses it. It is the twin-sister and handmaid of strong drink, as it creates an unnatural thirst that water will not satisfy. In connection with rum, it is the cause of the awful disease known as delirium tremens. Can you wonder that we don't want to present it to the men in our employ? We advise you to quit the business, and engage in some other that will tend to ennoble and elevate man, instead of degrading and debasing him. Respectfully, Elijah A. Morse.'" He is a member and deacon of the Congregationalist Church, and his career has ever been guided by religious principle, and his assistance heartily accorded to enterprises of the church. Politically, Mr. Morse has taken advanced grounds. He has been an active prohibitionist, and is now an enthusiastic temperance Republican. He represented his town in the State Legislature of 1876. During the last five years Mr. Morse has lectured very extensively in the New England States on temperance, in addition to conducting his business.

In conclusion, Mr. Morse is a self-made man of the highest order. Early in life he learned that the way to success was by no royal road, but open and clear to stout hearts and willing hands. He has gained nothing by mere luck, but everything by perseverance and well-digested plans, and the intelligent application of his energies to the end in view.

James C. Draper.

JAMES DRAPER.

Among those who were foremost in introducing and establishing the woolen industry in Canton, the name of James Draper stands prominent. He was a man of great energy, untiring industry, and superior business capacity. With a thorough knowledge of his trade, great practical sagacity, and an indomitable perseverance, he did much to promote the growth and prosperity of the town during the past thirty years.

He was born in Melbourne, Derbyshire, England, Sept. 17, 1813.

Being early thrown upon his own resources, his mechanical turn of mind led him to adopt the knitting trade as an occupation, and his ingenuity and skill were developed in the general lace manufacturing interest, but especially in lace gloves, for which Melbourne was famous.

He came to Canton with his family in April, 1851. The sailing-vessel in which he arrived dropped anchor in Boston harbor on the morning following the memorable storm which destroyed the ill-fated Minot's Ledge light-house. An elder brother, named Thomas, had preceded him to the States, who had purchased in Canton the old Dr. Stone estate, at the corner of Washington and Pleasant Streets, and at the time of the arrival of James was engaged in fitting up a shop to receive knitting machinery. Here for several years he assisted Thomas in organizing and developing the woolen business. This was the pioneer introduction of the knitting industry into Canton.

In the spring of 1856, after the death of his brother Thomas, we find James in business for himself, in the building at the Centre known as the Everett house. Here a great variety of fancy knitted goods were produced, and the business rapidly increased.

In 1861 a partnership was formed with Mr. George Frederic Sumner, and the business continued under the name of Draper & Sumner.

In February, 1865, the firm purchased the Morse machine-shops and water-privilege at South Canton. They made the necessary alterations to adapt the property to the requirements of their business; built a dye-house, put in three sets of woolen-cards, with their complement of spinning machinery, and a full line of knitting-frames. Here a thriving business was transacted until June, 1870, when the buildings and contents were destroyed by fire.

In April, 1869, the firm had bought the property of the Canton Woolen-Mills, and at the time of the fire were running three factories,—the Everett Mill and the Canton Woolen-Mills at the Centre, and the Morse Mill at South Canton.

It was deemed inexpedient to rebuild at South Canton, and the foundations were immediately started for a spinning-mill at the Centre, making a valuable addition to the Canton Woolen-Mills.

The new mill was completed before winter, and was equipped with seven sets of woolen-cards, with a basement occupied by shuttle-looms and knitting-machinery. At the time of Mr. Draper's death, three years later, the firm was doing a large and prosperous business.

Mr. Draper died May 23, 1873. His death was a public loss, and the sorrow manifested by the employes at his decease was the truest evidence of the warm place he held in their hearts.

Any sketch of James Draper would be imperfect that gave no hint of the sturdy individuality of his nature, and the generous impulses, which knew no limit but his means. His heart was pure gold. It was alive with tenderness to the wants of the young, the aged, the poor, and the unfortunate. To lift another's burden seemed to lighten his own. His cardinal doctrine was, "Flee pleasure, and it will pursue you. Strive for the happiness of others, and your own will abound." The light of his life was to serve, cheer, encourage, and minister to the comfort of those who came within his sphere. The only value he put on money was its blessing power. His happiest moments were when he was giving. He was liberal to all appeals, but he most loved to dispense benefactions with his own hand, and be his own judge of deserving merit.

Whatever he achieved in life was due to his own efforts; he was self-made in the full meaning of the word. In the England of his boyhood, education was not the fostered child it is to-day. But in almost every town could be found a morning and evening school, where, for a small sum, a determined spirit could acquire the rudiments of knowledge. The only education he had was obtained at these schools, by a brief hour snatched from the forelock of the day's labor, or added at its close, to satisfy the craving for intellectual advancement.

In his business, and in everything he did, thoroughness was his motto. "Whatever was worth doing at all was worth doing well." The maxims of industry, economy, and sound common sense, which all human experience indorses and commends, he inculcated wherever he found idleness, extravagance, or folly.

Mr. Draper was plain in manners, determined in opinions, and inflexible in principle. He was a genuine hater of shams and pretense, and would rebuke with almost merciless severity a would-be spirit or a mean act. The love of justice was the dominant principle of his nature, and at his grave an appreciative friend remarked that the most fitting inscription that could be placed upon his tombstone would be,—

"He was too noble to do a wrong act."

THE WENTWORTH FAMILY.

The Wentworth families of America are of illustrious descent, and can trace their ancestry twenty-one generations in England, to the time of the Norman Conquest. The pedigree commences with Reginald Wentworth, or, as written in "Domesday Book," Rynold De Winterwade. He was the possessor of the lordship of Wentworth, in the Wapentake of Strafford, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, in 1066. The fact of his being mentioned as the Lord of Wentworth sufficiently proves him to have been a prominent man, even at this early date. The Wentworths held high offices in church and state, and were knighted for their bravery. From Reginald the first descended, in regular line of descent, William Wentworth, the emigrant, and the veritable "Elder" of New England history. The first evidence of his presence in this country is his signature, with that of others, to a "combination" for a government at Exeter, N. H., on the 4th day of October, 1639. This combination continued for three years; we then find him, in 1642, as juror from Wells, Me., and in 1648 he was constable. He must have removed from Maine about 1649, as in 1650 he was taxed at Dover, N. H., and was also one of the selectmen in 1651, 1657, 1664, 1665, and 1670. "On the fifth day of Oct. 1652, William Wentworth and others in behalf of themselves and the town of Dover, contract with Richard Waldern to build a meeting house," etc.

It was over this church, known now as the First Church in Dover, that William Wentworth became an elder. In 1689 he was instrumental in saving Heard's garrison. He officiated several years as a preacher at Exeter and other places, and died at a very advanced age at Dover in 1697. From him the several Governors Wentworth have descended. John², son of Elder William Wentworth, was born prior to 1619, and hence was one of the oldest of Elder Wentworth's children. He resided in Dover, N. H., until about 1672; afterwards he was in York, Me., until that town was destroyed by the Indians in 1692. He then probably came to Massachusetts, as in 1704 his name is mentioned in a lease dated in November of that year at Punkapaug (now Canton), Mass. He married Martha ——. Their children were John, Edward, Charles³, Shubael, Elizabeth, and Abigail. Charles³, son of John² and Martha Wentworth, was born about 1684. He lived in Canton, Mass., then a part of Stoughton. The house in which he lived is still standing. He was one of the selectmen of Stoughton in 1730 and for several years afterwards. When sixty years of age he was appointed by Governor Shirley, June 18, 1744, lieutenant of the Third Company of the Fourth Regiment of militia, and afterwards became captain. He married, Dec. 15, 1713, Bethiah, daughter of John Fenno, of Stoughton. Their children were Amariah, Rachel, William, Samuel⁴, Bethiah, Seth, Jerusha, Sarah. Charles Wentworth died at Canton, Mass., July 8, 1780, aged ninety-six. Samuel⁴, son of Charles³ and Bethiah (Fenno) Wentworth, was born April 24, 1728, and lived in Stoughton on land given him by his father May 22, 1753. He was called "Capt. Samuel." He married, first, Oct. 19, 1748, Hannah Endicott; second, Feb. 1, 1754, Sarah, daughter of John and Abigail (Vose) Puffer. He died Dec. 23, 1783. His children were Mary, Mehitable, Samuel, Abel, Nathaniel⁵, Abel, Rachel, Sarah, Abigail, John, Bethiah. Nathaniel⁵, son of Samuel⁴ and Sarah (Puffer) Wentworth, was born Nov. 11, 1761, married, April 3, 1792, Olive, daughter of Samuel Capen. She died May 12, 1859.

Nathaniel was a hard-working boy, and used to draw wood six miles to sell to Governor Hutchinson, who resided on Milton Hill. He left his home early on the morning of the 19th of April, 1775, with a load of wood, and hearing the news of the fighting at Lexington and Concord, he alarmed his friends by his prolonged absence. He served six months in the Revolutionary army as guard on the British prisoners captured in Burgoyne's surrender, who were kept in barracks on Bunker Hill from 1777 to the spring of 1778. He drew a pension up to the time of his death, which occurred July 9, 1849, on the spot where his grandfather, Charles, lived and died, and his widow continued to draw it until her death, some twelve years thereafter. Mr. Edwin Wentworth states that when he went to draw the pension for her he was much impressed by the cordiality and friendliness existing among the pensioners assembled from various parts of the State. All seemed to have a pride in having been of so patriotic blood as to merit this reward. His children were Nathaniel⁶, Sophia, Larra Edwin, and Francis.

Arthur H. H. H.

Edwin Montrose

NATHANIEL WENTWORTH, sixth in descent from Elder William Wentworth, the first American of the name, and oldest son of Nathaniel and Olive (Capen) Wentworth, was born June 2, 1795, and was a lifelong resident of Canton. His education was acquired mostly at the common schools, supplemented, however, by a short time at a private school, but being by nature energetic and a hard worker, he engaged in the business for which he was naturally fitted,—that of cattle dealer,—and did an immense butchering business, which is now carried on by his son. He was especially noted for his knowledge of live-stock. His business was a success, and he became wealthy for the times in which he lived. He married, first, May 12, 1827, Rebecca G. Presbrey. She died Dec. 25, 1847. Second, Sarah J. Bachelder, March 4, 1850. She died April 28, 1853. His children were James N. (born June 29, 1828, died April 23, 1863; he married Rachel Smith, Sept. 24, 1856; they had two children,—Alfred J., born Dec. 27, 1858, and Mary O., born Nov. 24, 1862), Charles P. (born Jan. 14, 1831; he married Abbie E. Colby, July 29, 1852. Their surviving children are Addie R., born May 30, 1857, and William G., born Dec. 14, 1865), Alfred (died Jan. 3, 1839, aged six years), Larra Edwin (born April 25, 1844; married, first, Ellen Mash, March 2, 1866. They had one child, Rebecca E., who died March 25, 1881, aged fourteen years. He married, second, Evaleen Tucker, Oct. 5, 1880. Their child, Olive, was born Dec. 30, 1882).

Nathaniel Wentworth was a man of strong character and consistent in his principles. In politics he was a Republican. He was selectman for one year, and only lacked one vote of election for representative, although he remained at home and kept his men at work. He was a man of quaint originality, social, and his company was much enjoyed by his associates in business for his peculiar witticisms and conversational powers. Although active and energetic he conducted his affairs with conservatism and prudence, and accumulated wealth. His death occurred Nov. 24, 1876.

Larra Edwin, son of Nathaniel and Rebecca (Presbrey) Wentworth, enlisted as private in Company A, Fourth Massachusetts Regiment, Sept. 17, 1862, and served faithfully in the department of the Gulf under Gen. Banks, participating in the warm engagement at Bisland, La., and in the memorable siege of Port Hudson, where he was wounded in the assault of June 14th. He is a charter member of Revere Post, Grand Army of the Republic, which was organized in 1869, and takes great interest and pride in this organization, and illustrates in his private life that a brave soldier is always a good citizen.

EDWIN WENTWORTH, son of Nathaniel⁵ and Olive (Capen) Wentworth, was born on the old Wentworth homestead, in Canton, Mass., April 1, 1805. He received his education both at common and at a private school under the charge of that eminent mathematician, Colburn. He served as clerk at various times for his brother-in-law, Nathaniel French, who was a merchant, and there acquired such a taste for business that he preferred engaging in trade to a college life at Harvard University, and June 3, 1822, when but little over seventeen, he engaged in business for himself, and paying one dollar and fifty cents per week for his board, he cleared nine hundred dollars the first year, thus proving his aptitude for his chosen calling, that of merchant, in which he continued for about twenty-one years, four years of that time in Stoughton. He also carried on a bakery and confectionery business, speculated largely in real estate, his ventures being usually crowned with success. Mr. Wentworth's sagacity and judgment were of eminent advantage to him in his dealings in real estate, as he bought largely at auction, knowing when and how to purchase. He has always been conservative and independent in his operations. Well known as a man whose word is as good as his bond, naturally he has been called to fill many places of trust and financial responsibility, and in the discharge of his duties has deemed it imperative to know personally how affairs stood, and never trusted to another for information which he should himself possess. Mr. Wentworth was director of Neponset Bank for ten years, trustee of Canton Savings-Bank several years. As an instance of his popularity we would mention that once, while a candidate for the Legislature from Canton, he received the largest vote ever cast for a candidate in his town,—four hundred and fourteen out of about six hundred votes polled. Mr. Wentworth has ever been a Democrat, believing that the Jeffersonian principles, as expressed in the Declaration of Independence and Constitution, were the true guides to liberty and freedom for the republic. Fearless, outspoken, and bold, Mr. Wentworth has never been double-faced, and in all points at issue no one has ever had any difficulty in finding where he stood, either in politics, business, or town affairs. He built the fine residence where he now resides in 1853, and has done much to build up the interests of Canton by erecting convenient tenements.

He has holdings of real estate in East Boston, Cambridge, Charlestown, Boston, South Braintree, and Stoughton, four houses at Nantasket, one of them the Wentworth House, and about twenty-five tenements which he rents in Canton, and is considered the largest real estate owner there. To Mr. Wentworth and his brother Nathaniel the growth of the Universalist Society was largely due, although not a member himself. He prefers standing alone on his personal merits, letting all secret societies, organizations, and combinations alone. He has assisted many deserving causes and people, and holds a high place in the regards of the solid people of a wide range of acquaintance, enjoys a handsome property, largely the result of his own efforts, and, hale and vigorous, at the age of seventy-nine, is passing on to the twilight of life with a cheerful philosophy, and is still at his labors, preferring rather to wear out than to rust out. For seven years he held commissions of ensign and lieutenant in one of the "crack" independent military companies of the day,—“The Crane Guards.” Mr. Wentworth married, Feb. 19, 1827, Julia Crane, daughter of Friend and Rebecca (Upham) Crane, of Canton. They had two children,—Mary (born April 28, 1836; she died May 1, 1867; married Horace H. Mansfield, of Canton, had three children,—Mary Wentworth, born Oct. 16, 1863, died Aug. 10, 1864; Helen M., born Feb. 19, 1865; Edwin W., born April 13, 1867; died March 18, 1872), Edwin (born July 19, 1849; died Sept. 23, 1849).

CORODON SPAULDING.

Corodon Spaulding is a descendant of Edward Spaulding, the first of the family we have any knowledge of, who came to America in the earliest years of the Massachusetts Colony,—probably between 1630 and 1633.

He first appears in Braintree, Mass., and his descendants were as follows: Edward (2d), Ebenezer (3d), Stephen (4th), Eben (5th), Warren (6th), Corodon (7th), who was born Jan. 1, 1812, in East Washington, N. H. His grandparents on his mother's side were among the first settlers of East Washington. Deacon William Graves, who lived and died on the farm where he first settled. His father's grandfather was Samuel Roundy, one of the first settlers of Lempster, N. H., who went from Windham, Conn., in the year 1773. Mr. Spaulding's grandmother was then fourteen years old, and rode horseback the whole distance and carried a younger sister in her arms.

He well recollects seeing his great-grandfather at his father's house in (what was then) Fishersfield, now Newbury, N. H. He was quite an old man, but came on horseback.

His grandparents on his father's side lived on a farm in East Washington, N. H., now a small village. His grandmother lived to be one hundred years and three months old. Her one hundredth birthday was celebrated by appropriate services on the 30th of March, 1859. Rev. Willard Spaulding, her grandson, preached an eloquent sermon on the occasion.

During the time he lived at home his father's property did not exceed one thousand dollars in value. He had, therefore, a very limited education, being allowed only a few weeks' schooling in the winter, and was early thrown upon his own resources.

It may not be out of place here to remark that he has always been of strictly temperate principles, and since leaving home a strong advocate of temperance; and one incident that happened while at school so disgusted him that it can never be forgotten. When about sixteen years of age the snow was piled in drifts around the school-house, the boys got to snow-balling, and in the excitement carried the game into the school-house and had it out there, and upon the arrival of the master; he (the master) proposed to and did send to the village and bought a gallon of rum and passed it around to the scholars to any and all who would drink. Meantime, however, one of the neighbors had been informed of what was going on, and went himself to the school-house, when, upon his appearance at the door, the master took the jug and passed it to him, who refused it, however, and immediately took measures to have the master removed. This is given to show the youth the difference of influence between the present day and then.

When eighteen years of age, in the year 1830, he engaged as a stone-cutter, and worked on the sea-wall on Deer Island in Boston harbor. The following October he went to Newcastle, in the State of Delaware, and did some work on the Frenchtown and Newcastle Railroad, and in December of the same year went to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The road was then completed to Ellicott's Mills, and here, in 1831, he superintended a granite-quarry, and got out stone for the track in Pratt Street, in Baltimore. This was the year the first locomotive was built in the United States, by Peter Cooper. He sometimes came to Ellicott's Mills, bringing long trains of cars (as they were called then).

For the information of those younger than himself we will state a little incident that occurred. As the cars were passing the quarry about his dinner-

Codrus Spaulding.

J. W. Deane

hour, he would avail himself of the opportunity to ride part of the way to his boarding-place, and the last car being void of passengers, he jumped on the rear end, and his weight caused the forward wheels to rise from the rail, and when it came down again did not strike the rail, but they were able to put the car on the track again without stopping the train. He regrets that he has never been able to see that good old man, Peter Cooper, again.

The following December he went to Pennsylvania and engaged on the Philadelphia and Columbia Railroad (now Pennsylvania Central), and the next December left for his father's home in Bradford, N. H., and remained there until the next March, when he engaged work in Boston on Union wharf.

The next February, in 1834, engaged on the Boston and Providence Railroad as track-layer at different points on the road.

In August, 1835, engaged with the same company as road-master, where he remained nineteen and one-half years, and in the course of this time invented the machine for curving and straightening railroad-bars, so extensively used on all roads at the present time. Also, a derrick now used by all stone-masons.

In 1836, the 20th of April, was married to Abigail Tolman, daughter of Joseph Tolman, of Sharon, Mass., and moved to Canton in 1839; bought a small farm in 1841, on which he now lives. Their children were as follows: Corodon, born Aug. 10, 1838, in Sharon, Mass., died Nov. 30, 1841, in Canton, Mass.; Sarah Abigail, born Aug. 2, 1844, in Canton, where she died Feb. 16, 1845; Sarah Abigail, born June 16, 1846, in Canton, Mass., and was married to William K. Hawes, Jan. 1, 1871. They reside in Canton. William K. Hawes is son of Increase Hawes, of Norwood, Mass.

FRANCIS W. DEANE.

Francis W. Deane, son of William and Chloe Deane, was born in Mansfield, Mass., Oct. 9, 1807. The Deane family is an old and honored one in New England annals. (See biography of Theodore Dean, in our "History of Bristol County, Massachusetts.") His parents were in humble circumstances on a small farm, and his father's death, when Frank was but five years old, brought a great responsibility upon the widowed mother, who was left, by her own exertions, to bring up her three small boys. With courage and determination she set about the task, and well did she perform her part. By her constant teaching and example, she instilled into their young minds those principles of industry and integrity which have been so clearly shown in Mr. Deane's long and useful life in Canton. In 1822, when he was fifteen, she brought Frank to Canton to take a clerkship in the country store of Leonard Everett. From that time to the present (over sixty years) he has been connected with the business interests of Canton, and never has malice or envy dared to impugn his honesty or to impeach his motives. His life has been an open book, whose pages have ever told the one story of unassuming worth. He remained with Mr. Everett nearly six years. On attaining his majority he engaged with James Dunbar and Elisha Crane as clerk at the "stone-factory," near the Boston and Providence Viaduct, with whom he remained about two years, until Mr. Dunbar gave up business. He then began trading on his own account; but, after a short time, his services were sought as clerk in the Neponset Bank, then (June, 1836) just organized. We give as better indices than any language of ours of Mr. Deane's character, the esteem of which his associates hold him, and the length and character of his services in the banks of Canton, the following. On May 31, 1880, the directors of the Neponset National Bank, among other resolutions, passed this: "Whereas, Francis W. Deane, Esq., who has held the office of cashier of this bank since its organization as a national institution, and, also, for many years previously, when the bank existed under a State charter, covering, in all, a period of forty-four years of service in various capacities, has, on account of increasing physical infirmities, tendered his resignation of said office, to take effect on the first day of June next; and, whereas, at his urgent solicitation, said resignation has been accepted by the Directors; therefore, Resolved, That in sundering the relations which have so long and so happily connected him with this institution, while they are pained at his retirement, they are proud to bear witness to the ability and fidelity which have ever characterized him in the performance of his various duties. Courteous, affable, and obliging to all, faithful, honest, and true to every trust, he has not only won our confidence and esteem, but also that of the entire community in which he lives."

The trustees of the Canton Institution for Savings passed, at a meeting held April 4, 1883, resolutions on his resignation, from which we extract: "Whereas, Francis W. Deane, in consequence of enfeebled health, has felt compelled to resign the office of treasurer of the Canton Institution for Savings, which office he has held for the past thirty-one years; he also having been connected with the institution since its incorporation in 1835; therefore, Resolved, That the trustees hereby express their appreciation of his long and faithful services. His integrity was never questioned, and his faithfulness and devotion to his duty have ever commanded our approval and admiration."

Mr. Deane was elected town treasurer in 1857, and has held that office uninterruptedly until the present. He was also treasurer of the Stoughton Branch Railroad. In political affiliations he is a Republican. He is a deacon of the First Universalist Church in Canton, of which he has been a member for many years.

He married, Oct. 16, 1827, Mary, daughter of Joseph and Merriam Adams. Their children were Mary (deceased), Walter P., Ellen M. (deceased), Mary E. (deceased), Merriam E. (married William W. Toner, and died in her twenty-ninth year, leaving one surviving child, Emma E.), Emily F. (married William F. Horrobin, and died in her twenty-second year, leaving one child, Francis W.), and Francis W. (deceased). Mrs. Mary Deane died July 26, 1847, and Mr. Deane married, Jan. 5, 1851, Emily Adams, sister of his first wife. Quiet and unostentatious, Mr. Deane has done the work allotted him well, and is beloved by a large circle of friends.

ELLIS AMES.

Ellis Ames was born at Stoughton, Norfolk Co., Oct. 17, 1809, in that epoch following the Revolution when our new republic was slowly passing out of the exhaustion attendant on that protracted struggle, and yet was about to engage in new strife with its old enemy, in what was for us the very brilliant war of 1812. His birth-time, therefore, touches both the sunset of our Revolutionary statesmen and warriors, and also the frontiers of our new national prosperity. His father was Jonathan Ames, Jr., of Stoughton, and his mother was Sally Capen, daughter of Edward Capen (2d), of Stoughton, and of his wife Eunice Monk, daughter of George Monk, of Stoughton, and his wife Sarah Hixon, of Sharon. His father's family derives itself from William Ames, who, with his brother John, came from Bruton, Somersetshire, England, to America in 1634 and settled at Braintree. They were the sons of Richard Ames. Mr. Ames, therefore, is of that Puritan and yeoman stock which so sturdily civilized Massachusetts wilds, and has given so much bone and brain power to make this nation what it is. William Ames had three sons,—John, from whom Ellis descended; Nathaniel, from whom descended Hon. Fisher Ames; and Thomas, from whom descended the Hon. Oakes Ames.

In the fall of 1814, at the close of the war, his father removed his family to his native town of West Bridgewater, Plymouth Co., where Ellis Ames lived until March 8, 1837, except in the years which he spent at college. He was prepared for college at the Bridgewater Academy, 1822-27, and entered the sophomore class of Brown University at the commencement of the last-named year. Graduating in 1830, in the same class with Professor Chace and Hon. B. F. Thomas, he studied law with Hon. William Baylies, of West Bridgewater (B. U., 1795), and was admitted to the bar at the December term of the court of Common Pleas (1833) for Plymouth County. He engaged at once in the practice of law in his paternal town and parts adjacent, and represented West Bridgewater in the General Court for the political years 1833, 1834, 1835, and 1836. He removed his domicile to Canton, March 8, 1837, as a better field for the practice of the law, and in that profession he has been laboring until this present.

These are the modest and, as they look, rather meagre details of a life full of legal industry and ability. Mr. Ames himself is one of the most modest and unpretending of men, and perplexes his biographers by industriously hiding from them the very valuable services he has rendered in illustrating and settling some of the law's most recondite and perplexing problems. He confesses to drafting the bill in equity of Massachusetts, plaintiff against the State of Rhode Island, in the matter of the boundary between these States, which was entered in the Supreme Court at Washington at the December term of 1852. This question, involving much antiquarian lore and keen insight into colonial history, was happily decided in the interest of his client, and the fact has always been held a tribute to his legal abilities. But the truth is that in equity pleadings, one of the most intricate and difficult departments of a lawyer's practice, Mr. Ames was for many years regarded as authority, and difficult cases of great magnitude passed through his hands before they were finally argued by some of the most famous lawyers of the Massachusetts bar. He has been one of those, not too common lawyers, who have followed their profession for the love as well as the profit of it. He is rightly to be called learned in the law, and his researches have been among the roots of legal principles, especially as they find illustration in English history. A member for many years of the Massachusetts Historical Society, and his information about the colonial affairs of the Bay and Plymouth Colony is very minute and rich. It is doubtful if any man now living combines so much legal and colonial lore as he; and it is to be regretted that most of it is likely to die with him.

Personally, Mr. Ames has always had the simple habits of a scholar, and the bluff, hearty manner of an honest and friendly man. He has kept a keen watch of public affairs and men, is full of anecdote and reminiscence of the great lawyers who have been in his day at the bar, and the brilliant fame of the popular has waxed and waned before his eyes, yet he has never been tempted to turn from his own quiet ways to grasp at the bubbles of public applause, and like a true philosopher measures all such matters with a very long line of shrewd common sense. Mr. Ames has always been an intensely individual man,—a thorough Puritan, minus his gloom and his theology. He resembles, in a certain leonine cast of face, the late Chief Justice Lemuel Shaw, who was his friend. He is a good type of that better class of country lawyers out of which such men as John Adams and Fisher Ames came. He has always been rich in brains and law-books, and a certain racy humor and good-fellowship, which has made him many friends. His private law library is probably the most extensive and complete of any in the State, outside of Boston. Among its other riches it has a complete set of the English Chancery Reports, from the earliest ages of English law till now. He began to argue cases in banc at the law term of 1836, and to the present time (1884) has argued his own cases there at every term. In his library he has the declaration, bill, pleadings, and principal documents of all these cases bound up in twenty folio volumes. His special and peculiar place among Massachusetts lawyers will be hard to fill when it becomes vacant.

Mr. Ames married, in 1840, Harriet, daughter of Samuel and Caty (McKendry) Tucker, of Canton, and has two sons and three daughters still living.

CHAPTER LXXIV.

NORFOLK.

North Parish of Wrentham—Early Settlements—Residents in 1795—North Society—First Meeting-House—Incorporation of Town—Act of Incorporation—First Town-Meeting—Officers Elected—List of Selectmen—Town Clerks—Representatives—Town House—Present Valuation—Industrial Pursuits—Churches—Schools.

THE greater portion of the present town of Norfolk was originally the North Parish of Wrentham, and the early history of the town, Revolutionary, etc., will be found in that of the mother-town, of which it formed a part until 1870.

Settlements were made here at an early day, and among the prominent names here in 1795 were David Holbrook, Josiah Ware, Moses Mann, Samuel Richardson, James Holbrook, Asa Ware, Elisha Rockwood, Jason Thompson, Darius Blake, Nathan Ware, George Blin, Jacob Pond, Daniel Ware, Elisha Ware, James Perrigs, Asa Blake, George Fairbank, David Holbrook, Robert Day, Isaiah Turner, Jared Wilson, David Pond, E. Tucker, Jeremiah Tucker, Samuel Ware, Pallu Pond, Samuel Holbrook, Daniel Holbrook, Jr., Henry Holbrook, Paul Holbrook, Oliver Ware, Joel Ware, Moses Vince, Amariah Ware, Consider Studly, Jason Richardson, Seth Fisher, and Ebenezer Blake.

On the 29th of September, 1795, a meeting of the inhabitants of the North Parish was held "for the purpose of knowing the minds of said inhabitants for building a meeting-house for public and social worship at said north end."

It was finally agreed to build a meeting-house, and a subscription-paper was started bearing the following heading:

"As the Happiness of Society and good order and preservation of ourselves, as well as a rising Generation, greatly depend on a close adherence to morality, piety, and Religion, and these Cannot be Diffused in our Local situation but by the Institution of Public Worship of God, and the Institution of morality, piety, and Religion, therefore to promote the happiness of ourselves as well as the rising Generation, we, the subscribers, do jointly agree to the subsequent articles."

Here follows a number of articles, and the paper was subsequently signed by thirty-eight of the inhabitants, pledging twelve hundred and forty-four dollars.

Incorporation of Town.—The North Parish remained a portion of Wrentham until Feb. 23, 1870, when it was incorporated as a separate town, bearing the name of Norfolk. Portions of Franklin, Medway, and Walpole were also embraced in the new town.

The following is the act of incorporation:

"AN ACT to incorporate the Town of Norfolk.

"Be it enacted, &c., as follows:

"SECT. 1. All the territory now within the towns of Wrentham, Franklin, Medway, and Walpole, in the county of Norfolk, comprised within the following limits, that is to say: beginning at a point on Charles River, in the north-west angle of Wrentham, and following in an easterly course the present line of division between Wrentham and Medfield to Stop River; thence running southerly along said river, and separated by the thread of its stream from Walpole, to a point forty rods north of the mouth of the first brook running into said river, below Campbell's Mills, on the easterly side; thence from said point, by a straight line, running to the junction of Back and Bird streets, in Walpole; thence to the easterly side of said Bird street to its junction with West street; thence westerly by the northerly side of West street, twenty-five rods; thence southerly, and near to and westerly from the barn belonging to the home estate of Charles Bird, until said line strikes Stop River, one hundred and twenty rods southerly from West street; thence along said river as far as Wrentham and Walpole are separated by the thread of its stream; thence by a straight line, running westerly of the Walpole almshouse and easterly of the farm buildings of Patrick Reardon, and easterly of the Dupee Blake place, so called, to a point on the line between Walpole and Foxborough, one hundred and twenty-five rods north-easterly from Dedham Rock; thence from said point, following the present line of division, between Wrentham and Foxborough, to Dedham Rock; thence southerly from said rock along the present line of Wrentham and Foxborough to a point on said line on the southerly side of Pine street; thence by a straight line to a point on the westerly side of Everett street, northerly of the house of Edmund T. Everett, and southerly of the Pondville Cemetery, to a point on the westerly side of North street, five rods southerly of the farm buildings of Samuel J. Benn; thence through the Stony Brook reservoir, near to the house of E. S. Nash, to a point on the line between Franklin and Wrentham, ninety rods southerly of the house late of Eliphalet Lawrence; thence running northerly, by a straight line, near to and west of the farm buildings of the home estate of J. E. Pollard, near the Elliot Felting Mills, near to and thirty-five rods west of the present residence of Saul B. Scott, to the southern extremity of Populatic Pond; thence along the western shore of said pond, at low-water mark, to Charles River; thence in an easterly course upon Charles River, and separated by the thread of its stream from Medway to the centre of the iron bridge over said river; thence upon the thread of said river to the bridge of the Medway branch railroad; thence along the southerly side of said railroad, twenty-eight rods, to a point; thence from said point, by a straight line running in a north-easterly course, passing south-easterly of and near to the village of Deenville, near to and south of the old barn belonging to John Barber, to a point on Baltimore street, two rods from said barn; thence by a straight line to the easterly side of the great bend in Charles River and near the old fording place; thence upon said river, and separated by the thread of its stream, from Medway to the point of beginning;—is hereby incorporated into a town by the name of Norfolk; and said town of Norfolk is hereby invested with all the powers, privileges, rights, and immunities, and is subject to all the duties and requisitions to which other towns are entitled and subjected by the constitution and laws of this Commonwealth.

“SECT. 2. The inhabitants of said town of Norfolk shall be holden to pay all arrears of taxes, which have been legally assessed upon them by the towns of Wrentham, Franklin, Medway, and Walpole, respectively; and all taxes heretofore assessed and not collected shall be collected and paid to the treasurers of the towns of Wrentham, Franklin, Medway, and Walpole, respectively, in the same manner as if this act had not been passed; and until the next general valuation of estates in this Commonwealth, the town of Norfolk shall annually pay over to the said towns of Wrentham, Franklin, Medway, and Walpole, respectively, the proportion of any State or county tax which the said towns of Wrentham, Franklin, Medway, and Walpole, respectively, may be required to pay, upon the inhabitants or estates hereby set off; said proportion to be ascertained and determined by the respective valuations of the said towns of Wrentham, Franklin, Medway, and Walpole, next preceding the passage of this act.

“SECT. 3. Said towns of Wrentham, Franklin, Medway, Walpole, and Norfolk shall be respectively liable for the support of all persons who now do, or shall hereafter stand in need of relief as paupers, whose settlement was gained by or derived from a settlement gained or derived within their respective limits.

“SECT. 4. The towns of Wrentham, Franklin, Medway, Walpole, and Norfolk shall retain the school-houses within their respective limits, and the town of Norfolk shall assume and pay its just and equitable proportions, according to its present assessed valuation, of any debt due or owing from the towns of Wrentham and Franklin, respectively, at the time of the passage of this act, and shall be entitled to receive from said towns, respectively, its just and equitable proportion, according to said assessed valuation, of all the corporate property then owned by said towns of Wrentham and Franklin, respectively, including therein the school-houses retained by said Wrentham, Franklin, and Norfolk, respectively; and said town of Norfolk shall be held to refund to said towns of Wrentham and Franklin, respectively, its just proportion of the surplus revenue, whenever the same shall be called for according to law; such proportion to be determined by the decennial State valuation next preceding such call. And in case the proportions aforesaid cannot be agreed upon by said towns of Norfolk, Wrentham, and Franklin, respectively, the same shall be determined by three commissioners, to be appointed by the Superior Court for said county of Norfolk, upon a petition of either of said towns.

“SECT. 5. The territory of the town of Norfolk, heretofore part of the towns of Franklin and Walpole, for the purpose of electing representatives to the General Court until the next decennial census, or until another apportionment be made, shall remain a part of said towns of Franklin and Walpole, respectively, and vote therefor at such places, respectively, as the said towns shall vote; and the selectmen of Norfolk shall make a true list of all persons within their town, qualified to vote at every such election, and shall post up the same in said town of Norfolk, and shall correct the same as required by law, and shall deliver a true list of all such voters as are entitled to vote in said towns of Franklin and Walpole, respectively, to the selectmen thereof, seven days at least before such election, to be used thereat.

“And the territory of the town of Norfolk, heretofore part of the towns of Wrentham and Medway, until another apportionment be made, shall, for the purpose of electing representatives to the General Court, remain a part of the Twelfth Norfolk Representative District, and vote for the same in the town of Norfolk; and the clerk of the town of Norfolk shall make returns and meet with the clerks of the towns of Foxborough, Medway, and Wrentham for the purpose of ascertaining the result of the election and making certificates of the same at the time and place now provided for said meeting by law; and the territory of said town of Norfolk, until legally changed, shall, for the purpose of electing a representative in Congress, continue to be part of the Congressional District numbered eight; and for the purpose of electing a councilor, part of the Second Councilor District; and for the purpose of electing a senator, a part of the Third Norfolk District.

“SECT. 6. Any justice of the peace within and for the county of Norfolk may issue his warrant, directed to any principal inhabitant of the town of Norfolk, requiring him to notify and warn the inhabitants thereof, qualified to vote in town affairs, to meet at the time and place appointed for the purpose of choosing all such town officers as towns are by law authorized and required to choose at their annual meetings; and said warrant shall be served by posting up copies thereof, attested by the person to whom the same is directed, in three public places in said town, seven days at least before such meeting. Such justice, or, in his absence, such principal inhabitant, shall preside until the choice of moderator in said meeting. The selectmen of the towns of Wrentham, Franklin, Medway, and Walpole shall, before said meeting, prepare a list of voters from their respective towns within said Norfolk, qualified to vote at said meeting, and shall deliver the same to the person presiding at said meeting before the choice of a moderator thereof.

"SECT. 7. This act shall take effect upon its passage. [Approved Feb. 23, 1870.]"

The First Town-Meeting.—The first town-meeting was held March 7, 1870, with Albert G. Hills as moderator. The meeting was called to order by Saul B. Scott, Esq., and Rev. Daniel Round checked the list during the voting for moderator.

The following officers were elected: Selectmen, Saul B. Scott, Levi Mann, and Erastus Dupee; Town Clerk, Silas E. Fales; Assessors, Elisha Rockwood, George E. Holbrook, and James H. Haines; Treasurer, William E. Coddling; Constables, George P. Cody and Albert E. Dupee; School Committee, J. K. Bragg, Daniel J. Holbrook, and Lothrop C. Keith; Fence-viewers, Charles Jordan and Darius Ware; Surveyors of Lumber, Levi Mann and Oren C. Ware.

The first town-meeting was closed by tendering a vote of thanks to the moderator, and also to Silas E. Fales and William A. Jepson for the gift of a ballot-box.

The following is a list of selectmen from the organization of the town to the present time:

Saul B. Scott, 1870, '71, '72, '73, '74.
 Levi Mann, 1870, '71, '72, '75, '76, '81.
 Erastus Dupee, 1870, '71.
 Henry Trowbridge, 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76.
 Henry K. W. Pond, 1873, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81.
 James E. Pollard, 1877, '78, '79, '80, '82.
 N. D. Kingsbury, 1877, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84.
 E. W. Giles, 1882, '83, '84.
 Henry Perkins, 1883, '84.

Town Clerk.—The first town clerk was Mr. Silas E. Fales, who has been annually re-elected to the present time.

Representative.—The Ninth Norfolk Representative District embraces Medfield, Dover, Needham, Norfolk, and Wellesley, and Norfolk has had since its incorporation one representative, Levi Mann, in 1882.

Town House.—The present town house was formerly the church building belonging to the North Parish, and was erected in 1796. It was entirely remodeled in 1879, and is now a convenient, neat, and attractive building, surmounted by a tower, in which is a clock the gift of Mr. Josiah Ware. The building is beautifully located, and the tower affords an extensive view of the surrounding country.

The present valuation of Norfolk is $397,856, and the number of voters one hundred and thirty.

At the first gubernatorial election held in the town William Clafin received eighty-eight votes, John Lewis Adams twenty-seven, and Wendell Phillips six.

Industrial Pursuits.—There is some manufacturing in the town, but the chief occupation is agriculture.

The City Mills are owned by the Rays, of Franklin. Rays' shoddy-mill is located on Stony Brook. There is also a paper-mill, George Campbell proprietor, located at Island Lake. There is also a small paper-mill in the west part of the town, in the building formerly owned by the Elliott Felting Company. There is a grist-mill at Norfolk Centre, owned by E. W. Mann. Island Lake is a pleasure-ground belonging to the New York and New England Railroad. It is a beautiful spot, and is much frequented during the summer season.

There are two churches located in the town, both at Norfolk Centre,—Orthodox Congregational (Rev. Francis F. Williams pastor) and the Baptist Church (Rev. Daniel Round pastor).

The schools of the town are in good condition. The following abstract is taken from the report of the school committee for the fiscal year ending Jan. 31, 1884:

ABSTRACT FROM SCHOOL REGISTERS.

Names of Schools.	Whole Number of Scholars.	Average Attendance.	Per Cent. of Attendance.	Number of Scholars over 15 years.	Number of Scholars under 5 years.	Teachers' Names.	Wages per Month.
Spring Term.
Centre.....	44	35	79	0	0	Olive A. Thompson	$36
North.....	30	29	96	1	0	Lizzie Turkington.	36
Felting Mills	30	27	90	0	1	Malvina V. Scott.	32
River End....	17	15	88	0	1	Nettie L. Poole.	32
Pondville.....	11	10	91	0	0	Lucy A. Warren.	28
Stony Brook..	13	10	78	0	0	Mabel E. Caffin.	30
Fall Term.
Centre.....	39	37	92	0	0	Jessie G. Prescott.	36
North.....	31	29	93	0	0	Lizzie Turkington.	36
Felting Mills	32	27	84	0	1	Malvina V. Scott.	32
River End....	11	10	90	0	0	Ida M. Guild.	32
Pondville.....	11	10	91	0	0	Lucy A. Warren,	30
Stony Brook..	15	12	80	1	0	Lelia H. Caffin.	28
Winter Term.
Centre.....	41	30	73	1	0	Jessie G. Prescott.	36
North.....	Term unfinished.	...
Felting Mills	27	15	55	0	0	Malvina V. Scott.	32
River End....	14	14	100	0	0	Ida M. Guild.	32
Pondville.....	8	7	92	0	0	Lucy M. King.	28
Stony Brook..	12	8	67	0	0	Josie M. Gove.	30

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

JOSIAH WARE.

Josiah Ware is descended in a direct line from Robert Ware, husbandman, who, we are informed by a record prepared by W. B. Trask, of Dorchester, settled in that part of Dedham, Mass., afterwards called Wrentham. He was one of the original proprietors of lands granted June 12, 1642; was made freeman May 26, 1647; was a member of the artillery company in 1644, and died April 19, 1699. He is referred to on the town records as "Robert Ware the aged," and his name stands second, in point of wealth, on the tax list of that period. He was one of six who were "impressed, by virtue of a warrant from y^e major" in Dedham, to serve in the King Philip war. His estate was appraised by his administrators at £250 2s. 10d. This Robert Ware (1) married Margaret Hunting; their children were John, Nathaniel, Robert, Esther, Samuel, Ephraim, Ebenezer. Of these, Nathaniel (2), whose wife was named Mary, was born Oct. 7, 1649; died July 1, 1724. Their children were five sons and three daughters. One of the sons, Josiah (3), was born in Wrentham, March 21, 1707. Soon after arriving at the age of manhood he went to Needham, purchased a tract of uncultivated land, which he improved and cultivated, and on which he resided till his death, 1798. He married Lydia Macintire, Jan. 7, 1741. Their children were Josiah, Elijah, Lydia, Elijah (2). His second wife was Dorothy Dewen, by whom he had Asa, Dorothy, Joseph, and Daniel. His third wife was Mehitable Whitney, by whom he had Mehitable and William. His fourth wife was Sibel Robinson. By this marriage there was no issue. Of these ten children some of them attained positions of prominence and were men of note in their day. Asa fought under Gen. Lee, and lost a hand at the battle of Monmouth. He was deacon of the Congregational Church at Wrentham nearly forty years. Joseph was a farmer, and at the commencement of the war of the Revolution he entered the army and served through the war, was at the battles of Concord and Ticonderoga, and acted as orderly-sergeant and recruiting officer. He was one of the soldiers who engaged in 1775, under Col. Benedict Arnold, in the disastrous expedition against Quebec. During this expedition he suffered almost incredible hardships, as is shown by a journal which he kept, and which has since been published. Daniel, another son, passed two short terms of service in the army as orderly sergeant, and afterwards filled various public offices in Needham.

Josiah (4), the eldest son, and ancestor of the Josiah whose portrait accompanies this sketch, was born in Needham, Sept. 15, 1742. He removed when young to Wrentham, married Lois, daughter of Elisha and Phebe Ware, June 8, 1770. He was a very worthy man, and an industrious, enterprising farmer, and was one of the building committee for erecting the first church in North Wrentham. His children were Rhoda (died young), Eunice, (married Daniel Cook), Josiah, Elisha, Lucy (married Benjamin Rockwood), Darius, and Lois (married Josiah Coddington). He died Oct. 23, 1836.

Josiah (5) was brought up on the farm, but also learned shoemaking. He married Mehitable Richardson, daughter of Eli Richardson, of Franklin (now Norfolk), and removed to Oxford, Mass. There their only child, Josiah (6), was born, Dec. 12, 1812; and when he was but six years of age, Mrs. Ware died. Mr. Ware then went west to New York State, where he married again, and a few years later died. Young Josiah was adopted into the family of his uncle, Daniel Cook, of Wrentham, where he received a common-school education, and was brought up to work on the farm. The abundance of out-door exercise in his youth assisted in laying the foundation for a very vigorous constitution, and to-day, at upwards of seventy years, he looks as though he had cheated old Father Time out of at least twenty years. He is one of the best-preserved men of his years in Norfolk County, or perhaps in the State. Upon attaining his majority he left Mr. Cook and hired out to work on a neighboring farm one year, at the expiration of which time he returned to Mr. Cook. In his twenty-fourth year he married Patty M., daughter of Enoch and Betsey Blake, of Wrentham.

He then purchased a small farm in Wrentham and engaged in agriculture, in addition to which he also did a great deal of lumbering and teaming of various kinds, and gradually but surely built up his little fortune. In December, 1860, Mrs. Ware died, leaving no issue. Mr. Ware married as his second wife, January, 1862, Ann Blake, sister of his first consort.

When the Norfolk County Railroad (now New York and New England Railroad) was built, Mr. Ware was appointed its first agent at Norfolk Station, a position which he has held to the present time through all changes of administration and management. In order to be convenient to his business he purchased land adjacent to the depot, and erected a dwelling-house and out-buildings. At this place he has continued to reside to the present time.

In addition to his duties as railroad agent he has carried on farming, teaming, and lumbering somewhat extensively, and at one time did a very considerable livery business. He is at present doing a large lumber business in copartnership with C. J. Murphy, a young man whom Mr. Ware brought up from the age of thirteen.

Josiah Ware

In political matters Mr. Ware has always taken a liberal and broad stand, voting for the man rather than the party. He has devoted himself to his business, and avoided all office-seeking, although he has consented to fill a number of minor positions.

He has been a remarkably energetic and industrious man, public-spirited and enterprising in all matters pertaining to the public weal and welfare of his town. And when any matter of public improvement has been undertaken, he has always stood ready to do his part, and more.

An instance will serve to illustrate the character of the man. When it was proposed to erect a town house, an old church was tendered by the parish as a building suitable for the purpose when properly repaired. It was the old house where from his boyhood Mr. Ware had attended church, and his reverence for the ancient and venerable structure was such, and his desire for its preservation, that he took a very active part, and gave of his means substantial aid toward having it repaired and remodeled. He was chairman of the building committee, and when completed he placed therein, at his own expense, an elegant and valuable tower clock, which will tell the hour to the passer-by for many a year, and stand as a striking example of Mr. Ware's generous nature. This is but one of many liberal deeds, but it is illustrative.

Mr. Ware enjoys to an eminent degree the confidence of his fellow-townsmen, and is one of the few representatives of the ancient and honorable pioneer families of this section who converted the wilderness into the blooming garden and fruitful field.

A P P E N D I X.

THE NORFOLK CLUB.

BY A. E. SPROUL.

THE Norfolk Club was organized on March 15, 1884, at Young's Hotel, in Boston, by gentlemen representing the Republican party of Norfolk County. It was the result of a movement which had been begun only a few weeks before, but which, from the very start, had met with almost unexampled favor among the class of gentlemen whom it was designed to interest in its welfare. At one or two previous gatherings of the projectors of the club a preliminary organization had been effected, and a committee was appointed to issue a "call" for a dinner and report a plan for permanent organization. Upwards of one hundred and twenty-five gentlemen having assembled in one of the hotel parlors, therefore, previous to the dinner, the president pro tempore, Maj. J. H. Gould, of Medfield, called them to order, and introduced Mr. George Fred Williams, of Dedham, chairman of the committee before mentioned. Mr. Williams briefly summarized the previous doings of the gentlemen who originated the organization, and then, on behalf of the committee, presented a series of by-laws and a list of permanent officers for the action of the gentlemen present. The by-laws, which were adopted after a brief discussion, were as follows:

"ARTICLE I. This Club shall be called the Norfolk Club, its object being for political and social purposes only.

"ARTICLE II. The officers shall consist of a president, ten vice-presidents, a secretary, a treasurer, and an executive committee of five members, who shall be elected at the first meeting held in each year.

"ARTICLE III. All recommendations or applications for membership shall be made to the executive committee in writing, and, if approved by them, shall be reported to the next regular meeting. Five votes in the negative shall exclude a candidate from admission.

"ARTICLE IV. An admission-fee of two dollars shall be paid by each new member, and the annual dues shall be one dollar each; and no person shall be entitled to membership until after payment of the same.

"ARTICLE V. Meetings of the Club shall be held at such times and places as the executive committee shall deem advisable, and notice to all members shall be sent by the secretary.

"ARTICLE VI. The executive committee shall have the general management of the affairs of the Club, including invitations to guests; but this shall not exclude members from inviting friends."

The list of officers presented was also unanimously ratified, as follows: President, Asa French, of Braintree; Vice-Presidents, Moses Williams, of Brookline, J. H. Gould, of Medfield, David W. Tucker, of Milton, John W. Candler, of Brookline, J. White Belcher, of Randolph, Frank M. Ames, of Canton, Warren E.

Locke, of Norwood, Joseph G. Ray, of Franklin, Dr. W. E. C. Swan, of Stoughton, Albert Jennings, of Wellesley; Secretary, George Fred Williams, of Dedham; Treasurer, Enos H. Tucker, of Needham; Executive Committee, J. Walter Bradlee, of Milton, Charles H. Smith, of Dover, Warren W. Adams, of Quincy, H. A. Thomas, of Weymouth, Fred H. Williams, of Foxborough.

At the conclusion of the business meeting the gentlemen adjourned to the dining-room. When cigars had been reached, in due course, Maj. Gould briefly introduced Mr. George Fred Williams, of Dedham, as the presiding officer of the occasion. The latter gentleman announced that members of the Middlesex and Massachusetts Clubs, who had been dining in the same hotel, had been invited to come in and join the Norfolk. A few moments later the gentlemen of the two clubs marched in, the Norfolk members rising and applauding loudly. The post-prandial exercises were participated in by well-known gentlemen of each of the three clubs, and were of a most interesting and jovial nature.

Hon. Asa French, the president of the new club, is a resident of South Braintree, where his home has been for many years. Never active in politics, he has given his best energies to the practice of his profession,—the law. For a number of years he was district attorney for the southeastern district (comprising Norfolk and Plymouth Counties), where he achieved a high professional distinction. Declining a seat upon the bench of the Superior Court, tendered him by Governor Long, he resigned his attorneyship in the fall of 1882 to accept an appointment as one of the judges of the Court of Alabama Claims in Washington. Some years ago Mr. French represented the town of Braintree in the Massachusetts House of Representatives. His fitness for the presidency of the new club was immediately recognized.

The following gentlemen had signed the by-laws, and constituted themselves members of the club, up to the close of the club's second dinner, on April 12, 1884, on which occasion several State officials and other distinguished men were present as guests:

Name.	Post-office Address.
J. White Belcher.....	Randolph.
J. Walter Bradlee.....	Milton.
Charles H. Smith.....	Dover.
Warren W. Adams.....	Quincy.
George Fred Williams.....	Dedham.
H. M. Federhen.....	Quincy.
W. L. Faxon.....	Quincy.
Fred H. Williams.....	Foxborough.
Erastus Worthington.....	Dedham.

Name.	Post-office Address.
J. H. Gould.....	Medfield.
S. C. Putnam.....	Hyde Park.
M. F. Johnson.....	Foxborough.
Henry H. Faxon.....	Quincy.
Charles A. Foster.....	Quincy.
Jonathan Wales.....	Randolph.
George B. Nichols.....	Randolph.
Alfred E. Newhall.....	Weymouth.
John Q. A. Field.....	Quincy.
Charles H. Mayo.....	Wellesley.
E. S. Morse.....	Dedham.
John M. Whitcomb.....	South Weymouth.
Richard L. Gay.....	Hyde Park.
Napoleon B. Furnald.....	Quincy.
Samuel L. White.....	Holbrook.
Isaac Fenno.....	Canton.
James T. Stevens.....	South Braintree.
Thomas E. Grover.....	Canton.
George D. Willis.....	South Braintree.
N. W. Dunbar.....	Canton.
Sanford Waters Billings.....	Sharon.
Henry S. Buntun.....	Hyde Park.
James Atherton.....	Stoughton.
James Hewins.....	Medfield.
Milton M. Fisher.....	Medway.
Albert Jennings.....	Wellesley.
R. G. F. Candage.....	Brookline.
James W. Edgerly.....	Brookline.
J. T. Southworth.....	Holbrook.
Lyman K. Putney.....	Wellesley.
J. W. C. Seavey.....	Canton.
J. Anson Guild.....	Brookline.
William A. Wyckoff.....	Franklin.
William F. Ray.....	Franklin.
Elijah A. Morse.....	Canton.
Samuel M. Colcord.....	Dover.
Eben Higgins.....	Dover.
B. F. Baker.....	Brookline.
Waldo F. Ward.....	Hyde Park.
Orin T. Gray.....	Hyde Park.
John S. Bleakie.....	Hyde Park.
Herbert Moseley.....	Needham.
George W. Tisdale.....	Needham.
William Gorse.....	Highlandville.
H. A. Hill.....	Hyde Park.
J. D. Hunt.....	Foxborough.
James M. Ellis.....	Dedham.
F. H. Maddocks.....	Foxborough.
Louis A. Cook.....	South Weymouth.
Ephraim A. Wood.....	Wellesley.
Robert W. Carpenter.....	Foxborough.
William H. Wade.....	Plainville.
Willis M. Fuller.....	Plainville.
H. U. Wilson.....	Plainville.
Frederic Endicott.....	Canton.
Benjamin H. Sanborn.....	Wellesley.
A. E. Miller.....	Needham.
C. W. Fearing.....	Mass. Ins. Technology, Boston.
P. S. Young, Jr.....	Dedham.
F. E. Holmes.....	Canton.
Charles J. McKenzie.....	Franklin.
George W. Wiggin.....	Franklin.
E. B. Thorndike.....	Canton.
A. T. Starkey.....	Foxborough.
Emery Grover.....	Needham.
Cyrus W. Jones.....	Needham.
O. C. Livermore.....	Wellesley Hills.
W. R. Chester.....	Brookline.
Everett J. Eaton.....	Needham.
George R. R. Rivers.....	Milton.
Sumner C. Chandler.....	Brookline.
Joseph G. Ray.....	Franklin.
John C. Lane.....	Norwood.
J. P. S. Churchill.....	Milton.
John B. Bass.....	Quincy.
John T. Stetson.....	Franklin.
Arthur Williams.....	Brookline.
Frank M. Ames.....	Canton.
Oakes Ames.....	Canton.
Augustus L. Ware.....	East Medway.
Charles F. Jenney.....	Hyde Park.
Frederick D. Ely.....	Dedham.
Henry N. Clark.....	Holbrook.
Edward Rosenfeld.....	South Weymouth.
George E. Downes.....	Canton.
Samuel H. Capen.....	Canton.
F. L. Babcock.....	Dedham.
E. H. Tucker.....	Needham.
A. R. Holmes.....	Canton.
James R. Wild.....	Quincy.
S. S. Gifford.....	East Stoughton.
Aaron Twigg.....	Needham.
William W. Thomas.....	Quincy.
W. F. Humphrey.....	Brookline.
John Humphrey.....	Dorchester.
Cornelius L. White.....	Brookville.
N. D. Canterbury.....	East Weymouth.
H. A. Thomas.....	South Weymouth.
L. Mills.....	East Medway.
Joseph McKean Churchill.....	Milton.
J. Winsor Pratt.....	Randolph.

Name.	Post-office Address.
E. C. Bumpus.....	Quincy.
George M. Towle.....	Brookline.
Asa P. French.....	South Braintree.
A. H. Tower.....	Cohasset.
H. H. McQuillen.....	Dedham.
George B. French.....	Holbrook.
Charles H. Porter.....	Quincy.
Edward Isaiah Thomas.....	Brookline.
Alonzo B. Wentworth.....	Dedham.
E. D. Houston.....	Franklin.
Walter R. Swan.....	Stoughton.
William Curtis.....	Stoughton.
L. W. Morrison.....	Braintree.
Levi Ladd.....	Needham.
Josiah Reed.....	South Weymouth.
Bradford Lewis.....	Walpole.
F. Rockwood Hall.....	Brookline.
Charles J. McPherson.....	Walpole.
C. G. Hathaway.....	Randolph.
Frank B. Rich.....	Hyde Park.
J. Q. A. Lothrop.....	Cohasset.
F. L. Fisher.....	Medway.
S. A. Merrill.....	Wollaston Heights.
Theophilus King, Jr.....	Quincy.
Rufus C. Wood.....	Dedham.
C. A. Thayer.....	Randolph.
H. W. Pratt.....	Randolph.
Charles Endicott.....	Canton.
W. E. C. Swan.....	Stoughton.
J. L. Whitton.....	Quincy Point.
Samuel R. Moseley.....	Hyde Park.
Walton Hall.....	Quincy Point.
C. F. Allen.....	Hyde Park.
Robert Bleakie.....	Hyde Park.
George A. Fletcher.....	Milton.
Frederic J. Stinson.....	Dedham.
Asa French.....	Braintree.

QUINCY.

The Quincy Patriot, which is the oldest paper in Norfolk County, was established in Quincy, Mass., Jan. 1, 1837, by Messrs. Green & Osborne. It was conducted only three months under this firm when Mr. Osborne retired, and Mr. John A. Green, the senior member, assumed the control, and it continued under his management the succeeding fourteen years.

In July, 1851, Mr. Green sold the Patriot to Messrs. Gideon F. Thayer and George White. These gentlemen being unacquainted with the printing business, found, notwithstanding the talent and ability they brought into their new field of labor, that the editing of a country paper was not a remunerative business, and after nine months of editorial honors Mr. Thayer sold his interest to Mr. White, who for the year following labored hard, only to find, like his retiring partner, that his editorial labors were not a financial success.

Mr. Green again became its possessor, and continued its publication until his death, in 1861. At this time his widow assumed charge, and continued its publication until 1869, when Mr. George W. Prescott, who had been her business manager, entered into a partnership, and the Patriot has been conducted very successfully under their editorial labors, and has now a circulation unsurpassed by any other paper in the county.

When the Patriot was first published in 1837 it was a very diminutive sheet, being only twenty by thirty inches in size. When Messrs. Thayer & White became owners they increased the size to twenty-two by thirty-two inches. It remained this size until 1866, when it was enlarged to twenty-four by thirty-six inches.

In 1872 it was again enlarged to twenty-six and a half by forty-one inches. The publishers in 1880 again felt the necessity of enlarging the Patriot to meet the wants of their numerous patrons. This time it was made to the size twenty-nine by forty-four inches; and a beautiful engraving representing the granite business, the principal business of the town, was placed at the top of the first page.

The Patriot has now almost reached a half-century, and can feel proud of its record, for during all this time it has never missed one publication, and has always been set in type and printed in the building that the first number was issued from. The present publishers have made it an independent sheet, free from all sectarian and political bias, and have thereby secured a very large advertising patronage, and at the same time secured a very large circulation at a subscription price of two dollars and fifty cents per year.

The Quincy Aurora was started by Charles Clapp, Jan. 1, 1843, and was discontinued in about three years.

The Quincy Free Press was established Sept. 7, 1878, by N. T. Merritt, but is now obsolete.

Quincy Quarry Interest.—The following is a list of the firms that have been engaged in the quarry business since 1813. The date preceding the name indicates the date of beginning business. 1813, Newcomb & Richards, composed of Bryant Newcomb and Joseph Richards; 1817, William Packard; 1825, Granite Railway Company, Gridley Bryant, agent, succeeded by S. R. Robinson, George Penniman, J. B. Whicher, and O. E. Shelden; 1827, Richards & Newcomb (Joseph Richards, Jonathan Newcomb); 1827, Bunker Hill Association, Solomon Williard, agent; 1827, Samuel Martin; 1828, Thomas Hollis; 1829, Newcomb Brothers (Jona A. and Samuel Newcomb); 1829, Richards & Munn (Joseph Richards, Luther Munn); 1834, Thomas Hollis, Jr.; 1834-42, Wright & Barker (Henry Barker and Abel Wright); 1842-64, Barker, Wright & Co.; 1866, Henry Barker & Sons; 1835, O. T. Rogers & Co. (O. T. Rogers, Jacob Bunton, Samuel Babcock, and Noah Cummings); 1836, Moore, Day & Co.; 1836, A. J. Moshier & Co.; 1836, Beal & Frederick (Horace Beal and Eleazer Frederick); 1837, Frederick & Field (E. Frederick and William Field); 1838, New York Exchange Company, Solomon Williard, agent; 1840, Richards, Munn & Co. (Joseph Richards, Luther Munn, Lysander Richards, and John S. Lyons); 1844, J. B. Whicher & Co. (J. B. Whicher, O. E. Shelden, J. Jameson, and Samuel Ely).

The following are also engaged in the quarrying business: Josiah Bemis, Joel Bemis, George Follett, Thomas Drake; Greenleaf Quarry: James Newcomb worked in the South and North Commons; B. Newcomb, J. Newcomb, and S. Newcomb, in the South Common; Ezra Beals worked the Gass Quarry, now worked by Field & Wild; William Pachter worked the Pachter Quarry, now worked by C. H.

Hardwick & Co.; Samuel Martin, Thomas Hollis, Thomas Hollis & Flanders, Rattlesnake Quarry, now worked by O. T. Rogers & Co.; Bass Quarry, now worked by Frederick & Field; William M. Kidder also worked the Bass Quarry, John L. Dutton also worked the Gass Quarry, and Ezra Badger worked near Mount Ararat, now operated by Churchill & Co.; Frederick J. Fuller, James Garrety, Lewis Dell & Co., Carris & Co., William Shay & Son, McKenzie & Patterson, Mitchel Granite-Works, Badger Brothers, P. F. Lacy, Harris Farnum, Adam Vogle & Son, J. S. Vogle, Miller & Luce, McDonald Brothers, Merrymount Granite Co., McGrath Brothers, and numerous others, embracing probably nearly one hundred firms engaged in the various branches of the business.

REPRESENTATIVES TO GENERAL COURT FROM 1792 TO 1884.

1792. Peter Boylston Adams, Esq.	1840. Henry Wood.
1793. Voted not to send.	1841. William B. Duggan.
1794. Peter Boylston Adams, Esq.	1842. John Gregory.
1795. Benjamin Beale, Esq.	1843. No choice.
1796. Voted not to send.	1844. Voted not to send.
1797. Moses Black, Esq.	1845. No choice.
1798. Benjamin Beale, Esq.	1846. No choice.
1799-1802. Moses Black.	1847. No choice.
1803. Voted not to send.	1848. George Marsh.
1804. Moses Black.	1849. Voted not to send.
1805. Thomas B. Adams.	1850. Joseph W. Robertson.
1806. Benjamin Beale.	George Marsh.
1807. Voted not to send.	1851. No choice.
1808-11. Thomas Greenleaf.	1852. Noah Cummings.
1812-20. Thomas Greenleaf.	Frederick A. Trask.
Benjamin Beale.	1853. No choice.
1821. Edward Miller.	1854. Wyman Abercrombie.
Noah Curtis.	Thomas C. Webb.
1822. Voted not to send.	1855. Wyman Abercrombie.
1823-24. Edward Miller.	William W. Baxter.
1825. Peter Whitney.	1856. George L. Gill.
1826. Voted not to send.	Francis M. Johnson.
1827. John Whitney.	1857. Franklin Curtis.
1828-30. John Souther.	1858. William S. Morton.
1831. John Souther.	1859. Jonathan Jameson.
Edward Glover.	1860. Charles Marsh.
1832. Thomas Taylor.	1861. Noah Cummings.
Edward Glover.	1862. John Chamberlin.
1833. Thomas Taylor.	1863. Henry Barker.
Edward Glover.	1864. Henry H. Faxon.
John Souther.	1865. John Quincy Adams.
1834-35. Thomas Taylor.	1866. George L. Gill.
Edward Glover.	1867. John Quincy Adams.
Harvey Field.	1868. Henry Barker.
1836. Harvey Field.	1869. Edmund B. Taylor.
1837. John Whitney.	1870. John Quincy Adams.
1838. William B. Duggan.	1871. Henry H. Faxon.
Lemuel Spear.	1872. James A. Stetson.
James Newcomb.	1873. John Quincy Adams.
1839. Nathaniel White.	1874. William A. Hodges.
George Baxter.	1875. John D. Whicher.
Ebenezer Bent.

In 1876 a change was made in the representative districts. Quincy and Weymouth were united and allowed three representatives. Since then the following have been elected, viz.:

- 1876.—Henry F. Barker, of Quincy; Benjamin S. Lovell, George F. Hayden, of Weymouth.
 1877.—Edwin W. Marsh, of Quincy; Benjamin S. Lovell, George F. Hayden, of Weymouth.
 1878.—Edwin W. Marsh, Edwin B. Pratt, of Quincy; Freeman Hollis, of Weymouth.

- 1879.—Edwin B. Pratt, of Quincy; Nathan D. Canterbury, Louis A. Cook, of Weymouth.
 1880.—Charles H. Porter, James Edwards, of Quincy; Nathan D. Canterbury, of Weymouth.
 1881.—Charles H. Porter, of Quincy; Francis A. Bicknell, Nathan D. Canterbury, of Weymouth.
 1882.—William G. A. Pattee, William N. Eaton, and George A. Barker, all of Quincy.
 1883.—William G. A. Pattee, William N. Eaton, of Quincy; George A. Cushing, of Weymouth.

QUINCY'S QUOTA, 1861-1866.

Compiled from the Adjutant-General's Records.

Three Months' Service, 1861.

FOURTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M.

Mustered in the United States service, April 22, 1861, for three months, and discharged July 22, 1861.

Abner B. Packard, col.; Henry M. Saville, surg.; William L. Faxon, assist. surg.; Henry Walker, adjt.

Company H.

Franklin Curtis, capt.	Robert Monk, sergt.
Edward A. Spear, 1st lieu.	William H. H. Lapham, corp.
Benjamin F. Meservey, 2d lieu.	Thomas Smith, corp.
Charles F. Pray, 1st sergt.	William S. Wilbur, corp.
Matthew M. C. Chubbuck, sergt.	Morton Packard, corp.
John Williams, sergt.

Privates.

Brockett, Caleb.	Nightingale, Alonzo A.
Chubbuck, David T.	Nightingale, Samuel A.
Colburn, Lemuel A.	Nutting, Charles A.
Dowd, James J.	Nutting, Edward W. H.
Feltis, William H.	Perkins, Edward L.
French, Daniel F.	Pope, Alexander P.
Gibson, George W.	Pope, William O.
Hayden, George L.	Reynolds, William W.
Jameson, Charles H.	Riley, Charles D.
Josselyn, Robert.	Rideout, Luke A.
Kimball, Howard M. ¹	Shaw, Horatio E.
Lamson, John H.	Spear, Warren Q.
Lapham, Frederick A.	Totman, Freeman M.
Lapham, Joseph A.	Turner, Henry C. ¹
Larkin, John.	Turner, John B. ¹
Marden, Frank M.	Wildman, Henry G.

The following were recruited to fill up the company, were mustered in May 22, 1861, and served two months:

George W. Pope, drum-major.	Albert Keating, musician.
-----------------------------	---------------------------

Privates.

Bent, Luther S.	Furnald, Alonzo.
Bent, F. Edward.	Glover, Nathaniel E.
Barker, Henry F.	Hunt, Charles N.
Bass, Benjamin F.	Josephs, Freeman.
Baxter, William H.	Joyce, Edwin L.
Brown, Edwin.	Margue, Peter P.
Burrill, David J.	Newcomb, Peter.
Chubbuck, Percy, Jr.	Nightingale, Wyman B.
Cleverly, George F.	Parker, John, Jr.
Cunningham, James H.	Pierce, Charles E.
Cummings, Noah L.	Prior, Hiram B.
Damon, Edward, Jr.	Sheen, William G.
Enderle, Joseph S.	Spear, Christopher A.
Ewell, Lendell H.	Souther, Francis L. ²
Fisher, Richard H.	Souther, Horace O.

FIFTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M., COMPANY G.

Southern, George G.

SIXTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M., COMPANY E.

Whitney, John.

Three Years' Service.

FIRST REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Sampson, Charles M., Co. D, must. May 24, 1861; disch. November, 1865; pro. capt. and A.Q.M., U. S. V.
 Bent, Luther M., Co. I, must. May 24, 1861; died Oct. 1, 1862.
 Kidder, George R., Co. I, must. May 24, 1861; disch. May 25, 1864.

SECOND REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Nutting, Abel, Band, must. May 25, 1861; disch. Sept. 8, 1862.
 Watson, Benjamin, Band, must. May 25, 1861; disch. Sept. 8, 1862.
 Starbuck, George, Co. E, must. May 25, 1861; died Feb. 24, 1863.
 Billings, James D., Co. G, must. May 25, 1861; disch. Feb. 4, 1863.
 Cronin, John, Co. G, must. May 25, 1861; disch. Oct. 17, 1863.
 Moriarty, Dennis, Co. G, must. May 25, 1861; died April 1, 1862.
 O'Connell, Andrew, Co. G, must. May 25, 1861; disch. July 26, 1863.
 O'Connell, Maurice, Co. G, must. May 25, 1861; disch. July 26, 1863.
 Scannell, James, Co. G, must. May 25, 1861; disch. April 22, 1863.
 Toal, John, Co. G, must. May 25, 1861; disch. May 28, 1864.
 Hathaway, George B., Co. G, must. Aug. 29, 1864; disch. July 14, 1865.
 Alston, Michael, Johnson, William, Lomas, William, unassigned recruits, must. June 15, 1864, but never joined the regiment.

SEVENTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Hetherston, Martin C, sergt. Co. E, must. June 15, 1861; disch. Dec. 26, 1863, to re-enlist; re-enl. Dec. 27, 1863; trans. to 37th Inf. June 14, 1864.

Keegan, Stephen J., Co. E, must. June 15, 1861; disch. June 27, 1864.

NINTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Dasey, Daniel, Co. A, must. Feb. 4, 1862; deserted April 29, 1863.
 Kirvan, Thomas, Co. A, June 11, 1861; deserted Aug. 21, 1863.
 Buchan, William, Co. B, must. Feb. 18, 1862; trans. to 32d Inf. June 9, 1864.
 McIntire, William, Co. B, must. June 11, 1861; deserted June 29, 1863.
 Burke, William, Co. C, must. Feb. 11, 1862; trans. to 32d Inf. June 10, 1864.
 O'Mahony, Daniel, Co. C, must. Feb. 26, 1862; trans. to 32d Inf. June 10, 1864.
 O'Neal, Patrick, Co. C, must. June 11, 1861; deserted Aug. 28, 1862.
 Messer, Charles E., Co. D, must. June 11, 1861; disch. March 20, 1863.
 Davenport, Michael, Co. E, must. June 11, 1861; disch. June 21, 1864.
 Enright, Michael, Co. E, must. June 11, 1861; died Jan. 11, 1863.
 Fenton, Michael, Co. E, must. June 11, 1861; trans. to 17th Inf.
 Nole, James P., Co. E, must. Aug. 27, 1863; killed May 12, 1864.
 McGann, John, Co. G, must. Feb. 5, 1862; disch. March 6, 1863.
 Doran, Andrew, corp., Co. I, must. June 11, 1861; disch. Feb. 12, 1863.
 Cullen, John, Co. I, must. June 11, 1861; disch. Nov. 19, 1862.
 Mundy, Bernard, Co. I, must. June 11, 1861; disch. Sept. 21, 1861.
 Flynn, Joseph, Co. K, must. June 11, 1861; killed May 5, 1864.
 Napht, Mathias, Co. K, must. Aug. 21, 1863; trans. to 32d Inf.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Ricker, John W., Co. A, must. June 13, 1861; disch. Dec. 28, 1863, to re-enlist; re-enl. Dec. 29, 1863; disch. July 14, 1865.
 Connell, John, Co. C, must. June 13, 1861; disch. June 24, 1864.
 Fallon, Thomas, Co. D, must. June 13, 1861; disch. Sept. 21, 1863.
 Scott, John, Co. E, must. June 13, 1861; disch. June 24, 1864.
 Howe, Belcher S., corp., Co. F, must. Dec. 26, 1863; disch. July 14, 1865; trans. from 16th Inf.
 Quincy, Charles O., Co. F, must. June 13, 1861; disch. June 17, 1864; trans. to V. R. C. July 16, 1863.
 Wood, Henry A., Co. F, must. June 13, 1861; missing Aug. 29, 1862.
 Bent, George A., Co. H, must. June 13, 1861; disch. June 24, 1864; trans. to V. R. C. Sept. 12, 1863.
 Bent, John Q., Co. H, must. June 13, 1861; disch. June 24, 1864.
 Ryan, Peter, Co. H, must. June 13, 1861; disch. August, 1865; trans. to U. S. A. Nov. 1, 1862.
 White, Henry C., Co. I, must. June 13, 1861; disch. June 14, 1864; trans. to V. R. C. Aug. 24, 1863.
 Maloney, Thomas, Co. K, must. Aug. 14, 1863; died March 13, 1864.

TWELFTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Manning, Michael, sergt., Co. C, must. June 21, 1861; disch. April 1, 1864.
 Thayer, William F., Co. C, must. June 21, 1861; disch. Dec. 4, 1863.
 Pratt, J. Wesley, Co. D, must. July 10, 1863; disch. Jan. 4, 1864.

¹ Non-resident.² Died from wounds received at battle of Big Bethel.

Phillips, George L., Co. E, must. June 26, 1861; disch. July 8, 1861.
Wright, George W., sergt., Co. K, must. June 26, 1861; disch. July 8, 1861.

THIRTEENTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Holden, Henry A., Co. A, must. July 16, 1861; killed Aug. 30, 1862.
Bigelow, Loring, corp., Co. B, must. July 16, 1861; died Oct. 18, 1862.
Field, William A., Co. B, must. July 16, 1861; disch. June 25, 1862.
Stetson, Warren B., Co. B, must. July 16, 1861; disch. Dec. 30, 1862.
Brown, Frank, Co. G, must. July 28, 1863; trans. to navy April 23, 1864.

FIFTEENTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Moore, Henry, Co. G, must. Aug. 1, 1863; deserted April 18, 1864.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Hart, Bernard, corp., Co. A, must. July 2, 1861; disch. Oct. 12, 1863.
Gallagher, Edward, Co. C, must. Aug. 17, 1863; deserted Feb. 27, 1864.
Bowditch, Joseph E., Co. F, must. Dec. 23, 1861; disch. Aug. 26, 1863.
Howe, Belcher S., corp., Co. I, must. Dec. 23, 1861; disch. Dec. 26, 1863, to re-enlist; re-enl. Dec. 27, 1863; trans. to 11th Inf. July 11, 1864.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Maley, Melville, sergt., Co. D, must. Sept. 20, 1864; disch. June 30, 1865.
Briggs, William H., Co. D, must. Sept. 13, 1864; disch. June 30, 1865; trans. from 2d Heavy Artillery.
Fenton, Michael, Co. D, must. March 10, 1862; disch. May 9, 1863.
Fallon, Patrick, Co. E, must. Jan. 26, 1862; disch. March 14, 1864, to re-enlist.
Usher, James, Co. E, must. Jan. 20, 1862; disch. April 3, 1863.
Murphy, James B., corp., Co. G, must. Sept. 2, 1864; disch. June 30, 1865; trans. from 2d Heavy Artillery.

EIGHTEENTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Meservy, Benjamin F., 1st lieutenant, must. Aug. 20, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1864; pro. capt. Oct. 24, 1862; brev. maj.
Hunt, James W., Co. A, must. Sept. 23, 1861; disch. Jan. 25, 1862.
Hunt, Harrison S., Co. C, must. Jan. 14, 1862; disch. Aug. 20, 1862.
Dowd, James J., Co. E, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1864.
Snell, Aaron H., Co. E, must. Feb. 16, 1864; killed June 3, 1864.
Gummings, Charles, Co. F, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Jan. 24, 1863.
Schmidt, William, Co. F, must. Aug. 24, 1863; deserted Sept. 16, 1863.

Company K.

Pray, Charles F., 1st sergt., must. Aug. 24, 1861; pro. sergt.-maj., 2d lieutenant, 1st lieutenant, capt.; killed June 3, 1864.
Bent, Luther S., sergt., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 4, 1864; pro. 2d lieutenant, 1st lieutenant, capt., maj.
Pratt, John A., sergt., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Feb. 15, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Feb. 16, 1864; disch. Sept. 2, 1864; pro. 1st lieutenant.
Smith, Thomas, corp., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Jan. 26, 1863.
Carver, Charles W., corp., must. Aug. 24, 1861; died Nov. 26, 1862.
Chubbuck, James, corp., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Feb. 15, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Feb. 16, 1864; killed June 3, 1864.
Packard, Morton, corp., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Feb. 15, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Feb. 16, 1864; trans. to 32d Inf.; died Oct. 20, 1864.
Spear, Warren Q., corp., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Jan. 6, 1863.
Jameson, Charles H., corp., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1864; pro. 1st sergt.
Marden, Frank M., corp., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1864.
Harrington, Leonard B., must. Aug. 24, 1861; died May 22, 1862.
Nourse, Hiram P., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1864.
Nutting, Charles A., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Feb. 8, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Feb. 9, 1864; trans. to 32d Inf. Oct. 26, 1864.
White, John, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Feb. 15, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Feb. 16, 1864; trans. to 32d Inf. Oct. 26, 1864.
Cain, Edward, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1864.
Chubbuck, Frank G., must. Aug. 24, 1861; died Oct. 7, 1863.
Dow, Lorenzo, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Feb. 15, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Feb. 16, 1864; trans. to 32d Inf. Oct. 26, 1864.
Flanigan, Michael, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1864.
Foster, Greenleaf, must. Aug. 24, 1861; died March 3, 1864.
French, Daniel F., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Nov. 8, 1862.
Gibson, Edward J., must. Aug. 24, 1861; died Oct. 24, 1862.
Golding, James, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. April 19, 1864.
Howard, Alonzo, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. March 3, 1863.
Jones, Joshua, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1864.
Lapham, Joseph A., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Feb. 28, 1863.

Marque, Peter, must. Aug. 24, 1861; killed Aug. 30, 1862.
McKay, Duncan, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1864.
Packard, Henry F., must. Aug. 24, 1861; died Jan. 3, 1863.
Perkins, Edward L., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1864.
O'Connell, Thomas, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Feb. 29, 1864.
Pierce, Samuel, must. Aug. 24, 1861; killed Aug. 30, 1862.
Pope, Alexander P., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Feb. 15, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Feb. 16, 1864; trans. to 32d Inf. Oct. 26, 1864.
Pope, William O., must. Aug. 24, 1861; drowned Jan. 23, 1864.
Rideout, Luke A., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Nov. 15, 1862.
Swan, Charles S., must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 10, 1862.
Tracy, Edward L., must. Aug. 24, 1861; deserted May 5, 1862.
Walsh, Peter, must. Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Jan. 1, 1863.

NINETEENTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Chubbuck, David T., Co. K, must. Aug. 28, 1861; disch. Dec. 30, 1864; pro. 2d lieutenant, 1st lieutenant.
Toomey, Michael, Co. I, must. May 19, 1864; disch. June 30, 1865.

TWENTIETH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Leland, Morace F., Co. A, must. July 19, 1862; deserted August, 1863.
Hanifan, John, Co. B, must. July 22, 1861; disch. July 27, 1865; trans. to V. R. C. Feb. 15, 1864.
Wildman, Henry G., Co. B, must. Aug. 6, 1861; dishonorably discharged by court-martial, Jan. 20, 1863.
Derry, Horace A., sergt., Co. D; must. July 18, 1861; disch. Jan. 6, 1863; pro. 2d lieutenant, declined commission.
Dag, John, Co. D, must. March 30, 1864; killed June 8, 1864.
Luzarder, Joseph, must. July 18, 1861; disch. Dec. 22, 1861.
Holbrook, Alden H., Co. D, must. July 18, 1861; disch. Dec. 20, 1863, to re-enlist; re-enl. Dec. 21, 1863; disch. July 16, 1865.
Cummings, Noah L., Co. E, must. Feb. 26, 1862; disch. March 12, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. March 13, 1864; killed May 6, 1864.
McGowan, John, Co. E, must. July 22, 1861; killed June 30, 1862.
O'Neil, Cornelius, Co. E, must. Aug. 24, 1861; deserted March, 1862.
Williams, Evan, Co. F, must. Aug. 27, 1862; disch. March 18, 1863.
Hetherston, Martin C., Co. K, must. Dec. 27, 1863; disch. July 16, 1865; trans. from 37th Inf.
McGuire, John, must. Aug. 7, 1863; no record.

TWENTY-FIRST REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Gibson, George W., corp., Co. C, must. Aug. 23, 1861; pro. 2d lieutenant. July 29, 1862; 1st lieutenant. Sept. 2, 1862; dismissed the service June 5, 1863.
Colburn, Lemuel A., Co. C, must. Aug. 23, 1861; died Nov. 11, 1862.

TWENTY-SECOND REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Kennedy, James, Co. C, must. June 18, 1864; trans. to 32d Inf. Oct. 26, 1864.
Badger, Leone C., Co. F, must. July 17, 1863; trans. to 32d Inf. Oct. 26, 1864.
Fletcher, Frederick F., Co. F, must. Aug. 10, 1861; died Aug. 24, 1864.
Trainer, Thomas, Co. K, must. Oct. 1, 1861; disch. October, 1864; trans. to V. R. C. Sept. 1, 1863.

TWENTY-THIRD REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Barker, Charles A., Co. C, must. Oct. 9, 1861; disch. Oct. 13, 1864.
Jones, Alonzo, Co. H, must. Sept. 28, 1861; disch. Sept. 15, 1862.
Jones, William, Co. H, must. Dec. 6, 1861; died April 9, 1862.
Ryan, James, Co. H, must. Dec. 6, 1861; killed March 14, 1862.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Guptil, John A., Co. A, must. Dec. 21, 1863; disch. Jan. 20, 1866.
Egan, William, Co. A, must. Sept. 17, 1861; disch. Sept. 17, 1864.
Howley, John W., Co. A, must. Nov. 14, 1861; disch. Dec. 20, 1863, to re-enlist; re-enl. Dec. 21, 1863; disch. Jan. 10, 1865.
McNulty, Michael, Co. A, must. Nov. 14, 1861; disch. Dec. 20, 1863, to re-enlist.
Brent, William H., Co. B, must. Oct. 1, 1861; disch. Dec. 18, 1863, to re-enlist; re-enl. Dec. 19, 1863; disch. January, 1866; trans. to V. R. C. April 17, 1865.
White, George, Co. B, must. Dec. 19, 1863; disch. Jan. 20, 1866.
Furnald, Alonzo, Co. C, must. Oct. 8, 1861; disch. Jan. 3, 1864, to re-enlist.
Chubbuck, Perez, Co. C, must. Oct. 21, 1861; disch. Jan. 3, 1864, to re-enlist.
Conly, John, Co. C, must. Jan. 4, 1864; disch. Jan. 20, 1866.
Gray, Samuel B., Co. C, must. Jan. 4, 1864; killed Aug. 16, 1864.

Souther, George G., Co. C, must. Sept. 10, 1861; disch. July 8, 1863.
 Martin, John W., Co. D, must. Nov. 29, 1861; disch. Jan. 1, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Luzarder, John, Co. F, must. Nov. 2, 1861; disch. July 15, 1862.
 Newcomb, Thomas J., Co. F, must. Oct. 19, 1861; disch. Jan. 16, 1864.
 Nightingale, Alonzo A., Co. G, must. Sept. 10, 1861; disch. Jan. 3, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Jan. 4, 1864; disch. June 16, 1865.
 Lawless, Richard, corp., Co. G, must. Sept. 11, 1861; killed Dec. 16, 1862.
 Trask, Henry, corp., Co. G, must. Sept. 24, 1861; died June 3, 1862.
 Hurley, David, Co. G, must. Sept. 19, 1861; disch. Sept. 19, 1864.
 Lingham, George H., Co. G, must. Dec. 3, 1861; disch. July 15, 1862.
 McDermot, Martin, Co. G, must. Oct. 7, 1861; disch. Jan. 3, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Jan. 4, 1864; disch. Jan. 20, 1866.
 McIntire, Lewis G., Co. G, must. Sept. 24, 1861; disch. Jan. 3, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Jan. 4, 1864; disch. July 20, 1865.
 Wilbur, William S., Co. G, must. Sept. 10, 1861; disch. Jan. 3, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Jan. 4, 1864; disch. Jan. 20, 1866.

TWENTY-SIXTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Russell, Edward, assist. surg.; must. July 29, 1862; disch. April 30, 1863.
 Kehoe, John, Co. I, must. Sept. 21, 1861; died Aug. 17, 1862.

TWENTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

McGann, Thomas W., Co. A, must. Dec. 13, 1861; died Dec. 24, 1864.
 Riley, William T., Co. A, must. Dec. 30, 1861; disch. Dec. 19, 1864.
 Martin, John, Co. B, must. Aug. 11, 1863; disch. Dec. 13, 1864.
 Daniels, Patrick, Co. C, must. Sept. 27, 1864; disch. June 30, 1865.
 Bennett, Osmond, Co. D, must. Jan. 30, 1862; killed June 3, 1864.
 Smith, John, Co. E, must. Aug. 11, 1863; disch. June 19, 1865.
 Barnacle, Peter, Co. G, must. Jan. 3, 1862; disch. Jan. 1, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Ballou, Lawrence, Co. I, must. Dec. 13, 1861; disch. Dec. 13, 1864; trans. to U. S. A. Nov. 1, 1862.
 Dorney, Patrick, Co. I, must. Dec. 13, 1861; deserted Aug. 25, 1862.
 Galvin, Michael, Co. I, must. Dec. 26, 1861; disch. Jan. 22, 1863.
 Howley, Patrick, Co. I, must. Dec. 13, 1861; disch. Feb. 12, 1863.
 McLaughlin, Lawrence, Co. I, must. Jan. 1, 1862; disch. Jan. 1, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Jan. 2, 1864; killed June 22, 1864.

TWENTY-NINTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Golden, James, Co. A, must. May 21, 1861; disch. July 11, 1861.
 Hodgkinson, Stephen, Co. F, must. Nov. 17, 1861; disch. Nov. 14, 1862.
 Nightingale, Charles L., Co. H, must. Jan. 1, 1862; disch. Jan. 1, 1864, to re-enlist.

THIRTIETH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Conner, Michael, Co. A, must. Oct. 9, 1861; disch. Feb. 12, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Donahue, Michael, Co. A, must. Oct. 9, 1861; disch. Feb. 12, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Donahue, Michael, sergt., Co. A, must. Feb. 13, 1864; deserted March 14, 1866.
 Deady, Edward, Co. A, must. Jan. 1, 1862; disch. April 4, 1862.
 Marrah, Michael, Co. A, must. Nov. 23, 1861; disch. Jan. 1, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Jan. 2, 1864; deserted April 18, 1864.
 Smith, Martin, Co. G, must. Dec. 30, 1861; disch. June 11, 1863.
 Smith, Martin, Jr., Co. G, must. Nov. 30, 1861; disch. Jan. 1, 1864, to re-enlist; sergt., re-enl. Jan. 2, 1864; disch. July 1, 1864.
 Parker, Lorenzo D., Co. H, must. Dec. 16, 1861; disch. Dec. 8, 1892.
 Brown, John P., Co. I, must. Jan. 2, 1864; killed Oct. 19, 1864.

THIRTY-SECOND REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Faxon, William L., asst. surg., must. June 2, 1862; disch. May 31, 1865; pro. surgeon Aug. 5, 1863.
 Marrah, Jeremiah, corp., Co. A, must. Nov. 7, 1861; disch. Jan. 4, 1864, to re-enlist; sergt., re-enl. Jan. 5, 1864; re-enl. disch. June 29, 1865.
 Pope, Charles E., Co. A, must. Nov. 6, 1861; disch. Dec. 10, 1864; trans. to V. R. C., September, 1863.
 Clark, Benjamin H., Co. A, must. Jan. 5, 1864; disch. Dec. 8, 1865.
 Clark, Franklin A., Co. A, must. Nov. 3, 1861; disch. Jan. 4, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Jan. 5, 1864; disch. June 29, 1865.
 Glover, Erastus M., Co. A, must. Nov. 3, 1861; disch. July 29, 1862.
 Lapham, George F., Co. A, must. Nov. 6, 1861; died July 28, 1862.
 Whitney, Henry, Co. A, must. Nov. 3, 1861; disch. Nov. 24, 1864.
 Burke, William, Co. C, must. Feb. 11, 1862; disch. Feb. 10, 1865.
 O'Mahoney, Daniel, Co. C, must. Feb. 26, 1862; disch. May 1, 1865.

Buchan, William, Co. D, must. Feb. 18, 1862; disch. Feb. 16, 1865; trans. from 9th Inf.
 Dow, Lorenzo, Co. D, must. Feb. 16, 1864; disch. June 29, 1865; trans. from 18th Inf.
 Newcomb, Bryant, Co. E, must. Sept. 14, 1863; died Oct. 21, 1864.
 Giles, Albert L., sergt., Co. G, must. Jan. 5, 1864; disch. June 29, 1865.
 Packard, Morton, Co. H, must. Feb. 15, 1864; trans. from 18th Inf.; died Oct. 20, 1864.
 Pope, Alexander P., Co. H, must. Feb. 15, 1864; disch. June 29, 1865; trans. from 18th Inf.
 Richard, John, Co. I, must. Aug. 19, 1862; deserted Aug. 16, 1862.
 Naphut, Mathias, Co. K, must. Aug. 21, 1863; disch. June 29, 1865.
 Badger, Leone C., Co. L, must. July 17, 1863; disch. June 29, 1865; trans. from 22d Inf.
 Kennedy, James, Co. L, must. June 18, 1864; disch. May 30, 1865; trans. from 22d Inf.
 Writting, Charles A., must. Feb. 8, 1864; disch. October, 1864; trans. from 18th Inf.
 White, John, must. Feb. 15, 1864; disch. October, 1864; trans. from 18th Inf.

THIRTY-THIRD REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Snowden, James, Co. D, must. June 23, 1864; never joined regiment.
 Hathaway, George P., Co. G, must. Aug. 29, 1864; disch. July 14, 1865; trans. to 2d Inf. June 1, 1865.

THIRTY-FIFTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Sheen, William G., 2d lieutenant, must. July 31, 1862; disch. Aug. 14, 1862; pro. to 1st lieutenant, 39th Inf.
 Andrews, Elbridge H., Co. A, must. Aug. 9, 1862; disch. Dec. 6, 1862.
 Bradford, Lewis E., Co. A, must. Aug. 9, 1862; disch. June 9, 1865.

THIRTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Hetherston, Martin C., Co. I, must. Dec. 26, 1863; disch. June 21, 1865; trans. from 7th Inf. to 20th Inf.

THIRTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Parker, William, 3d sergt., Co. I, must. Aug. 21, 1862; disch. June 30, 1865; pro. to 2d lieutenant, October, 1864.
 Simpson, John E., 3d sergt., Co. I, must. Aug. 21, 1862; disch. June 30, 1865; pro. to 2d lieutenant, October, 1864.
 Pearce, Thomas L., corp., Co. I, must. Aug. 21, 1862; disch. May 2, 1865.
 Pearce, George W., Co. I, must. Aug. 21, 1862; disch. June 30, 1865.
 Graham, Charles H., Co. I, must. Aug. 21, 1862; disch. July 5, 1865; trans. to V. R. C. May, 1864.

THIRTY-NINTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V., COMPANY D.

Mustered into United States service Aug. 24, 1862.

Spear, Edward A., capt., disch. April 29, 1864; did not reach him until Sept. 12, 1864.
 Sheen, William G., 1st lieutenant, disch. June 2, 1865; pro. to capt.; brev. major.
 Porter, Charles H., 2d lieutenant, disch. June 2, 1865; pro. to 1st lieutenant, to capt.
 Ahearn, Thomas, disch. June 2, 1865.
 Alden, Albert M., disch. Sept. 12, 1863.
 Alden, Henry A., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Armstrong, John L., disch. July 18, 1865; trans. to V. R. C.
 Badger, Ezra, died Oct. 14, 1862.
 Barker, George A., sergt., disch. June 2, 1865; pro. to 2d lieutenant, to 1st lieutenant.
 Barry, Benjamin, disch. Nov. 15, 1862.
 Baxter, Thompson, Jr., disch. April 27, 1865.
 Brackett, Walter P., disch. July 24, 1865; trans. to navy April 22, 1864.
 Brown, Samuel, sergt., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Brophy, John, disch. June 2, 1865; trans. to V. R. C. Sept. 30, 1863.
 Burke, Walter, died Dec. 22, 1863.
 Burns, William H., died Nov. 27, 1864.
 Churchill, Thaddeus, sergt., disch. Dec. 6, 1864; pro. 2d lieutenant, U. S. Vols. Oct. 5, 1863.
 Cleverly, George F., disch. Oct. 2, 1863.
 Christian, James B., disch. Jan. 30, 1863.
 Colburn, William E., died Feb. 18, 1865.
 Coffin, Paul G., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Collier, George W., disch. Jan. 27, 1863.
 Collins, Michael, disch. June 2, 1865.
 Crane, Seth, died Dec. 22, 1863.
 Curtis, Henry, sergt., disch. June 2, 1865.

Dailey, Garrett, died April 5, 1863.
 Dailey, Daniel, disch. Sept. 12, 1863.
 Damon, Edward, Jr., died Jan. 3, 1865.
 Derry, Barden B., disch. June 2, 1865; pro. 1st sergt.
 De Forrest, Samuel D., disch. July 14, 1865.
 Doner, John, disch. Feb. 27, 1863.
 Donley, James, killed Feb. 6, 1865.
 Dickerman, Charles C., corp., died Jan. 25, 1865.
 Dunn, Arthur, died Jan. 28, 1864.
 Durgin, Jonathan C., died Jan. 5, 1865.
 Ela, Elisha I. C., killed May 8, 1864.
 Enderle, Joseph L., corp., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Fineran, Patrick, disch. June 2, 1865.
 Forbes, James E., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Fowles, Theodore W., disch. May 30, 1865.
 French, Joseph T., disch. April 10, 1865.
 Garvin, Patrick, disch. June 2, 1865.
 Gavin, Patrick H., corp., disch. June 28, 1865; pro. sergt.; trans. to V. R. C. Feb. 3, 1865.
 Groves, George D., deserted Sept. 14, 1862.
 Hayden, Joseph W., disch. June 2, 1863.
 Hayden, Josiah, Jr., disch. June 2, 1863.
 Hayden, Joseph P., corp., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Hersey, George W., disch. June 5, 1865; trans. to navy April 22, 1864.
 Hill, John, Jr., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Hobbs, John J., disch. April 3, 1863.
 Horgan, Cornelius, deserted May 2, 1863.
 Howley, Thomas, disch. June 2, 1863.
 Howley, Thomas, Jr., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Hughes, James, died May 13, 1864.
 Huntress, Elisha W., disch. May 8, 1865.
 Huntress, Truman H., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Kelly, James, disch. May 20, 1865.
 Kelly, John, died July 25, 1864.
 Keniley, Daniel, disch. June 2, 1865.
 Kittredge, Josiah N., died April 23, 1864.
 Leavitt, Chase F., disch. June 2, 1865; pro. sergt.
 Luzarder, Joseph M., killed Aug. 18, 1864.
 Luzarder, Moses S., disch. Jan. 29, 1863.
 Lunt, Theodore H., died Oct. 23, 1864.
 Mahoney, James, disch. June 30, 1865; trans. to V. R. C. March 13, 1865.
 McCarthy, John, disch. June 2, 1865.
 McGlone, Michael, died May 12, 1864.
 Miller, George L., disch. Jan. 29, 1863.
 Miller, Charles H., disch. March 12, 1864.
 Moran, Patrick, disch. June 7, 1865.
 Moriarty, John, disch. June 3, 1865.
 Morrison, Sylvander, disch. June 2, 1865.
 Newcomb, Henry A., corp., died Dec. 23, 1864.
 Newcomb, Harrison G. O., disch. Feb. 11, 1863.
 Newcomb, Isaac T., disch. Jan. 29, 1863.
 Nightingale, Frederick M., disch. Dec. 16, 1862.
 Nightingale, Samuel A., corp., disch. Aug. 19, 1864.
 O'Brien, Timothy, disch. June 15, 1865.
 Parrott, Albert, disch. June 2, 1865.
 Parrott, Luther H., disch. June, 1865; trans. to navy April 22, 1864.
 Percival, George P., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Perkins, Charles N., disch. June 2, 1865; pro. 2d lieutenant, 1st lieutenant.
 Perry, Samuel N., died March 31, 1864.
 Pierce, Eli, died April 3, 1865.
 Roach, Maurice, disch. May 31, 1865.
 Rodgers, Horace C., disch. June 9, 1865.
 Russ, George W., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Russell, George A., disch. November, 1865; trans. to V. R. C. Sept. 16, 1863.
 Savil, George W., died Dec. 5, 1864.
 Shawlin, Hugh, disch. June 30, 1865.
 Sheehan, Jeremiah, disch. June 2, 1865.
 Simonds, William, corp., disch. June 2, 1865.
 Taylor, Marcus, disch. June 2, 1865; pro. sergt.
 Thayer, Thomas J. H., disch. March 2, 1865.
 Thomas, Erasmus, died March 14, 1865.
 Trask, George W., disch. June 8, 1865.
 Willett, George A., disch. Jan. 31, 1863.
 Williams, John, sergt., disch. Nov. 19, 1862.

Wood, Thomas, killed June 19, 1864.
 Young, William J., disch. June 2, 1865.

FIFTY-SIXTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Kerrigan, Joseph, Co. C, must. March 1, 1864; deserted.
 Luzarder, John, Co. D, must. Dec. 29, 1863; disch. July 12, 1865.
 French, Daniel F., sergt., Co. E, must. Jan. 12, 1864; disch. June 28, 1865; pro. sergt.-maj., 2d lieutenant, 1st lieutenant.
 Bartlett, Edward A., Co. E, must. Jan. 12, 1864; disch. July 12, 1865.
 Turner, Samuel B., Co. E, must. Jan. 12, 1864; disch. July 12, 1865.
 Usher, James (2d), Co. E, must. Jan. 12, 1864; disch. July 12, 1865.
 Keenan, Matthew, Co. H, must. March 19, 1864; died July 30, 1864.

FIFTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Loud, Francis P., Co. E, must. March 1, 1864; disch. July 14, 1865.

VETERAN RESERVE CORPS.

Dewoody, Mortimer L., must. Sept. 3, 1864; no record of discharge.
 Donovan, Timothy, must. Aug. 31, 1864; no record of discharge.
 Flaherty, William, must. Aug. 31, 1864; no record of discharge.
 Lowney, Dennis, must. Aug. 31, 1864; disch. Nov. 30, 1865.

SECOND BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY M. V.

Mustered in July 31, 1861; discharged Aug. 16, 1864.

Wadsworth, George W., corp., disch. September, 1861.
 O'Grady, Joseph, bugler.
 Bolton, Joseph F., disch. April 16, 1862.
 French, Loring A.
 Munroe, Thomas, disch. Feb. 7, 1862.
 Taylor, John, disch. May 20, 1863.
 Tiernay, Michael.

THIRD BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY M. V.

Follett, William H., sergt., must. Sept. 5, 1861; pro. 2d lieutenant; disch. March 12, 1865.
 Follett, Charles A., corp., must. Sept. 5, 1861; trans. to 5th Light Battery Sept. 1, 1864.

FOURTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY M. V.

Mustered June 9, 1864; discharged October, 1865.

Hastings, William, q.-m. sergt.
 McGrath, John, corp.

FIFTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY M. V.

Spear, Joseph E., sergt., must. Sept. 18, 1861; disch. Oct. 3, 1864; pro. 1st lieutenant.
 Baxter, William H., corp., must. Sept. 18, 1861; disch. Oct. 3, 1864.
 Follett, Charles A., corp., must. Dec. 24, 1863; disch. June 12, 1865.
 Shackley, Jonas, corp., must. Aug. 15, 1862; disch. June 17, 1865; pro. 1st lieutenant. Heavy Art.
 Brown, Edward A., must. Dec. 15, 1861; disch. June 12, 1865.
 Lapham, Frederick A., must. Sept. 25, 1861; disch. Oct. 6, 1862.
 Lapham, William H. H., must. Feb. 28, 1862; killed June 3, 1864.
 Shaw, Horatio E., must. Sept. 16, 1861; disch. Oct. 3, 1864.
 Whicher, Joseph R., must. Sept. 27, 1861; disch. Sept. 27, 1864.

SIXTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY M. V.

Chubbuck, Matthew M. C., sergt., must. Dec. 24, 1861; disch. Jan. 5, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Jan. 5, 1864; disch. Feb. 5, 1865.
 Riley, Charles D., sergt., must. Dec. 27, 1861; died Oct. 19, 1863.
 Smith, James, must. Dec. 1, 1861; disch. Jan. 5, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. as corp. Jan. 6, 1864; deserted May 20, 1864.
 Farrell, Peter, must. Dec. 11, 1861; disch. Jan. 5, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. Jan. 6, 1864; deserted May 20, 1864.

NINTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY M. V.

Glover, Samuel C., must. Aug. 10, 1862; disch. June 6, 1865.
 Merritt, Quincy A., must. Aug. 10, 1862; disch. June 6, 1865.

FOURTEENTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY M. V.

Rich, Isaiah, Jr., must. Feb. 17, 1864; disch. July 13, 1865.

FIRST REGIMENT HEAVY ARTILLERY M. V.

O'Riordan, John D., Co. H, must. Aug. 15, 1864; disch. June 18, 1865.

Company L.

Algoa, Adam, must. March 10, 1862; disch. March 15, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. March 16, 1864; disch. March 18, 1865.

¹ Re-enlisted after two years' service.

Basley, George W., must. March 11, 1864; died Aug. 5, 1864.
 Bradford, Lewis E., must. March 31, 1862; disch. March 31, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Conlin, Timothy, must. March 19, 1862; disch. March 20, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Hayden, Richard B., must. March 18, 1862; died April 10, 1862.
 Hodgkinson, William, must. March 6, 1862; disch. March 9, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. March 10, 1864; disch. May 5, 1865.
 Kelly, James, must. March 13, 1862; disch. March 13, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Sheahan, Timothy, must. March 18, 1862; disch. March 21, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Ward, Cornelius, must. April 4, 1862; disch. Jan. 6, 1863.
 Wayland, Thomas H., must. March 17, 1862; disch. March 16, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Wildman, Wilson, must. March 18, 1862; disch. March 18, 1865.

COMPANY M.

Burrell, William L., must. March 3, 1862; disch. March 16, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Hayden, Joseph W., must. March 18, 1862; disch. March 21, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. March 21, 1864; disch. June 30, 1865.
 Joyce, Edwin L., must. March 3, 1862; disch. March 23, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Magee, Thomas, must. March 15, 1862; disch. March 23, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. sergt. March 24, 1864; disch. Aug. 16, 1865.
 Moore, John W., must. March 19, 1862; disch. March 27, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. March 28, 1864; disch. Aug. 16, 1865.
 Nightingale, James M., must. March 18, 1862; disch. March 8, 1865.
 Packard, Henry, must. March 31, 1862; died Nov. 18, 1864.
 Parker, Alvin F., must. March 10, 1862; disch. Nov. 6, 1863.
 Talbot, Peter, must. March 15, 1862; disch. March 20, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. March 21, 1864; deserted August, 1864.
 Totman, Freeman M., must. March 18, 1862; disch. March 20, 1864; re-enl. March 21, 1864; died Oct. 9, 1864.
 Turner, George W., must. March 18, 1862; killed June 18, 1864.
 Whicher, Thomas M., must. March 18, 1862; disch. March 30, 1864, to re-enlist.

SECOND REGIMENT HEAVY ARTILLERY M. V.

Murphy, James, Co. C, must. Sept. 2, 1864; disch. June 30, 1865; trans. to 17th Inf. Jan. 17, 1865.
 Briggs, William H., Co. F, must. Sept. 13, 1864; disch. June 30, 1865; trans. to 17th Inf. Jan. 17, 1865.
 White, Joseph H., Co. F, must. Aug. 24, 1864; disch. June 26, 1865.
 Linnehan, William, Co. H, must. Aug. 9, 1864; disch. June 26, 1865.
 Mitchell, William, Co. H, must. Aug. 9, 1864; disch. June 26, 1865.
 Faircloth, John, Co. I, must. Jan. 2, 1864; disch. Aug. 11, 1865.
 Soule, Lewis M., must. Aug. 24, 1864; disch. Sept. 7, 1864.

THIRD REGIMENT HEAVY ARTILLERY M. V.

Barrett, William H., must. Aug. 26, 1864; disch. June 17, 1865.

FIRST BATTALION HEAVY ARTILLERY M. V.

Christian, James A., Co. A, must. March 1, 1862; disch. March 5, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Christian, James A., Co. A, must. March 5, 1864; disch. Oct. 20, 1865.
 Newcomb, Peter, Co. A, must. Feb. 23, 1862; disch. Feb. 29, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. March 1, 1864; disch. Oct. 20, 1865.

THIRD REGIMENT CAVALRY M. V.

Adams, Charles F., Jr., 1st lieutenant, must. Dec. 19, 1861; pro. capt. Oct. 30, 1862; lieutenant-col. 5th Cav. July 15, 1864.
 Brennan, John A., Co. B, must. Aug. 5, 1864; disch. June 26, 1865.
 Dooley, Joseph, Co. B, must. Sept. 14, 1861.
 Smith, James H., Co. B, must. Sept. 14, 1861; disch. Dec. 20, 1861.
 Whiting, Charles H., Co. D, must. Sept. 19, 1861; disch. Oct. 3, 1864.
 Feltis, William H., Co. K, must. Sept. 23, 1861; trans. to Co. K, 4th Regt. of Cavalry.
 Lamson, John H., Co. K, must. Sept. 14, 1861; trans. to Co. K, 4th Regt. of Cavalry.
 Parker, John, Jr., Co. K, must. Sept. 23, 1861; trans. to Co. K, 4th Regt. of Cavalry.
 Wood, James H., Co. K, must. Oct. 5, 1861; trans. to Co. K, 4th Regt. of Cavalry.

SECOND UNATTACHED COMPANY OF CAVALRY M. V.

Morton, Joseph W., must. Dec. 11, 1861; pro. 2d lieutenant. 3d Cav. Feb. 20, 1862.

SECOND REGIMENT CAVALRY M. V.

Lapham, Frederick A., sergt., Co. B, must. Sept. 3, 1863; disch. July 29, 1865.
 Fox, Thomas, Co. I, must. Feb. 10, 1863; disch. July 20, 1865.
 Panigh, Alfred, Co. I, must. June 23, 1864; disch. July 20, 1865.

THIRD REGIMENT CAVALRY M. V.

Morton, Joseph W., 2d lieutenant, must. Feb. 20, 1862; disch. March 26, 1863; pro. 1st lieutenant.
 Malloy, George, Co. A, must. June 21, 1864; disch. Sept. 28, 1865.
 Wildman, William, sergt., Co. H, must. Oct. 27, 1862; disch. May 20, 1865.
 King, Andrew G., Co. I, must. Aug. 5, 1862; disch. May 20, 1865.
 Pratt, John W., Co. I, must. Aug. 5, 1862; no record.
 Howley, Michael J., Co. K, must. Aug. 6, 1862; disch. Jan. 17, 1863.
 Newcomb, Paul W., Co. K, must. Aug. 5, 1862; disch. Jan. 30, 1863.
 Brogan, Charles, Co. L, must. Dec. 29, 1864; disch. Sept. 28, 1865.
 Dinegan, Martin, Co. L, must. Dec. 29, 1864; disch. Sept. 28, 1865.
 Garrity, Bernard, Co. L, must. Dec. 31, 1864; disch. Sept. 28, 1865.
 Goldie, Henry F., Co. L, must. Dec. 30, 1864; disch. Sept. 28, 1865.
 Kirvin, James C., Co. L, must. Dec. 31, 1864; disch. Sept. 28, 1865.
 Nutting, Charles A., Co. L, must. Dec. 30, 1864; disch. Sept. 28, 1865.
 Thomas, Peter, Co. L, must. Jan. 2, 1865; disch. Sept. 28, 1865.
 Kerrigan, Joseph, Co. L, must. Dec. 30, 1864; disch. July 19, 1865.
 Lincoln, Charles K., q-m. sergt., Co. M, must. Dec. 31, 1864; disch. Oct. 6, 1865; pro. 2d lieutenant.
 Wright, George W., sergt., Co. M, must. Dec. 31, 1864; disch. Sept. 28, 1865.
 Harris, John, Co. M, must. Dec. 31, 1864; disch. Sept. 1, 1865; deserted.
 Kittrell, Albert S., Co. M, must. Jan. 2, 1865; disch. July 26, 1865; deserted.

FOURTH REGIMENT CAVALRY M. V.

Morton, Joseph W., 2d lieutenant, must. Aug. 24, 1863; disch. May 15, 1865; pro. captain.
 Russell, Edward, asst. surg., must. Feb. 3, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Caterson, Thomas, Co. A, must. Dec. 31, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Farrell, John S., Co. A, must. Dec. 31, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Caldwell, Samuel P., Co. B, must. Dec. 21, 1863; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Chase, Ebenezer W., Co. B, must. Dec. 21, 1863; disch. May 28, 1864.
 Hargan, John, Co. B, must. Dec. 21, 1863; died Aug. 18, 1864.
 Howley, Michael J., Co. B, must. Dec. 21, 1863; died Sept. 22, 1864.
 Mullen, Andrew, Co. B, must. Dec. 31, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Dailey, Timothy, Co. B, must. Jan. 6, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Dinegan, John H., Co. C, must. Jan. 6, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Forrester, Isaac N., Co. C, must. Jan. 6, 1864; trans. to navy June 1, 1864.
 Maguire, Patrick F., Co. C, must. Dec. 31, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Sheahan, William, Co. C, must. Jan. 6, 1864; died March 26, 1864.
 Brown, John, corp., Co. D, must. Jan. 9, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Bowditch, Joseph E., Co. D, must. Jan. 4, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Fenton, Michael, Co. D, must. Jan. 9, 1864; died Aug. 31, 1864.
 Pierce, Benjamin R., Co. D, must. Dec. 31, 1864; died July 14, 1865.
 Price, William, Co. D, must. Jan. 9, 1864; died Oct. 14, 1864.
 Pratt, William H., Co. D, must. Jan. 9, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Maguire, Hugh, Co. E, must. Jan. 27, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Nightingale, Edward F., Co. E, must. Feb. 18, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Otis, Stephen, Co. F, must. Jan. 27, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Gibson, George W., Co. F, must. Jan. 27, 1864; deserted July 27, 1865.
 Scannell, James, Co. F, must. Jan. 27, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Smith, Thomas, Co. F, must. Jan. 27, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Pettingill, William, Co. G, must. Jan. 27, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Abbott, Henry S., Co. G, must. Jan. 27, 1864; disch. June 30, 1865.
 Bates, David W., Co. I, must. Feb. 18, 1864; died Sept. 9, 1864.
 Feltis, William H., Co. K, must. Sept. 23, 1861; disch. April 20, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. April 21, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Lamson, John H., Co. K, must. Sept. 14, 1861; disch. Jan. 24, 1865.
 O'Keefe, John, Co. K, must. March 1, 1864; disch. Nov. 14, 1865.
 Parker, John, Jr., Co. K, must. Sept. 22, 1861; disch. April 20, 1864, to re-enlist; re-enl. April 21, 1864; disch. Aug. 15, 1865; pro. lieutenant. U. S. Col. Troops.
 Wood, James H., Co. K, must. Oct. 5, 1861; disch. Oct. 8, 1864.
 Osborne, George H., Co. L, must. Feb. 18, 1864; disch. June 17, 1865.

FIFTH REGIMENT CAVALRY M. V.

Adams, Charles F., Jr., lieutenant-col., must. Feb. 15, 1864; pro. col. Feb. 15, 1865; resigned Aug. 1, 1865; brev. brig.-gen.

FIRST BATTALION FRONTIER CAVALRY M. V.

Kibbe, Charles L., Co. D, must. Jan. 2, 1865; disch. June 30, 1865.
 Lapham, Joseph A., Co. D, must. Jan. 2, 1865; disch. June 30, 1865.
 Marden, Frank M., Co. D, must. Jan. 2, 1865; disch. June 30, 1865.

Nine Months' Service, 1862.

FOURTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M.

Henry Walker, col., must. Dec. 16, 1862; disch. Aug. 28, 1863.

FORTY-SECOND REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M.

COMPANY A.

Josephs, Uriel, corp., must. Sept. 13, 1862; died July 7, 1863.

COMPANY G.

This company was mustered Sept. 16, 1862; discharged Aug. 20, 1863.

Thaddeus H. Newcomb, 2d lieutenant.

Allen, Obed. F. ¹	Logan, William.
Bird, William M.	Luzarder, John.
Blaisdell, Gilbert F.	Nott, Francis L. ²
Derry, George R.	Parrott, John F.
Dinnegan, Daniel.	Pierce, Benjamin R.
Ellis, Richard.	Stiles, William.
Harmon, John.	Studley, Henry O.
Hayden, Albert A.	Vance, James.
Holt, Albert A.	Vincent, Levi.
Horne, Henry T.	Vinal, James W.

COMPANY II.

Carroll, William, must. Sept. 24, 1862; disch. Aug. 20, 1863.

Talbot, William T. H., must. Sept. 24, 1862; disch. Aug. 20, 1863.

FORTY-FOURTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M.

Mustered in Sept. 12, 1862; discharged June 18, 1863.

White, Samuel H., Co. B.	Newcomb, Franklin H., Co. G.
Beale, George W., Co. D.	Curtis, Charles B., Co. H.
Adams, Warren W., Co. G.	Hersey, John W., Co. H.
Hersey, Andrew J., Co. G.	Packard, Elisha, Co. H.
Hersey, Jacob H., Co. G.

FORTY-FIFTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M.

Mustered in Sept. 26, 1862; discharged July 7, 1863.

Sargent, Oscar W., Co. A.	Bent, William P., Co. G.
Early, Michael, Co. B.	Cain, Jonathan D., Co. G.
Gage, David K., Co. B.	Jones, Abbott L., Co. G.
Johnson, John, Co. B.	Pratt, Nathan C., Co. G.
Pope, Lemuel C., Co. B.	Soule, Lewis M., Co. G.
Reed, John N., Jr., Co. B.	White, Joseph H., Co. G.

FORTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M.

Mustered in Oct. 1, 1862; discharged Sept. 3, 1863.

COMPANY G.

Rudderham, William E., sergt., pro. 1st lieut.
 Boyd, William, sergt., pro. 2d lieut.
 Talbot, Henry, sergt.
 Boyd, Patrick, musician.
 Flemming, Garrett, killed June 30, 1863.
 Flynn, William, died May 3, 1863.
 O'Neil, John T.

COMPANY I.

Robertson, James G.

COMPANY K.

Byrne, William.

O'Connor, James.

ELEVENTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY M. V.

Mustered in Aug. 25, 1862; discharged May 25, 1863.

Baxter, Charles W.	Shannon, James G.
Baxter, William Q.	Small, Zebina.
Blanchard, Oliver J.	Taplin, William H.
Jones, Thomas B.	Thomas, Theodore B.
Merritt, Charles.

One Year's Service.

SIXTY-FIRST REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Eccles, John, Co. G, must. Sept. 14, 1864; disch. June 4, 1865.
 Blaisdell, Samuel T., Co. E, must. Sept. 23, 1864; disch. June 4, 1865.
 Frost, Charles, Co. E, must. Sept. 23, 1864; no record of discharge.

¹ Died March 21, 1863.

² Killed Jan. 1, 1863.

SIXTY-SECOND REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V.

Bent, F. Edward, 2d lieut., must. Feb. 28, 1865; disch. May 5, 1865; pro. 1st lieut.

Nightingale, James M., must. April 11, 1865; disch. May 5, 1865.

FOURTH REGIMENT HEAVY ARTILLERY M. V.

Saville, John F., ass't surg., must. Dec. 5, 1864; disch. June 17, 1865.

Pierce, Charles E., 1st lieut., must. Sept. 2, 1864; disch. June 17, 1865.

Shackley, Jonas, 2d lieut., must. Sept. 2, 1864; disch. June 17, 1865; pro. 1st lieut.

Baxter, W. Quincy, 2d lieut., must. Sept. 2, 1864; disch. June 17, 1865.

Spear, Warren, 2d, Co. I, must. Aug. 17, 1864; disch. June 17, 1865.

TWENTY-NINTH (UNATTACHED) COMPANY HEAVY ARTILLERY M. V.

Moloney, David, must. Aug. 30, 1864; disch. June 16, 1865.

Murphy, Michael, must. Aug. 30, 1864; disch. June 16, 1865.

Noyes, John, must. Aug. 26, 1864; disch. June 16, 1865.

Trask, Joseph E., must. Sept. 17, 1864; disch. June 16, 1865.

One Hundred Days' Service, 1864.

FIFTH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M., COMPANY C.

Rudderham, Charles, 116 days.

FORTY-SECOND REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M., COMPANY I.

Williams, John, sergt., 116 days.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT INFANTRY M. V. M., COMPANY B.

Mustered into United States service July 16, 1864, and discharged Nov. 30, 1864, 137 days.

F. Edward Bent, capt.

Albert Keating, 2d lieut.

Warren W. Adams, 1st lieut.

Wm. W. Penniman, drum-maj.

Sergeants.

Henry T. Horne.

George W. Beal.

John W. Hersey.

Harrison Crane.

William O. Howland.

Corporals.

Elisha Packard.

Thomas G. Emerson.

William M. Bird.

John D. Wells.

William Sanders.

Albert A. Hayden.

Edward P. Nightingale.

Henry Chubbuck.

Musician.

William Boden.

Wagoner

Frank Fernald.

Privates.

Alden, Albert M.

Hayden, Charles M.

Arnold, James H.

Hayden, Joseph W.

Baker, William C.

Hobart, Marcus M.

Barnes, Franklin.

Holmes, Elisha B.

Beal, Samuel.

Holmes, Frank W.

Berry, William.

Kimball, Francis.

Brackett, Charles D.

Luzarder, Horace A.

Brown, Charles H.

Luzarder, Moses.

Cain, Abel A.

Mears, George A.

Cain, John.

Merrill, Charles M.

Crane, Benjamin F.

Newcomb, Charles A.

Davis, Edmund K.

Newcomb, Lewis A.

Duggan, William E.

Packard, George F.

Eaton, George W.

Page, Charles C.

Ellis, Francis C., Jr.

Perkins, Henry.

Elwell, Ezra.

Pierce, Benjamin R.

Errell, Eusebe.

Prior, Hiram B.

Faxon, George E.

Randall, George.

Fitzgerald, Michael.

Rogers, Thomas M.

Glover, Erastus M.

Snow, William A.

Glover, John, Jr.

Spear, Edward A.

Glover, Joseph M.

Thomas, Peter.

Golden, James.

Thomas, Richard.

Golden, John.

Underwood, Ebenezer W.

Gray, Henry F.

Whicher, Charles Q.

Hardwick, George W.

Whitney, Adams.

Hardwick, George W. (2d).

Willett, George A.

Hardwick, William H.

Willett, William H. H.

Navy.

The following persons served in the United States Navy, and were credited on the quota of Quincy. The date indicates the time of entering the service:

George W. Taylor, } were in service	Michael Donahue, Sept. 6, 1862.
Abraham Dunn, } April, 1861.	James White, Oct. 6, 1862.
John Griffin, May 28, 1861.	James Luzader, Jan. 15, 1863.
William A. Pierce, May 29, 1861.	Edward F. Nightingale, Jan. 26,
Ephraim T. Pierce, May 30, 1861.	1863.
James Q. Smith, June 15, 1861.	Seth T. Pray, Jan. 28, 1863.
Patrick Gorgan, Aug. 2, 1861.	Albert F. Rich, February, 1863.
Daniel Sullivan, Aug. 9, 1861.	Joseph Madden, April 19, 1863.
Lorenzo R. Clapp, Aug. 26, 1861.	Daniel Murphy, June 19, 1863.
Charles H. Pray, Aug. 28, 1861.	Samuel Thomas, Jr., ¹ Aug. 4, 1863.
James E. Elwell, Sept. 17, 1861.	Henry A. Thomas, Aug. 17, 1863.
Ezra Elwell, Sept. 17, 1861.	R. Warren Elwell, Aug. 24, 1863.
George W. Morton, ¹ Sept. 25, 1861.	James J. Mahoney, Jan. 9, 1864.
Jacob H. Caw, Oct. 7, 1861.	William H. Elwell, Jan. 9, 1864.
Michael Sugrue, Oct. 14, 1861.	F. Harvey Penniman, Jan. 13, 1864.
James Crogan, October, 1861.	Charles H. Duggan, Jan. 13, 1864.
Cornelius Kane, Oct. 14, 1861.	John A. Pope, April 14, 1864.
James Ryan, Nov. 22, 1861.	William Willis, April 12, 1864.
Phillip Harrington, November,	Patrick Gallagher, April 23, 1864.
1861.	Michael Donnavan, May 27, 1864.
Albert P. French, Jan. 7, 1862.	John Driscoll, July 5, 1864.
Thomas H. Dolan, Jan. 27, 1862.	Thomas Kelly, Aug. 9, 1864.
Christopher A. Spear, February,	John Hennessy, Aug. 29, 1864.
1862.	John Tool, Aug. 30, 1864.
Thomas T. Spear, March 4, 1862.	Henry Lunt, ¹ Aug. 31, 1864.
Alonzo Elwell, March 5, 1862.	William Mullen, Sept. 2, 1864.
James H. Smith, June 12, 1862.	Alexander Sproule, Sept. 3, 1864.
Asa A. Pope, Sept. 1, 1862.	John Boy, Dec. 12, 1864.
Ambrose B. Leloise, Sept. 6, 1862.	John Cluse, Dec. 12, 1864.
James R. Taylor, September, 1862.	George G. Souther, Jan. 2, 1865.
George W. Taylor, September,
1862.

NEEDHAM.

Votes of the town of Needham relative to the payment of bounties and aid to volunteers during the war of the Rebellion were as follows:

April 29, 1861. At a town-meeting held this Monday afternoon, Marshall Newell, moderator, it was Voted, That the sum of fifteen dollars per month shall be paid from the treasury of this town to each and every man, a citizen of the town, who shall enlist or join a military organization for the defense or protection of our country at the present crisis, who shall discharge the duties required of him under the general orders of the State or general government; the same to be paid monthly for the term of six months, or for such part of that term as he shall continue in the service in health or otherwise; the payment to commence (after his acceptance by the State officers) as soon as he shall engage in preparing for the duties required of him, and to which his whole time is necessarily devoted, such payment to be in addition to any compensation that will be received from the government.

Voted, That a committee to be styled "the Military Committee," to consist of four, be chosen, whose duty it shall be to take the general supervision in all matters of detail in relation to the formation of a company in this town, to render such assistance to those having charge of procuring volunteers as may be desired, and in providing such comfortable undergarments and other suitable articles of clothing for the men in such cases as may be deemed necessary; investigate, to some extent, the condition of those who have families, with a view to the present or future comfort and requirements of such families; render such assistance in getting the men ready in such cases as would facilitate the objects to be attained; provide suitable rooms for the examination necessary by the State officers, for drill, for general headquarters during the raising and formation of the company, and place of deposit of arms and equipments, if necessary; to interest themselves generally in all matters pertaining to the welfare and comfort of the men and their families before and during their absence, if desired, and when necessary. Said committee are hereby authorized to expend for such purposes a sum not to exceed two thousand dollars, to be paid from the treasury of this town by orders to be drawn by the selectmen on presentation of bills contracted on account of such expenditures, which shall be approved by a majority of said committee, said committee to render an account current of their expenditures and receipts and a report of their transactions at the next annual meeting of the town.

E. K. Whitaker, C. B. Patten, Benjamin G. Kimball, and Calvin Perry were chosen the Military Committee.

Voted, That the selectmen be, and are hereby, authorized and instructed to draw their orders upon the treasurer, payable to each of the soldiers who are entitled by the foregoing vote to receive the same, or to their families or other persons authorized by such soldiers to receive the same for them, for the sum of fifteen dollars per month, as provided in the foregoing vote, the same to be paid monthly upon receiving the evidence of the right of the several claimants to receive the same; also, for the expenditures authorized by the Military Committee under authority of the vote of the town.

Voted, That the sum of eight thousand dollars be, and is hereby, appropriated from any moneys that are now or may be in the treasury of this town, and placed subject to the order of the selectmen, to meet the several payments authorized by the foregoing votes in aid of the defense of the country, this day passed; this to be deemed the war appropriation.

At a town-meeting held July 24, 1862, George K. Daniell, Esq., moderator, it was Voted, That the selectmen be authorized to offer a bounty of one hundred dollars to each individual who shall, within thirty days from date, enlist in this town, as a part of the town's quota, for the war; the same to be made payable when the volunteers are accepted and mustered into the service of the United States.

Voted, That the town treasurer be, and hereby is, authorized, under the direction of the selectmen, to borrow the sum of three thousand and three hundred dollars, for one or more years, for the purpose indicated in the foregoing vote.

At a town-meeting held Aug. 21, 1862, Marshall Newell, moderator, it was Voted, That the town of Needham will give a bounty of two hundred dollars to volunteers under the last call of the President, provided that the whole quota shall be raised previous to the expiration of the time given to raise the men.

Voted, To authorize the treasurer, under the direction of the selectmen, to effect such a loan as may be necessary to defray the expenses incurred in raising said volunteers.

At a town-meeting held Sept. 16, 1862, Marshall Newell, moderator, it was Voted, To reconsider so much of the article passed at the last town-meeting as required that the whole quota should be raised before the volunteers should be entitled to the bounty.

Voted, That the selectmen be authorized to take such action as they may deem necessary to procure the requisite number of volunteers to fill up the quota of the town.

Voted, To pay the State aid to the families of volunteers, according to the law of the commonwealth.

At the annual town-meeting held March 16, 1863, by adjournment from March 2d, George K. Daniell, moderator, it was Voted, That the town pay a bounty of one hundred dollars to those volunteers who shall have served in the United States army three years, provided they have already received no such bounty; and those who shall have been discharged from the service for disability shall receive in proportion to the time they may be so disabled (the amount not to exceed one hundred dollars). The same amount shall be allowed to the families of such as have died, with an additional one hundred dollars when the deceased leaves a wife, or any children under twelve years of age.

At a town-meeting held April 6, 1863, George Jennings, moderator, it was Voted, To authorize their treasurer to borrow, with the approbation of the selectmen, a requisite sum of money to pay town aid or bounty that was granted at the annual meeting of 1863 to the soldiers that enlisted without bounty.

At a town-meeting held April 14, 1864, George K. Daniell, moderator, it was Voted, That the town raise the sum of two thousand eight hundred and seventy-five dollars, for the purpose of refunding the amounts advanced by individuals, and paying expenses incurred in raising recruits, under the call of the President, dated Oct. 17, 1863.

¹ Acting assistant postmaster.

Voted, That the town raise the sum of two thousand two hundred and fifty dollars, to be applied, under the direction of the selectmen, for the purpose of procuring this town's proportion of the quota of volunteers in the military service, called for from this commonwealth by the President, under the order of March 14, 1864, provided the amount of money so raised and applied shall not exceed the sum of one hundred and twenty-five dollars, including expenses for each volunteer enlisted in said service as a part of the quota of this town under said order.

At a town-meeting held Aug. 4, 1864, George K. Daniell, Esq., moderator, it was Voted, To appropriate the sum of one hundred and twenty-five dollars for each recruit enlisted in aid of and for the purpose of filling the quotas of the town, or furnishing men for the present war, under any requisition, order, or call of the President or of the War Department of the United States, during the year 1864, as authorized by the act of the Legislature of 1865, approved March 28, 1864.

Voted, To authorize the treasurer to borrow such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of the foregoing vote.

At a town-meeting held May 22, 1865, Marshall Newell, moderator, it was Voted, To raise such sums of money as may be necessary to refund to individuals money contributed in aid of and for the purpose of filling the quotas of the town, or furnishing men for the present war, under any requisition, order, or call of the President or of the War Department of the United States, during the year 1864, as authorized by the act of the Legislature of 1865, approved April 25th.

Voted, To authorize the treasurer to borrow sufficient sums of money to pay all reimbursements voted under the second article.

At a town-meeting held March 5, 1866, it was Voted, To authorize the selectmen to furnish town aid to families of deceased soldiers who are in need of aid in this town.

The following are the names of officers and enlisted men from or credited to the town of Needham who served in the army or navy of the United States during the war of the Rebellion, 1861-65 :

Infantry.

SECOND REGIMENT (Three Years).

Murray, Henry, Co. I, Jan. 24, 1865; ¹ must. out July 14, 1865.

Woodman, John, Co. E, Aug. 22, 1864; must. out July 14, 1865.

FIFTH REGIMENT (One Hundred Days).

O'Leary, Arthur W., Co. B, July 25, 1864; must. out Nov. 16, 1864.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Cameron, James, Co. G, June 13, 1861; killed at Bull Run, Va., Aug. 29, 1862.

THIRTEENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Wood, Ephraim A., Co. C, July 16, 1861; disch. Nov. 18, 1862, for disability; July 20, 1863, must. as 1st lieut. in 55th Regt.; res. Nov. 20, 1863.

EIGHTEENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Fox, Franklin M., Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 31, 1861, for disability.

Fuller, William, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; died at Washington, D. C., Sept. 25, 1862, of wounds at second battle of Bull Run, Va., Aug. 30, 1862.

Martel, John, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to V. R. C.

Richards, Samuel F., Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. July 28, 1862, disability.

Richardson, George, Co. F, Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 13, 1862, disability.

Smith, Cornelius D., Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 2, 1864, corp.

NINETEENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Berry, Asa B., Co. I, Aug. 28, 1861; must. out Aug. 28, 1864.

McKinney, George, Co. F, Aug. 28, 1861; re-enl. Dec. 21, 1863; must. out June 30, 1865, in Co. I.

O'Connor, Robert, Jan. 16, 1865; must. out May 6, 1865.

TWENTIETH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Coulter, John S., Co. F, Aug. 19, 1862; disch. Dec. 18, 1862.

Healey, Michael F., Co. K, Dec. 14, 1864; must. out July 16, 1865.

TWENTY-SECOND REGIMENT (Three Years).

Avery, George, Co. B, Sept. 2, 1861; disch. June 28, 1862, for disability.

Bullard, Moses H., Co. G, Sept. 9, 1861; killed at Gaines' Mills, Va.; June 27, 1862.

Smith, William W., Co. B, Sept. 17, 1861; must. out Oct. 17, 1864.

Thompson, William, Co. B, Oct. 5, 1861; disch. Feb. 18, 1863, disability.

TWENTY-THIRD REGIMENT (Three Years).

Ambler, Artemas C., Co. C, Sept. 28, 1861; must. out Oct. 13, 1864.

Cobbett, James A., Co. K, Aug. 1, 1862; must. out June 25, 1865, to re-enlist.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Eayrs, Joseph H., Co. E, Nov. 18, 1861; must. out Nov. 17, 1864.

THIRTIETH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Coulter, James C., Co. I, Dec. 18, 1861; disch. Jan. 1, 1864, to re-enlist.

THIRTY-FIRST REGIMENT (Three Years).

Hardie, Robert, Co. K, Jan. 20, 1862; died Sept. 13, 1864, in hospital at Baton Rouge, La.

THIRTY-SECOND REGIMENT (Three Years).

Gehling, Joseph, Co. K, Jan. 5, 1864; must. out June 29, 1865.

THIRTY-THIRD REGIMENT (Three Years).

Murray, Henry, Co. K, Jan. 24, 1865; trans. June 1, 1865, to 2d Inf.

Small, Edwin, Co. C, Aug. 6, 1862; disch. Jan. 19, 1865, disability.

THIRTY-FIFTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Hall, David K., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; died of disease at Newport News, Va., Feb. 25, 1863; sergt.

Collier, Isaac, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps.

Knapp, George L., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.

Manning, John S., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. Aug. 18, 1863, disability.

Monnaghau, John, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.

Sargent, George, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. Nov. 18, 1863, disability; wagoner.

Wallace, William J., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 13, 1865.

Walsh, Patrick, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Wheeler, Samuel S., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.

Willcutt, William, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. Jan. 26, 1863, disability.

Wright, Samuel G., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; died on board steamer "Des Moines," Aug. 15, 1863.

THIRTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Beless, George, Co. I, Aug. 21, 1862; disch. Nov. 14, 1862, disability.

Flanagan, Patrick, Co. I, Aug. 21, 1862; must. out June 30, 1865.

Rimmele, William J., Co. I, Aug. 21, 1862; must. out June 30, 1865.

Snow, Joseph, Co. I, Aug. 21, 1862; disch. July 3, 1863, disability.

Taylor, Edwin A., Co. I, Aug. 24, 1862; must. out June 30, 1865.

THIRTY-NINTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Batcheller, Holland N., Co. B, Aug. 20, 1862; disch. May 5, 1863; Order War Dept.

Hunting, Willard, Co. A, Aug. 18, 1862; died Dec. 7, 1864, in rebel prison at Salisbury, N. C.

Knapp, Charles P., Co. A, Aug. 18, 1862; trans. Feb. 5, 1864, to V. R. C.

Morse, Daniel F., Co. A, Aug. 18, 1862; must. out June 2, 1865.

Stevens, Elbridge, Co. A, Aug. 18, 1862; died in rebel prison, Richmond, Va.

Whitaker, Channing, Co. B, Sept. 2, 1862; must. out June 19, 1865.

FORTIETH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Adams, Stephen W., Co. F, Sept. 3, 1862; trans. Dec. 3, 1863, to V. R. C.; wagoner.

Kennedy, Cernelius, Co. F, Sept. 3, 1862; missing in action May 16, 1864.

Richardson, James, Co. F, Sept. 3, 1862; must. out June 16, 1865.

Richardson, Samuel C., Co. F, Sept. 3, 1862; disch. June 30, 1865; Order War Department.

FORTY-SECOND REGIMENT (One Hundred Days).

Bemis, George, Co. K, July 18, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

Henderson, William H., Co. D, July 20, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

Hastings, John S., Co. K, July 18, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

Kibler, Frederick, Co. E, July 22, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

FORTY-THIRD REGIMENT (Nine Months).

Fiske, Joseph E., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out May 29, 1863; 1st sergt.

Dewing, Joseph H., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863; sergt.

Bent, Thomas D., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out June 1, 1863, to enlist in 2d Regt. H. Art.

¹ Date of muster in.

Belcher, Charles H., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Boynton, Richard F., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Bullard, William P., Co. C, Oct. 1, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Cooper, Hugh, Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Guyot, Joseph, Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Kingsbury, William H., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; died at Beaufort, N. C., March 1, 1863.
 Knapp, Cyrus W., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Koff, Frederick, Co. K, Sept. 16, 1862; deserted Oct. 2, 1862, Readville, Mass.
 McLoud, Robert M., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863; musician.
 Marshall, John P., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 McLane, William H., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Oakes, Joseph, Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Russell, William L., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Seagraves, Gilbert R., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Severance, Charles R., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Sumner, Lewis N., Co. K, Sept. 16, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Wisner, George P., Co. C, Sept. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

FORTY-FOURTH REGIMENT (Nine Months).

Bailey, Walter, Co. K, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out June 18, 1863.
 Brennan, John, Co. B, Sept. 12, 1862; disch. Jan. 30, 1863, for disability.
 Dadmun, Newell H., Co. K, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out June 18, 1863.
 Fuller, Albert, Co. A, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out June 18, 1863.
 Fuller, Ezra N., Co. A, Sept. 12, 1862; died Feb. 21, 1862, at Newberne, N. C.
 Greenwood, John W., Co. A, Sept. 12, 1862; disch. April 1, 1863, for wound received in engagement at Whitehall, N. C., Dec. 16, 1862.
 Hunting, Israel, Jr., Co. A, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out June 18, 1863.
 Johnson, Albert S., Co. A, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out June 18, 1863.
 Lyon, Henry, Co. A, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out June 18, 1863.
 Lyon, Edward, Co. A, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out June 18, 1863.
 Moseley, William, Co. A, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out June 18, 1863.
 Newell, Charles, Co. B, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out June 18, 1863.
 May, Albert S., Co. A, Sept. 12, 1862; disch. Feb. 28, 1863, for wound received in engagement at Whitehall, N. C., Dec. 16, 1862.
 Whitmarsh, John G., Co. A, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out June 18, 1863.

FORTY-FIFTH REGIMENT (Nine Months).

Barnes, Daniel, Co. B, Oct. 11, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Carter, Rufus B., Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Coulter, George, Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Crowley, Dennis, Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; disch. for disability Nov. 4, 1862.
 Estabrook, George W., Co. A, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Hammill, Hugh, Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Hatch, Ambrose P., Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Hotchkiss, Willard H., Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Jones, Alvah T., Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Jones, Pliny M., Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Morton, William H., Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Palmer, George F., Co. E, Sept. 26, 1862; disch. Oct. 18, 1862, for disability.
 Ragan, Timothy O., Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.
 Richards, Samuel F., Co. B, Sept. 26, 1862; killed at Kinston, N. C., Dec. 14, 1862.

ELEVENTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Nine Months).

Wisner, Charles F., Aug. 25, 1862; must. out May 25, 1863; re-enl. in 11th Light Battery Jan. 2, 1864; must. out June 16, 1865, corporal.

FIFTY-FIFTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Holmes, Charles, Co. B, Aug. 22, 1864; must. out Aug. 29, 1865.

FIFTY-SIXTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Avignon, Peter, Co. I, Feb. 4, 1864; died Aug. 1, 1864, at Andersonville, Ga.
 Baldoe, Louis, Co. I, Feb. 4, 1864; died Aug. 9, 1864, at Andersonville, Ga.
 Farly, Edward, Co. D, Dec. 29, 1863; disch. April 3, 1865, for disability.
 Flattery, Patrick, Co. I, Feb. 4, 1864; disch. June 20, 1865, for disability.
 Juffs, Pedro, Co. I, Feb. 4, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865.
 Marshall, John P., Co. A, March 1, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865.
 McCarty, James, Co. I, Feb. 4, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865.
 Severance, Charles R., Co. A, March 1, 1864; killed May 31, 1864.
 Tumbridge, John S., Co. I, Feb. 4, 1864; disch. Sept. 9, 1864, for disability.

SIXTY-FIRST REGIMENT (One Year).

Casey, Daniel, Co. I, Jan. 16, 1865; must. out July 16, 1865.
 Conroy, John, Co. I, Jan. 17, 1865; must. out July 16, 1865.
 Donley, Philip, Co. I, Jan. 16, 1865; must. out July 16, 1865.
 Martin, Frank S., Co. I, Jan. 24, 1865; must. out July 16, 1865.

SIXTY-SECOND REGIMENT (One Year).

Marshall, John E., Co. C, March 24, 1865; must. out May 5, 1865.

Artillery.

SECOND BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Brigham, Francis O., July 31, 1861; must. out Aug. 16, 1864.

SEVENTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Nichols, Stephen, Jan. 21, 1864; must. out Nov. 10, 1865.

TENTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Herring, William, Sept. 9, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.

FIRST REGIMENT HEAVY ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Farnsworth, Abram C., Co. L, Dec. 9, 1861; must. out Dec. 17, 1864.
 Murray, George M., Co. M, March 4, 1862; must. out March 30, 1864, to re-enlist.
 Simpson, Frederick J., Co. G, Dec. 3, 1863; died Nov. 4, 1864, at Florence Prison, S. C.

SECOND REGIMENT HEAVY ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Fiske, Joseph E., Oct. 9, 1863; 2d Lieut. June 4, 1863; 1st Lieut. July 30, 1863; capt. Oct. 9, 1863; must. out May 15, 1865.
 Fuller, Albert, Co. D, Aug. 22, 1863; q.m.-sergt.
 Freeman, Joseph, Co. D, Aug. 22, 1863; died July 2, 1864, at Newberne, N. C.
 Marshall, Frederick F., Co. B, Aug. 29, 1863; must. out Sept. 3, 1865; corp.

THIRD REGIMENT HEAVY ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Dill, John, Co. L, May 30, 1864; deserted July 10, 1864.
 Withington, Charles P., Co. L, Aug. 31, 1864; must. out June 17, 1865.

FOURTH REGIMENT HEAVY ARTILLERY (One Year).

Fuller, George, Co. B, Aug. 20, 1864; deserted May 15, 1865.
 Bachman, Frederick H., Co. B, Aug. 23, 1864; must. out June 17, 1865.

Cavalry.

FIRST REGIMENT CAVALRY (Three Years).

Hurd, Edwin, Co. D, Jan. 1, 1864; must. out June 29, 1865.

SECOND REGIMENT CAVALRY (Three Years).

Carter, Warren, Co. D, Jan. 18, 1864; must. out July 20, 1865.
 Forrest, Henry, May 25, 1864; unassigned recruit.
 Hollinbeck, William, May 25, 1864; unassigned recruit.
 Harmon, John, May 26, 1864; unassigned recruit.
 Lewis, John, Co. K, May 25, 1864; deserted June 25, 1864.
 Morris, Edward, May 26, 1864; unassigned recruit.
 Morris, Samuel, May 26, 1864; unassigned recruit.
 Moore, John, Aug. 23, 1864; unassigned recruit.
 Reynolds, John, May 26, 1864; unassigned recruit.
 Stevens, John, May 26, 1864; must. out June 24, 1865.
 Travers, William H., May 25, 1864; unassigned recruit.

THIRD REGIMENT CAVALRY (Three Years).

Woods, Albert A., Co. K, Aug. 6, 1862; died March 21, 1863, at New Orleans, La.

FOURTH REGIMENT CAVALRY (Three Years).

Clark, Joseph J., Co. M, March 1, 1864; must. out Nov. 14, 1865.
 McGregor, John H., asst.-surg., March 1, 1864; disch. April 23, 1864, for disability.
 Moran, Michael, Co. C, Jan. 6, 1864; must. out Nov. 14, 1865.
 Purple, Charles, corp., Co. D, Jan. 3, 1865; must. out Nov. 14, 1865.
 Vernon, John E., Co. B, Dec. 22, 1864; deserted Sept. 18, 1865.

FIFTH REGIMENT CAVALRY (Three Years).

Boling, George, bugler, Co. L, April 22, 1864; must. out June 21, 1865.
 Wilkie, Joshua H., capt., 24th unattached company infantry, one year, Feb. 7, 1865; must. out May 12, 1865.
 Keith, Walter D., capt., 26th unattached company infantry, one year, Dec. 15, 1864; must. out May 12, 1865.

Veteran Reserve Corps.

Anthis, Philip, Aug. 22, 1864.
 Coolins, Clarkson, Dec. 20, 1864.
 Dance, Charles W., Dec. 20, 1864.
 Greany, George, Aug. 20, 1864.
 Harley, William A., Aug. 15, 1864.
 Huth, John, Aug. 17, 1864.
 Johnson, William, Dec. 20, 1864.
 McLaughlin, Patrick, Aug. 19, 1864.
 Millenken, Robert, Aug. 17, 1864.
 Moore, George, Dec. 20, 1864; deserted Feb. 20, 1865.

United States Colored Troops.

Lambert, Joseph, July 4, 1864, 28th Inf.
 Lausing, Robert, July 4, 1864, 28th Inf.
 Lasley, Frank, July 4, 1864, 28th Inf.

Navy.

Allen, Andrew, one year; shipped Feb. 15, 1863.
 Anderson, Andrew, three years; shipped Aug. 22, 1864.
 Andrews, Henry, one year; shipped Feb. 20, 1863.
 Barry, James, one year; shipped Aug. 12, 1862.
 Bigelow, Albert, one year; shipped Feb. 11, 1863.
 Brown, Daniel H., one year; shipped March 11, 1863.
 Foster, William, three years; shipped May 17, 1864.
 Grant, George D., three years; shipped Dec. 22, 1864.
 Hanson, Carl, one year; shipped April 18, 1863.
 Hazard, Frank W., one year; shipped April 18, 1863.
 Pheeny, William, one year; shipped March 17, 1863.
 Reynolds, Bernard, one year; shipped March 16, 1863.
 Shaw, William, one year; shipped Jan. 20, 1863.
 Shepherd, John, three years; shipped Dec. 14, 1861.
 Smith, John (3d), three years; shipped Dec. 16, 1861.
 Smith, Noah, three years; shipped Dec. 17, 1861.
 Smith, William E., three years; shipped Dec. 18, 1861.
 Snider, Stephen, three years; shipped Dec. 26, 1861.
 Sullivan, Dennis, one year; shipped Nov. 7, 1862.
 Symonds, Daniel, three years; shipped Dec. 23, 1861.
 Todd, Robert, three years; shipped Dec. 14, 1861.
 Tibbetts, Edward H., two years; shipped Jan. 1, 1862.
 Trudo, Francis M., two years; shipped Jan. 6, 1862.
 Trefry, James, three years; shipped Jan. 14, 1862.
 Wallace, Charles, one year; shipped Aug. 26, 1862.
 Welch, Michael, one year; shipped April 24, 1863.
 White, William, one year; shipped April 14, 1863.
 Williams, Michael, one year; shipped March 23, 1863.
 Wentworth, George, one year; shipped Aug. 22, 1862.
 Willard, Henry, one year; shipped Aug. 26, 1862.
 Ward, John H., one year; shipped Aug. 26, 1862.
 Withan, Francis, one year; shipped Aug. 26, 1862.
 Wheeler, Henry, one year; shipped Aug. 25, 1862.
 Ward, Abner, one year; shipped Aug. 25, 1862.
 Williams, George J., one year; shipped Aug. 26, 1862.
 Wakefield, Josiah J., one year; shipped Aug. 29, 1862.
 Wood, Charles H., one year; shipped Aug. 25, 1862.
 Wise, Pliney, one year; shipped Aug. 27, 1862.
 Withington, Charles P., three years; shipped Feb. 13, 1862; disch. Aug. 4, 1863, for disability.

RANDOLPH.

The following is a complete record of the names of all the soldiers and officers in the military service of the United States, and of all the seamen and officers in the naval service, from the town of Randolph, during the Rebellion begun in 1861:

Alden, William Hart.	Alden, Hiram C.
Abenzeller, Anthony.	Alden, Lucas W.
Angier, Edson J.	Arnold, Horatio B.
Austin, Ebenezer V.	Adams, Richard.
Alden, Frederick H.	Alden, Silas.
Alexander, Thomas.	Buck, Nathan E.
Alden, Henry A.	Burrell, George Augustus.

Beal, Ira, Jr.	Curtis, John.
Blencowe, W. William.	Crosby, Patrick.
Buck, Samuel Henry.	Cotter, Edward A.
Brundage, Levi A.	Connor, John F.
Brady, John F.	Condon, Maurice.
Byrne, John J.	Cole, Ephraim T.
Bossell, Joseph.	Colbert, John.
Bryant, Ira A.	Carroix, John.
Bryant, Ira.	Cary, Francis.
Buckley, John.	Cain, Friend.
Buckley, Jerry C.	Clary, Daniel.
Buckley, J. C.	Chandler, Frederick.
Bates, Warren.	Clark, Isaac.
Belcher, Leonard.	Croak, George H.
Barry, Robert C.	Cook, George W.
Bigelow, John, Jr.	Chandler, Constant S.
Bowman, Oliver H.	Churchill, Millard F.
Boyle, Joseph.	Currie, George H.
Boyle, Francis.	Crosby, John.
Blackman, E.	Clark, George.
Brady, Peter.	Clark, Matthew, Jr.
Burrell, David L., Jr.	Cushing, Albert W.
Burrell, Joseph.	Campbell, Thomas W.
Bowen, Michael.	Crawford, William H.
Bracken, James.	Corrigan, Frank S.
Belcher, Charles H.	Cork, Richard.
Burbank, Angelo A.	Clark, John.
Belcher, Francis A.	Cornell, Samuel J.
Barry, James.	Cohn, Joseph.
Brosnihan, Daniel.	Cane, Benjamin.
Blencowe, Richmond.	Chilson, Elisha M.
Bean, Seth C.	Cross, John.
Bates, William F.	Cunningham, Thomas.
Bartlett, Amasa M.	Dargen, Joseph W.
Blanchard, William F.	Davis, Charles C.
Brown, Walter H.	Daves, James E.
Baker, Samuel S.	Downey, John.
Birdley, John A.	Daves, Charles F.
Balcom, Charles H.	Donahoe, John J.
Bell, William.	Donahoe, Philip.
Brix, James.	Driscoll, Timothy.
Boice, Charles H.	Doddy, John.
Blackburn, Joshua.	Dunton, John.
Bickford, Charles F.	Dyer, Frederick W.
Banman, Christian.	Driscoll, John A.
Blethen, James L.	Deane, Ward C.
Bender, William.	Davis, William H.
Brink, Oliver J.	Davis, Joseph P.
Burt, Charles T.	Dernan, Hugh.
Burt, Dunham G.	Doyle, Edward.
Brunson, Perry.	Dooley, William.
Bracken, Andrew.	Downey, John.
Baker, John.	Douglass, William S.
Bigelow, Frederick N.	Dyer, Abram B.
Barry, Garret C.	Delano, Emery.
Blood, Nathan B.	Dumfee, Michael.
Blood, Herbert C.	Donahy, Michael, Jr.
Crooker, Otis.	Deuch, George B.
Curtis, John W.	Dennehy, Daniel D.
Curtis, Martin William.	Driscoll, James C.
Cousins, Daniel.	Delano, Lorenzo L.
Compass, Theodore.	Dolland, Robert.
Cottle, Edmund.	Desmond, Cornelius.
Crooker, Allen J.	Dargen, James F.
Cox, Henry M.	Donahy, Michael.
Cartwright, John T.	Doherty, Patrick.
Clark, Samuel Melvin.	Dorr, Joseph.
Clark, Cornelius.	Drew, D. L.
Cox, Richard H.	Desney, Joseph.
Cahill, John.	Diggs, Lloyd.
Capen, Charles M.	Davis, Henry.
Croak, William Andrew.	Davis, David.
Curtis, James L.	Doyle, James.
Curran, Timothy.	Dougherty, Thomas.
Curran, John, Jr.	Dyer, Joseph W.
Cary, Patrick.	Desmond, John.

Eckenstein, Libert.
 Eddy, Charles.
 Eddy, Lorenzo D.
 Eaton, William T.
 Early, James (No. 1).
 Eddy, George.
 Early, James (No. 2).
 Faunce, Hannibal A.
 Fletcher, Eustace Jerome.
 Fletcher, Samuel.
 Foster, Samuel A.
 Fowkes, George W.
 Faunce, Leonard A.
 French, George F.
 Farrell, Edward.
 Farmer, Charles H.
 French, Charles L.
 Flynn, John D.
 Faunce, Addison.
 Faunce, Charles A.
 Faunce, Hiram S.
 Finerty, Edward.
 Flynn, Edward.
 Foley, John (2d).
 Ford, Edwin.
 Foley, John (1st).
 Fox, James D.
 Faunce, Alvin.
 Finerty, Bartho.
 Flynn, James.
 Flanagan, Patrick.
 Fraxwell, John.
 Foley, John (3d).
 Forrest, Augustus.
 Faxon, Daniel, Jr.
 Gill, John H.
 Godwin, George H.
 Goodwin, Charles H.
 Geer, E. F.
 Gerald, George.
 Gerald, William H.
 Gill, John, Jr.
 Gill, William F.
 Gurney, F. M.
 Gear, Michael A.
 Green, Patrick.
 Good, John.
 Gennels, Frederick.
 Gurnett, Peter.
 Hollis, Myron W.
 Harris, Seth M.
 Hayden, Zenas M.
 Howard, Edward E.
 Howard, Edgar.
 Howard, Martin V. B.
 Heath, John W.
 Hodge, Samuel R.
 Huzzy, Willard A.
 Howland, Charles.
 Henry, George.
 Holbrook, Henry D.
 Holbrook, Ebenezer, Jr.
 Hobart, Edward K.
 Hamilton, George A.
 Howard, Ira.
 Hogan, James H.
 Hodge, Charles D.
 Hodge, Oliver H. P.
 Hobart, Samuel B.
 Hand, Patrick.
 Howard, Volney.
 Hill, William F.
 Harris, Job D.
 Hollis, Nathan S.
 Hunt, George W.
 Hutchinson, Benjamin R.

Hobart, David W.
 Hobart, W. M.
 Hobart, F. M.
 Hobart, James E.
 Howard, Moses B.
 Halpin, Michael.
 Holbrook, Marcus M.
 Hollis, George F.
 Hickey, Hugh.
 Hunt, James W.
 Hunt, Lewis A.
 Howard, Albert.
 Harris, John D.
 Hollis, Lemuel.
 Hogan, Richard.
 Hodge, Jerome R.
 Halloran, Matthew O.
 Hand, Peter B.
 Harris, James F.
 Harris, John.
 Holbrook, Hiram.
 Holbrook, Seth.
 Howard, Henry B.
 Howard, Henry M.
 Howard, Simeon.
 Healy, Jeremiah.
 Hopkins, Jonathan.
 Hollis, Galen.
 Hunt, George T.
 Hunt, Charles E.
 Harris, Rufus F.
 Holbrook, James M.
 Howard, George W.
 Holbrook, Joel J.
 Hollis, George W.
 Howard, Edwin W.
 Hammond, Laban S.
 Hall, James.
 Heger, Peter.
 Hannavan, John.
 Hodges, James.
 Hoeg, Joel.
 Herin, William O.
 Hedericks, John.
 Hatcher, Henry.
 Howard, George.
 Howard, Cornelius.
 Hand, Thomas F.
 Howard, James T.
 Hunt, Caleb F.
 Hanna, George B.
 Ingell, Benjamin.
 Ingell, John T.
 Ingell, J. Wilson.
 Ives, Edward L.
 Ingell, Charles A.
 Joy, Henry.
 Jones, Leonard.
 Jones, James M.
 Jones, Rufus J.
 Jones, James.
 Jones, Walter A.
 Jones, George W.
 Jaquith, Franklin.
 Jordan, James.
 Jones, Adam W.
 Jones, Obediah (2d).
 Johnson, George M.
 Joines, Joseph.
 Knight, George E.
 Knight, Nelson E.
 Kiley, Henry.
 Kneeland, Thomas.
 King, Seth T.
 King, Royal T.
 Kennedy, John A.

King, Joel.
 Kiley, Patrick.
 Kelleher, Cornelius.
 Kiley, Dennis.
 Kiley, John.
 Keirnan, Felix.
 Keegan, Patrick.
 Keegan, William.
 Kiley, Henry.
 Kennedy, James.
 Kiley, Michael.
 Kelliher, John C.
 Keirnan, Edward.
 Kelliher, Michael.
 Kerrigan, Frank.
 Kinsley, William.
 Kingman, John W.
 Knapp, C. J. F.
 Kissick, James H.
 Kinsley, Wilson.
 Kenney, Joseph.
 Knight, Austin G.
 Kerrigan, James.
 Keefe, John.
 Lovering, Isaac J.
 Lovering, George M.
 Loud, William.
 Lyons, William.
 Leavitt, Aaron.
 Law, John A.
 Lyons, John W.
 Leonard, John W.
 Leach, Charles.
 Lynch, Michael.
 Lally, Daniel.
 Law, Thomas.
 Linns, Alfred.
 Lake, Peter.
 Leavenworth, Charles R.
 Libbey, Roscoe.
 Leonard, Edward W.
 Leonard, Frank.
 Littlefield, John S.
 Littlefield, Roger S.
 Morton, Asa H.
 Morton, Isaac.
 Mann, John Andrew.
 Morse, Lysander C.
 Moran, Matthew.
 McCarty, John.
 McCarty, Michael.
 Maney, James.
 Macomber, Daniel R.
 McMahon, Edward.
 McCue, John.
 Mann, George W.
 McMair, William.
 Madan, Washington.
 Madan, William.
 Murray, John.
 Miller, Charles.
 Miller, Henry.
 Mann, Sidney A.
 Murphy, Michael.
 Mullins, John.
 McCabe, Joseph.
 Mann, John.
 Masterson, Michael.
 McAuliff, Richard.
 McKenna, John.
 McGinnis, John.
 Mullins, Jeremiah.
 McVey, John.
 Mahoney, John.
 McLaughlin, Edward.
 McGrath, Thomas.

McMahon, Peter.
 Morgan, Edward.
 May, Albert M.
 Mann, Nelson.
 May, Calvin.
 May, John.
 Miller, Benjamin L.
 Mann, Moses.
 Madan, William.
 Mann, George W.
 Maxim, John.
 Mooney, Daniel.
 Murray, James.
 McCalb, Joseph.
 Murphy, John.
 Middleton, Robert L.
 Moerisey, William.
 McSweeney, Daniel.
 Miller, Alexander.
 Mickle, Charles.
 Myers, Henry.
 Morrissey, William.
 McNair, Richard.
 Madigan, John.
 Madan, Elihu.
 Niles, Horace.
 Niles, Jonathan S.
 Nightengale, Frederick.
 Noonan, Thomas W.
 Nast, John.
 Nightengale, Alvan H.
 Newcomb, Francis.
 Nye, Oliver C.
 Otis, William W.
 O'Brien, John, Jr.
 O'Holloran, James.
 O'Neil, Jeremiah.
 O'Neil, John.
 O'Neil, Daniel.
 O'Riley, Frank.
 O'Towle, Patrick.
 O'Brien, Michael.
 O'Brien, Richard.
 O'Holloran, Thomas.
 O'Neil, Timothy.
 Palmer, William.
 Perry, William.
 Poppy, Martin S.
 Packard, Horace M.
 Poole, Charles.
 Poole, J. Franklin.
 Payne, Samuel H.
 Pratt, Charles E.
 Pratt, E. Francis.
 Poole, Marcus M.
 Pierce, Leonard.
 Payne, Ezra A.
 Payne, Adoniram A.
 Phillips, Zebulon S.
 Pope, David.
 Pratt, Abraham W.
 Packard, Horatio.
 Parker, Albert.
 Pratt, Richmond T.
 Paul, Leonard B.
 Payson, Charles W.
 Powers, John.
 Pennypacker, Frank.
 Paine, Jonathan S.
 Penell, Arthur.
 Perkins, Enoch.
 Pratt, Henry.
 Pyne, John.
 Prescott, Charles.
 Quimbley, John B.
 Remick, Prescott.

Rienstlow, John.
 Raymond, Harvey E.
 Reed, Edwin.
 Richards, Joseph.
 Riley, James.
 Riley, John F.
 Roule, John.
 Riley, Alexander.
 Reardon, Daniel.
 Rooney, Peter.
 Regan, Dennis.
 Reynolds, O. A.
 Rooney, John.
 Rogers, Martin.
 Ryan, William.
 Reardon, Patrick.
 Riley, John.
 Rowell, James A.
 Richards, Joseph.
 Rowe, Luther.
 Riley, Francis.
 Randall, William.
 Robbins, J. E.
 Regan Charles.
 Rudolph, Jacob.
 Riley, Charles F.
 Smith, William A.
 Snow, Hiram.
 Sloan, Peter S.
 Sloan, George S.
 Sloan, Isaac H.
 Sloan, Joseph V.
 Smith, George L.
 Sessler, Jacob.
 Stetson, Charles T.
 Spear, James.
 Stetson, Albert W.
 Stetson, L. Alonzo.
 Stetson, Abel Columbus.
 Sprague, Quincy.
 Snow, William F.
 Snell, George A.
 Stimpson, William H.
 Sullivan, Cornelius.
 Smith, Henry F.
 Sylvester, John A.
 Sylvester, John Q. A.
 Sweeney, Patrick.
 Spear, George C.
 Shed, William H.
 Smith, George.
 Spear, William B.
 Shaw, Martin V. B.
 Simpson, Elbridge G.
 Snow, Henry.
 Sprague, Alvin H.
 Stetson, Francis E.
 Sullivan, Patrick E.
 Smith, Francis.
 Stetson, George A.
 Stetson, William B.
 Smith, Lewis T.
 Smith, George N.
 Stauffer, Schoff.
 Slaughter, Edward.
 Smith, Asa.
 Strong, Asa S.
 Slack, Henry.
 Stephens, Abednego.
 Salkfield, Thomas.
 Smith, Henson.
 Thayer, Royal W.
 Thayer, Leonard.
 Thayer, Levi Frank.
 Thayer, Isaac, Jr.
 Thayer, Henry W.

Thayer, Henry Martin.
 Thayer, Henry Carter.
 Thayer, Philander W.
 Thayer, Nelson L.
 Thayer, James Riley.
 Thayer, Minot.
 Thayer, Orrin T.
 Thayer, James M.
 Thayer, Charles Payson.
 Thayer, Ephraim H.
 Thayer, Samuel.
 Thayer, George W.
 Thayer, N. A.
 Thayer, Joseph W.
 Thayer, Charles Lincoln.
 Thayer, Charles Luther.
 Thayer, Charles H.
 Thayer, Thomas H. B.
 Thayer, Warren, Jr.
 Thayer, Alson W.
 Thayer, Thomas B.
 Thayer, Charles Packard.
 Tileston, George Henry.
 Turner, John P.
 Tillson, William.
 Townsend, Newton.
 Tower, Morton F.
 Turner, Warren C.
 Tower, Minot.
 Twohig, Maurice.
 Turner, Frederick.
 Taylor, Marcus.
 Tower, Charles W.
 Taunt, Loring.
 Tynan, John.
 Thompson, James.
 Taylor, Ira A. E.
 Tower, Christopher.
 Tarbox, Elbridge G.
 Townsend, Adoniram J.
 Tully, Bartlett.
 Turner, Benjamin F.
 Upham, Lyman.
 Uniack, Richard.
 Uniack, Robert.
 Veazie, Walter C.
 Viele, Sidney B.
 Valentine, George.
 Wilbur, Otis F.
 Wales, Hiram F.
 Winnett, Wendell W.
 White, William Leander.
 Wales, Elisha Linfield.
 White, George Bailey.
 Wortman, Frank M.
 Wild, Charles H.
 White, Lawrence.
 Willis, Thomas E.
 Whitten, William.
 Woods, William H.
 Whalen, Thomas.
 Ward, Christopher.
 Whitmarsh, Thomas F.
 Ward, Eugene F.
 Ward, Thomas P.
 Ward, John.
 Wilkinson, Richard.
 Whieldon, Joseph.
 Williams, John.
 Woodman, William Horace.
 Weather, Charles.
 Warren, John E.
 Wood, James.
 White, Cornelius L.
 White, Philemon.
 Wren, Bernard.

Woodbury, Frank V.
 Whiting, Otis S.
 Whiting, Sidney S.
 Whiting, Otis.
 Wetherbee, Horace N.
 Wetherbee, Martin P.
 White, Samuel.
 White, James W.
 Winnett, George H.
 Willard, Augustus.
 Wild, Theodore S.
 White, Robert S.
 Ward, Charles W.
 Wetherbee, Joseph W.
 Wetherbee, Orrin.

Wetherbee, Erville.
 Wetherbee, David.
 Whelom, Thomas.
 Wilbur, Joseph W.
 Weeks, Charles H.
 West, Lorenzo.
 Williams, Thomas.
 Wing, Francis H.
 Ward, Thomas F.
 White, Samuel A.
 Whitcomb, Ephraim F.
 Washburn, George.
 Young, Isaac E.
 Yeaton, Stephen C.

List of Randolph Selectmen.—The list of gentlemen who have in years past served the town of Randolph as selectmen, as printed in the body of the history, was furnished to the writer of the Randolph article from what was believed to be an authoritative source. While the sheets were passing through the press, however, certain errors were discovered in it. The list below given has been carefully revised, and is thought to be entirely accurate:

1793.—Joseph White, Jr., Dr. Ebenezer Alden, Micah White, Jr.
 1794.—Joseph White, Jr., Dr. Ebenezer Alden, Micah White, Jr.
 1795.—Joseph White, Jr., Samuel Bass, Micah White, Jr.
 1796.—Joseph White, Jr., Samuel Bass, Micah White, Jr.
 1797.—Joseph White, Jr., Samuel Bass, Micah White, Jr.
 1798.—Joseph White, Jr., Samuel Bass, Micah White, Jr.
 1799.—Joseph White, Jr., Thomas French, Micah White, Jr.
 1800.—Joseph White, Jr., Samuel Bass, Micah White, Jr.
 1801.—Joseph White, Jr., Zacheus Thayer, Micah White, Jr.
 1802.—Joseph White, Jr., Samuel Bass, Micah White, Jr.
 1803.—Joseph White, Jr., Samuel Bass, Micah White, Jr.
 1804.—Joseph White, Jr., Samuel Bass, Jonathan Belcher.
 1805.—Thomas French, Samuel Linfield, Micah White, Jr.
 1806.—Thomas French, Samuel Linfield, Micah White, Jr.
 1807.—Thomas French, Joseph Porter, Micah White, Jr.
 1808.—Thomas French, Nathaniel Spear, Micah White, Jr.
 1809.—Thomas French, Samuel Linfield, Micah White, Jr.
 1810.—Thomas French, Samuel Linfield, Micah White, Jr.
 1811.—Thomas French, Samuel Linfield, Micah White, Jr.
 1812.—Jonathan Wales, Jr., Samuel Linfield, Micah White, Jr.
 1813.—Jonathan Wales, Jr., Jacob Whitcomb, Jr., Micah White, Jr.
 1814.—Jonathan Wales, Jr., Joseph Linfield, Micah White, Jr.
 1815.—Jonathan Wales, Jr., Joseph Linfield, Micah White, Jr.
 1816.—Jonathan Wales, Jr., Joseph Linfield, Micah White, Jr.
 1817.—Jonathan Wales, Jr., Joseph Linfield, Micah White, Jr.
 1818.—Royal Turner, Seth Mann, Zenas French.
 1819.—Luther Thayer, Seth Mann, Zenas French.
 1820.—Luther Thayer, Seth Mann, Zenas French.
 1821.—Zenas French, Seth Mann, Royal Turner.
 1822.—Joseph Linfield, Seth Mann, Royal Turner.
 1823.—Joseph Linfield, Seth Mann, Royal Turner.
 1824.—Joseph Linfield, Seth Mann, Royal Turner.
 1825.—Joseph Linfield, Horatio B. Alden, Thomas Howard.
 1826.—Lewis Whitcomb, Horatio B. Alden, Thomas Howard.
 1827.—Lewis Whitcomb, Horatio B. Alden, Thomas Howard.
 1828.—Seth Mann, Royal Turner, Lewis Whitcomb.
 1829.—Seth Mann, John Porter, Henry B. Alden.
 1830.—Seth Mann, John Porter, Henry B. Alden.
 1831.—Joshua Spear, Jr., David Blanchard, Henry B. Alden.
 1832.—Joshua Spear, Jr., David Blanchard, Henry B. Alden.
 1833.—Jonathan White, Zeba Spear, Henry B. Alden.
 1834.—David Blanchard, Zeba Spear, Henry B. Alden.
 1835.—Joshua Spear, Jr., Zenas French, Jr., Samuel Thayer.
 1836.—Joshua Spear, Jr., Zenas French, Jr., Samuel Thayer.
 1837.—Joshua Spear, Jr., Zenas French, Jr., Samuel Thayer.
 1838.—Joshua Spear, Jr., Zenas French, Jr., Samuel Thayer.
 1839.—Benjamin Richards, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1840.—Benjamin Richards, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.

1841.—Benjamin Richards, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1842.—Benjamin Richards, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1843.—Benjamin Richards, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1844.—Benjamin Richards, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1845.—Aaron Prescott, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1846.—Jonathan Wales, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1847.—Jonathan Wales, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1848.—Jonathan Wales, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1849.—Jonathan Wales, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1850.—Jonathan Wales, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1851.—Bradford L. Wales, Zenas French, Jr., Isaac Tower.
 1852.—David Blanchard, Bradford L. Wales, Archibald Woodman.
 1853.—John T. Jordan, Bradford L. Wales, J. White Belcher.
 1854.—Seth Mann (2d), Thomas White, Jr., J. White Belcher.
 1855.—Seth Mann (2d), Thomas White, Jr., J. White Belcher.
 1856.—Seth Mann (2d), Jacob Whitcomb, Ephraim Mann.
 1857.—Seth Mann (2d), Jacob Whitcomb, Ephraim Mann.
 1858.—Lemuel S. Whitcomb, Jacob Whitcomb, Horatio B. Alden, Jr.
 1859.—Seth Mann (2d), Jacob Whitcomb, Horatio B. Alden, Jr.
 1860.—Seth Mann (2d), Jacob Whitcomb, Horatio B. Alden, Jr.
 1861.—J. White Belcher, Lemuel S. Whitcomb, Horatio B. Alden, Jr.
 1862.—J. White Belcher, Seth Mann (2d), Lemuel S. Whitcomb.
 1863.—J. White Belcher, Seth Mann (2d), Lemuel S. Whitcomb.
 1864.—J. White Belcher, Seth Mann (2d), John Adams.
 1865.—J. White Belcher, Nathaniel Howard, John Adams.
 1866.—J. White Belcher, Nathaniel Howard, John Adams.
 1867.—J. White Belcher, Jacob Whitcomb, Nathaniel Howard.
 1868.—J. White Belcher, Jacob Whitcomb, Horatio B. Alden, Jr.
 1869.—J. White Belcher, John Underhay, Horatio B. Alden.
 1870.—J. White Belcher, John Underhay, Horatio B. Alden.
 1871.—J. White Belcher, John Underhay, Horatio B. Alden.
 1872.—J. White Belcher, Seth Mann (2d), Horatio B. Alden.
 1873.—J. White Belcher, John T. Flood, Seth Mann (2d).
 1874.—J. White Belcher, John T. Flood, James A. Tower.
 1875.—J. White Belcher, John T. Flood, James A. Tower.
 1876.—John T. Flood, Seth Mann (2d), Sidney French.
 1877.—John T. Flood, James A. Tower, Daniel Howard.
 1878.—John T. Flood, James A. Tower, Daniel Howard.
 1879.—John T. Flood, James A. Tower, Daniel Howard.
 1880.—John T. Flood, Sidney French, Royal T. Mann.
 1881.—John T. Flood, John Berry Thayer, Royal T. Mann.
 1882.—John T. Flood, John Berry Thayer, Royal T. Mann.
 1883.—Rufus Albert Thayer, John Berry Thayer, Royal T. Mann.

WRENTHAM.

REPRESENTATIVES TO THE GENERAL COURT.

1691. Samuel Fisher. 1809. James Ware.
 Cornelius Fisher. Jacob Mann.
 1697. John Ware. 1812. Jairus Mann.
 1707. John Guild. Samuel Druce.
 1710. John Whiting. 1813. William Blackinton.
 1717. Ebenezer Fisher. 1821. Josiah J. Fiske.
 1719. Thomas Bacon. 1824. David Shepard.
 1721. Robert Ware. 1826. Ebenezer Blake.
 1723. Edward Gay. 1828. George Hawes.
 1726. Jonathan Ware. 1829. Allen Tillinghast.
 1727. Robert Pond. 1831. Oliver Felt.
 1728. Robert Blake. Lucas Pond.
 1733. William Man. 1834. John Fuller.
 1737. Timothy Metcalf. Shem Armsby.
 1740. James Blake. 1837. Preston Pond.
 1746. John Goldsbury. Silas Metcalf.
 1756. Elephalet Whiting. 1839. John A. Craig.
 1766. Jabez Fisher. Otis G. Cheever.
 1775. Lemuel Kollock. 1842. Samuel Warner.
 1776. Joseph Hawes. 1843. Preston Day.
 Ebenezer Daggett. 1846. Reuben G. Metcalf.
 Benjamin Guild. 1849. Elisha Fisk.
 1782. Joseph Fairbanks. 1854. Benjamin Hawes.
 1784. Oliver Pond. 1855. Charles W. Farrington.
 1787. John Whiting. 1856. Preston Pond.
 1789. Nathan Comstock. 1858. Edward C. Craig.
 1804. Cornelius Kollock. 1859. Chauncy G. Fuller.
 1805. Samuel Day. 1861. Harvey B. Coleman.
 1807. Benjamin Sheppard. 1862. Caleb W. Sayles.

1864. Handel Pond.
 1865. Philander P. Cook.
 1867. James T. Ford.
 1870. Lowell R. Blake.

1871. George Sheldon.
 1873. Abraham W. Harris.
 1874. George M. Warren.
 1876. William R. Tompkins.

DELEGATES TO CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTIONS.

1779. Thomas Man.
 Lemuel Kollock.
 1820. Samuel Day.

1820. Allen Tillinghast.
 Samuel Bugbee.
 1853. Samuel Warner.

STATE SENATORS.

Samuel Day.
 Josiah J. Fiske.
 Allen Tillinghast.
 Ebenezer Blake.
 George Hawes.

Lucas Pond.
 Melatiah Everett.
 Oliver Felt.
 Samuel Warner, Jr.
 Calvin Fisher, Jr.

MEMBERS OF REVOLUTIONARY CONVENTIONS.

1768. Jabez Fisher.
 1774. Jabez Fisher.
 Ebenezer Daggett.

1774. Lemuel Kollock.
 Samuel Lethbridge.

Military Record, 1861-65.—The subjoined list contains the names of persons who were mustered into the military service of the United States in the civil war of 1861, for Wrentham. It includes the names both of citizens and of others who enlisted as a part of the town's quota:

Allen, Joseph H.
 Ally, John.
 Alvine, William.
 Anderson, George.
 Andrews, Charles.
 Auty, George.
 Babbitt, James B.
 Ballou, Darius A.
 Ballou, William C.
 Barnes, George F.
 Barnes, Henry W.
 Barnicoat, John W.
 Baron, Patrick.
 Baron, William D.
 Barton, Albert.
 Bathe, Anthony.
 Bauman, Antoine.
 Benn, Henry.
 Bennett, Aaron A.
 Bennett, Alonzo F.
 Bennett, David S.
 Blackinton, Jacob A.
 Blackinton, James E.
 Blackinton, Lyman D.
 Blake, Adin P.
 Blake, Alfred.
 Blake, Ezra N.
 Blake, Jeremiah D.
 Blake, William L.
 Block, Abel R.
 Bonney, Frank K.
 Bontelle, James H.
 Brine, John.
 Britton, James H.
 Britton, Richard.
 Brown, Charles.
 Brown, George L.
 Brown, Orlando.
 Burroughs, Edward.
 Burton, Albert W.
 Bugbee, Samuel H.
 Cain, John.
 Caldwell, Robert.
 Carroll, Timothy.
 Cheever, Horace C.
 Clifford, Charles.
 Cobb, Alfred O.
 Cobb, Henry G.
 Cody, George.
 Cole, Joseph E.
 Conley, Cornelius.
 Connors, Daniel.
 Cook, Herbert E.
 Crosby, Edmund B.
 Crossley, Benjamin.
 Crotty, Edward.
 Crotty, Daniel.
 Crotty, James P.
 Cunningham, Arthur.
 Cunningham, Charles T.
 Daggett, Marcus L.
 Daly, Michael.
 Darling, Wilson.
 Dart, Allen E.
 Dart, Gustavus F.
 Dermont, Joseph.
 Dimond, Richard H.
 Dow, Charles S.
 Downs, Matthew.
 Drake, George R.
 Draper, Ebenezer.
 Dunbar, John A.
 Dupee, George S.
 Elliott, Sumner.
 Emerson, James.
 Engly, George.
 Fales, David.
 Fales, Henry A.
 Fales, Silas E.
 Farnsworth, James P.
 Farnum, Albert N.
 Farrington, Watson H.
 Farry, Michael.
 Farry, Samuel.
 Firm, Bernard.
 Fisher, Daniel W.
 Fisher, Harrison.
 Fisher, Lewis B.
 Fisher, Oliver A.
 Fisher, William H.
 Fletcher, Nath. F.
 Fletcher, Stephen R.
 Forrest, Frederic D.
 Foster, John.
 Foster, Peter.
 Freeman, Dexter B.

French, John.
 Fuhrman, Michael.
 Gage, Samuel C.
 Gage, William L.
 Galvin, Maurice J.
 Ganay, Robert.
 Giles, William H.
 Gordak, William N.
 Gragg, Michael.
 Green, Nelson S.
 Green, Ebenezer.
 Greer, Frederic E.
 Grover, Jeremiah O.
 Harney, Michael.
 Harris, William A.
 Harris, Warren.
 Hawes, Albert E.
 Hawes, Edward.
 Hawes, Elijah F.
 Hawes, William H.
 Hawkins, Albert.
 Hay, Henry E.
 Hemmenway, Frank W.
 Hemmenway, William W.
 Henry, John.
 Henry, Thomas.
 Herrick, Joseph T.
 Hogan, David.
 Hogan, Patrick.
 Hollis, Alonzo.
 Hunt, Bernard.
 Ide, Nathaniel.
 Inman, William L.
 Jordan, Hartley D.
 Jordan, Henry A.
 Jordan, Horatio A.
 Jordan, Lowell A.
 Keenan, James.
 Kendall, Charles P.
 Keyes, George R.
 Kingsbury, Forrest B.
 Kingsley, Samuel C.
 Lake, Edgar B.
 Lake, Peter.
 Lewis, Robert.
 Little, Henry.
 Lord, Frost.
 Maintien, George H.
 Mann, Thomas H.
 Marcoc, John.
 Mason, Edwin A.
 Mathews, John.
 Maynard, Stephen.
 Mayshaw, Henry.
 McCarty, John.
 McCarty, Daniel.
 McCausland, William.
 McCormick, —.
 McGaw, Alexander.
 McNulty, Bernard.
 Messinger, Charles W.
 Metcalf, Edgar H.
 Metcalf, Silas H.
 Miles, Bradley S.
 Morrison, Charles E.
 Morrison, John.
 Munroe, Charles D.
 Munroe, Charles E.
 Murphy, Martin V.
 Murphy, Matthew.

Newman, John.
 Nickerson, Albert A.
 Nickerson, Silas E.
 O'Connor, Patrick.
 Odey, Henry.
 Odey, William B.
 Olmore, Winslow.
 Parnett, Pias.
 Partridge, Edmund F.
 Pettee, William H.
 Pond, Elijah.
 Pond, Elbridge S.
 Pryor, Thomas.
 Rand, George S.
 Ray, George A.
 Raymond, John.
 Regan, Michael.
 Rice, Henry T.
 Richardson, Alfred A.
 Richardson, James O.
 Richardson, Warren A.
 Roberts, James H.
 Rockwood, Benjamin H.
 Ruggles, George E.
 Salisbury, Norton.
 Sanborn, George G.
 Sears, Albert A.
 Sears, Theophilus M.
 Shaw, Lewis.
 Shiley, Alexander.
 Short, Dennis.
 Simons, George W.
 Skinner, Zenas.
 Smith, Francis.
 Smith, Marcus M.
 Smith, Richard.
 Smith, William L.
 Smith, William T.
 Stewart, David C.
 Stone, George T.
 Sturdy, Albert W.
 Sullivan, James.
 Sullivan, Jeremiah.
 Swett, C. W.
 Swzor, John.
 Tarr, Albert.
 Thain, Gilbert M.
 Thayer, Emory D.
 Thayer, Lyman L.
 Thomas, William H.
 Thompson, Jason S.
 Vaughn, Daniel S.
 Vose, Cyrus W.
 Ware, Henry A.
 Whitcomb, George W.
 White, Rufus.
 Whiting, John H.
 Whiting, Lewis R.
 Wiggins, James F.
 Willard, Ashbel.
 Willard, Daniel C.
 Willard, Eber.
 Willard, Le Baron B.
 Williams, Edward B.
 Williams, Rounsville.
 Witherell, Naaman W.
 Wood, Josiah A. G.
 Wood, William E.
 Young, Austin.
 Young, Francis.

organizations of other States, and that service is not recorded in Massachusetts.

NAMES OF THOSE WHO SERVED IN THE OTHER STATES.

Austin, John E.	Butman, Warren.
Barnes, Norman K.	Ray, Frank P.
Barnes, Edwin H.

NAMES OF THOSE WHO SERVED IN THE NAVY.

Baxter, John.	Hawes, John F.
Chapin, Thomas E.	Hawes, George A.
Churchill, Gardner A.	Hazleton, John A.
Hawes, James E.	Messinger, William A.

DEDHAM.

The Dedham Transcript was established April 1, 1870, by John Cox, Jr., Samuel H. Cox, and Hugh H. McQuillen, proprietors. At the end of a year Messrs. John Cox and H. H. McQuillen retired from the proprietorship, and Mr. Samuel H. Cox was the editor and proprietor from that time until Feb. 26, 1881, when it was purchased by Mr. Hugh H. McQuillen, who has continued it to the present time. It is an excellent local paper and merits its present prosperity.

The Dedham Standard was first published in September, 1882, by Walter L. Wardle & Co., who have continued to publish it up to the present time (1884). It is a good local journal and is entitled to its success.

Dedham Representatives to the General Court.—A list of representatives from 1696 to 1846, for consecutive years, was published in Mann's "Annals of Dedham" in 1847, which is incorporated into the following list. Before that time the sources of making a complete list are not easily accessible.

The first representative, or deputy, was Edward Alleyne, who served four years. In 1640 he was succeeded by Maj. Eleazer Lusher, who served many years. Capt. Daniel Fisher, the first of that name, served from 1658 to 1682, excepting two years. He was Speaker of the House in 1680. His successor was Capt. Timothy Dwight, who also served many years. Richard Ellis and Thomas Metcalf were representatives afterwards, and before 1696, when the following list begins:

1696. John Fuller.	1735-40. John Metcalf.
1697. Thomas Metcalf.	1741. Joseph Ellis.
1698. Asahel Smith.	1742. Joseph Richards.
1699. Josiah Fisher.	1743. Richard Ellis.
1700-4. Capt. Daniel Fisher.	1744-50. Col. Joseph Richards.
1705-11. John Fuller.	1751. Deacon Joseph Ellis.
1712-13. Capt. Daniel Fisher.	1752-54. Joseph Richards, Esq.
1714. Eleazar Kingsbury.	1755. Voted not to send.
1715-17. John Fuller.	1756-57. Dea. Nathaniel Sumner.
1718. Dea. Jonathan Metcalf.	1758-59. Dea. Joseph Ellis.
1719. Capt. Samuel Guild.	1760. Capt. Jonathan Metcalf.
1720-22. Joseph Ellis, Jr.	1761. Eliphalet Pond, Esq.
1723-24. Thomas Fuller.	1762. Nathaniel Sumner, Esq.
1725-26. Lieut. Joshua Fisher.	1763. Eliphalet Pond, Esq.
1727-28. Joseph Ellis, Sr.	1764-68. Samuel Dexter, Esq.
1729. Eleazar Ellis.	1769-70. Nathaniel Sumner, Esq.
1730-34. Joseph Ellis.	1771-73. Abner Ellis.

It is hardly to be expected that the foregoing list will be found strictly accurate, notwithstanding much time and labor have been expended in trying to make it so. Some of our townsmen served in the military 1774. Samuel Dexter.

Abner Ellis.
1775. Samuel Dexter.
Abner Ellis.
1776. Abner Ellis.
Jonathan Metcalf.
1777. Abner Ellis.
- 1778-79. Jonathan Metcalf.
1780. Abner Ellis.
1781. Abner Ellis.
Ebenezer Battle.
- 1782-83. Capt. Joseph Guild.
1784. Nathaniel Kingsbury.
1785. Nathaniel Kingsbury.
Samuel Dexter.
- 1786-87. Nathaniel Kingsbury.
1788. Fisher Ames.
Nathaniel Kingsbury.
- 1789-90. Joseph Guild.
1791. Nathaniel Ames.
- 1792-93. Nathaniel Ames.
Nathaniel Kingsbury.
1794. Nathaniel Kingsbury.
Isaac Bullard.
- 1795-1800. Isaac Bullard.
1801. Isaac Bullard.
Ebenezer Fisher.
- 1802-4. Ebenezer Fisher.
1805. Ebenezer Fisher.
John Endicott.
1806. Ebenezer Fisher.
John Endicott.
1807. John Endicott.
Isaac Bullard.
Samuel H. Deane.
- 1808-13. John Endicott.
Samuel H. Deane.
Jonathan Richards.
1814. John Endicott.
Erastus Worthington.
Col. Abner Ellis.
1815. Erastus Worthington.
Samuel H. Deane.
Col. Abner Ellis.
1816. John Endicott.
Abner Ellis.
William Ellis.
1817. Abner Ellis.
William Ellis.
Timothy Gay, Jr.
- 1818-20. William Ellis.
1821. Edward Dowse.
1822. John W. Ames.
1823. William Ellis.
Col. Abner Ellis.
Pliny Bingham.
1824. William Ellis.
1824. Pliny Bingham.
Josiah S. Fisher.
- 1825-26. Richard Ellis.
- 1827-29. Richard Ellis.
Horace Mann.
1830. Richard Ellis.
Horace Mann.
John Endicott.
1831. Theron Metcalf (in May).
Richard Ellis (in November).
Horace Mann (in November).
1832. Theron Metcalf.
John W. Ames.
1833. Theron Metcalf.
Richard Ellis.
John Morse.
1834. John Endicott.
John Morse.
Daniel Covell.
1835. William Ellis.
Daniel Marsh.
John Dean (3d).
1836. Joshua Fales.
John Morse.
Daniel Covell.
1837. Joshua Fales.
John Morse.
Daniel Covell.
- 1838-40. Joshua Fales.
- 1841-43. Merrill D. Ellis.
- 1844-45. Joseph Day.
- 1846-47. Edward L. Keyes.
1848. Ezra Wilkinson.
- 1849-50. No representative chosen.
1851. Ezra Wilkinson.
1852. No representative chosen.
- 1853-54. Waldo Colburn.
1855. Curtis G. Morse.
1856. Ezra Wilkinson.
- 1857-59. Ezra W. Taft.
- 1860-62. Eliphalet Stone.
1863. William Bullard.
1864. Ezra W. Taft.
- 1865-66. Thomas L. Wakefield.
1867. Addison Boyden.
1868. John R. Bullard.
1869. Eliphalet Stone.
- 1870-71. John R. Bullard.
1872. Augustus B. Endicott.
1873. Frederick D. Ely.
1874. Augustus B. Endicott.
1875. Lewis Day.
- 1876-77. John Doggett Cobb.
1878. Henry C. Bonney.
1879. Tyler Thayer.
1880. William J. Wallace.
- 1881-83. Thomas J. Baker.
1884. Alonzo B. Wentworth.

Military Record.—The following is a roll of officers and men from or credited to the town of Dedham, who served in the army or navy of the United States during the war of the Rebellion, 1861-65.¹ The names of those men are included who are known to have had a connection with Dedham by birth, residence, or enlistment upon the quotas of men furnished by the town during the war. Names are arranged according to the number of the regiments. Where no rank is named, that of private is to be understood. The date first named is the date of the muster in.

¹ This roll was prepared for and printed with the exercises and address at the dedication of Memorial Hall, Sept. 29, 1868, by Erastus Worthington, Esq., the writer of the history of Dedham for this work.

Confinement in rebel prisons, and wounds when the cause of death or discharge, are mentioned so far as known. Names of those who died in the service are distinguished by an asterisk.

Infantry.

FIRST REGIMENT (Three Years).

Benjamin Blanchard, Co. H, May 31, 1861; must. out May 25, 1864.

SECOND REGIMENT (Three Years).

James Pinney, Co. F, May 26, 1861; must. out May 25, 1864.

Lafayette Perkins (New Hampshire), Co. K, May 26, 1861; vet. vol.; must. out June 17, 1865.

*Michael Hennihan, Co. H, May 26, 1861; killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

THIRD REGIMENT (Three Months).

Erastus W. Everson, sergt., Co. A, April 23, 1861; must. out July 22, 1861. (See 18th Regt., Co. H.)

FOURTH REGIMENT (Three Months).

Albert A. Nichols, sergt., Co. A, April 22, 1861; must. out July 22, 1861.

FIFTH REGIMENT (Three Months).

James H. Griggs, Co. B, May 1, 1861; prisoner July 21, 1861 (Bull Run); exchanged June 1, 1862. (See 33d Regt.)

Charles W. Strout, sergt., Co. C, May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Edwin H. Robertson, Co. E, May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

FIFTH REGIMENT (One Hundred Days).

Charles E. Grant, Co. F, July 16, 1864; must. out Nov. 16, 1864.

Nathan O. Weeks, Co. F, July 16, 1864; must. out Nov. 16, 1864.

Henry Weeks, Co. F, July 16, 1864; must. out Nov. 16, 1864. (See 43d Regiment.)

SIXTH REGIMENT (One Hundred Days).

Edward F. Clark, Co. H, July 16, 1864; must. out Oct. 27, 1864.

SEVENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Albinah H. Burgess (Dorchester), Co. E, June 15, 1861; must. out March 23, 1863, for disability.

James Sheehan, Co. G, June 15, 1861; must. out June 27, 1864.

Charles E. Park, Co. G, June 15, 1861; must. out June 27, 1864.

Thomas Smeedy, Co. G, June 15, 1861; must. out June 27, 1864.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Mark Morse, musician, Co. I, June 13, 1861; must. out June 24, 1864.

Andrew Thompson, drummer, Co. F, June 13, 1861; Dec. 1, 1863, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps.

TWELFTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

*Charles L. Carter, Co. B, June 25, 1863; re-enl. 39th Regt., Co. E.

THIRTEENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Sigourney Wales, sergt., Co. C, July 16, 1861; pro. 2d lieutenant. Feb. 3, 1863; trans. to 55th Regt. May 23, 1863.

James L. McCoy, Co. C, July 16, 1861; pro. 1st sergt.; must. out Aug. 1, 1864.

William S. Damrell, Co. D, July 16, 1861; pro. 2d lieutenant. March 6, 1863; 1st lieutenant. Jan. 8, 1864; pro. captain. April 22, 1864; prisoner of war, 1864; must. out Aug. 1, 1864.

John Callahan, Co. G, July 16, 1861; disch. Feb. 19, 1863, for disability.

FIFTEENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Fred. Page, musician, Aug. 5, 1861; must. out Aug. 8, 1862, under general order.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Charles W. Blenus, musician, Aug. 10, 1861; must. out Aug. 9, 1862, under general order.

EIGHTEENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Edward M. Onion, sergt.-maj., Aug. 24, 1861; 2d lieutenant. Oct. 29, 1861; 1st lieutenant. Sept. 1, 1862; captain. May 2, 1863; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.

Alfred A. Bestwick, musician, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Aug. 11, 1862, under general order.

Isaac W. Weathers, musician, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Aug. 11, 1862, under general order.

- Isaac Wallace White, musician, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Aug. 11, 1862, under general order.
- Henry Onion, capt., Co. F, July 26, 1861; must. out Oct. 28, 1861.
- *Charles W. Carroll, 1st lieutenant, Co. F, July 26, 1861; capt. Oct. 29, 1861; died Sept. 2, 1862, of wounds received at 2d battle of Bull Run, Va., Aug. 30, 1862.
- Fisher A. Baker, 2d lieutenant, Co. F, July 26, 1861; 1st lieutenant Oct. 29, 1861; adjt. April, 1862; lieutenant-col. Aug. 25, 1864, but declined commission; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- Warren B. Galucia, 1st sergeant, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. November, 1862, for sickness. (See 56th Regt.)
- James M. Pond, sergeant, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; 1st sergeant; promoted 1st lieutenant Jan. 15, 1864; October, 1864, re-enlisted, and trans. to 23d Regt.
- John K. Thompson, sergeant, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1863 for sickness.
- Joseph W. Pratt, sergeant, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1861 for sickness.
- John D. Andrews, sergeant, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- William C. Coburn, corp., Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; sergeant, 1861; 1st lieutenant Jan. 15, 1864; must. out Sept. 30, 1864.
- Edward Shattuck, corp., Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; sergeant, 1862; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- William Simpson, corp., Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1862 for wounds received at 2d Bull Run, Aug. 30, 1862.
- Henry G. Gerritzen, corp., Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1863, for sickness.
- Amasa Guild, corp., Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; 1st lieutenant Jan. 15, 1864; must. out Sept. 30, 1864.
- Edward F. Richards, corp., Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; q.m.-sergt. 1862; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- Charles Hawkins, drummer, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- Elias W. Adams, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1862 for wounds received at 2d Bull Run. (See 56th Regt., Co. H.)
- George W. Brigham, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; corp. 1861; sergeant, 1862; prisoner at expiration of service.
- Charles J. Bryant, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- James Clements, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1863 for wounds received at Fredericksburg.
- Timothy Collins, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; corp. 1863; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- *Edward G. Cox, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1862 for wounds received at 2d Bull Run; re-enl. 1st sergeant, 37th U. S. C. Troops, Jan. 18, 1864; died Oct. 22, 1864.
- *Robert R. Covey, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; killed at Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862.
- Sumner A. Ellis, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1862 for wounds received at 2d Bull Run. (See 56th Regt., Co. H.)
- Henry C. Everett, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; re-enl. Jan. 1, 1864; trans. to 32d Regt.
- Franklin Fisher, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1863 for sickness.
- William P. Fairbanks, Co. F, Aug. 1861; re-enl. Jan. 1864; trans. to 32d Regt.
- Daniel C. Felton, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- Otis S. Guild, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- *Edward Holmes, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; corp. 1861; killed at 2d Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862.
- Lewis J. Houghton, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- Harvey L. Hayford, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; re-enl. Jan. 1864; trans. to 32d Regt.
- Jeremiah Hartney, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1863 for sickness.
- William W. Jones, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1861 for sickness.
- *John Keith, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; died May 29, 1864.
- *Jonathan H. Keyes, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; killed at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862.
- John H. Keyes, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1863 for promotion; 2d lieutenant, U. S. C. Troops in 1863.
- *George O. Kingsbury, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; killed at Bull Run, Va., Aug. 30, 1862.
- *Daniel Leahy, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; mortally wounded at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862.
- Charles E. Lewis, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1863 for sickness.
- Chester R. Lawton, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; corp. 1862; re-enl. Jan. 1864; discharged under general order, 1864.
- Patrick Mears, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1863 for wounds received at 2d Bull Run.
- Patrick Mack, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- William J. Marsh, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1861 for sickness.
- *Leonard Minot, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; died in hospital, April 23, 1862.
- Daniel F. Nichols, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; taken prisoner Nov. 27, 1863; exchanged; trans. to U. S. C. H. Artillery; pro. capt. Nov. 1863; disch. May, 1866.
- Charles D. O'Reilly, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1863 for accidental wound.
- William L. Pierce, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1861 for sickness.
- George E. Pond, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1861 for sickness. (See 43d Regt.)
- William Parker, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1864 for sickness.
- Austin E. Pratt, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1863 for wounds received at Gettysburg.
- Isaac N. Parker, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1862 for wounds received at 2d Bull Run.
- Gideon A. Ryder, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; corp. 1863; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- Charles H. Rogers, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; corp. 1863; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- John W. Snell, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- *Henry D. Smith, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; killed at 2d Bull Run, Aug. 30, 1862.
- *N. Roland Stevens, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; died in hospital March 1, 1862.
- Cornelius D. Sullivan, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1862 for sickness. (See 4th Cavalry.)
- *Edmund L. Thomas, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; died Sept. 16, 1862, of wounds received at 2d Bull Run.
- *George N. Worthen, Co. F, Aug. 24, 1861; died Sept. 4, 1862, of wounds received at 2d Bull Run.
- Erastus W. Everson, 1st sergeant, Co. H, Aug. 24, 1861; 2d lieutenant, Co. B, 1862; 1st lieutenant, Co. B, Feb. 5, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Dec. 10, 1863.
- *Horace S. Damrell, sergeant, Co. H, Aug. 24, 1861; died in hospital March 7, 1862.
- *Oscar S. Guild, Co. H, Aug. 24, 1861; died in hospital Feb. 22, 1862.
- *Joseph M. Jordan, Co. H, Aug. 24, 1861; killed at Gaines' Mills, Va., June 27, 1862.
- Thomas Madden, Co. H, Aug. 24, 1861; Dec. 25, 1862, trans. to 6th U. S. Inf.; must. out Aug. 29, 1864.
- John D. Martin, Co. H, Aug. 24, 1861; re-enl. January, 1864; trans. to 32d Regt.
- Herman Seffarth, Co. H, Aug. 24, 1861; Aug. 10, 1862, trans. to U. S. Res. Art.
- *Cyrus D. Tewksbury, Co. H, Aug. 24, 1861; re-enl. January, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., July 5, 1864.
- *Joseph M. Jordan, Co. H, Aug. 24, 1861; killed June 27, 1862, at Gaines' Mills, Va.
- John N. Tewksbury, Co. H, Aug. 24, 1861; re-enl. Dec. 1, 1863; trans. to 32d Regt.
- Michael Burns, Co. K, Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 2, 1864.
- Patrick H. Flynn, Co. K, Aug. 24, 1861; disch. in 1862 for sickness.
- Charles P. Smith, Co. K, Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to U. S. Vet. Res. Corps.

NINETEENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Joseph McCaffrey, Co. I, Jan. 30, 1865; must. out June 30, 1865.

TWENTIETH REGIMENT (Three Years).

- Julius Boehme, Co. B, July 26, 1861; re-enl. Feb. 23, 1864; wounded May, 1864.
- Charles J. Haas, Co. B, July 26, 1861; must. out Aug. 1, 1864.
- Julius Kafewsky, Co. B, Aug. 22, 1861; disch. for disability Feb. 21, 1863.
- Emery Wiley, Co. D, Sept. 4, 1861; disch. for disability May 31, 1862.
- Lewis F. Davis, Co. F, Aug. 2, 1861; disch. Aug. 26, 1861.
- John Power, corp., Co. G, July 18, 1861; taken prisoner at Ball's Bluff; exchanged and rejoined regiment; must. out Aug. 1, 1864.
- Andrew O'Connor, Co. I, Aug. 29, 1861; disch. for disability Dec. 1, 1862.
- *Albert C. Bean, Co. I, Sept. 4, 1861; died June 8, 1864, of wounds received at Cold Harbor, Va., June 3.

TWENTY-FIRST REGIMENT (Three Years).

William H. Smith, Co. E, Aug. 23, 1861; trans. to 3d U. S. Art., Aug. 23, 1862.

TWENTY-SECOND REGIMENT (Three Years).

- Thomas Sherwin, Jr., adjt. Oct. 1, 1861; maj. June 28, 1862; lieutenant-col. Oct. 17, 1862; brevet col. Sept. 30, 1864; must. out Oct. 17, 1864; brevet col. U. S. Vols. April 20, 1865; brevet brig.-gen. March 13, 1865.
- William N. Taylor, Co. A, Sept. 2, 1861; dropped from rolls July 29, 1863.

*John Finn, Jr., Co. B, Sept. 11, 1861; corp.; sergt.; died June 13, 1864, of wounds received at North Anna River, May 23, 1864.
 George E. Smallwood, Co. E, Sept. 13, 1861; disch. for pro. Feb. 28, 1863.
 *William Heath, Co. I, Sept. 6, 1861; accidentally shot at Hall's Hill, Va., Dec. 7, 1861.
 Michael Lucy, Co. I, Sept. 6, 1861; disch. for disability Feb. 17, 1863.

TWENTY-THIRD REGIMENT (Three Years).

*David Fletcher (Boston), Co. I, July 29, 1862; killed at Whitehall, N. C., Dec. 16, 1863.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Walter Ingalls, Co. A, Oct. 11, 1861; disch. Sept. 2, 1862, for disability.
 *Charles W. Phipps, Co. A, Sept. 18, 1861; killed at Deep Bottom, Va., Aug. 16, 1864.
 James B. Smith, Co. A, Sept. 19, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, March, 10, 1864.
 Thomas H. Snell, Co. A, Sept. 25, 1861; re-enl. Dec. 21, 1863; corporal; must. out Jan. 20, 1865.
 Henry C. Bonney, Co. E, Dec. 2, 1861; must. out Dec. 4, 1864.
 William Howe, Co. F, Sept. 16, 1861; must. out Sept. 16, 1864.
 George B. Snell, Co. F, Sept. 14, 1861; must. out Sept. 18, 1864.
 Robert S. Bateman, corp., Co. G, Sept. 12, 1861; disch. for disability Aug. 30, 1862.
 Henry S. Waite, corp., Co. G, Oct. 9, 1861; disch. May 23, 1862, for sickness.
 Patrick Coyne, Co. G, Sept. 20, 1861; re-enl. Jan. 4, 1864; must. out Jan. 20, 1866.
 William Keating, corp., Co. G, Dec. 5, 1861; re-enl. Jan. 4, 1864; must. out Jan. 20, 1866.
 John H. Towne, Co. G, Sept. 16, 1861; disch. Aug. 13, 1862, for sickness.
 William Hale, Co. G, Jan. 1, 1863; re-enl. Jan. 4, 1864.
 Benjamin F. Phipps, Co. G, Jan. 19, 1863; must. out Sept. 5, 1864.
 Frederick L. Stevens, Co. G, Nov. 7, 1861; disch. June 9, 1862, for sickness.
 Henry C. Hollis, Co. G, Sept. 23, 1861; disch. Dec. 31, 1861.
 Albert Woods, Co. G, Oct. 7, 1861; re-enl. Jan. 4, 1864; must. out Jan. 20, 1866.
 *Julius M. Lathrop, corp., Co. I, 1861; trans. and pro. 1st lieut. 38th Regt.
 William H. Clements, musician, Co. I, Sept. 11, 1861; must. out Aug. 22, 1862.
 Edward R. Pond, Co. I, Oct. 8, 1861; disch. April 7, 1863, for disability.

TWENTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Calvin N. Crosby, Co. B, Aug. 10, 1863; must. out June 30, 1865.
 *Edward Sheehan, Co. B, Dec. 14, 1861; died of disease Nov. 17, 1863, in Washington.
 Terence Mitchell, sergt., Co. G, Jan. 5, 1862; must. out Dec. 19, 1864.
 Patrick Quinlan (Boston), Co. E, March 24, 1864; must. out June 30, 1865.
 Patrick Newman (Sharon), Co. A, April 2, 1864; must. out June 30, 1865.
 Jeremiah O'Brien (Boston), Co. E, April 11, 1864; must. out June 30, 1865.

THIRTY-FIRST REGIMENT (Three Years).

Robert F. Everett, sergt., Co. K, Jan. 17, 1862; must. out December, 1864.
 Alonzo Swett, Co. K, Jan. 20, 1862; re-enl. Feb. 14, 1864; must. out Sept. 9, 1865.

THIRTY-SECOND REGIMENT (Three Years).

David Kilpatrick, Co. G, May 31, 1862.
 James M. Pond, 1st lieut., must. out June 29, 1865. (See 18th Regt.)
 *Henry C. Everett, musician, died Jan. 19, 1865. (See 18th Regt.)
 William P. Fairbanks, musician, must. out June 29, 1865. (See 18th Regt.)
 Harvey L. Hayford, must. out June 29, 1865. (See 18th Regt.)
 John D. Martin, must. out June 29, 1865. (See 18th Regt.)
 John N. Tewksbury, must. out June 29, 1865. (See 18th Regt.)

THIRTY-THIRD REGIMENT (Three Years).

James H. Griggs, Co. D, Jan. 18, 1864, trans. and pro. com.-sergt. 37th U. S. C. Troops. (See 5th Regt., 3 months.)
 John A. Sullivan, corp., Co. C, June 3, 1862; must. out June 11, 1865.
 Joseph Neas, Co. I, Jan. 5, 1865; trans. to 2d Infantry.
 Ferdinand Lund, Co. K, Aug. 8, 1862; must. out June 11, 1865.

THIRTY-FIFTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

John Lathrop, 1st lieut., Co. I, Aug. 13, 1862; capt. Aug. 27, 1862; resigned Nov. 14, 1863, on account of disability.
 *William Hill, 2d lieut., Co. I, Aug. 8, 1862; 1st lieut. Aug. 27, 1862; killed at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862.
 John D. Cobb, sergt., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; 1st sergt.; 1st lieut. Nov. 15, 1863; capt. Nov. 29, 1864; not must.; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Henry W. Tisdale, sergt., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; taken prisoner at North Anna River May 24, 1864; exch. 1865; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Charles D. Pond, sergt., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 *Edward E. Hatton, corp., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 Ferdinand Steiner, corp., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Charles D. Force, corp., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 *John G. Dymond, corp., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; died at Hampton, Va., March 29, 1863.
 *John W. Fiske, corp., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; sergt.; color sergt.; trans. and pro. 2d lieut. 58th Regt. (See 58th Regt.)
 Edmund Davis, corp., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; color corp.; disch. for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
 Sabin R. Baker, drummer, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1863 for sickness.
 Ephraim A. Roberts, fife and bugler, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, 1864.
 Clinton Bagley, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; sergeant; first sergeant; sergeant-major; 2d lieut. Sept. 8, 1864; declined commission; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Henry Baur, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, 1863.
 *John H. Birch, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; died of fever Aug. 15, 1863, at Overton Hospital, Memphis, Tenn.
 Elijah W. Bonnemort, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; disch. in 1865 for wounds received at North Anna River May 24, 1864.
 *George C. Bunker, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; killed at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1865.
 J. Bradford Calder, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; color corporal; sergeant; first sergeant; 2d lieut. Sept. 8, 1864; 1st lieut. Nov. 29, 1864; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Alvan B. Chase, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Seth W. Collett, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; must. out June 9, 1865.
 *Michael Colbert, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; killed at Petersburg Mine July 30, 1864.
 Peter Curran, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 George V. Dean, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1862 for sickness.
 Francis Donley, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Moses W. Downes, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disabled by wounds received at North Anna River May 24, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, 1864.
 Jerome B. Dunlap, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1862 for sickness.
 Theodore F. Dunlap, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps.
 Albert Ellis, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Alfred Ellis, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; sergeant; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Warren Ellis, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 *Charles H. Ellis, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; taken prisoner near Knoxville, Tenn., in November, 1863; died in Richmond Feb. 27, 1864.
 Henry Fisher, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; taken prisoner at Poplar Grove Church Sept. 30, 1864; exchanged 1865; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Benjamin Hague, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Charles Hammond, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; deserted September, 1862.
 Alfred T. Hartshorn, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1863 for sickness.
 John Hayes, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 John Hogan, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; taken prisoner at Poplar Grove Church Sept. 30, 1864; exchanged; must. out in 1865.
 Patrick Holland, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1862 for wounds received at Antietam.
 John Hyde, Jr., Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Nathaniel M. Hsley, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Dedrick Jordan, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps in 1863.
 Conrad Krill, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Henry Krill, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.
 Florian Matz, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1865 for wounds received at North Anna River in 1864.
 Frederick Neas, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1862 for sickness.
 John Nauman, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1863 for sickness.
 Albert G. Ober, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.

William E. O'Connell, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.

*David Phalen, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; died at Milldale, Miss., July 30, 1863.

Winslow Radcliffe, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1863 for sickness.

Michael Rafferty, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; color corporal; must. out June 9, 1865.

Conrad Rausch, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1862 for wounds received at Antietam.

Conrad Schneider, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1863 for sickness.

Hiram Shufeldt, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; sergeant; disch. for wounds received at Petersburg Mine in 1864.

John L. Smith, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; corporal; color corporal; sergeant; first sergeant; 2d lieutenant. Jan. 9, 1865; not mustered; must. out June 9, 1865.

Joseph R. Smith, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 9, 1865.

*Charles H. Sulkoski, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; killed at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.

David Sullivan, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disabled by wounds received at Fredericksburg in 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps in 1863.

William M. Titcomb, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; trans. and pro. 1st lieut. 36th U. S. C. Troops.

*Nathan C. Treadwell, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; died Oct. 26, 1862, at Frederick, Md., of wounds received at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.

William J. Wallace, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; taken prisoner at Poplar Grove Church Sept. 30, 1864; exchanged in 1865; must. out June 9, 1865.

*Joseph P. White, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; killed at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.

Robert White, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1865.

*George F. Whiting, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; died Oct. 5, 1862, of wounds received at South Mountain, Md., Sept. 14, 1862.

Henry W. Woods, Co. I, Aug. 16, 1862; disch. in 1864 for sickness.

Weston F. Hutchins, Co. I, Dec. 31, 1863; corp.; trans. to 29th Regt.; must. out July 29, 1865.

THIRTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

*Julius M. Lathrop, 1st lieut., Aug. 20, 1862; capt. Feb. 27, 1863; died April 26, 1864, of wounds received at Cane River, La., April 23, 1864.

Edward Hogan, Co. F, Aug. 13, 1862; must. out June 30, 1865.

THIRTY-NINTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Charles L. Carter, Co. E, Jan. 25, 1863; died while prisoner of war, Feb. 9, 1865. (See 12th Regt.)

FORTIETH REGIMENT (Three Years).

*Henry M. Park (Attleboro'), corp., Co. H, August, 1862; wounded at Bermuda Hundred, Va., May 20, 1864; died June 20, 1864.

FORTY-SECOND REGIMENT (Nine Months).

Henry S. Richardson (Medway), Co. B, Sept. 13, 1862; must. out Aug. 20, 1863.

FORTY-SECOND REGIMENT (One Hundred Days).

Edwin H. Alger, Co. D, July 20, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

William K. Guild, Co. D, July 20, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

Edwin P. Talbot, Co. E, July 22, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

William A. Cobb, Co. K, July 18, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

Nathan W. Fisher, Co. K, July 18, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

Melvin A. Galucia, Co. K, July 18, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

Joseph Guild, Co. K, July 18, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

Edward H. Marshall, Co. K, July 18, 1864; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

FORTY-THIRD REGIMENT (Nine Months).

Cornelius O'Brien, Co. B, Oct. 11, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Antoine Schenkle, Co. B, Oct. 11, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Henry Burns, Co. B, Oct. 24, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Edward A. Sumner, 1st lieut., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

James Schouler, 2d lieut., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Cornelius A. Taft, 1st sergt., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

John E. Webster, sergt., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Alvin Fuller, sergt., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Joseph H. Lathrop, sergt., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863. (See 4th Regt. Cav.)

Francis W. Haynes, sergt., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Charles B. Fessenden, sergt., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; sergt.-maj. May 29, 1863; must. out July 30, 1863.

John McDonald, corp., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Emelius A. Everett, corp., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

William Chickering, Jr., corp., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863. (See 4th Regt. Cav.)

E. Phineas Guild, corp., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Isaac A. Cox, corp., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Samuel D. Cobb, corp., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Charles D. Marcy, corp., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; re-enl. U. S. Signal Corps March 31, 1864; must. out Aug. 17, 1865.

Eldridge P. Boyden, corp., Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Melvin A. Galucia, musician, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863. (See 42d Regt., 100 days.)

Frank D. Hayward, musician, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; re-enl. U. S. Signal Corps March, 1864; must. out Aug. 17, 1865.

William H. Alexander, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Willard Babbitt, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Addison G. Baker, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Charles R. Baker, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

James E. Ball, Co. D, Oct. 11, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Nathaniel W. Broad, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

William F. Carroll, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Frank Carter, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Rufus F. Cheney, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

William H. Clements, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; disch. June 3, 1863; re-enl. in 2d Regt. Heavy Art.

John D. Clifton, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

James Collins, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Patrick Cox, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Samuel H. Cox, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Albert M. Coy, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Patrick Eagan, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

George W. S. Edmonds, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Lewis Ellis, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Jarvis G. Fairbanks, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Edwin E. Fisher, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

William H. Gay, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Michael Golden, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Clarence M. Guild, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Joseph Guild, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863. (See 42d Regt., 100 days.)

Charles J. Guild, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Edward W. Guild, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

John A. Hahn, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Charles E. Harbison, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; disch. April 25, 1863, for sickness.

R. Ellis Hathaway, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

*James J. Hawkins, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; died at Readville, Nov. 4, 1862.

George E. Hooker, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

James B. Hooker, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Joseph Houghton, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Martin Howard, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Francis P. Ide, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Willard L. Johnson, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

John Kiernan, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863. (See 14th Lt. Batt.)

Herbert R. Lincoln, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

William Marsh, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Patrick McGlone, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Patrick Meagher, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

A. Mason Morse, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Charles H. Morse, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Josiah E. Morse, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Sanford O. Morse, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

John H. Nichols, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; re-enl. U. S. Signal Corps March 31, 1864; must. out Aug. 17, 1865.

Charles M. Perkins, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

George E. Pond, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Edwin Pratt, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

William H. Randall, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

George A. Rhoades, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

George L. Rhoades, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.

Joseph H. Richardson, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Bennett O. Rickards, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Charles H. Shackley, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 James F. Shapleigh, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Nathan E. Shapleigh, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Henry H. Shaw, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 William H. Sheridan, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 George H. Smith, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Francis E. Soule, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 George M. Stone, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Nathaniel H. Talbot, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Thomas Temperley, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; disch. for sickness May 9, 1863.

Joseph N. Tibbetts, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 William R. Tibbetts, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Horace E. Towle, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Andrew Tracy, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 James H. Tucker, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 James Urry, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Edwin A. Walley, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Frederick J. Walley, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; deserted Sept. 15, 1862, at Readville.

Albert G. Webb, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 Henry Weeks, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863. (See 5th Regt., 100 days.)

John K. Wight, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 James M. Wood, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863.
 John S. Woods, Co. D, Sept. 12, 1862; must. out July 30, 1863. (See 16th Batt. L. A.)

FORTY-FOURTH REGIMENT (Nine Months).

Ithamar W. Copeland, Co. K, Sept. 12, 1862; disch. Jan. 14, 1863, for sickness.

FORTY-FIFTH REGIMENT (Nine Months).

Samuel C. Hunt, Co. C, Sept. 26, 1862; must. out July 7, 1863.

FORTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT (Nine Months).

William J. Hartnett, 2d lieut., Co. I, Dec. 26, 1862; res. March 1, 1863.

FIFTIETH REGIMENT (Nine Months).

Nathaniel F. Robinson (Salem), corp., Co. A, Sept. 15, 1862; must. out Aug. 23, 1863.

FIFTY-FOURTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

*John H. Bancroft, Co. A, March 4, 1863; wounded at Fort Wagner July 18, 1863; died of wounds at Beaufort, S. C., July 30, 1863.
 Wilson Webster (Lancaster, Pa.), Co. D, March 19, 1863; must. out Aug. 20, 1865.

FIFTY-FIFTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Sigourney Wales, capt., May 23, 1863; maj. Nov. 3, 1863; must. out Nov. 18, 1864. (See 13th Regt.)

FIFTY-SIXTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Warren B. Galucia, 2d lieut., Sept. 5, 1863; 1st lieut. Jan. 4, 1864; capt. June 24, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865. (See 18th Regt.)
 John Leonard, Co. B, Jan. 21, 1864.

*Anson F. Barton, Co. G, Jan. 19, 1864; died Oct. 7, 1864.
 Elias W. Adams, Co. H, Jan. 27, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865.
 Sumner A. Ellis, Co. F, Jan. 12, 1864; disch. for disability June 17, 1865.

John Neas, Co. K, Feb. 25, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865.

FIFTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

*Charles F. Everett, Co. D; killed in the Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.

FIFTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

*John W. Fiske, 2d lieut., Jan. 26, 1864; 1st lieut. Aug. 8, 1864; killed at Poplar Grove Church Sept. 30, 1864. (See 35th Regt.)
 Edward S. Stewart, Jan. 1, 1864.

FIFTY-NINTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

*Mark Kehoe (Roxbury), Co. G, March 4, 1864; died in service Aug. 15, 1864.
 *John A. Hodge (Lowell), Co. G, Feb. 20, 1864; killed July 30, 1864, at Petersburg, Va.

SIXTY-FIRST REGIMENT (One Year).

John Collins (Boston), Co. C, Sept. 19, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865.
 Paul Unglaube, Co. C, Sept. 19, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865.
 James M. Moore (Somerset), Co. C, Sept. 17, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865.
 James T. Holmes, Co. C, Sept. 17, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865.
 William Connor (Roxbury), Co. H, Dec. 27, 1864; must. out July 16, 1865.
 Dennis Hornan, Co. H, Sept. 20, 1864; must. out July 16, 1865.

THIRD BATTALION RIFLES (Three Months).

Walter R. Briggs, Co. D, May 19, 1861; must. out Aug. 3, 1861.

FIRST COMPANY SHARPSHOOTERS (Three Years).

Frederick L. Bestwick, Oct. 10, 1862; trans. to 19th Regt.; must. out June 30, 1865.
 *Edward Hutchins, sergt., Oct. 13, 1862; killed at Gettysburg July 3, 1863.

SECOND COMPANY SHARPSHOOTERS (Three Years).

*Edward J. Herring (Lynn), Oct. 1, 1861; disch. for disability March 11, 1863; died June 14, 1863.

SIXTEENTH UNATTACHED COMPANY (One Hundred Days).

Benjamin Teeling, Aug. 6, 1864; must. out Nov. 14, 1864.

FIFTY-FIRST NEW YORK VOLUNTEER INFANTRY (Three Years).

Richard B. Boynton, Co. E; disch. for sickness.

ONE HUNDRED AND SECOND NEW YORK VOLUNTEER INFANTRY (Three Years).

*Virgil Upham, adjutant; killed at Gettysburg July 2, 1863.

UNITED STATES REGULAR INFANTRY.

George M. Nead, Co. B, 24th Regt., April 15, 1864.

THIRTEENTH UNITED STATES VETERAN RESERVE CORPS (Three Years).

Humphrey Lord (Boston), Co. K, Sept. 16, 1864; must. out Nov. 30, 1865.
 William Beard (Chelsea), Co. H, Sept. 16, 1864.

NINETEENTH UNITED STATES VETERAN RESERVE CORPS.

John Lang (Bolivar, N. Y.), Co. F, Aug. 15, 1864.
 George W. Tarbox (Georgetown, Mass.), Co. F, Aug. 13, 1864; must. out Nov. 15, 1865.

TWENTY-SECOND UNITED STATES VETERAN RESERVE CORPS.

Robert C. Dowds, Co. D, April 24, 1864.

TWENTY-FOURTH UNITED STATES VETERAN RESERVE CORPS.

Thomas R. Allen (Philadelphia), Co. H, April 15, 1864; must. out July 10, 1865.

William Dill, Co. H, April 15, 1864.
 William H. Fahs (Bethlehem, Pa.), Co. H, April 15, 1864.
 Charles A. McQuestion (Washington, N. H.), April 15, 1864.
 William G. Thomas (Feltonville, Mich.), April 14, 1864.

FIRST BATTALION UNITED STATES VETERAN RESERVE CORPS.

John E. Merrow (Great Falls, N. H.), Aug. 13, 1864.

Artillery.

FIRST BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

*John M. Pooler (Canton), artificer, Aug. 28, 1861; died March 14, 1863, at White Oak Church, Va.

SECOND BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

*Michael Owens, Feb. 19, 1864; died on transport "Mississippi," August, 1864.

FOURTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

William R. Garvey, Feb. 22, 1864; must. out Oct. 14, 1865.
 Thomas Hayes, Sept. 19, 1864; trans. to 13th Battery January, 1865.
 Franklin Upham, Sept. 19, 1864; trans. to 13th Battery January, 1865.
 Daniel McLaughlin, Feb. 22, 1864; must. out Oct. 14, 1865.
 Patrick O'Hara, Feb. 22, 1864; must. out Oct. 14, 1865.

NINTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Samuel B. Gear, March 4, 1864; disch. Oct. 20, 1864, for disability.

ELEVENTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Charles E. Stanton, Sept. 17, 1864; must. out June 16, 1865.

TWELFTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Charles A. Foye, Sept. 9, 1864; must. out June 10, 1865.

THIRTEENTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Thomas Hayes, Jan. 17, 1865; must. out June 16, 1865.

Franklin Upham, Jan. 17, 1865; must. out June 16, 1865.

FOURTEENTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

John Kiernan, Feb. 27, 1864; must. out June 15, 1865. (See 43d Regt., Co. D.)

Amos J. F. Richards, Feb. 27, 1864; must. out June 15, 1865. (See navy.)

SIXTEENTH BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY (Three Years).

John S. Woods, sergt., March 11, 1864; must. out June 27, 1865.

Henry M. Fales, March 11, 1864; must. out June 27, 1865.

Albert M. Kingsbury, Oct. 3, 1864; must. out June 27, 1865.

John H. Lyman, Oct. 3, 1864; must. out June 27, 1865.

SHERMAN'S UNITED STATES BATTERY.

Lewis P. Baker.

FIRST BATTALION HEAVY ARTILLERY (Three Years).

J. Spencer Drayton (Boston), Co. A, q-m. sergt., Feb. 20, 1862; disch. for pro. May 5, 1863.

William H. Hutchins, sergt., Co. B, Oct. 29, 1862; disch. Sept. 27, 1864, for disability.

Louis F. Poyen, sergt., Co. D, June 6, 1863; 2d lieut. Nov. 26, 1864; must. out Sept. 12, 1865.

SECOND REGIMENT HEAVY ARTILLERY (Three Years).

Peter Grady, Co. A, July 28, 1863; must. out Sept. 3, 1865.

Joseph Neas (Boston), Co. A, July 28, 1863; must. out Sept. 3, 1865.

Frank D. Grover, Co. B, July 29, 1863; must. out July 12, 1865.

William H. Clements, corp., Co. C, Aug. 4, 1863; must. out Sept. 3, 1865.

Bruno Tieslo, Co. C, Aug. 4, 1863; must. out Aug. 2, 1865.

Charles O. Taft, Co. D, Aug. 24, 1863; must. out Sept. 3, 1865.

Timothy Burns, Co. E, Oct. 5, 1863; must. out Sept. 3, 1865.

Josiah B. Whitney (Boston), corp., Co. F, Oct. 8, 1863; must. out July 31, 1865.

George W. Hewins, Co. F, Oct. 8, 1863; must. out July 21, 1865.

John C. Morse (Boston), Co. G, Sept. 19, 1864; trans. to Co. F, 17th Regt., and disch. June 30, 1865.

Joseph H. Morse (Boston), Co. G, Sept. 19, 1864; trans. to Co. F, 17th Regt., and disch. June 30, 1865.

Walter S. Kitchin, sergt., Co. G, Sept. 13, 1864; trans. to Co. F, 17th Regt.

Thomas McEntee, Co. I, Sept. 16, 1864; trans. to 17th Infantry.

Antoine Schenkle, Aug. 22, 1863 (see 43d, Co. B); deserted Sept. 1, 1865.

Warren Brckett (Salem), Co. K, Dec. 22, 1863; disch. for disability Feb. 25, 1865.

TWENTY-NINTH UNATTACHED COMPANY HEAVY ARTILLERY (One Year).

Robert Frazer, Sept. 16, 1864; must. out June 16, 1865.

Cavalry.FIRST REGIMENT (Three Years).

Arnold A. Rand (Boston), 2d lieut., Dec. 19, 1861; capt. Feb. 4, 1862; A. A.-G. U. S. Vols. June 10, 1863. (See 4th Regt. Cav.)

Randolph M. Clark, 1st lieut., Dec. 26, 1861; capt. Jan. 6, 1863; must. out Aug. 8, 1863, as 1st lieut.

William C. Paterson, chaplain, Dec. 30, 1861; resigned in 1862.

William A. King, Co. A, Dec. 24, 1861; deserted Jan. 23, 1862, at Annapolis, Md.

John A. Goodwin (Boston), sergt., Co. B, Sept. 12, 1861; sergt.-maj.; 2d lieut. Dec. 14, 1862; 1st lieut. May 13, 1863; must. out May 15, 1865.

*Frank Miles, com-sergt., Sept. 23, 1861; died at Hilton Head, S. C., Oct. 10, 1862.

George B. Mussey (Boston), q-m.-sergt., Dec. 2, 1861; must. out Nov. 16, 1862.

Henry Smith, Co. B, Sept. 12, 1861; disch. Dec. 25, 1862, for disability.

*William H. Tillinghast, Co. E, Dec. 11, 1861; killed at Deep Bottom, Va., Aug. 14, 1864.

Wm. A. Barton, Co. F, Oct. 17, 1861; deserted Dec. 15, 1861, at Readville.

George W. Filley, Co. F, Oct. 10, 1861; Oct. 11, 1864; must. out in Co. H.

William C. Hillery, Co. F, Oct. 19, 1861; disch. Jan. 13, 1863, for disability.

Morris Kuhn, Co. F, Sept. 19, 1861; deserted Nov. 24, 1861, at Readville.

Henry Thackwell, Co. G, Jan. 2, 1862; disch. Oct. 21, 1863, for disability.

Thomas McGrath, Co. H, Nov. 19, 1864; must. out June 26, 1865.

Edwin A. Parker, Co. H, Aug. 5, 1862; must. out Nov. 11, 1864.

James C. Ross, Co. H, Sept. 25, 1861; disch. Dec. 20, 1862, for disability.

Hubbard C. Jordan, corp., Co. I, Nov. 26, 1861; trans. to 4th Cav.

Augustine A. Colburn, corp., Co. I, Sept. 24, 1861; trans. to 4th Cav.

Samuel Patterson (Stoughton), Co. I, Sept. 14, 1861; trans. to 4th Cav.

*Joseph T. Stevens, corp., Co. I, Oct. 19, 1861; died at Hilton Head, S. C., March 31, 1862.

James H. Wood (Quincy), Co. K, Oct. 5, 1861; trans. to 4th Cav.

Charles Reynolds, Co. K, Dec. 29, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps.

Gerald Brannan, Co. K, Sept. 17, 1861; disch. July 30, 1862, for disability.

Joseph Dam, Co. K, Sept. 14, 1861; trans. to 4th Cav.

Cornelius D. Sullivan, sergt., Co. K, Dec. 29, 1863; disch. Dec. 28, 1864, for disability; Co. A.

Joseph A. Noble, Co. K, Dec. 22, 1861; deserted June 12, 1862.

John Good, Co. K, Dec. 22, 1861; must. out in Co. A Jan. 26, 1865.

Thomas Golden, Co. K, Dec. 29, 1863; must. out in Co. A June 26, 1865.

Charles Dow, Co. L, Dec. 26, 1861; disch. Jan. 16, 1863, for disability.

Benjamin Gilchrist, Co. L, Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to Co. L, 4th Cav.

Henry J. Hanks, Co. L, Oct. 7, 1861; trans. to Co. L, 4th Cav.

Edward Moran, Co. L, Sept. 17, 1861; trans. to Co. L, 4th Cav.

James T. Walsh, bugler, Co. L, Jan. 6, 1864; must. out June 26, 1865.

Frank Kerrigan, Co. L, Jan. 6, 1864; must. out June 26, 1865.

SECOND REGIMENT (Three Years).

Urias Urry, farrier, Co. B, Jan. 13, 1863; must. out July 20, 1865.

Daniel Fallon, Co. C, Nov. 17, 1864; must. out July 20, 1865.

Frank Emile, Co. G, April 9, 1864; deserted May 20, 1864.

*John Purdy, Co. I, Feb. 25, 1864; died May, 1865, at Danville, Va.

*Albert O. Hammond, Co. M, Jan. 4, 1864; died Sept. 12, 1864, prisoner at Savannah, Ga.

William Kilpatrick, Aug. 4, 1863; unassigned recruit.

Daniel O'Keefe, March 23, 1864; unassigned recruit.

Charles Wood, Aug. 18, 1863; unassigned recruit.

THIRD REGIMENT (Three Years).

Christopher McNamara, Co. A, Jan. 4, 1864; deserted Aug. 23, 1865, at Fort Kearney, N. T.

Marcus Doe, Co. L, Feb. 29, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps.

Benjamin Gowell, Co. M (1 year), Dec. 30, 1864; must. out Sept. 28, 1865.

Frank B. Gowell, Co. M (1 year), Dec. 30, 1864; must. out Sept. 28, 1865.

David F. Grant, Co. M (1 year), Dec. 31, 1864; must. out Sept. 28, 1865.

George W. Grant, Co. M (1 year), Dec. 31, 1864; must. out Sept. 28, 1865.

James McMahon, Co. M (1 year), Dec. 31, 1864; must. out Sept. 28, 1865.

FOURTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

Arnold A. Rand (Boston), lieut.-col., Dec. 3, 1863; col. Jan. 22, 1864; resigned Feb. 3, 1865. (See 1st Regt. Cav.)

William Chickering, Jr., 2d lieut., Feb. 1, 1864; 1st lieut. Dec. 10, 1864; resigned July 12, 1865.

Joseph H. Lathrop, 2d lieut., Jan. 25, 1864; 1st lieut. Jan. 5, 1865; must. out Nov. 14, 1865.

John Sheridan, Co. A, Dec. 26, 1863; disch. March 13, 1865, for disability.

George W. Kingsbury, Co. B, Dec. 21, 1863; disch. May 22, 1864, for disability.

*John E. Richardson, Co. B, Feb. 21, 1863; died in rebel prison Aug. 17, 1864.

Joseph H. Richardson, Co. B, Feb. 21, 1863; must. out Nov. 3, 1865.

Augustine A. Colburn, sergt., Co. I, Sept. 14, 1861; must. out Sept. 24, 1864.

Hubbard E. Jordan, corp., Co. I, Jan. 1, 1864; must. out Nov. 14, 1865.

Benjamin Gilchrist, Co. L. (See 1st Regt. Cav.)

Edward Moran, Co. L, Sept. 17, 1861; deserted June 6, 1864.

Henry J. Hanks, Co. L, Oct. 7, 1861; must. out Oct. 12, 1864.

Henry Flood, Co. M, March 1, 1864; must. out Aug. 16, 1865.

FIFTH REGIMENT (Three Years).

James Leath, Co. C, Sept. 19, 1864; must. out Aug. 31, 1865.
 James Minch, Co. H, March 12, 1864; disch. Dec. 15, 1864, for disability.
 David Fresbie, Co. H, March 12, 1864; must. out Oct. 31, 1865.
 *Daniel Carter, Co. I, March 26, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., June 15, 1864.

FIRST BATTALION FRONTIER CAVALRY (One Year).

Charles H. Grant, Co. D, Jan. 2, 1865; must. out June 30, 1865.
 Frank Kalliher, Co. D, Jan. 2, 1865; must. out June 30, 1865.
 James A. Manning, Co. D, Jan. 2, 1865; must. out June 30, 1865.

FIRST MICHIGAN CAVALRY.

*Willard F. Rhoads, killed near Centreville, Va., Nov. 3, 1863.

REGULAR CAVALRY.

Isaac N. Grant.

United States Navy.

*Gershom J. Van Brunt, captain at opening of war; commanded U. S. steam frigate "Minnesota" from April, 1861, to August, 1862; commodore, July, 1862; supervised equipment of Banks' expedition to New Orleans, 1862; inspector transports, New England District, 1863; died in Dedham Dec. 17, 1863.
 Henry Van Brunt, lieutenant, Nov. 10, 1861; resigned Feb. 15, 1864; on duty with North Atlantic Blockading Squadron.
 Edward Sherwin, clerk to Cairo Inspection, Nov. 26, 1862; acting assistant paymaster volunteer navy, March 31, 1863; passed assistant paymaster U. S. N., July 23, 1866; resigned Dec. 20, 1866; at Cairo and Yazoo River in 1862-63; South Atlantic Blockading Squadron from May 18, 1863, to Jan. 26, 1865; afterwards at various stations.

Henry G. B. Fisher, captain's clerk, April, 1861, to August, 1862, on "Minnesota."
 Henry Sherwin, captain's clerk on "Santee," June 5, 1861, to August, 1862, in Gulf of Mexico; chief clerk to Fleet Captain Pennock, in Mississippi Squadron, from November, 1862, to June, 1865.
 Elisha L. Turner, paymaster's clerk "Congress," 1861; acting assistant paymaster "Chocoma," 1862.
 Frederick W. Willis, surgeon's steward, April 9, 1863, to April, 1865, on "Marmora."
 Samuel H. Swett, seaman, April 16, 1862; served three years on "Minnesota," "Florida," "Pequod," etc.
 Charles G. Swett, seaman, December, 1861; served three years on "Quaker City," "St. Lawrence," etc.
 Robert S. Edson, seaman, November, 1861; served three years on "Sciota," etc.
 Adin B. Crosby, seaman, Sept. 25, 1864; served on "Sabine" and "Hartford," in Western Gulf Squadron.
 James H. O'Brien, seaman, October, 1862, "Onward."
 Thomas Smith, June, 1864.
 Charles E. Barrows, August, 1863; served five years.
 Henry G. Tillinghast, fireman, July 20, 1864, "Connecticut."
 Patrick Murphy, Aug. 19, 1864; served one year.
 John McAllister, Jr., fireman "Minnesota," April 18, 1861; served three years.
 Robert McAllister, fireman "Minnesota," April 18, 1861; served three years.
 William F. McAllister, coal-heaver "Sebago," March 17, 1862; served three years.
 Amos J. F. Richards, seaman, August, 1862, one year; disch. September, 1863; served on gunboat "Rescue," Hampton Roads and siege of Charleston.

ERRATA.

Page 45, first column, for "Wamisit" read "Wamesit."
 Page 50, second column, 16th line, read "a clergyman of the Church of England."
 Page 61, second column, in 2d line of second paragraph, omit "the."
 Page 68, second column, in 7th line of second paragraph, read "the" for "this." Substitute pronoun "He" for "Mr. White" in the 15th and 18th lines.
 Page 79, first column, 2d paragraph, for "Blue Rock Bridge" read "Vine Rock Bridge." Second column, 2d line, read "Alfred Hewins."
 Page 190, first column, 38th line from top, for "Phillipps" read "Phillips."
 Page 194, first column, 7th line from bottom, for "seventy-five" read "seventy."
 Page 207, bottom of second column. For corrected list of Randolph's selectmen, see Appendix.
 Page 268, 3d line, chapter xx., for "were" read "was."
 Page 278, line 18th from top, for "thereo" read "thereof."

Page 284, second column, line 15th, for "is" read "are."
 Page 288, line 10th, for "way" read "sway."
 Page 303, line 36th, for "Deborah" read "Dorothy."
 Page 315, line 11th, for "and two" read "many." Same page, line 12th, for "11th" read "1758."
 Page 318, line 28th, for "houses" read "house."
 Page 327, line 25th, for "Monatiquot" read "Monatoquit."
 Page 341, 13th line from bottom, for "$300" read "£300."
 Page 343, 10th line from top, for "650" read "450."
 Page 534, 9th line from bottom, for "Denning" read "Deming,"
 Page 534, second column, 13th line from bottom, read 1816, '18, '19, etc.
 Page 534, second column, 12th line from bottom, read 1817, '19, '20, etc.
 Page 534, second column, bottom line, read "Amraphel" for "Amraphel."
 Page 544, line 10th, for "Medford" read "Hartford."

DEC 1975

WESBY

